Modern mothers have returned to the spring blood purifiers; their dosing, if less nauseous than old-time cures, are equally beneficial.

There are several forms of sulphur that are more easily taken than the old sulphur and molasses mixture and are less likely to disarrange the digestion. Any good druggist will tell you of a reliable preparation.

Home mixtures can be made from red clover blossom tea. This is excellent to take for three or four weeks each spring. The dried blossom can be bought at the drug store, full directions as to making being given.

An easy way to manage is to purchase a small earthenware teapot, put in it two tablespoons of the herbs and cover with boiling water, a pint and a half. Let mixture steep on back of stove for half a day—not boil—and cool in the pot. Strain and drink a wineglass ful three times a day or a teacupful in the morning.

This tea is not only a good blood improver, but has been known to relieve tumorous conditions. It will quickly clear the complexion and give color.

Other herb teas, as dandelions and sage, are excellent for the blood, though childre prefer sarsaparilla.

In addition to these special decoctions, have a liberal diet of greens for at least a month in the spring. Cut down on meat and eat plenty of fresh vegetables, salads, with French dressing, three times a day, and cress whenever you get a chance.

A Quickly Made Scarf.

Just exactly three hours of hemstitching will turn the pretty piece of printed marquisette into an evening scarf. The threads of marquisette are more readily drawn than those of other evening materials, and it is also less difficult to handle than, for instance, chiffon. In picking up the perpendicular threads for hemstitching they will be found separate and altogether countable. The selvedges of this delightful material will supply a satisfactory side finish, and three hours should suffice to hemstitch the two hems with some of the drawn-out silk strands.

Gesang May Walk.

The annual May walk of the Gesang and Turn Verein will take place on Sunday, May 8. The usual outing to the mountains will be made. The committee in charge is John Retzer, A. Kunz and A. Reuz.

When Linen is Scorched.

If one scorches a piece of linen in ironing, wet the spot well with vinegar and rub hard until the stain disappears. Rinse in clear water, and iron at once.

—George E. Wilson, a cutter in the employ of Nat Levy & Co., was arraigned on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct this morning and was discharged, none of the firm appearing to prosecute the charge of disorderly conduct against him.

FIRST BAPTIST RECEIPTS WERE NEAR TO $10,000

Trustees were elected and reports were presented at the annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church, last night. The report of the treasurer showed the church to be in good condition financially. The current yearly account showed the total receipts to be $9,705.92 and the disbursements, $8,370.21, leaving a balance in the bank of $1,335.71. The trustees met prior to the parish meeting and audited the books of the treasurer prior to the presentation of it later.

T. S. Armstrong and S. St. John McCutchen were re-elected trustees and John G. MacLaughlin was chosen trustee to succeed J. Herbert Case, who resigned. At the re-organization of the board after the parish meeting, these officers were elected: President, L. V. F. Randolph; vice-president, Alexander Gilbert; secretary, Oliver B. Leonard; treasurer, John G. MacLaughlin.

English Notes Interesting.

At the meeting of the Women's Alliance, of All Souls' Unitarian church, held at the residence of Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Franklin place, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. A. C. Nickerson, wife of the pastor of All Souls' church, read a delightfully interesting paper on "English Notes," being a short history of her observations during the visit of herself and Mr. Nickerson to England last summer.

Gave a Luncheon.

Mrs. William H. Williams, of 1133 Evergreen avenue, entertained a few friends at luncheon today at her home. Cut flowers were effectively arranged in the dining room and throughout the parlors. Covers were laid for six.

Miss Phillips Takes Oath.

Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, the newly appointed special police officer, was sworn in this morning by Mayor Charles J. Fisk at police headquarters. Her badge is numbered 21.

MAY FLOWER SOCIAL FOR PASTOR AND WIFE.

Instead of holding the reception customary upon the return of the pastor and his wife, the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church, decided at a meeting yesterday afternoon in Vincent chapel to give a "May Flower Social" at the chapel the first week in May. There will be many novel features and the affair will also include a welcome to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Anderson upon their return for another year.

Mrs. Matthew H. Ewart is the chairman of the committee in charge of the affair. The society has also decided to hold a chain of teas at the homes of different members for the purpose of raising funds for the refurnishing of the chapel. The work will be done during the coming summer.

Loyal Band Plan Social.

The Loyal Band, Sunday-school class No. 24, of Trinity Reformed church, of which Henry Seader is the teacher, held a business meeting and social at the church last night. About fifteen members of the class were present. During the business session it was decided to hold a social in June at the home of Mrs. J. M. Tier on Bank place. A social hour followed during which refreshments were served and an informal musical program was enjoyed.

Result of Primary Day.

Registration of new names did not keep the clerks very busy yesterday, the greater amount of work done in the registration being the changing from district to district of those who have moved since the last election. It is reported that six new names were added to the registry lists, but the total will hardly vary when the count of the vote is made from that of the last election.

Fined for Trespassing.

John Hummer and Bullman Hummer, of Belmont avenue, were fined one dollar each for trespassing by Recorder Dolliver. The Hummers were arrested last night by Marshal Charles Keller while "gigging" in Stoney Brook on grounds that are posted.

Thirty horse-power—50 Miles an Hour—An ENGINEERING VICTORY.

It is comparatively easy for a maker to build a car that will "do things" if he puts enough money and weight into it. But money is money, and weight is money, too—money for big and quickly worn-out tires, money for more fuel and expensive maintenance.

The Reo is a triumph of engineering. Mr. R. E. Olds is a genius at doing that very difficult but useful thing—making a car of very high quality at low cost. The Reo is full of cost where cost earns its money, and full of economy where economy counts. It has the remarkable get-there-and-back ability of every Reo ever built; it is powerful, light, buoyant, graceful, efficient, comfortable.—Let us demonstrate.

The Man in Lower Ten

By Mary Roberts Rinehart
Author of The Circular Staircase

(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

He found it finally and opened it on a table, displaying with some theatricalism a rectangular piece of muslin and a similar patch of striped ticking.

"You recognize it?" he said. "The stains, you see, and the hole made by the dirk. I tried to bring away the entire pillow, but they thought I was stealing it, and made me give it up."

Richey touched the pieces gingerly. "By George," he said, "and you carry that around in your pocket! What if you should mistake it for your handkerchief?"

But Mr. Hotchkiss was not listening. He stood bent somewhat forward, leaning over the table, and fixed me with his ferret-like eyes.

"Have you seen the evening papers, Mr. Blakeley?" he inquired.

I glanced to where they lay unopened, and shook my head.

"Then I have a disagreeable task," he said with evident relish. "Of course, you had considered the matter of the man Harrington's death closed, after the wreck. I did myself. As far as I was concerned, I meant to let it remain so. There were no other survivors, at least none that I knew of, and in spite of circumstances, there were a number of points in your favor.

"I verified your identity, for instance, as soon as I recovered from the shock. Also—I found on inquiring of your tailor that you invariably wore dark clothing."

McKnight came forward threateningly. "Who are you, anyhow?" he demanded. "And how is this any business of yours?" Mr. Hotchkiss was entirely unruffled.

"I have a minor position here," he said, reaching for a visiting card. "I am a very small patch on the seat of government, sir."

McKnight muttered something about certain offensive designs against the said patch and retired grumbling to the window. Our visitor was opening the paper with a tremendous expenditure of energy.

"Here it is. Listen." He read rapidly aloud:

"The Pittsburg police have sent to Baltimore two detectives who are looking up the survivors of the ill-fated Washington Flier. It has transpired that Simon Harrington, the Wood street merchant of that city, was not killed in the wreck, but was murdered in his berth the night preceding the accident. Shortly before the collision, John Flanders, the conductor of the Flier, sent this telegram to the chief of police:

"'Body of Simon Harrington found stabbed in his berth, lower ten, Ontario, at 6:30 this morning.

"'JOHN FLANDERS, Conductor.'

"It is hoped that the survivors of the wrecked car Ontario will be found, to tell what they know of the discovery of the crime.

"Mr. John Gilmore, head of the steel company for which Mr. Harrington was purchasing agent, has signified his intention of sifting the matter to the bottom."

"So you see," Hotchkiss concluded, "there's trouble brewing. You and I are the only survivors of that unfortunate car."

I did not contradict him, but I knew of two others, at least: Alison West, and the woman we had left beside the road that morning, babbling incoherently, her black hair tumbling over her white face.

"Unless we can find the man who occupied lower seven," I suggested.

"I have already tried and failed. To find him would not clear you, of course, unless we could establish some connection between him and the murdered man. It is the only thing I see, however. I have learned this much," Hotchkiss concluded: "Lower seven was reserved from Cresson."

Cresson! Where Alison West and Mrs. Curtis had taken the train!

McKnight came forward and suddenly held out his hand. "Mr. Hotchkiss," he said, "I—I'm sorry if I have been offensive. I thought when you came in, that, like the Irishman and the government, you were 'forninst' us. If you will put those cheerful relics out of sight somewhere, I should be glad to have you dine with me at the Incubator." (His name for his bachelor apartment.) "Compared with Johnson, you are the great original protoplasm."

The strength of this was lost on Hotchkiss, but the invitation was clear. They went out together, and from my window I watched them get into McKnight's car. It was raining, and at the corner the Cannonball skidded. Across the street my detective, Johnson, looked after them with his crooked smile. As he turned up his collar he saw me, and lifted his hat.

I left the window and sat down in the growing dusk. So the occupant of lower seven had got on the car at Cresson, probably with Alison West and her companion. There was some one she cared about enough to shield. I went irritably to the door and summoned Mrs. Klopton.

"You may throw out those roses," I said, without looking at her. "They are quite dead."

"They have been quite dead for three days," she retorted spitefully. "Euphemia said you threatened to dismiss her if she touched them."

CHAPTER XIV.

The Trap Door.

By Sunday evening, a week after the wreck, my forced inaction had goaded me to frenzy. The very sight of Johnson across the street or lurking, always within sight of the house, kept me constantly exasperated. It was on that day that things began to come to a focus, a burning-glass of events that seemed to center on me.

I dined alone that evening in no cheerful frame of mind. There had been a polo game the day before and I had lent a pony, which is always a bad thing to do. And she had wrenched her shoulder, besides helping to lose the game. There was no one in town; the temperature was 90 and climbing, and my left hand persistently cramped under its bandage.

Mrs. Klopton herself saw me served, my bread buttered and cut in tidbits, my meat ready for my fork. She hovered around me maternally, obviously trying to cheer me.

"The paper says still warmer," she ventured. "The thermometer is 92 now."

"And this coffee is 250," I said, putting down my cup. "Where is Euphemia? I haven't seen her around, or heard a dish smash all day."

"Euphemia is in bed," Mrs. Klopton said gravely. "Is your meat cut small enough, Mr. Lawrence?" Mrs. Klopton can throw more mystery into an ordinary sentence than any one I know. She can say, "Are your sheets damp, sir?" And I can tell from her tone that the house across the street has been robbed, or that my left hand neighbor has appendicitis. So now I looked up and asked the question she was waiting for.

"What's the matter with Euphemia?" I inquired idly.

"Frightened into her bed," Mrs. Klopton said in a stage whisper. "She's had three hot water bottles and she hasn't done a thing all day but moan."

"She oughtn't to take hot water bottles," I said in my severest tone. "One would make me moan. You need not wait, I'll ring if I need anything."

Mrs. Klopton sailed to the door, where she stopped and wheeled indignantly. "I only hope you won't laugh on the wrong side of your face some morning, Mr. Lawrence," she declared, with Christian fortitude. "But I warn you, I am going to have the police watch that house next door."

I was half inclined to tell her that both it and we were under police surveillance at that moment. But I like Mrs. Klopton, in spite of the fact that I make her life a torment for her, so I refrained.

"Last night, when the paper said it was going to storm, I sent Euphemia to the roof to bring the rugs in. Eliza had slipped out, although it was her evening in. Euphemia went up to the roof—it was 11 o'clock—and soon I heard her running downstairs crying. When she got to my room she just folded up on the floor. She said there was a black figure sitting on the parapet of the house next door—the empty house—and that when she appeared it rose and waved long black arms at her and spit like a cat."

I had finished my dinner and was lighting a cigarette. "If there was any one up there, which I doubt, they probably sneezed," I suggested. "But if you feel uneasy, I'll take a look around the roof to-night before I turn in. As far as Euphemia goes, I wouldn't be uneasy about her—doesn't she always have an attack of some sort when Eliza rings in an extra evening on her?"

So I made a superficial examination of the window locks that night, visiting parts of the house that I had not seen since I bought it. Then I went to the roof. Evidently it had not been intended for any purpose save to cover the house, for unlike the houses around, there was no staircase. A ladder and a trap-door led to it, and it required some nice balancing on my part to get up with my useless arm. I made it, however, and found this unexplored part of my domain rather attractive. It was cooler than downstairs, and I sat on the brick parapet and smoked my final cigarette. The roof of the empty house adjoined mine along the back wing, but investigation showed that the trap-door across the low dividing way was bolted underneath.

There was nothing out of the ordinary anywhere, and so I assured Mrs. Klopton. Needless to say, I did not tell her that I had left the trap-door open to see if it would improve the temperature of the house. I went to bed at midnight, merely because there was nothing else to do. I turned on the night lamp at the head of my bed, and picked up a volume of Shaw at random (it was "Arms and the Man," and I remember thinking grimly that I was a good bit of a chocolate cream soldier myself), and prepared to go to sleep. Shaw always puts me to sleep. I have no apologies to make for what occurred that night, and not even an explanation that I am sure of. I did a foolish thing under impulse, and I have not been sorry.

It was something after two when the door-bell rang. It rang quickly, twice. I got up drowsily, for the maids and Mrs. Klopton always lock themselves beyond reach of the bell at night, and put on a dressing gown. The bell rang again on my way downstairs. I lit the hall light and opened the door. I was wide awake now, and I saw that it was Johnson. His bald head shone in the light—his crooked mouth was twisted in a smile.

"Good heavens, man," I said irritably. "Don't you ever go home and go to bed?"

He closed the vestibule door behind him and cavalierly turned out the light. Our dialogue was sharp, staccato.

"Have you a key to the empty house next door?" he demanded. "Somebody's in there, and the latch is caught."

"The houses are alike. The key to this door may fit. Did you see them go in?"

"No. There's a light moving up from room to room. I saw something like it last night, and I have been watching. The patrolman reported queer doings there a week or so ago."

"A light!" I exclaimed. "Do you mean that you—"

"Very likely," he said grimly. "Have you a revolver?"

"All kinds in the gun rack," I replied, and going into the den, I came back with a Smith and Wesson. "I'm not much use," I explained, "with this arm, but I'll do what I can. There may be somebody there. The servants here have been uneasy."

Johnson planned the campaign. He suggested on account of my familiarity with the roof, that I go there and cut off escape in that direction. "I have Robison out there now—the patrolman on the beat," he said. "He'll watch below and you above, while I search the house. Be as quiet as possible."

I was rather amused. I put on some clothes and felt my way carefully up the stairs, the revolver swinging free in my pocket, my hand on the rail. At the foot of the ladder I stopped and looked up. Above me there was a gray rectangle of sky dotted with stars. It occurred to me that with my one serviceable hand holding the ladder, I was hardly in a position to defend myself, that I was about to

I did not seen the hand appear. There was nothing there, and then it was there, clutching the frame of the trap. I did the only thing I could think of; I put my foot on it!

There was not a sound from beneath. The next moment I was kneeling and had clutched the wrist just above the hand. After a second's struggle, the arm was still. With something real to face, I was myself again.

"Don't move, or I'll stand on the trap and break your arm," I panted. What else could I threaten? I couldn't shoot, I couldn't even fight. "Johnson!" I called.

And then I realized the thing that stayed with me for a month, the thing I cannot think of even now without a shudder. The hand lay ice cold, strangely quiescent. Under my fingers, an artery was beating feebly. The wrist was as slender as—I held the hand to the light. Then I let it drop.

"Good Lord," I muttered, and remained on my knees, staring at the spot where the hand had been. It was gone now; there was a faint rustle in the darkness below, and then silence.

I held up my own hand in the starlight and stared at a long scratch in the palm. "A woman!" I said to myself stupidly. "By all that's ridiculous, a woman!"

Johnson was striking matches below and swearing softly to himself. "How the devil do you get to the roof?" he called. "I think I've broken my nose!"

He found the ladder after a short search and stood at the bottom, looking up at me. "Well, I suppose you haven't seen him?" he inquired.

The Wrist Was Slender.

"There are enough darned cubbyholes in this house to hide a patrol wagon load of thieves." He lighted a fresh match. "Hello, here's another door!"

By the sound of his diminishing footsteps I supposed it was a rear staircase. He came up again in ten minutes or so, this time with the policeman.

"He's gone, all right," he said ruefully. "If you'd been attending to your business, Robison, you'd have watched the back door."

"I'm not twins" Robison was surly.

"Well," I broke in, as cheerfully as I could, "if you are through with this jolly little affair, and can get down my ladder without having my housekeeper ring the burglar alarm, I have some good Monongahela whisky—eh?"

They came without a second invitation across the roof, and with them safely away from the house I breathed more freely. Down in the den I fulfilled my promise, which Johnson drank to the toast, "Coming through the rye." He examined my gun rack with the eye of a connoisseur, and even when he was about to go he cast a loving eye back at the weapons.

"Ever been in the army?" he inquired.

"No," I said with a bitterness that he noticed but failed to comprehend. "I'm a chocolate cream soldier—you don't read Shaw, I suppose, Johnson?"

hoist a body that I am rather careful of into a danger I couldn't see and wasn't particularly keen about, anyhow. I don't mind saying that the seconds it took me to scramble up the ladder were among the most unpleasant that I recall.

I got to the top, however, without incident. I could see fairly well after the darkness of the house beneath, but there was nothing suspicious in sight. The roofs, separated by two feet of brick wall, stretched around me, unbroken save by an occasional chimney. I went very softly over to the other trap, the one belonging to the suspected house. It was closed, but I imagined I could hear Johnson's footsteps ascending heavily. Then even that was gone. A near-by clock struck three as I stood waiting. I examined my revolver then, for the first time, and found it was empty!

I had been rather skeptical until now. I had had the usual tolerant attitude of the man who is summoned from his bed to search for burglars, combined with the artificial courage of firearms. With the discovery of my empty gun, I felt like a man on the top of a volcano in lively eruption. Suddenly I found myself staring incredulously at the trap-door at my feet. I had examined it early in the evening and found it bolted. Did I imagine it, or had it raised about an inch? Wasn't it moving slowly as I looked? No, I am not a hero; I was startled almost into a panic. I had one arm, and whoever was raising that trap-door had two. My knees had a queer inclination to bend the wrong way.

Johnson's footsteps were distinct enough, but he was evidently far below. The trap, raised perhaps two inches now, remained stationary. There was no sound from beneath it; once I thought I heard two or three gasping respirations; I am not sure they were not my own. I wanted desperately to stand on one leg at a time and hold the other up out of focus of a possible revolver.

"Never heard of him," the detective said indifferently. "Well, good night, Mr. Blakeley. Much obliged." At the door he hesitated and coughed.

"I suppose you understand, Mr. Blakeley," he said awkwardly, "that this—er—surveillance is all in the day's work. I don't like it, but it's duty. Every man to his duty, sir."

"Sometime when you are in an open mood, Johnson," I returned, "you can explain why I am being watched at all."

CHAPTER XV.

The Cinematograph.

On Monday I went out for the first time. I did not go to the office. I wanted to walk. I thought fresh air and exercise would drive away the blue devils that had me by the throat. McKnight insisted on a long day in his car, but I refused.

"I don't know why not," he said sulkily. "I can't walk. I haven't walked two consecutive blocks in three years. Automobiles have made legs mere ornaments—and some not even that. We could have Johnson out there chasing us over the country at $5 an hour!"

"He can chase us just as well at five miles an hour," I said. "But what gets me, McKnight, is why I am under surveillance at all. How do the police know I was accused of that thing?"

"The young lady who sent the flowers—she isn't likely to talk, is she?"

"No. That is, I didn't say it was a lady." I groaned as I tried to get my splintered arm into a coat. "Anyhow, she didn't tell," I finished with conviction, and McKnight laughed.

It had rained in the early morning, and Mrs. Klopton predicted more showers. In fact, so firm was her belief and so determined her eye that I took the umbrella she proffered me.

"Never mind," I said. "We can leave it next door! I have a story to tell you, Richey, and it requires proper setting."

McKnight was puzzled, but he followed me obediently around to the kitchen entrance of the empty house. It was unlocked, as I had expected. While we climbed to the upper floor I retailed the events of the previous night.

"It's the finest thing I ever heard of," McKnight said, staring up at the ladder and the trap. "What a vaudeville skit it would make! Only you ought not to have put your foot on her hand. They don't do it in the best circles."

I wheeled on him impatiently.

"You don't understand the situation at all, Richey!" I exclaimed. "What would you say if I tell you it was the hand of a lady? It was covered with rings."

"A lady!" he repeated. "Why, I'd say it was a darned compromising situation, and that the less you say of it the better. Look here, Lawrence, I think you dreamed it. You've been in the house too much. I take it all back; you do need exercise."

"She escaped through this door, I suppose," I said as patiently as I could. "Evidently down the back staircase. We might as well go down that way."

"According to the best precedents in these affairs, we should find a glove about here," he said as we started down. But he was more impressed than he cared to own. He examined the dusty steps carefully, and once, when a bit of loose plaster fell just behind him, he started like a nervous woman.

"What I don't understand is why you let her go," he said, stopping once, puzzled. "You're not usually quixotic."

"When we get out into the country, Richey," I replied gravely, "I am going to tell you another story, and if

THE DUTCH PAINTER

By KATE LUBY

In the center of a quiet village stood an inn, the proprietor of which was named Fritz; nearly opposite was the cottage of the village painter, rejoicing in the odd name of Tunder, at whose door might be seen boards representing grotesque caricature paintings, as signs of his profession.

Of a truth, poor Tunder had a great love for his art; but, sorrowful to relate, his art had no love for him!

He was vain and conceited, as nearly all pretenders to excellence are, yet he found a liberal patron and an ardent admirer in old Fritz, who carried his patronage so far as to promise him his lovely little daughter Lula in marriage.

Now Lula and her good mother had another young gentleman in their minds' eye; it was Rudolph, the handsome young gardener and huntsman, who loved Lula most fondly and truly, but who failed to make an impression on the flinty bosom of old Fritz.

The day was fixed for Lula's marriage with Tunder, and mother and daughter went bristling through their preparations with tearful eyes and saddened hearts, which ill befitted a bridal day.

To give more eclat to the wedding, Fritz ordered a new sign, and Tunder's talents were called in requisition.

Just then, a young artist, who had that day arrived from the city, offered to paint a sign, representing the archduke, on very reasonable terms. Lula and her mother voted for the artist's sign, and stubborn old Fritz swore that Tunder alone should share the glory with himself. At length a compromise was effected; both paintings should be done, and a place over the inn door awarded to that one which displayed most ability.

The wedding day had arrived, and Tunder was first in the field with his sign, but no one could make anything out of it.

"Behold!" cried the villagers, "a miserable abortion, which represents neither fish, nor fowl?"

"What is it?" asked one.

"It is mutilated Indian from the wilds of the west!" replied his neighbor.

"Ignorant wretches!" shouted Tunder, choking with indignation. "Ye have eyes and see not!" so saying, he seized his brush and painted underneath the portrait, "To the great Leopold."

Shouts and groans followed this announcement, not for "Leopold," but for Tunder, who had so shamefullly misrepresented him.

The city artist's painting was next displayed, and produced a spontaneous burst of enthusiastic applause.

Never before had the people beheld so lifelike and well executed a likeness of their very popular archduke; and the artist, in order to escape being embraced to death, beat a speedy retreat into the garden in the rear, and sat musingly on a bench.

In the midst of triumph his heart was bowed down beneath the load of some secret sorrow that was devouring him.

Unhappy Rollo! A few days since had seen him the favorite artist of a brilliant court, enjoying the reputation of a Raphael, and on the high-road to fame and fortune.

A noble lady of the court, and who was a ward of the archduke, had made a deep and lasting impression on his heart, and he soon perceived that his passion was returned.

He had not been long sitting in the garden, before he learned that there were others equally unhappy. Lula and her lover were sitting in an arbor, taking a last, loving farewell of each other.

"Why not fly with me, dearest Lula?" murmured Rudolph. "If you will not do so, a few short hours will see you wedded to that hateful Tunder, and lost to me forever!"

Lula sobbed audibly; yet, drying her tears, she replied:

"I cannot fly with you, though you know how much I love you, Rudolph; to fly would grieve my father and break my mother's heart. I am full of hope that Heaven will yet smile on our love."

"Poor little Lulu!" sighed Rollo, as she and her lover left the garden.

Archduke Leopold, with the beautiful archduchess, accompanied by her ladies and officers of the court, were on a hunting excursion and dashed through the village. The archduchess placed a chain of gold round Fritz's neck, demanding to see the village artist who had painted the sign. After a long search Rollo was found peaceably sleeping in the garden.

Great was their delight and surprise at finding the "glory of their court," as they termed him.

The archduke folded him in his arms, and told him he had never doubted his honor. He must instantly return to court, no longer in the capacity of a poor artist, but as Baron de T——, which title, with its estates, the archduke was ready to bestow on him. Then he said he was greatly in need of Rollo's services as chief physician to his lovely ward.

"And now is there aught you wish me to do for your friends here?" asked the archduke.

Rollo related, in a few words, the story of Lula and Rudolph, on hearing which the duke beckoned to Fritz, and in a few moments the old man called the young couple, Lula and Rudolph, and gave his consent to their marriage.

GOOD WORK.

Done Daily in Plainfield—Many Citizens Tell of It.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work in Plainfield still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case:

Mrs. W. W. Mills, 304 W. Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "A dull, heavy, bearing-down pain in my back bothered me a great deal, especially when I caught cold. I also had frequent headaches and was at times so dizzy that I could scarcely see. If I did much stooping or lifting, my back became very lame and though I used plasters, I was relieved only for the time being. Finally on the aodvise of a friend, I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills as Randolph's Pharmacy and began their use. They acted in every way as represented and in a short time rid me of all symptoms of kidney trouble. I am pleased to recommend a remedy of such undoubted merit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Why Don't You Economize on Coal?

The hungry furnace and the coal man are a hard combination to beat, but the

BOYNTON

Square Fire-Pot

PATENTED

FURNACE

is the friend of the man who takes care of the fire. The square fire-pot prevents the clogging of clinkers around the sides of the fire. That means all fire—more heat per unit of space. The square pot gives a greater surface for combustion and heat radiation and actually takes less coal for a good fire. And then there's the Boynton special flue for carrying away the dust. You don't sift ashes all over the house when you shake down the BOYNTON.

Talk it over with the BOYNTON dealer in your town.

Do you realize that Spring is here, and within a few days you will be forced to lay aside your heavy garments for those more suitable?

Why not prepare yourself for the change of climate, and place your order now for a strictly high-class tailored light weight suit or overcoat. It takes time to make good clothes and make them right; therefore, an early call will prove profitable to you.

If you are particular about your clothes, here is the place for you to get finest materials, keen craftsmanship, and perfect fit at a price in keeping with your purse.

Fancy striped blues, plain blues, conservative grays, and the much talked about cassimeres and tweeds are well represented amongst the complete line now awaiting your inspection.

Special Election Notice

To the Legal Voters of the City of Plainfield.

Public notice is hereby given that in accordance with the resolutions presented to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, and adopted on the 7th day of March, A. D. 1910, and approved by the Mayor of said city on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1910, and of which the following is a true copy:

Resolution providing for the submission to the legal voters of the City of Plainfield, of the question of the adoption of the provisions of an act entitled, "An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Resolved, That the question of the adoption of the provisions of an Act entitled, "An Act to enable cites to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, be submitted to the legal voters of the City of Plainfield at an election to be held in said city on Tuesday, the 19th day of April, A. D. Nineteen hundred and ten; that the City Clerk of said city be and he hereby is directed to cause public notice of the time, place and purpose of holding the election to be given by advertisements signed by himself and set up at least eight days prior to and within thirty days next preceding the day of election, in at least five of the most public places within said city, and published in two newspapers printed therein, to wit, The Daily Press and The Plainfield Courier-News, for at least six days previous to the day of such election; that the said City Clerk shall provide for each voter voting at such election ballots, upon which ballots shall be printed the following words: "For Against the adoption for this city of the provisions of an act entitled 'An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water, approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six," and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto." If the word "For" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall be counted as a vote against the adoption for said city of the provisions of said act; if the word "Against" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall be counted as a vote in favor of the adoption for said city of the provisions of said act; and in case neither the word "For" nor the word "Against" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall not be counted as a vote either for or against such proposition, nor shall the person depositing in the ballot-box a ballot on which neither the said word "For" nor the said word "Against" is marked off be counted as a voter or as voting in respect of or upon the question or proposition submitted. If voting machines shall be used at such election, all voting by means thereof shall be conducted in the manner specified by the statute in such case made and provided:

It is Further Resolved, That the polls for such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual general election in said city, and shall open at six o'clock in the morning, and close at seven o'clock in the evening, and shall be kept open during the whole day of election between the hours aforesaid; provided the Board of Election may adjourn such election from one o'clock until two o'clock in the afternoon, or for such shorter time between those hours as they shall see fit; and such election shall be conducted by the proper election officers of said city for the time then being, and in the manner as may then be prescribed by the Ordinance of said city, if any, regulating elections therein, and such officers shall return to the Common Council of said city, a true and correct statement in writing, under their hands, of the result of said election, the same to be entered at large upon the Minutes of said Common Council.

an election will be held in said city of Plainfield, New Jersey, on Tuesday, the 19th day of April, A. D. 1910, and the polls for such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual general election in said city, that is to say:

First Ward, 1st District, No. 138 North Avenue;

First Ward, 2nd District, No. 545 East Third Street;

Second Ward, 1st District, No. 319 Watchung Avenue;

Ranks in Peerage.

The highest nobility, or peerage, of England consists of five ranks, viz., duke, marquis, earl, viscount and baron. All persons holding these titles are members of the upper house of parliament, where they sit as lords temporal. The archbishops and bishops of the Established church are termed lords spiritual. They are not peers of the realm, but have seats in the upper house.

Pleasure as an End.

The man who chooses pleasure as the object of his life has no real haven, but is like a boat that beats up and down and drifts and drifts to and fro, merely to feel the motion of the waves and the impulse of the wind. When the voyage of life is done he has reached no port; he has accomplished nothing.—Henry Van Dyke.

Chesterfield on Dress.

"When you are once well dressed for the day," wrote Chesterfield, "think no more of it. Always and without any stiffness or fear of discomposing that dress, let all your actions be as easy and natural as if you had no clothes on at all." All gentlemen want to be sufficiently well dressed to be inconspicuous.

ANNUAL CHURCH MEETING

The First Presbyterians Hear Yearly Reports and Elect Officers.

ELDER BETTMAN RESIGNS.

Had Served for Thirty Years—Various Societies Tell What They Have Done—Dr. Herring Presides.

The election of elders, deacons and trustees, together with reports from all the departments of church work, combined to make the annual meeting of the First Presbyterian church, held last night, a long one. J. M. Bettman, who has been an elder of the church for thirty years resigned, and Charles H. Hummer was chosen to succeed him. This leaves a vacancy as clerk of the session, the position held by Mr. Bettman, and the session will fill that later.

The elders elected were E. M. Cave to succeed himself and Charles M. Hummer to succeed J. M. Bettman for two years. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Bettman for his long and faithful services. Mr. Hummer was a deacon and he afterward resigned that office. In the election of deacons, A. V. Searing, Sr., and Joseph C. Allen were chosen to succeed themselves and Allen E. Beals was chosen to succeed Charles M. Hummer, the latter for a two year term and the first two for a three-year term.

In the trustee meeting which followed the congregational session three trustees were elected for three years, E. P. Morris and W. J. Hamilton to succeed themselves, and Thomas E. Currin, Jr., to succeed D. K. Young, resigned. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Young for his faithful services.

The congregational meeting was held first, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring being moderator and J. M. Bettman clerk of the session filled his position, assisted by F. D. Dickerson. The reports were then presented in regular order. The one on membership showed that one year ago there were 409 members. Eleven were received on confession and fifteen by letter. There were eight deaths, five were dismissed and forty-seven are on the "reserved list," making the present membership 375.

The financial report of the clerk of the session showed that $1,165.55 was raised and contributed to the various missionary objects, which included the assessments to the general assembly and synodical missions.

Mrs. William Thorn, treasurer, presented the report for the Women's Home Mission Society. The receipts were $187.77 and the disbursements, $185.28, leaving a balance of $2.52. E. M. Cave, treasurer for the Forward Movement, reported receipts of $379.55, $31 less than last year. E. D. George, treasurer for the deacons' fund reported receipts of $296.51, and disbursements of $291.52. A. W. Dunning, treasurer for the Christian Endeavor Society, reported receipts to be $36.67 and disbursements of $23, leaving a balance of $13.67.

The missionary society of the Sunday school reported receipts of $360.08 and disbursements of $263.45, leaving a balance of $96.63. Mrs. J. M. Bettman, treasurer for the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, reported reecipts and disbursements to be $128. The ways and means committee in charge of the Italian Mission, of which Rev. Lewis Bond is superintendent, stated that it had reecived $328.50 and expenses to date were $172.23. There are now fifty-seven members contributing to the work.

Later a lengthy report was received concerning the work at the Italian Mission from Mr. Bond in which it was proposed to pay the missionary in charge, Theodore Borreti, $60 a month, it being understood that he is to devote all his time to the work. The matter was referred to the session.

Mrs. Freeman Shotwell, treasurer of the Pastors' Aid Society, reported receipts of $781.41 and disbursements of $282.85, leaving a balance of $498.56.

Dr. Herring called the attention of the meeting to an apportionment of $50 which the church is expected to contribute toward the First German church of Elizabeth, to help pay off an indebtedness. The matter will be attended to at the proper time.

The Sewing Society reported receipts of $49.80, disbursements of $34.35, leaving a balance of $15.55. The report of the Sunday school showed receipts to be $166.78, disbursements of $147.17, leaving a balance of $9.61. In the music fund the receipts were $59.83 and disbursements of $56.19.

At this stage of the proceedings the elders and deacons were elected.

LOCAL FIRE FIGHTERS SAVE OAK TREE BRIDGE

Joel Pennington, Howard Manning, Charles Pierson and Yens Clausen, of Hose Company No. 3, won places in Oak Tree's Hall of Heroes, yesterday by saving the Oak Tree bridge, which spans the Lehigh Valley railroad at that place, from being destroyed by fire. The structure was doubtless set afire by sparks from a locomotive.

The local fire fighting squad was on its way to Perth Amboy in Mr. Pierson's automobile and discovered the blaze as they reached the structure. Leaving the machine the four occupants tried to beat out the flames with clubs but they were unable to make any headway. Finally Mr. Manning solved the situation by running to Pumptown and organizing a bucket brigade. Manning secured three recruits, each carrying two buckets of water. The water was instrumental in outing the flames, and when that was accomplished, the Plainfielders continued on their journey.

PLAINFIELD DENTISTS HEAR DR. FRED T. BUSH

The Plainfield Dental Society enjoyed a banquet at the Homestead last night and afterwards were entertained by Dr. Fred T. Brush, of New York, who gave a talk on "The Business Side of Dentistry." Several interesting reports on work on the public school side of the dental question and the two propositions were thoroughly discussed.

Fifteen dentists sat down to the repast besides the guest of honor and a thoroughly enjoyable time was had. Those present were Drs. W. E. Stelle, Charles Davis, T. W. Monfort, O. B. Woodford, G. T. Woodford, Guy Hillman, Raymond Stevens, D. M. Leonard, Frank French, Frank S. Wells, of this city, and Dr. George Voorhies, of Somerville; Chauncey Egle of Westfield, and Dr. Hogan, of Dunellen. The party broke up at about 11 o'clock.

MRS. B. F. KRAFFERT GOES TO HER REWARD

Following an illness of four years, during which time she was a great sufferer, Mrs. Fannie C. Kraffert, wife of B. F. Kraffert, of 530 Woodland avenue, died this morning at 5:45 o'clock. Her illness was due to a complication of diseases and throughout she was patient, bearing her affliction with Christian fortitude. During the past four years Mrs. Kraffert was removed to several places in the hope that the change of air would be beneficial. The family removed to this city about a year ago.

Mrs. Kraffert was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Chase, and was born at Meadville, Pa. She lived the greater part of her life at Titusville, Pa., where most of her relatives reside. She was a communicant of the Episcopal church athe latter place. She is survived by her husband, a daughter, Mrs. George Moody Henne, who was married last January and lives at Marietta, Ohio, and a son, eleven years old, who attends school here.

The funeral service will be held from the late home tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, and will be conducted by Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector of St. Stephen's church. The burial will be at Titusville on Saturday.

WEST END DEMOCRATS TO HOLD DOLLAR DINNER.

The members of the West End Democratic Club at their meeting at 690 South Second street, Tuesday night, planned to hold a dollar dinner at one of the local hotels in the near future. Among those who will be invited to speak are Senator Ged Silzer, Congressmen Eugene F. Kinkhead and James Hammil, of Hudson county. The dinner will be held about the middle of May.

President Edward McCue appointed the following members as a committee to take charge of the details: Patrick J. Reville, Edward Fluck, Frank J. Shattle, John Connelly and Thomas Monsell. The club is in a flourishing condition and new members are constantly being elected, seven new ones being received Tuesday night.

Mistakes in Names.

The hennery destroyed by fire yesterday morning was the property of Siegfried Arens, and not Otto Arens, the former's father, as reported in this paper.

READY TO TAKE CENSUS

The Ten Local Enumerators Will Begin Their Work Tomorrow.

FIFTEEN DAYS ARE ALLOWED.

Questions That Will Be Asked by Uncle Sam's Men Who Will Find Out Country's Population.

"I have personally interviewed everyone of the enumerators in my district and I am satisfied that they now understand perfectly what is expected of them when they start work tomorrow," says Louis V. Hoagland, supervisor of census.

By personally interviewing each enumerator, Supervisor Hoagland has done more than is demanded of him, but he is desirous of having the census taken in his district in such a way that it will reflect credit upon himself and his enumerators.

Mr. Hoagland is having a busy time. The recent sudden changes in weather conditions have caused much sickness, and a couple of his enumerators have been taken ill. It is now necessary to provide for others to take their places, which is a hard task at this late date.

In taking his trips throughout his district Supervisor Hoagland has learned that many people are in ignorance as to just what questions they will be asked, and are curious to know what they are. Besides the location of the home, including the street and number, if any, each person will first be asked to give his or her name, with relationship to the head of the home. Then, under the head of personal description, six questions are asked: Sex, color or race, age at last birthday, whether single, married or divorced; number of years of present marriage and, if the person enumerated be a married woman, the number of children to which she has given birth and the number of these still living.

The next question will be the birthday of the person, the birthday of the father and the birthplace of the mother, including the mother tongue of each. If foreign born, the person must tell the year of immigration to the United States and whether naturalized or alien, also whether able to speak the English language. The trade or profession with the general nature of industry are the next two questions in order, then, whether an employer, employe or working on own account. If the person is an employe, he will be asked whether he was out of work on April 15, 1910, and the number of weeks out of work during the year 1909.

Under the head of "Education," the person's ability to read and write will be noted, in cases of those of 10 years and more, and also if said person has attended school since September 1, 1909. They will be asked whether the home is owned or rented, whether free or mortgaged. Veterans of the Civil War will be noted, as will persons who are either deaf and dumb, or totally blind.

There are ten enumerators for Plainfield and residents are asked to assist them in their work by cheerfully answering all the required questions.

MT. ZION A. M. E. CHURCH WANTS PASTOR DIGGS RETURN

The fourth quarterly meeting of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church was held at the church, last night, with Presiding Elder J. T. Hammond in charge. The work of the past year was reviewed and everything found to be in a satisfactory and encouraging condition. Omer Thompson was chosen delegate to the New Jersey Conference to be held at Camden next week.

Rev. J. T. Diggs, who is now completing his third year as pastor of the church, was extended a call to return another year and a lengthy petition was signed and will be presented to the conference asking that Mr. Diggs be continued here. His work has been satisfactory and he is held in esteem by both white and colored. A vote of thanks was extended to A. P. White, clerk of the church, for his services. Rev. Edward Maynard, secretary of the stewards, reported the receipts for the year to be $770.98, and A. P. White, secretary of the trustees, reported receipts of $1,029.

Funeral of Charles C. Zimmer.

The funeral of Charles C. Zimmer was held at his late home in East Orange yesterday and the body brought to this city this afternoon for interment in Hillside cemetery. Rev. Warren Giles, pastor of the First Reformed church, officiated at the home, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, making the commitment at Hillside.

WATER MASS MEETING AT THEATRE TONIGHT

Charles W. McCutchen will act as chairman at the mass meeting at the theatre tonight when the special election on the water problem to be held on Tuesday will be the topic for discussion. Mr. McCutchen is the largest taxpayer on city property. The speakers will include Edward W. Bemis, deputy water commissioner of New York city, and Creswell McLaughlin, of Cornwell-on-Hudson. An apportunity will be given any one in the audience to express his opinion. Necessarily the informal speeches will be limited to three minutes time.

The officers of all the local civic organizations and the ministers as well as the officials of the city and borough will occupy seats on the stage. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Plainfield Protective Association. The public is cordially invited.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meetings of the Congregational church and the Congregational Society were held in the church last night preceded by a dinner arranged by the Women's Association to which a large number of the members did justice. The work of the church, its pastor and the Sunday school were all discussed and reports from the various activities of the church received. The treasurer's report was received with prolonged applause because, as J. A. Morse, president of the Board of Trustees said, for the first time in twenty years the balance was on the right side of the ledger and would have been larger had all the pledges been paid in full.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich read the report of the church's industries for the year just past and it was full of encouragement. The inauguration of the Men's Club and the activity of the Women's Association were a source of extreme gratification to the pastor. The women have raised over $500 for the church building fund besides attending to the needs of the various missionary and charitable contributions. The Men's Club has also done a great deal toward paying some of the expenses of the church and its influence among the male members of the church is wide and bringing the best results.

The total membership of the church has increased to 302 and the total benevolence during the past year amounted to $3,729.32. Altogether it was considered by the pastor to have been the best year in the history of the church. The standard of being satisfied with only the best in their efforts has been literally kept and the results have been eminently satisfactory.

Thomas West, of Norwood avenue, a new member of the church, was elected to fill the vacancy in the church clerkship and for the society and was formally accepted last night. The Sunday school brought out the most discussion of the evening, but it was all of a kind which looked to the interest of this flourishing department of the work. J. M. Whiton, the superintendent, read the report of its activities and declared that the school was never in a more flourishing condition. Its percentage of attendance as compared with other Sunday schools in the city showed that this school leads all the others by a wide margin. The Wednesday evening after the second Sunday in each quarter of the church year was set apart for the transaction of business. The following elections took place: Deacons, Alonzo Weseman and James McClymont. Trustees, Dr. A. C. Hubbard, C. A. Rice, J. A. Morse and Philip Suffern. James McClymont was elected auditor.

Messrs. Weseman and McClymont were elected to serve two years. Members of the official board elected were R. M. Hooker, E. L. Suffern, Sidney Dunning. The budget for the coming year shows an anticipated expenditure of $3,500.

EDWARD DOOLEY FINED FOR PROVOKING FIGHT.

Edward Dooley and Edward Carroll, the two men who were implicated in a fight on Monday morning in the rear of a saloon on Somerset street, were arraigned this morning before City Judge William N. Runyon. Sufficient evidence was produced to show that Dooley was the aggressor and had provoked the fight. He was fined $10 with the alternative of spending twepty days in the county jail and sentence in Carroll's case was suspended. J. Henry Crane appeared for Carroll.

Miss Anna Merlin, of Brooklyn, has returned home after a visit with relatives here.

CHURCH RAISED $41,385

Annual Meeting of Crescent Avenue Church and Its Chapels.

SOME SPLENDID REPORTS.

Total Membership 1,830; Sunday-School Enrollment 1,727; Elders and Deacons Are Chosen.

That the Crescent Avenue church and its chapels are a big factor in the local religious field was made apparent in the reports presented at the annual congregational meeting last night. The reports showed that a total of $41,385.92 had been expended for benevolent and congregational purposes during the year.

The meeting was largely attended by members of the home church and Hope, Warren and Bethel chapels. The session was presided over by the Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie. Dr. Ellis W. Hedges was celrk. The latter presented the reports of the home church; Rev. L. R. Howard and Superintendent George H. Condict responded for Hope chapel; A. J. Gavett and Rev. T. D. Tildon for Bethel chapel, and Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey and Joseph W. Gavett, for Warren chapel.

Dr. Hedges reports recorded the following disbursements made by the Crescent Avenue church: Foreign missions, $5,676.30; home missions, $4,025.62; Synodical home missions, $575; support of chapels, $5,974.06; American Bible Society, $17.25; publication and Sunday school work, $101.65; deacons' fund, $952.28; Freedman, 1$14; ministerial relief, $1,019; general assembly, $220.88; temperance, $155; aid for colleges, $195.15; church erection, $121.88; education, $157.62; local charities, $598.23; miscellaneous, $783.06, church renovations, $5,363.27; congregational expenses, $15,336.09; total, $41,385.92.

The total church membership of the home congregation and Hope, Warren and Bethel chapels is 1,830, divided as follows: Crescent avenue, 1,076; Hope chapel, 424; Warren chapel, 250; Bethel chapel, 80.

Sunday school enrollment totals 1,727 members as followws: Hope chapel, 619; Warren chapel, 425; Crescent Avenue, 379; Bethel cnapel, 304.

The most important item of business transacted was the adoption of a resolution increasing the board of deacons from five to six members. H. Otis Newman and John Doull Miller were re-elected and T. F. Budlong was chosen as the new member of the board.

In the selection of elders A. J. Gavett, John Leal and E. E. Parvin were re-elected.

Three trustees were also chosen, William A. Garrigues and Townsend Rushmore being re-elected and Harry W. Munger to succeed Charles F. Abbott, resigned.

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS TO HAVE A MERRY EVENING.

Under the auspices of the teachers of the Plainfield Public Schools, an entertainment will be given at the High School auditorium on Saturday night. The teachers have invited a number of friends to enjoy the affair. The first part of the evening will be taken up with a one-act play entitled "Ici on Parle Francais," to be presented by Miss Ball, Miss Reynolds, Miss Eason, Miss Beckwith, Charles L. Lewis, S. B. Howe, Jr., and Lindsey Best.

The rest of the evening will be devoted to dancing. Refreshments will be served. This is an annual affair with the teachers and has always proved a great success, especially from a social point of view, as it affords an opportunity for the teaching corps to become better acquainted.

Lecture on the American Boy.

Dr. L. C. Randolph, of Alfred, N. Y., will give an illustrated lecture at the Seventh-Day Baptist church Saturday night on the interesting topic, "That Delightful Fellow, the American Boy." Dr. Randolph is a speaker of exceptional ability and his lecture as well as a series of fine views cannot fail to attract a large audience.

Shade Tree Commission to Meet.

The Shade Tree Commission will meet at 7:30 o'clock this evening in the office of Mayor Fisk, when an opportunity will be given persons residing on West Eighth street and Grant avenue to confer with the commissioners regarding the planting of trees and other changes pertaining to the work of the commission.

Young Paid Two Dollars.

LeGrand B. Young, arrested for drunkenness by Marshall Culver, in the borough last night, was fined $2 this morning by Recorder Dolliver.

MISS SARAH E. CRATE NOW MRS. F. M. WHITLEY JR.

Miss Sarah E. Crate, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin A. Crate, of 230 Watchung avenue, and Francis M. Whitely, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Whitely, of 35 Steiner place, the borough, were married at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, performed the ceremony in the presence of the members of the two families and a few intimate friends.

The bride was gowned in white silk, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by Miss Anna Whitely, a niece of the groom, and the best man was Chester A. Galloway, of this city. Following the ceremony and congratulations, luncheon was served. Later in the afternoon the couple left for Belmar, where they will remain for ten days. Upon their return they will live with the bride's parents for the present. The groom is employed by Woolworth & Co., of this city. The bride received a large collection of gifts from relatives and friends.

COL. MORRIS B. BELKNAP DIES AT LOUISVILLE, KY.

Colonel Morris B. Belknap, son-in-law of John B. Dumont, of Stelle avenue, died at his home in Louisville, Ky., yesterday, following a long illness. The funeral will be held from the late home in Louisville tomorrow. Col. Belknap was the treasurer of the Belknap Manufacturing Company, of Louisville, the second largest of its kind in the United States. He served with the United States forces in the Spanish-American War, where he received the title of colonel.

Col. Belknap married Miss Marion Dumont, the only daughter of John B. Dumont, who is well known here. Since her marriage several years ago, she as well as her husband have visited here many times. Beside a wife, Col. Belknap leaves four children by his first marriage.

HIDDEN IN EXPRESS CAR; CAPTURED BY THE POLICE

Found hiding in an express car on the 9:46 train last night, Clyde Ochs, and William F. Gibbons, both of Pottsville, Pa., were arrested by request of the railroad officials and this morning Conductor H. C. Conrad appeared against the two youths. Judge Runyon discharged them both as the charge of trespassing was not sustained.

Ochs is a stereotyper and had been to New York in search of work and had been unsuccessful. Gibbons is a regular messenger in the employ of the U. S. Express Co. and has a run between Harrisburg and Philadelphia. He was in New York on a pleasure trip. Both, at the invitation of a messenger named Yates hid themselves in the express car of the 9 o'clock train from Jersey City last night and were apprehended at the North Avenue station after the search instituted by Conductor Conrad had disclosed their hiding place in the car.

Gibbons knows now that he is out of a job for trying to break the railroad company's rules. Ochs is not so badly off as he was not in the employ of the company and has some good recommendations from former employers and will undoubtedly obtain work at his trade. Both young men bear all the marks of respectability and they were fortunate in enlisting the sympathy of J. Henry Crane who was present when the case came up in court. It was mainly through the efforts of Mr. Crane that they both got off.

Organist and Singer Resign.

R. Laslett Smith has resigned as organist of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, to take effect May 1, and Alexander Russell, of New York city, well known as a concert pianist, has been engaged to succeed him. B. B. Pettigrew, baritone soloist of the quartet, has also resigned to take a similar position in Orange. His successor has not been chosen.

DINE AND TALK WATER

Officers of the Board of Trade, Civic Society and Merchants Association at Feast.

NEWCORN THE CHIEF SPEAKER.

District Court Judge Tells "M. O." Advocates Why He Is Opposed to Public Ownership of Water Plant.

The executive committees of the Board of Trade and Plainfield Merchants' Association gave a complimentary dinner at the Waldorf Hotel, last night, the thirty-five guests being confined chiefly to the members of these organizations. After enjoying an excellent dinner prepared by Henry Windham, there was a lively discussion of the water question.

Judge William Newcorn was the only one present who opposed the municipal ownership idea and he talked for nearly an hour in presenting some good arguments against the advisability of such a move. He dwelt on the big expense which would certainly fall on the taxpayers in the event of the city purchasing and operating a water plant, especially if at some future time the present supply should fail and it would become necessary to establish another plant.

Among those who spoke in favor of the proposition were William Jeffery, F. A. Duttenhofer, A. E. Force, George M. Christian and Charles Schwed, the last named a member of the Somerville Common Council, which is now considering a similar proposition. Mr. Schwed said that while the first expense seems heavy, the ultimate benefits to be derived would more than compensate the taxpayers. After the speeches a straw ballot was taken and there were eighteen votes in favor of municipal ownership and one against, the others present being non-residents they did not vote.

William Jeffery, president of the Board of Trade, was the toastmaster and he made a speech in favor of municipal water works and an effective argument against the objections offered by Judge Newcorn. The guests included A. E. Force, A. S. Herr, Charles Schwed, E. M. Laing, A. D. Edgar, Henry Leifke, J. Fred MacDonald, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, George M. Christian, Isaac Schwed, Herman Schwed, James R. Blair, Theodore J. Shirley, John S. Johnson, Jacob A. Fass, F. A. Duttenhofer, Judge William Newcorn, William Jeffery, F. M. Ward, Charles R. Goldsmith, William Schloss, C. W. Fogarty, A. S. Olmstead, Hyman Adelberg, H. P. Greenwood and L. L. Baker.

PEANUT VENDERS QUIT IN BOROUGH TODAY.

No more, after today, will the steaming carts of peanut venders be seen or heard on borough thoroughfares. At midnight the licenses of the half dozen or more street merchants will expire and they will not be renewed. Mayor Smalley has decided on this action owing to numerous complaints of citizens who averred that the charcoal smoke issuing from the carts was a menace to pedestrians. Chief Weiss announced today that the licenses would not be renewed.

The City Market.

The big city market, which has been promoted by Ira L. LaRue, at Plainfield, was last week formally opened. It is estimated that more than twelve thousand visited the market. Music and decorations were most elaborate. The Market Company, of which our old friend LaRue is president, proposes to establish a chain of markets, similar to the Plainfield one, through New Jersey. —Hunterdon County Democrat.

Reception to Pastor and Wife.

The members of Grace M. E. church will give a reception this evening to Rev. and Mrs. Ora J. Shoop, upon their return from conference. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, and Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, will be present and have a part in the program.

Special Meeting of the Army.

There will be a special meeting at the Salvation Army this evening at 8 o'clock, conducted by Adjutant and Mrs. Jackson and family of the Industrial department. There will be special music and singing with a gospel address. The public is invited.

Missionary and Aid to Meet.

The Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel will meet at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey urges that all the mothers of the chapel and neighborhood attend as she has an important message for them.

New Wash Goods

We carry perhaps twice the stock of any merchant in this section, consisting of the very best line of staple and fancy wash goods. Every good thing that the market brings forth is here, as soon as it makes its appearance if it is good. Prices run from

10c to 59c Yard

Domestics and Linens

This department needs but slight mention here, as it is universally known that we stand unrivalled as distributors of everything that is good, staple and dependable. Muslins, Sheetings, Toweling and Table Linen are here at prices that are guaranteed always the best at the lowest price.

White Goods

This will be another white goods season, and we are fully prepared for it. We take a special pride in our stock of white goods, having in stock at the present time every good make at popular prices.

Embroideries and Laces

Such a vast variety of new patterns from Irish, German, French and American factories it would be hard to find. Let us show them to you.

VAST STOCKS of SPRING MERCHANDISE are being displayed in every department of this great distributing emporium, making it possible through our vast buying facilities to sell cheaper than the ordinary merchant who must of necessity buy through the jobber, while we buy direct from the manufacturer.

RUGS, DRAPERIES and FLOOR COVERINGS

Every day that goes by sees a big increase in this department. The stock at the present time is the largest we've ever carried. Well known staple lines of Rugs at low prices has been instrumental in bringing this department to its present high standard. We carry only the best makes, in all the best sizes.

Floor Coverings—Linoleums for spring in every good design and every good make in both widths at lowest prices.

Window Shades—Our stock of made up shades comprise the best colors, in the different sizes, the prices range from 25c up. We also make shades to your order in any desired width and guarantee you absolute satisfaction.

LADIES' FINE NECKWEAR

We are headquarters for everything new and novel in fine Neckwear. Such a magnificent collection it would be hard to beat. If it's new in neckwear you will find it at the "White Store," no matter what you may want in this line you can get it here, from the cheapest to the very finest.

LADIES' HOSIERY

Our new Spring line of Ladies', Misses' and Boys' Hosiery has just arrived. No better possible assortment can be shown anywhere, and such a variety of styles. We carry the best brands and makes for women, girls and boys, making this department at all times a very busy one.

Our Millinery Showing

Stands at the top. We have never been so busy in this popular department. So you must think there is a reason for it. Our styles are so different from the ordinary showing; they are not commonplace; in fact our milliners make it a study to see that our patrons are supplied with millinery that is in keeping with their individual wants, and then our prices are so very moderate we can supply you with a costly or medium priced hat to suit every pocketbook.

Children's Dresses

This year we have brought together the most perfect line of Children's Dresses to be found anywhere. This line embraces the ordinary ginghams and chambray materials to the elaborate white lawns, handsomely trimmed with lace and embroidery. Prices from

1.19 to 5.98

Corset Dept.

We carry every good make that the American market represents, in fact our corset business has so grown that we've had to give the department double the room it formerly occupied. Prices run from

50c to 7.50

And we make a specialty of corset fitting. Try us next time.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Members of the two councils Jr. O. U. A. M., will probably unite in the proposed observance of July 4 at New Market, when a set of field and aquatic sports will be one of the features of the day. It is the idea to invite members of the order from neighboring towns to enter their athletes in the Junior O. U. A. M., while non-members will be eligible for the local events.

Chairman Churchill, of the street committee, had had a gang of men busy for a week getting the streets in condition and the improvement is noticeable. Some citizens are agitating for a system to keep the dust down and at the next Council meeting there is a probability of a discussion on street sprinkling of purchasing oil to lay the dust.

At a special service in one of the Bound Brook churches on Sunday night Miss Sarah Cole will be one of the soloists.

Former Mayor William Wyckoff has recovered from his attack of the grip and is back on his "run" again.

BALL SEASON OPENS TODAY

American and National League Teams are Ready for the Pennant Races.

WATCH THE PRESS BULLETINS.

Telegraphic Results of Games Will Be Posted on Board Promptly After All Games Are Over.

GAMES TODAY.

American League.

Boston at New York.
Philadelphia at Washington.
St. Louis at Chicago.
Cleveland at Detroit.

National League.

New York at Boston.
Brooklyn at Philadelphia.
Chicago at Cincinnati.
Pittsburg at St. Louis.

Hurrah! they're off in the pennant races today. The Stovepipe league adjourned yesterday to make way for the opening of the 1910 season in eight major league cities. Every baseball fan in Uncle Sam's domain is on the qui vive—this of course includes the enthusiasts of our sedate "City of Beautiful."

Plainfield fans naturally center their interest in the performances of the New York teams. The Giants have supporters here, and so have the stalwart Yankees. All the fans have been watching the pennant dope coming from the various training camps in the southland for the past few months. This helps some in cold weather, but what the fans want is to see or read of their favorite teams winning.

"Jawn" McGraw, the greatest of all baseball generals, and his scrappy Giants have scores of admirers in this burg. All are asking if the Giants are going to figure in the race for the flag. If the pitchers do the bulk of the work they will, but if they don't, it's dollars to doughnuts that the sprint down the homestretch will be between the Pirates and Cubs again. The combinations representing the Smoky and Windy cities are rated as the best baseball machines in the National League and the club that beats either out will have to play swell ball. Wait and see.

Followers of the Yankees are also a legion. The Yanks finished in fourth place last year and at the end of this season metropolitan experts declare that Stallings' Hilltop band will surely finish second or third. Stallings has a wonderful combination of youngsters with a splendid pitching staff and they are almost sure to be heard from in the windup. Had Stallings a couple of veteran twirlers of the star brand, or even one twirler of the "Matty" brand, the Highlanders might be considered seriously as championship contenders.

The Daily Press, as usual, will furnish to local fans telegraphic results of all major league games, during the entire season. A bulletin will be placed in front of the office and the scores tabulated soon as received.

In past seasons The Daily Press bulletin board has been a popular rendezvous for fans because of its prompt service and this year should prove no exception to the rule.

SAM WILBUR ENTERS THE $25,000 CLASS

Johnny Kling, Chicago's recalcitrant catcher, is not the only one playing in the "Holdout League." The other notable is Freeholder Sam Wilbur, bridge building expert, former baseball manager, etc. Kling declares he won't play with the Cubs for a $4,500 salary, but "Our Sam" goes as high as the Flatiron building in his ideas as to a salary to manage the local Elks' team.

"I'll manage the team for $1,000 per week, and traveling expenses, not one cent less," was the ultimatum Mr. Wilbur furnished this morning. That means a cool $25,000, as Chief Promoter Marcus Hoyt, of the Antler's team, states that the season will last five months or about twenty-five weeks.

What would Johnny McGraw, "Chubby Charley" Murphy or Ernest Dorffinger do if they had such independent and high notioned artists to deal with—and what would the National Commission do? That's a problem all Elk fans are trying to solve.

The genial Freeholder is wanted to pilot the Antlers, but in view of his ultimatum, it is hardly likely that he will accept. There is only one solution to the matter, it leaves openings for Dave Carney and Tom Hanna, and Jasper Cadmus, perhaps.

Mr. Wilbur has had some managerial experience. That was a score of years ago when he generaled the old Crescents before the days of "Tee Kay" Keller. "It was a costly job in those days," mused Sam, "and what would it be now in this frenzied age, when everybody is clamoring for a pennant winner."

So unless Sam comes down in his figures, it is likely that the Elks will be obliged to look for another manager.

P.H.S. NINE SWAMPS HASBROUCK'S TEAM

The P. H. S. baseball team defeated the Hasbrouck Institute nine in a one-sided game at Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon. The final score was 18 to 2. The High School started scoring in the second inning and kept it up throughout the game.

Hasbrouck made their first score in the fifth. Van Zandt pitched for P. H. S. and struck out seven men. The opposing pitcher, Crosman, struck out four. The first run was made by Doane, who was quickly followed up by Runyon, Bristol, Zeraga, Riffert and Clark and Nash. In the fourth inning Van Zandt knocked a fly which brought in three men. All through the game Hasbrouck muffed the balls and no one made a base hit until the fifth inning. Then they began to pick up, which surprised the High School a little, but they soon went back to their bad playing.

The game was called after the seventh inning because of lack of time. Runyon and Bristol starred for P. H. S. by making three runs apiece, while the rest of the fellows distinguished themselves, all making one or more runs. Van Zandt was right out there with the pitching and Lidgate held him in great shape.

Nash played his usual game at the initial sack, while Riffert made a pretty showing in the field. Crosman and Gispell played best for Hasbrouck, while Malone was an able player.

Umpire—Mr. George.

The New Brunswick club is cutting down its salary list. Five of its "stars," who were receiving $15 for playing Saturday and Sunday games made a demand of $2 extra last Sunday. Instead of getting the boost Boss Hugo Wasserman conferred the tin can degree on the strikers, which included Waller, Crosby, Stallings, Dalton and Harter.

Billy Keeler's destination is Toronto, according to reports. It is learned that McGraw's offer to "Wee Willie" was a paltry $1,500 while Brooklyn offered the veteran $3,500. Keeler accepted the latter on April 4, but it was too late to suit Brooklyn, and he was passed up by Manager Bill Dahlen.

"Chicago Bill" Cass' newspaper aggregation is without a game. Now that Harold O'Neil's New Brunswick Home News team has refused a challenge of the New Brunswick Times nine, the latter is invited to forward a challenge to Mr. Cass; and Mr. Cass wil not insist on "Wee Willie" Dunn umpiring either.

Today is the opening of the ball season, but from all accounts the "West End Avenue sage" is more interested in needed repairs to the bridge on that thoroughfare, than the getting off in the pennant races.

Bowlers are looking for a feast, also a hog killing, on Campbell's alleys tonight when Johnny Campbell meets Garrabrant, of Newark, in the final games of the home and home series between this swell pair of bowlers.

Manager Listman is greatly enthused over the prospects of the Y. M. C. A. team. All of the candidates are showing well in practise. The opening game will be played at Montclair on Saturday, April 23; on the same afternoon Plainfield will open with the O. N. T.'s, of Newark, on Crescent Oval.

That motorcycle meet scheduled to take place at the Plainfield Driving Park on Saturday afternoon, is creating a big bubble of interest in town and the indications point to a money making crowd. It's a thrilling brand of sport and everybody should attend the meet. It is something new and should be patronized.

—Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, of Elmwood place, desires to inform those who have heretofore been contributing literature for the soldiers and sailors, that she will be unable to receive and care for the same. Other arrangements will be made.

George T. Rogers, of the borough, has purchased a 1910 touring car.

THE DAILY PRESS.

Plainfield, N. J., April 14, 1910.

MASS MEETING TONIGHT.

For those who have not given the required attention to the water problem and therefore are not prepared to cast an intelligent vote at the special election to be held on Tuesday, an excellent opportunity is afforded tonight to become familiar with the subject. At no small expense the Plainfield Protective Association has arranged for a one-night's course of education and without doubt those who attend the school of instruction will leave with a thorough understanding of the subject. It is unfortunate that only one side of the question will be presented for a joint debate, were it possible to have one, would have been satisfactory in every way. As it is two authorities on the water question, Edward W. Bemis, deputy water commissioner of the city of New York, and Creswell McLaughlin, water commissioner of Cornwell-on-Hudson, will tell the taxpayers why they should vote on Tuesday for the adoption of the Act of 1876. This measure provides by a referendum for a city to investigate the matter. By its provisions, the authorities will be empowered to institute condemnation proceedings against the private company; to make a friendly agreement with the private company for the purchase of its plant; to ascertain the cost of a new plant and to make a more beneficial contract with the private company. Charles W. McCutchen, of the borough, the largest taxpayer in the city, will act as chairman. The meeting will be held at the theatre and you are invited to be present.

THE FORUM.

Favors Municipal Ownership.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Plainfield is a city, not a country town. All cities should own and operate their water plants. Why this cry and fear of an additional tax? Be it so, isn't it worth it? What better improvement is there, than a pure and an abundant water supply, which in itself will attract investors? It is simply a disgrace for a city of this size to buy water from a private concern. There may be other things to top off to decrease taxes, but I say don't enconomize on essentials. After the vote is "For," then let us have a good garbage and ash system, and the City Beautiful will have no stain whatever. I could go further, but you desire straight forward hits. I trust that the "Against" crowd will evaporate before the test vote occurs. To be clean and healthy inside and outside, we must have water, water, water. Even the water wagon is effective to many.

GEORGE H. BEISER.

Some Relevent Questions.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The numerous letters published by you in which the water question has been discussed have been very interesting, but with the exception of Mr. Hand, I find no one seems to know what the approximate cost of a new water plant will be or whether a favorable contract with the present company can be obtained, and last, but not least, whether the water rate to the consumer will be less. Also what it will cost the tax payers to have the Common Council make an investigation.

To me these seem to be material points for us all to know before we vote. Who can inform us?

CHARLES LA CROSS HOFF.

MR. AND MRS. RANDOLPH RETURN FROM ABROAD.

Mr. and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph and daughter, Blossom, returned yesterday from a journey of two and a half months through North Africa and France. Among the places visited, were Tunis, Carthage Marseilles, Nice, Mentone, Avignon and Paris. They motored six hundred miles through Tunisia and Provence and spent a fortnight in Paris, where they found all flood conditions dissipated and everything blossoming out into spring gayety and cheerfulness.

Ancient Carthage interested them profoundly, especially the recent excavations and collections of the "White Fathers," going back to three hundred years before Christ. They visited many fine Roman remains in North Africa—temples, arches and amphitheatres—and some also in Southern France.

3,552 Bodies in Hillside.

There are at present date 3,552 bodies interred in Hillside cemetery, which includes not only Plainfielders who have died since its establishment, but many others from far and distant points.

as stated, and Pastor Herring made an informal report of his work for the past year. He referred to the constant and increasing demands on his time, all of which is given solely to the church. He said that he has been called upon to officiate at many funerals outside the church, the average being about four to one. He also referred to his plan of systematic visiting, Mrs. Herring usually accompanying him at such times.

The question of meeting the assessment of $40.99 for the general assembly was presented and arrangements were made to pay this on Tuesday when the Presbytery meets here. It was also decided hereafter to take five collections during the year for the deacons' fund and one extra one for the assembly collection.

The trustees meeting then followed, F. D. Dickerson being chosen chairman and William J. Hamilton, clerk. The report of the church treasurer, William H. Shotwell, was then presented. This showed the receipts for the year to be $7,354.23 and the disbursements, $6,254.80, leaving a balance of $1,100.43. Mr. Shotwell has now served the church forty-seven years as treasurer.

After the election of three trustees, the auditing committee, George B. Wean, E. D. George and F. O. Dunning were appointed for another year.

The salary of Pastor Herring was made the same at last year, and the question of music was referred to the session with power. In conclusion a vote of thanks was extended to J. L. Brower for his kindnes in furnishing flowers to the church.

CONTEMPT OF COURT IS CHARGE PREFERRED.

Joseph and Rudolph Cadles, brothers, of Linden township, were arraigned before Judge Atwater in the Court of Special Sessions at Elizabeth yesterday, charged with contempt of court.

Some time ago they were involved in a trespass action in a justice's court. It was charged that a cow had strayed on their property and that they would not give it back to its owner without compensation. Soon after this they were sued in the District Court, at Elizabeth, charged with assault and battery. The charge developed the cow case. A judgment was obtained against them, which they did not pay. An order for discovery was then obtained against them and they refused to appear on it. Then a rule to show cause was obtained against them, but they refused to appear in answer to it.

Samuel Koestler, attorney in the action against the men, became discouraged, and on Monday had them arrested and committed to jail charged with contempt. The accused told the judge yesterday that they had received the notices but that they had not obeyed them because they were not signed by their lawyer.

The court ordered the men to appear at a hearing which would be instituted against them, and also ordered that they should pay the costs of the previous proceedings.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS ATTEND A SOCIABLE.

Thirty local Christian Endeavorers, representing the societies of Hope chapel, First Presbyterian, Trinity Reformed, Temple Baptist and Seventh Day Baptist churches attended a union sociable held in the First German Presbyterian church in Elizabeth on Tuesday night. More than 300 Endeavorers from different parts of the county were present.

A prominent part was taken in the social session by the local representatives. The Misses Emma and Eunice Eckett, of Hope chapel, rendered vocal selections and were accompanied on the piano by Miss Bertha Jones of the same society; Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Young also assisted in the music with several duets.

Miss Ruth Gray Van Vliet, of the borough, is registered at the Chalfonte, Atlantic City.

FOR EXCISE REFORM IN ELIZABETH NOW

The crowd that flocked Tuesday night to the city hall at Elizabeth expecting to witness exciting scenes at the meeting of the Excise Board were disappointed, but they heard some plain talk from Commissioner Peter M. Kling, the spokesman of the board.

Commissioner Kling stated that the board recognized, as every sensible person must, that there were entirely too many saloons in Elizabeth, and too great a violation of the Sunday law. The saloonkeepers were not so much to blame for this as the breweries, he said. If the latter, who owned most of the saloons, would refuse to supply with beer for one week such of their customers as violated the Sunday law a difference for the better would prevail in its enforcement. In his remarks Mr. King stated:

This board does not want to drive saloon men out of business, but it is determined, so far as it can, to do so, to enforce the law. When it comes to rescinding any previous action it has taken in closing certain saloons this board stands pat on the matter. It has fully investigated the cases that came before it, and where a saloon has been refused a license that place will remain closed, no matter what efforts may be made to get the board to reconsider its action. There is no "comeback" in this business, so far as this board is concerned, and those saloon-keepers who have been placed in the chair and electrocuted, so to speak, for reasons best known to the board, need expect no redress. This might as well now be fully understood, as on this issue the board stands a unit.

If the saloons keep closed on the Sabbath then men who now get full in them that day will remain sober and can take their wives, children, mothers and mothers-in-law out for a walk and buy them ice cream instead of spending the money for drink. If the police and the brewers will only co-operate with the board to bring about this desirable result then we shall all feel happy.

Commissioner Kling's forcible remarks were the outcome of a strong appeal made to the board by former Prosecutor William R. Wilson to have it reconsider the license of Michael Fogarille, which was refused at the last meeting.

Immediately after having his say, Commissioner Kling moved to adjourn, which was promptly carried. Lawyer John J. Stumler stepped forward to address the board on behalf of a client who had been refused license at the previous meeting, but the board paid no attention to him. Mr. Kling waved him aside and remarked: "It's too late, now."

Seventeen saloon licenses, one beer bottler's license and one license transfer were granted.

Only one application was refused, it being that of David McAdams and Albert Mertens to conduct a saloon jointly at 110 East Jersey street, Elizabethport. They were turned down by a unanimous vote.

The city treasury was enriched $8,650 in license fees by the receipts of the meeting.

PRINTERS TO CONVENE HERE NEXT SUNDAY.

Plainfield will be invaded by an army of typos on Sunday, which is the date for the quarterly meeting of the New Jersey State Printers' League. The session will be held in Company K's armory. Special trolley cars have been chartered by unions of Paterson, Passaic, New Brunswick and other distant cities. Among those who will attend is Assemblyman Cornelius J. Ford, of Hoboken, president of the league. The local union has completed arrangements to entertain the visitors.

MAYOR STILL LIVING, BUT PRIZE COW WAS SHOT

Rumors speeded through town like bullets today to the effect that Mayor William A. Sanford, of Dunellen had been shot. The "Hello Girls" at local telephone headquarters were kept as busy as bees in connecting calls with Dunellen for parties who were anxious to know whether the rumor was true or untrue.

It took a Daily Press 121 minutes or two and one sixtieth part of an hour to complete the investigation of the rumor. All information headquarters of that village hadn't heard of it, and the mayor was on a business trip to New York.

Finally one wide-awake villager set the reporter straight by informing him that Mayor Sanford had one of his prize cows shot by a Dunellenite a couple of days ago.

In visiting this city he related the incident to several friends and that is the way the story got around.

CLERK MARTIN'S SORREL TAKES MORNING WALKS.

Borough Clerk Frederick A. Martin, is the owner of a sorrel that believes in morning exercise before partaking of its breakfast. This morning the animal took its usual stroll before hay and oat time but it was a longer one than usual. It lasted one hour and it gave Mr. Martin considerable worry which also necessitated a walk on the part of the borough clerk in search of the animal.

Mr. Martin went out into the barn at 6:30 o'clock to prepare the horse's breakfast. The door of the stall was ajar and the horse absent, but that was nothing new. "Just gone out for a walk," mused the borough clerk, as he mixed up the oats and hay.

Seven o'clock came and then Mr. Martin started out on a hunt for the sorrel. Down Grove street, to Greenbrook road, up Maple avenue, and thence through other thoroughfares, but no evidence of the missing animal. While gazing up Somerset street an urchin hailed the borough clerk:

"Hey, Mister Martin, are you looking for your horse? If you are it has just went into the barn. It's been down here eating grass for nearly an hour."

Mr. Martin returned home found the animal and informed Chief Weiss that the lost animal had returned to its stall.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"A Trip to Africa," the musical success, in which the original "Black Patti," (Sissieretta Jones), and "Jolly" John Larkins, together with the "Black Patti" show is appearing, in the strongest production that has ever been presented by a colored organization. The scenic effects are a marvelous presentation and depicts the interior African Jungle with all of its details. Nothing has been left undone to make this most realistic. This production is in three acts and is very evenly balanced with musical numbers, comical situations and the funny comedians keep things going for the full two and one-half hours that you are auditor. A number of new faces will be seen with the "Black Patti" show this season. The chorus is well picked and can sing, and dance. They will come to the Plainfield theatre aSturday, April 16, afternoon and evening.

Meat Pie.

Slice potatoes very thin and cover the bottom of a buttered baking dish with them, adding salt and pepper. Cut into small pieces meat which has been cooked tender and place on top of the potatoes. Season with such herbs as one wishes. Make a gravy, or use any left over gravy, and pour over all. Cover with a flaky piecrust. Bake in a hot oven until the crust is delicately browned.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 17, 1910.

Topic—Good cheer in dark days.—Acts xxvii, 20-36. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

In this story of part of Paul's journey from Caesarea to Rome Luke has given us a most vivid account of a shipwreck. Starting out from Fair Havens against the advice of the apostle on account of the stormy character of the sea at that time of the year, they advanced safely for a time and were then struck by a terrible tempest or typhoon, in which they were tossed about for more than two weeks. For many days they saw neither sun nor stars, the only guides of seamen in the days before the compass had been invented. For fourteen days they ate nothing. The provisions were probably soaked with water and all fires extinguished, and, furthermore, they were occupied all the time with trying to keep the large vessel afloat. All hope was abandoned. Paul absented himself. He spent the time undoubtedly in prayer for himself and all on shipboard. Then he appeared, addressed the men, telling them that he had had a revelation from God and that he believed God, and exhorted them to be "of good cheer," because there would not be a life lost except the ship. Later on they ate at Paul's advice. Paul thanked God, blessed the bread and ate of it. "Then they were all of good cheer, and they also took some meat." Shortly after the ship was wrecked upon the island of Malta, and not one of the 276 souls on board was lost. God's promise was fulfilled, and in answer to Paul's prayer He had saved all on board. Darker days could scarcely be imagined, and the "good cheer" of Paul must have been an inspiration to them all.

In the voyage of life there are also dark days, sometimes darker days than those upon a starless sea, when only the physical life is in danger. There are dark days of sickness, sometimes lasting for years; dark days as the result of bereavement or financial disaster; dark days brought about by poverty, want and need. In addition, there are dark spiritual days. The soul cannot see God. Doubt and distrust in some way creep into the heart, and it seems as if God has deserted us or as if there were no God. Each one may think that his days are the darkest of all, but let him not so mistrust God. Every life has its own trials and dark days, only we frequently do not know what others endure and suffer. But "every heart knoweth its own sorrow," and thousands have aching, breaking hearts of which the world knows nothing.

The causes of dark days are not always known. Here it was disobedience to God, who spoke through the apostle. Had they taken Paul's advice and remained at Fair Havens over the winter this shipwreck would probably never have happened. But Paul's advice was disobeyed, and the dark days came. Many dark days are caused by disobedience to God. Saul as king of Israel was most prosperous and successful. In three wars against the enemies of his kingdom by the presence and help of God he won glorious victories. But in the last war he disobeyed God in not destroying the enemy and all their flocks and herds. God called him to account, and he tried first to deny, then to extenuate his offense, but it was useless, and darkness, indeed, came upon him politically, mentally and spiritually. But in many cases the causes of dark days of affliction, trial, bereavement and temptation are unknown to us. All we can do is to trust God and "be of good cheer," making His will our will.

The source of good cheer in dark days is God. To the disciples Christ, who is God, said, "Be of good cheer." And in the midst of these dark days Paul went to God. He believed in God and prayed for himself and all on board, and, getting the answer from God, he called upon all to "be of good cheer." God often uses His own people to carry good cheer to others. Do you know any one in distress, any one in sickness, any one bereaved, any one passing through hard times? Pray to God for him. Believe in God and carry them His message of good cheer.

The Christian Endeavor Vine.

[Copyrighted. Used by permission.]

The marvel of the world of thought, of matter and of deed,
All promises and potencies lie hidden in a seed.
And this of ours, in wintry soil laid prayerfully away,
How has it grown and spread abroad since that fair omened day!
How deep its roots have pierced the ground! How far its tendrils run!
How broad the shadow of its leaves beneath the circling sun!
To north and south, to east and west, the glorious vine extends,
Around the sweep of all the earth its gracious fruitage bends
Till China feels its hopefulness and India owns the spell,
And all the islands of the sea its gladsome praises tell.
And Europe's lordliest of lands, and Africa's distant plains,
And where the tropic splendors glow or arctic stillness reigns,
By all of heaven's sunshine cheered, by all its nurture fed,
Wherever men have built their homes this noble vine has spread.
The clusters of its glowing fruit are full and fair and free
And hanging low where all the world may haply taste and see.
And some are prayers, some are words of helpful kindliness,
And some are deeds of loving hearts that quicken, heal and bless,
For He who is the living Vine, whose life in all its veins
Was beating in the earlier days and yet in strength remains,
He planted it, He nourished it, and He will tend it still,
The flower of His perfect love, the fruitage of His will.

—Amos R. Wells in Christian Endeavor World.

PUBLIC NOTICE!

SHADE TREE COMMISSION.

Notice of the Proposed Setting Out and Planting of Shade Trees.

The Shade Tree Commission of the City of Plainfield, by virtue of the provisions of the Act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey entitled: "An Act to provide for the planting and care of shade trees on the highways of the municipalities of this State," approved March 28, 1893, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, hereby gives notice that it is the intention of the said Shade Tree Commission to set out and plant shade trees as hereinafter specified, as authorized by said acts of the Legislature, along the curb of the following streets and portions of streets, viz.: West Eighth Street from Liberty Street to Grant Avenue and Grant Avenue from West Front Street to West Fourth Street, and at the several places on said streets and portions of streets as shown on map entitled: "Map showing Location of Shade Trees Proposed to be planted on West Eighth Street and Grant Avenue, City of Plainfield, N. J., March, 1910," on file in the office of the City Clerk of the City of Plainfield, to which map reference is hereby made for greater certainty. Said trees to be hard maples in certain specified locations and oriental planes in the other specified locations, planted in a good and workmanlike manner, with sufficient soil and compost and provided with stakes and tree guards. Said map clearly indicates the location and kind of tree to be set out and planted in each instance and reference is made to said map for greater certainty.

In accordance with the provisions of said statute, the cost of planting and transplanting any trees on any highway, and boxes or guards for the protection thereof, shall be borne by the real estate in front of which such trees are planted or set out.

The said Shade Tree Commission hereby gives notice that before deciding on the setting out and planting of trees as aforesaid, ample opportunity will be afforded all persons interested or who may be liable to be affected by assessment therefor, to be heard in favor of or against such action on the part of the said Shade Tree Commission, at a meeting of the said Shade Tree Commission to be held at the Mayor's Office, No. 149 North Avenue, Plainfield, N. J., on Thursday, the fourteenth day of April, 1910, at half-past seven o'clock P. M.

Dated March 28, 1910.

Assessments for Street Improvements in the City of Plainfield.

Notice of Hearing Before Commissioners.

The subscribers, being the commissioners appointed by the Court of Common Pleas, of the County of Union, by order of said Court, entered on the twenty-third day of March, 1910, to estimate and assess benefits conferred by the permanent improvement of streets under the ordinances of the City of Plainfield, entitled: "An Ordinance for the permanent Improvement of Certain Streets and Portions of Streets of the City of Plainfield, with Permanent and Durable Macadam Pavement, and to provide the Necessary Funds in Advance of the Collection of Assessments for Benefits," approved April 12, 1909, directing the permanent improvement of, with permanent and durable macadam pavement:

Union Street, from the southwesterly curb line of Arlington Avenue to the southerly side line of Stelle Avenue;

Stelle Avenue, from the easterly curb line of Madison Avenue to the westerly curb line of Union Street;

Madison Avenue, from the southerly curb line of Stelle Avenue to the macadam already constructed on Randolph Road;

Darrow Avenue, from the southeasterly curb line of West Fourth Street to the northwesterly curb line of West Seventh Street;

Compton Avenue, from the northwesterly curb line of West Front Street to the macadam already constructed on Dunellen Avenue; which ordinance was adopted under and by virtue of an act of the Legislature, entitled "An Act to authorize the improvement of streets and highways in cities of this State, and to provide for the payment of the expense of the same, and for the assessment of the benefits of such improvement upon the land and real estate benefitted thereby," approved June 13, 1898, and the amendments and supplements thereto, to which ordinance reference is hereby made for greater certainty.

Ravine Road, from the easterly curb line of Belvidere Avenue to the southerly side line of Dixie Lane;

The subscribers, the Commissioners appointed by the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Union as aforesaid, and for the purpose of performing the duties and executing the powers conferred by said acts of the Legislature, having duly qualified as required by law, do hereby pursuant to the order of said Court, give notice that on Monday, the eighteenth day of April, 1910, at half-past seven o'clock P. M., at the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the said City of Plainfield, said commissioners will proceed with the discharge of their said duties and hear any person or persons in interest who may present themselves to be heard, and at such time and place, and at such other times and places to which they may adjourn for that purpose, the said commissioners will attend and give a public hearing to those persons who may desire to be heard.

Dated, Plainfield, N. J., March 30, 1910.

JOSEPH HARRIGAN,
HARRY B. MAC DONALD,
ANDREW J. GAVETT,
3 31 3 oaw-th Commissioners.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to lay out and open Martine Avenue from Park Avenue to Hillside Avenue," a copy of which is subjoined to this notice, has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Common Council to adopt such ordinance at the regular meeting of the Common Council to be held in the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., at eight o'clock P. M., on Monday, the second day of May, A. D. Nineteen Hundred and Ten, at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council, and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council with reference to the proposed ordinance.

By order of the Common Council,

JAMES T. MacMURRAY,
City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., April 4, 1910.

AN ORDINANCE

To lay out and open Martine Avenue from Park Avenue to Hillside Avenue.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the street known as Martine Avenue, from the northeasterly side line of Park Avenue to the westerly side line of Hillside Avenue, as already laid out, opened and dedicated to the public, and shown on a map entitled "Perfected Map of Central Park, City of Plainfield, New Jersey, Oct., 1904," filed in the office of the City Clerk on Monday, February 7, 1910, be and the same is hereby accepted as a public street of said city.

Special Election Notice

To the Legal Voters of the City of Plainfield.

Public notice is hereby given that in accordance with the resolutions presented to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, and adopted on the 7th day of March, A. D. 1910, and approved by the Mayor of said city on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1910, and of which the following is a true copy:

Resolution providing for the submission to the legal voters of the City of Plainfield, of the question of the adoption of the provisions of an act entitled, "An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Resolved, That the question of the adoption of the provisions of an Act entitled, "An Act to enable cites to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, be submitted to the legal voters of the City of Plainfield at an election to be held in said city on Tuesday, the 19th day of April, A. D. Nineteen hundred and ten; that the City Clerk of said city be and he hereby is directed to cause public notice of the time, place and purpose of holding the election to be given by advertisements signed by himself and set up at least eight days prior to and within thirty days next preceding the day of election, in at least five of the most public places within said city, and published in two newspapers printed therein, to wit, The Daily Press and The Plainfield Courier-News, for at least six days previous to the day of such election; that the said City Clerk shall provide for each voter voting at such election ballots, upon which ballots shall be printed the following words: "For Against the adoption for this city of the provisions of an act entitled 'An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water, approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six," and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto." If the word "For" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall be counted as a vote against the adoption for said city of the provisions of said act; if the word "Against" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall be counted as a vote in favor of the adoption for said city of the provisions of said act; and in case neither the word "For" nor the word "Against" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall not be counted as a vote either for or against such proposition, nor shall the person depositing in the ballot-box a ballot on which neither the said word "For" nor the said word "Against" is marked off be counted as a voter or as voting in respect of or upon the question or proposition submitted. If voting machines shall be used at such election, all voting by means thereof shall be conducted in the manner specified by the statute in such case made and provided;

It is Further Resolved, That the polls for such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual general election in said city, and shall open at six o'clock in the morning, and close at seven o'clock in the evening, and shall be kept open during the whole day of election between the hours aforesaid; provided the Board of Election may adjourn such election from one o'clock until two o'clock in the afternoon, or for such shorter time between those hours as they shall see fit; and such election shall be conducted by the proper election officers of said city for the time then being, and in the manner as may then be prescribed by the Ordinance of said city, if any, regulating elections therein, and such officers shall return to the Common Council of said city, a true and correct statement in writing, under their hands, of the result of said election, the same to be entered at large upon the Minutes of said Common Council.

an election will be held in said city of Plainfield, New Jersey, on Tuesday, the 19th day of April, A. D. 1910, and the polls for such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual general election in said city, that is to say:

First Ward, 1st District, No. 138 North Avenue;
First Ward, 2nd District, No. 545 East Third Street;
Second Ward, 1st District, No. 319 Watchung Avenue;

PROPOSALS FOR COAL

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Board of Education of the City of Plainfield, N. J., at a meeting held April 4, 1910, notice is hereby given that the Board of Education will meet on Monday, April 18th, 1910, at eight o'clock, at the Board room in the High School building, corner Ninth street and Arlington avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at which time and place said Board of Education will receive sealed proposals for furnishing eight hundred tons (more or less) of the best anthracite coal for steaming and hot-air purposes; in the different sizes. The quantity required of each size can be obtained at the office of the Secretary of the Board, High School building, Ninth street and Arlington avenue.

Parties bidding will be required to specify in their bids the name of the coal and shippers of same.

All coal to be thoroughly screened over a seive fine enough to take out all dust and small particles of coal, and to be prepared acceptable to the Committee on Fuel, or their agent or representative.

All coal to be placed in the coal bins within the public school buildings without any extra expense to the Board for handling or trimming the coal in the bins, and to be delivered at such time as the Board may direct.

Bids to specify whether long or short tons.

Payment for all coal contracted for to be made after July 1, 1910.

All proposals to be endorsed "Proposals for Coal," and addressed to the Secretary of the Board.

Upon receipt of the bids or proposals the Board will immediately proceed to unseal the same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding, or their agents, provided such parties or their agents choose to be then and there present; and also to make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Board.

No bids will be received until the day and hour above named, and none thereafter.

The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

you don't tell me I'm a fool and a craven, on the strength of it, you are no friend of mine."

We stumbled through the twilight of staircase into the blackness of the shuttered kitchen. The house had the moldy smell of closed buildings; even on that warm September morning it was damp and chilly. As we stepped into the sunshine McKnight gave a shiver.

"Now that we are out," he said, "I don't mind telling you that I have been there before. Do you remember the night you left, and the face at the window?"

"When you speak of it—yes."

"Well, I was curious about that thing," he went on, as we started up the street, "and I went back. The street door was unlocked, and I examined every room. I was Mrs. Klopton's ghost that carried a light, and clumb."

"Did you find anything?"

"Only a clean place rubbed on the window opposite your dressing room. Splendid view of an untidy interior. If that house is ever occupied, you'd better put stained glass in that window of yours."

As we turned the corner I glanced back. Half a block behind us Johnson was moving our way slowly. When he saw me he stopped and proceeded with great deliberation to light a cigar. By hurrying, however, he caught the car that we took, and stood unobtrusively on the rear platform. He looked fagged, and absent-mindedly paid our fares, to McKnight's delight.

"We will give him a run for his money," he declared, as the car moved countryward. "Conductor, let us off at the muddiest lane you can find."

At one o'clock, after a six-mile ramble, we entered a small country hotel. We had seen nothing of Johnson for a half hour. At that time he was a quarter of a mile behind us, and losing rapidly. Before we had finished our luncheon he staggered into the inn. One of his boots was under his arm, and his whole appearance was deplorable. He was coated with mud, streaked with perspiration, and he limped as he walked. He chose a table not far from us and ordered Scotch. Beyond touching his hat he paid no attention to us.

"I'm just getting my second wind," McKnight declared. "How do you feel, Mr. Johnson? Six or eight miles more and we'll all enjoy our dinners." Johnson put down the glass he had raised to his lips without replying.

The fact was, however, that I was like Johnson. I was soft from my week's inaction, and I was pretty well done up. McKnight, who was a well-spring of vitality and high spirits, ordered a strange concoction, made of nearly everything in the bar, and sent it over to the detective, but Johnson refused it.

"I hate that kind of person," McKnight said pettishly. "Kind of a fellow that thinks you're going to poison his dog if you offer him a bone."

When we got to the car line, with Johnson a draggled and drooping tail to the kite, I was in better spirits. I had told McKnight the story of the three hours just after the wreck; I had not named the girl, of course; she had my promise of secrecy. But I told him everything else. It was a relief to have a fresh mind on it; I had puzzled so much over the incident at the farmhouse, and the necklace in the gold bag, that I had lost perspective.

He had been interested, but inclined to be amused, until I came to the broken chain. Then he had whistled softly.

"But there are tons of fine gold chains made every year," he said. "Why in the world do you think that the—er—smeary piece came from that necklace?"

I had looked around. Johnson was far behind, scraping the mud off his feet with a piece of stick.

"I have the short end of the chain in the sealskin bag," I reminded him. "When I couldn't sleep this morning I thought I would settle it, one way or the other. It was hell to go along the way I had been doing. And—there's no doubt about it, Rich. It's the same chain."

We walked along in silence until we caught the car back to town.

"Well," he said finally, "you know the girl, of course, and I don't. But if you like her—and I think myself you're rather hard hit, old man—I wouldn't give a whoop about the chain in the gold purse. It's just one of the little coincidences that hang people now and then. And as for last night—if she's the kind of a girl you say she is, and you think she had anything to do with that, you—you're addled, that's all. You can depend on it, the lady of the empty house last week is the lady of last night. And yet your train acquaintance was in Altoona at that time."

Just before we got off the car, I reverted to the subject again. It was never far back in my mind.

"About the—young lady of the train, Rich," I said, with what I suppose was elaborate carelessness, "I don't want you to get a wrong impression. I am rather unlikely to see her again, but even if I do, I—I believe she is already 'bespoke,' or next thing to it."

He made no reply, but as I opened the door with my latch-key he stood looking up at me from the pavement with his quizzical smile.

"Love is like the measles," he orated. "The older you get it, the worse the attack."

Johnson did not appear again that day. A small man in a raincoat took his place. The next morning I made my initial trip to the office, the raincoat still on hand. I had a short conference with Miller, the district attorney, at 11. Bronson was under surveillance, he said, and any attempt to sell the notes to him would probably result in their recovery. In the meantime, as I knew, the Commonwealth had continued the case, in hope of such contingency.

At noon I left the office and took a veterinarian to see Candida, the injured pony. By one o'clock my first day's duties were performed, and a long Sahara of hot afternoon stretched ahead. McKnight, always glad to escape from the grind, suggested a vaudeville, and in sheer ennui I consented. I could neither ride, drive nor golf, and my own company bored me to distraction.

"Coolest place in town these days," he declared. "Electric fans, breezy songs, airy costumes. And there's Johnson just behind—the coolest proposition in Washington."

He gravely bought three tickets and presented the detective with one. Then we went in. Having lived a normal, busy life, the theater in the afternoon is to me about on a par with ice cream for breakfast. Up on the stage a very stout woman in short pink skirts, with a smile that McKnight declared looked like a slash in a roll of butter, was singing nasally, with a laborious kick at the end of each verse. Johnson, two rows ahead, went to sleep. McKnight prodded me with his elbow.

"Look at the first box to the right," he said, in a stage whisper. "I want you to come over at the end of this act."

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to Establish the Grade on Certain Streets," a copy of which is subjoined to this notice, has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Common Council to adopt such ordinance at the regular meeting of the Common Council to be held in the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., at eight o'clock p. m., on Monday, the second day of May, A. D. Nineteen Hundred and Ten, at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance, said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council, and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council with reference to the proposed ordinance.

By order of the Common Council.
JAMES T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., April 4, 1910.

AN ORDINANCE

To Establish the Grade on Certain Streets.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the grades marked and shown on the profiles entitled "Profile of West Fourth Street, from Monroe Avenue to Clinton Avenue, City of Plainfield, N. J." "Profile of Thornton Avenue, from Park Avenue to Hillside Avenue, City of Plainfield, N. J." "Profile of Leland Avenue, from East Front Street to Green Brook, City of Plainfield, N. J." "Profile of Leland Avenue, from South Avenue to Berkeley Avenue, City of Plainfield, N. J." all made by Andrew J. Gavett, City Surveyor, and filed in the office of the City Clerk on the fourth day of April, Nineteen Hundred and Ten, be and the same are hereby adopted and established as the official grades to which all curbs shall be maintained, and in conformity with which all macadamizing shall be constructed, and all grades of sidewalks shall be maintained, as provided by law and the ordinances of the City of Plainfield; and that all ordinances and parts of ordinances establishing other or different grades than those shown by said profiles and hereby established, be and the same are hereby repealed.

BOROUGH STREETS TO BE OILED NEXT WEEK.

Street Commissioner John Barrett announced today that he will begin oiling the borough streets on next Tuesday. Mr. Barrett declared that very little water by the old sprinkling wagon process will be used this season. A majority of the thoroughfares will be oiled and a coating of fine stone will be laid on the oil for the purpose of preventing the fluid from splashing on vehicles and their occupants.

A Birthday Reception.

A reception was tendered Miss Pearl Randolph, daughter of Mrs. George Randolph, last evening at her residence, 206 East Front street, in honor of her nineteenth birthday anniversary. Various amusing games were played followed by music and dancing. The house was tastefully decorated with palms and cut flowers, the color scheme being pink and white. An elaborate collation was served after which the guests were presented with some amusing and novel favors. Miss Randolph was the recipient of many beautiful presents.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Boys' Club of Hope chapel will meet tonight to plan for the coming season.

"Making Church Membership Winning," will be the topic of the prayer meeting at Hope chapel tonight.

The first quarterly conference of the First M. E. church will be held in Vincent chapel, Monday night at 8 o'clock.

Under the auspices of the Women's Home and Foreign Mission Societies of the First M. E. church, a supper will be given in Vincent chapel this evening. The proceeds will be used to support a native Chinese girl.

HOPE CHAPEL MINSTREL SHOW TICKETS ON SALE.

Tickets for the Hope chapel minstrel show are now on sale and going at a merry clip. Thomas M. Muir will be the leading man in the production and will sing the topical song. The rehearsals on Tuesday and Friday nights are being largely attended and Judge Runyon, who is coaching the thespians, declares it will be the best show ever presented by the troupe. The dates for the performances are April 26, 27 and 29.

Dr. Harrison Heard From.

Dr. Paul W. Harrison, the missionary from Trinity Reformed church to Arabia, writing to a Plainfield friend on March 12, aboard the Steamship Kola, states that he is nearing his field of labor. He says that he spent two days in Bombay, India, and adds that the needs of the people in India are very great. He says he saw some hundreds of natives one evening in an idol procession, and gives his opinion that as a whole they seem very poor and very much to be pitied in every way.

Men's Club Elect Officers.

The Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church has elected these officers for the ensuing year: President, F. A. Duttenhofer; vice-president, Clifford A. Braider; secretary, Allen E. Beals; treasurer, Thomas E. Currin, Jr.; executive board, J. H. Manning and C. M. Hummer. Plans are being discussed to make the organization more useful than in the past, and within a short time the newly-elected officers will have something to say along this line.

Miss Madline Williams Honored.

Miss Madaline Williams, of Natick, Mass., who is the guest of Miss Josephine Wilson of Watchung avenue, was the guest of honor at a party given in her honor last evening at the home of Miss Wilson. Forty guests were present and the time was enjoyably passed with dancing and other amusements. A supper was also served.

FRESMEN TEAM TOO SPEEDY FOR STILLMAN.

The P. H. S. freshmen defeated the Stillman School nine in a closely contested game yesterday afternoon by the close score of 8 to 6. The game was played at Crescent Oval and a great number of rooters came out to see the game. The Stillman team were inclined to start a great many arguments which availed them nothing.

Nash was there with the throw to second and many a man failed to reach that destination. Weber showed up well at third and at the stick; Rosenson as usual at short. Grisley and Newall both pitched a swell game. Others who deserve special mention for their batting and fielding, too, are Ricketts, Huston and Guttridge for the freshmen, and Coyle, Naylor and Cline for Stillman. The lineup:

Freshmen—Rosensen, ss; Carty, 1b-lf; Ricketts, 2b; Grisley, p; Nash, 2b; Weber, 3b; Guttrdige, cf; Sharp, rf; Huston, lf-1b; Sharkey, lf-3b.

Stillman School—Newell, Naylor, Pound, Brown, Peacock, Moulton, Linke, Glen, McCarty, Coyle, Cline.

PRINTING PRESS MEN WANT HIGHER WAGES

An open meeting of local machinists, which includes members of the International Association of Machinists, will be held at Eagle hall, on East Second street, tonight at 8 o'clock. J. J. Keppler, of Chicago, fifth vice-president of the association, who is traveling throughout the counutry in the interest of the machinists will be the chief speaker. Hugh V. Reilly, of Newark, business agent for the association, will also speak.

The meeting is held chiefly in the interest of the printing press machinists here, they having submitted a request for a minimum daily wage of $3 for inside work and $4 for outside work. At present the men receive between 26 and 28 cents an hour for inside work and between 33 and 35 cents an hour for outside work. There are about 450 men employed in the three local printing press works. During the past few months the association locals have been making rapid strides, especially in membership, one local in Paterson having doubled its membership.

PERSONAL.

Thomas Muir is visiting his brother, Alexander Muir, of Newark, for a few days.

W. H. Larabee, of the borough, was called to Bradley Beach yesterday to see his son, who is critically ill.

Mrs. Stephen Schlief, who has been seriously ill at Muhlenberg Hospital for several weeks, is improving.

J. Newton Williams and daughter, Miss Adelaide Williams, have returned from a week's visit with relatives at Bridgeport, Conn.

Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, of Washington avenue, who has been detained at home by illness, is much improved and hopes to be out soon.

Miss Anna Reeves, of West Fourth street, who has been visiting friends at High Bridge and Lambertville for two weeks, returned home yesterday.

Miss Elma Coons, of Somerset street, who has been ill with rheumatism, is in a critical condition and little hope for recovery is entertained.

Frank W. Morse, of Springfield, Mass., a former resident of Plainfield, was in town today on business. His many friends will be glad to know that he has recovered from an attack of pneumonia.

GOOD MARKSMANSHIP IS THE RULE IN COMPANY K

Company K boys who have been doing some shooting lately calculated to make the wise ones open their eyes, will go to Newark tomorrow night to shoot a match with the brigade team of that city. Some of the work done by the local boys will cause some comment among the sharpshooters from the entire State. Figures recently given out show that the team from company K which will represent the company at Trenton shortly will come very close to winning the trophies to be presented by the Governor.

Practice was held in the local armory last Saturday night and again last night and some splendid shooting has resulted. Experts to the number of twenty-five have qualified and twenty-four are rated as sharpshooters. Six men have qualified as marksmen. Sergeant Apgar heads the list of shooters with a score of 96 followed in the list by Sergeant Phillips with 95, Lieutenant Littell 94, and Corporal Winters with 93.

Six men with scores of 92 each press the leaders hard while three others are close runners up with scores of 91 each. Twelve others come into the expert class with scores of an even 90. Among the sharpshooters Private Whitford with 88 and Private Adams with 87 and Sergeant De Camp with 86 show that they are coming to the front. Altogether the men of Company K are to be congratulated upon their ability. They will show their prowess before the end of the season in a manner not to be despised.

COMET SIDE SHOW WILL OPEN TOMORROW 4:30 A. M.

Tomorrow at 4:30 o'clock in the morning will be the earliest time at which it will be worth while trying to see that tramp of the skies, Halley's comet, which is returning to the ken of earth's inhabitants after an absence of more than three-score years and ten. This information is furnished by Georgetown University observatory. Those who rise bright and early to greet the comet, it was suggested, can remain up to meet the census taker, as that is the day on which "Uncle Sam's" enumerators will begin to count noses throughout the United States.

During April and the early part of May the comet will be visible in the east before sunrise, a few degrees north of east. By May 17 it will be too nearly in line with the sun to be seen in the morning, but from then on will appear in the west in the evening as soon as it gets dark enough. On May 20 it will set two hours after the sun, with the interval growing longer each night.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The P. H. S. baseball team will play the Morris High of New York on Saturday morning at Crescent Oval.

The Bearcats will play the Fanwood Club a game of baseball at Fanwood on Saturday afternoon.

The Bearcats, a High School club, have lately appeared in public with white hats with their insignia on the front. They make a loud showing.

Fairly Caught.

A college professor who was always ready for a joke was asked by a student one day if he would like a good receipt for catching rabbits.

"Why, yes," replied the professor. "What is it?"

"Well," said the student, "you crouch down behind a thick stone wall and make a noise like a turnip."

"That may be," said the professor, with a twinkle in his eye, "but a better way than that would be for you to go and sit quietly in a bed of cabbage heads and look natural."—Exchange.

Edward Harding Returns Home.

Edward Harding, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Harding, of 422 John street, was removed from Muhlenberg Hospital to his home yesterday. Mr. Harding was taken to the hospital a week ago suffering from blood poisoning and was under the care of Dr. J. J. Hughes. He will be detained from business for five or six weeks.

Investigating Fire Cause.

Siegfried Arens, of Rahway road, whose henneries were destroyed by fire yesterday morning entertains the opinion that the buildings were set fire. Mr. Arens believes this to be the case because the fire was raging in three different buildings when the blaze was discovered by him.

A Hint.

She—Wouldn't you like to smoke a cigar now

He (radiant)—Why, yes.

"Well, here's one of papa's."

"But do you allow smoking in the house?"

"Certainly not, sir!" — Yonkers Statesman.

Horace Sherwin, the former shoe merchant, who has been seriously ill at his home on East Seventh street, shows no sign of improvement, and his recovery seems doubtful.

—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bakker have removed from 114 Plainfield avenue to 301 Grant avenue.

Etymology of "Pumpernickel."

The story is that in the Napoleonic invasions of a century ago a mounted French officer put up at a wayside inn, and the proprietor wishing to give him of the best placed before him some of this black bread. The French officer, however, thrust it from him, exclaiming: "Ce n'est pas bon pour moi, mais c'est bon pour Nicol," that being the name of his horse. Hence in cource of time arose the appellation "pumpernickel" applied to this bread.—From a letter in the Saturday Review.

Inconstant Cat.

An angora cat belonging to a Massachusetts woman took up its abode with the pig last fall and slept every night on the pig's back up to a few weeks ago, when the pig was killed. The cat mourned the loss of its friend for a day or two until it discovered the horse stall. Now every chance the cat gets it sleeps on the back of the horse.

The Makins in Church.

"I never knew," said the nervous man, "what an inveterate smoker I am until recently in church—my first visit for a long while—I found myself mechanically rolling a cigarette. In fact, I had it rolled and was reaching for a match when I suddenly came to. Suppose I hadn't waked up? Rather awful, what?"

Big Deposit of Iron Ore.

The largest deposit of titaniferous iron ore in the middle of Sweden is Taberg, in the Province of Smaland, seven miles south of the town of Jonkoping. This small mountain is 450 feet high and consists entirely of this iron ore. The area is figured to be 2,800,000 square feet.

Saving the Wall Paper.

A paperer advised me to get a roll of cheap cotton batting for cleaning soiled wallpaper. With a piece of the batting go over the surface of the paper lightly. Then with more batting go over the paper with greater pressure. The result is astonishing.—Good Housekeeping.

A Sharp Editor.

A subscriber to one of our American newspapers writes to its editor thus: "I don't want your paper any longer." To which the editor replies, "I wouldn't make it any longer if you did. Its present length suits me very well."

Says the Irreverent Student.

"Liberty is a thing we modern people abuse," observed our friend, the Student. "The Puritans, now, always carried guns to church, and yet I can't find that one of 'em ever shot a preacher."

Mr. Porker (of Chicago, who made a fortune from Porker's Red Seal Lard)—"Say, duke, this trade-mark of yours is just cute. Guess your ancestor who invented it was in the menagerie business?"—London Opinion.

Quite So.

"Many a man," remarked the homegrown philosopher, "spends his courting days in telling a girl that he is unworthy of her, and his married life in proving it."

Shock for Literature.

The literary man who goes into vaudeville runs a great risk of being humiliated when he compares his earning capacity with that of the trained elephant.

Property of Unfortunate Queen.

TOP AND WIND SHIELD EXTRA
FOUR-CYLINDER REO $1,250
Thirty horse-power—50 Miles an Hour—An ENGINEERING VICTORY

It is comparatively easy for a maker to build a car that will "do things" if he puts enough money and weight into it. But money is money, and weight is money, too—money for big and quickly worn-out tires, money for more fuel and expensive maintenance.

The Reo is a triumph of engineering. Mr. R. E. Olds is a genius at doing that very difficult but useful thing—making a car of very high quality at low cost. The Reo is full of cost where cost earns its money, and full of economy where economy counts. It has the remarkable get-there-and-back ability of every Reo ever built; it is powerful, light, buoyant, graceful, efficient, comfortable.—Let us demonstrate.

THEY WANT MORE WAGES

Speakers Urge Machinists to Join Union and Demand More Pay.

THEIR METHODS EXPLAINED.

Hugh V. Reilly and J. J. Keppler Address 100 Men at the Eagles' Hall on Obejcts of the Union.

More than one hundred machinists of the city, chiefly employed in the printing press industry here, gathered at Eagle Hall on East Second street, last night and listened to stirring speeches by Hugh V. Reilly, of Newark, business agent of District 47, International Association of Machinists, and J. J. Keppler, of Chicago, fifth vice-president of the association.

The keynote of the meeting was $3 a day as the minimum wage for inside work and $4 a day for outside work, and it was stated that plans have been made to submit a request to all manufacturers in the district for a readjustment of the wage scale. The meeting here was held for the purpose of more fully organizing the men in the printing press industry. Later, it was stated by Mr. Reilly, the other branches here, including the Pond Machine Tool Company will be taken up. After the wages are readjusted satisfactorily, efforts will be made to secure the adoption of the eight-hour day for the inside men to correspond with those working outside.

At the present time the inside men receive between 26 and 28 cents an hour for inside work and between 33 and 35 cents an hour for outside work. According to the statement of Mr. Reilly and Mr. Keppler Plainfield is one of the few places where this low rate is paid.

Mr. Reilly first addressed the machinists telling them what has been accomplished in District 47 during the past year, and of the progress made in Paterson, where the American Locomotive Works had acceeded to the demands of the men. He said that the Paterson local had doubled its membership within a few months.

He said that the slogan adopted by the association is "Don't you think you are entitled to more money?" and he asked the men to think it over. He said that it was but a few years ago that the hodcarriers and bricklayers were receiving what the machinists are drawing today, but now they are getting a big advance in wages, and theirs is not skilled labor in the sense that the work of the machinists is. He urged the men to organize and cooperate for in this way only would it be possible to get the increase.

Mr. Reilly stated that the association had adopted a new policy in securing their demands. Instead of calling a strike, which was quite apt to be a long and tedious affair, members of the association throughout this country as well as the entire world are now refusing to work with non-union men or handle machinery that is made by non-union men. In this way the employer is rapidly being brought to see the folly of his policy. He said that the eyes of machinists in all parts of the country are on Plainfield, hoping that they will join them in the fight for their rights.

After Mr. Reilly had given a preliminary outline of the present status of the industry, he introduced Mr. Keppler who, for more than an hour held the close attention of the machinists as he told them of trade conditions elsewhere.

Mr. Keppler told of the success attained in the plant of R. H. Hoe & Co., where conditions were worse than they are in Plainfield. He also told of the progress being made at Battle Creek, Michigan, which place he said was owned by the Post industry, but he said that the printing press men are making substantial progress there at the Cox Duplex Company plant. He said that the Dexter Folder Company had been put on the "unfair" list, and not a union machinist would handle a folder made by that company.

Mr. Keppler has just come from Bethlehem, Pa., where he has been trying to more fully organize the machinists. He said that conditions there are deplorable, but better things are expected. He said what the machinists could get in other localities, the men here coud get, provided they are organized, and this he urged strongly.

After Mr. Keppler's talk a recess was held to give the non-union men present, and there were a number of them, a chance to identify themselves with the association. Between fifteen and twenty took the obligation. Another meeting will be held here Thursday night, Arpil 21, when further steps toward strengthening the association will be taken by Mr Reilly.

NO NEW REGISTRATION FOR SPECIAL ELECTION

Any voter who was registered last fall is legally entitled to vote at the same polling place at the special election on Tuesday provided he has not removed from that district. The purpose of the primary last Tuesday was simply to revise the lists, in other words to add new names. There was no necessity for any one to register then who was registered last fall for he is legally entitled to cast his vote on Tuesday.

If there is any doubt in your mind whether you are not entitled to a vote on any ground don't stay away from the polls on that account. The election officers in your district will gladly furnish you with any needed information on the subject.

MINISTERS ASSOCIATION HAS TWO NEW MEMBERS

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the new pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and Rev. Charles H. Fountain, also of this city, were elected to membership at the meeting of the Plainfield Ministers' Association, at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, yesterday afternoon.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, presided and after a short business session, he gave a delightful travel talk on "Palestine," recounting many incidents of his last trip through the Holy Land. After the meeting refreshments were served.

It was announced that the next meeting will be held Thursday, June 9, at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and that Rev. Mr. Maguire will give a talk on "The Congo." He spent six years in that country.

Those present at yesterday's meeting were Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, Rev. C. S. Kemble, Rev. Edwin Shaw, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, Rev. John Y. Broek and Rev. Charles H. Fountain.

TRINITY REFORMED TO BE RENOVATED

The regular monthly meeting of the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church was held in the church parlor, last night, when considerable routine business was transacted. A resolution was adopted empowering the wardens to arrange for all necessary repairs to the exterior of the church and the painting of the same, also the redecorating of the interior, the whole edifice to be put into thorough order.

The matter of building an addition to the rear of the edifice to accommodate the growing Sunday school was thoroughly discussed and a special meeting of the Consistory will be held next Wednesday night after prayer meeting, at which time the building of the addition to the church will be further discussed and voted upon.

FISK ON CITY PROBLEMS

Municipal Topics Furnish Theme for Mayor's Address.

PRAISE FOR THE MEN'S CLUBS.

He Says They Are Becoming a Big Power in Studying and Solving Civic Quesions.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, in an address before the Men's Club of the Heavenly Rest church last night on civic and State questions declared that men's clubs throughout the State are accomplishing a great amount of good in aiding in the solution of vital questions. It is a recognized fact, said the Mayor that these organizations are becoming a big power in the matter of studying and solving all civic problems.

The sewer and water questions also came in for attention in the Mayor's remarks. He reviewed local sewer history and declared that Plainfield should take advantage of the opportunity to unite with North Plainfield in the proposed system. It will require a big lump sum of money, said the Mayor, but if the chance is not taken, the city will be obliged to expend $60,000 to $70,000 in making repairs to the present inadequate system.

Acquisition of a water plant by the city is a business proposition, declared the Mayor. If the voters decide to give the Common Council power to act one of the chief things that will be considered is the permanancy of supply. If such is the case the Council will have the right to investigate geological conditions, consider the sinking fund and bonds necessary, to ascertain the number of people the company would supply, all of which information is necessary to ascertain if the income will be sufficient to pay the operating expenses.

"I have been called extravagant," said the Mayor, "but I am willing to stand for any extravagance I have negotiated." He referred to the fact that the city had required a police station which cost a trifle more than renting a place, but in the long run, the municipality would eventually own the building, which would represent a saving.

Mayor Fisk also stated that the establishment of a fire house in the east end was necessary and that new schools are absolutely necessary.

Branching off from municipal topics the speaker referred to the great growth of the State. This he declared is the result of the advantages it offers. He referred in detail to the construction and operation of the McAdoo tunnels which he said is resulting in many New Yorkers coming to New Jersey to live.

The Mayor advocated the proposed deepening of waterways which would mean the building of more factories. He also referred to the huge advantages that would accrue from the proposed ship canal connecting the Passaic and Hudson rivers.

Bishop to Visit Here.

The Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, Bishop of New Jersey, will visit Plainfield on Sunday. He will be at Grace church in the morning and confirm a class and in the afternoon he will confirm a class of fifteen at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, and at 7:45 o'clock in the evening he will confirm a class at the Church of the Holy Cross.

Miss Gilbert Goes to Rye.

After much consideration Miss Edith Gilbert, of Crescent avenue, has decided to associate herself with Mrs. Life at Rye Seminary, Rye, N. Y. Miss Gilbert has taught for many years both in the public and private schools in this city and is undoubtedly one of the most respected and best loved teachers in Plainfield.

For a Township Hall.

Voters of North Plainfield township will hold a meeting in Texier's Mill, at Watchung, on Monday night for the purpose of organizing a civic association, the object of which will be to devise means for the erection of a township hall.

MISS MURPHY INJURED

Thrown from Carriage After Collision with Milk Wagon on Front Street.

AN EARLY MORNING ACCIDENT.

Prompt Aid Rendered by Witnesses—Was Returning from Netherwood Station—Damage to Carriage Slight.

Miss Gertrude Murphy, of 842 East Front street, met with a mishap this morning which fortunately will not result seriously, but may confine her to the house for a few days. After driving to the Netherwood station where she left her brother, G. Francis Murphy, to take his train for New York, Miss Murphy turned her horse away from the station to drive to her home, when the animal, a spirited one, took the bit between his teeth and made his own pace down East Front street. Rushing through this thoroughfare at breakneck speed the horse passed the residence on East Front street and continued to the center of the city.

Miss Murphy had gained control and was guiding the horse carefully through the middle of the street when a milk wagon which was occupying a large share of the way suddenly loomed up before the onrushing animal at Somerset street. There was no time in which to guide the horse out of danger and with a crash the carriage was hurled into the milk wagon and Miss Murphy thrown violently to the ground.

Patrolman Charles Flynn, who was nearby, stopped the animal and Miss Murphy was hurried into Armstrong's drug store after J. J. Varley, manager for A. E. Force, had rendered temporary aid. Dr. P. J. Zeglio, who happened by and Miss Elizabeth B. Stowe, attended the wounded young woman after which she was removed in the ambulance to her home and Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan summoned. Dr. Buchanan found that Miss Murphy was suffering from contusions and a cut on the forehead and that no bones were broken. Miss Murphy was resting easily this afternoon. The paint was scraped from the carriage and the milk wagon had a shaft cracked. The horse was not injured.

PLAINFIELD WILL HAVE A 'SAFE AND SANE' 4TH

Plainfield will have a "safe and sane" Fourth. This is assured by the action of Mayor Fisk in taking advantage of the Act of the Legislature signed by Governor Fort a few days ago permitting municipalities to prohibit or regulate the sale of fireworks.

The Board of Fire Underwriters yesterday sent to the Mayor an urgent request that Plainfield join the movement for a sane celebration of independence day. The communication has been transmitted by the Mayor to Corporation Counsel Marsh who will give the Common Council the benefit of his legal judgment at that body's next meeting.

PARK AVENUE BAPTISTS ELECT AND HEAR REPORTS.

At the annual meeting of the church and society of the Park Avenue Baptist church, Wednesday night, Harry F. Johnson, George E. Hall, G. W. V. Moy, A. D. Thompson, Jr., and S. J. Sims were elected trustees for the coming years.

The treasurer's report showed the receipts for the past year to be $4,413.66 and the disbursements $4,351.02, leaving a balance of $62.64.

Negro Doctors to Meet.

The North Jersey Medical Association, composed of the colored physicians and dentists in the northern section of the State, will hold an education meeting in Mount Olive Baptist church on Sunday afternoon, April 17, at 3:30. Addresses will be made on the subjects of hygiene, sanitation, preventive medicine and dentistry. An invitation has been extended to all, regardless of color, to attend this meeting where they will be assured of a cordial welcome.

In the account of the annual meeting of the First Presbyterian church in The Daily Press of yesterday, it was stated that E. D. George, treasurer for the deacons' fund reported reecipts of $296.51 and disbursements of $291.52, whereas the disbursements should have been $5, leaving an exceptionally large balance of $291.51.

FARMERS' FEUD STILL ON

Freeman Strait Acquitted on G. H. Underhill's Charge and Latter is Arrested.

JUSTICE REBUKES UNDERHILL.

Court Room Filled at Hearing of Case Between Scrappy Watchung Residents.—Horse Appears As a Witness in Case.

The long standing feud between G. H. Underhill and Freeman Strait, of Watchung, which culminated in serious encounter at that place last Saturday night, in which Strait charged Underhill with trying to hang him with a rope to a cherry tree in the former's yard, received an airing before Justice Thomas Snape in the borough police court yesterday afternoon before a big crowd of neighbors. The hearing yesterday was in the assault case brought by Underhill against Strait. The former charged the latter with hitting him on the head with a whip during the scrap. After listening to testimony for nearly three hours, Justice Snape dismissed the charge.

Strait was represented by Josiah Stryker, of Trenton, while Underhill conducted his own case. After the trial was over Underhill was arrested on a charge of assault preferred by Strait. This hearing will take place on Wednesday afternoon.

In dismissing the charge yesterday against Strait Justice Snape issued a rebuke to Underhill. "I have followed the troubles of these two men in the courts since they started," said Justice Snape, "and I can only see that it is a plot on the part of Underhill to rub it in on Strait all the time. Underhill, I believe, is doing all he can legally to damage the case of Mr. Strait which is now in the court. The roping incident is a disgrace to a man of intelligence like Mr. Underhill."

A novel part of the proceedings was the appearance of a horse as a witness for Strait. It was brought out in the testimony, and Underhill admitted it, that he had struck Strait's horse on the nose and head with a rake. At this point Attorney Stryker suggested that the Justice leave his chair and inspect the wounds of the animal, which was standing on the outside of the police station. The justice did so, and so did every one in the courtroom except Underhill. The marks of violence on the horse were plainly visible.

Strait in his testimony repeated his story of Underhill trying to hang him. He said that Underhill and his son Richard, overpowered him and rendered him helpless by binding a rope around his body from head to feet. When this was accomplished, Strait testified, that Underhill and his son pulled him a distance of 100 to 200 feet over the ground, shouting at the time to his son Richard, "come on Dick, we'll string this man up to the cherry tree."

While being dragged along the ground Strait testified that his left knee was dislocated. Strait also declared in his testimony that the fight started over the action of Underhill in hitting his horse over the face and head with a whip.

Mr. Underhill in his testimony admitted striking the horse, and also binding Strait with a rope, but denied dragging him on the ground. When Strait testified regarding the alleged hanging episode Underhill greeted the charge with derisive laughter. This action on his part resulted in a call down by Chief Weiss.

Testimony was also given by Mrs. Strait and Richard Underhill, the son of the complainant.

Rev. Dr. Slicer on Socialism.

In the course of the social welfare services, now being held on Sunday evenings at the Unitarian church, Dr. Slicer has announced as his theme: "The Vain Hope of Socialism." So many people abroad and here are pinning their faith on the reliability of socialism. So marked is its influence in France and England today, not to mention its strenuous advocacy in Germany, and its threats in Italy, that men are naturally anxious to hear the opinion of a man who has so devoted himself to the public good, upon this agitating question. The service begins at 7:45 and all interested will be welcome.

Treasurer Forty-seven Years.

In connection with the annual meeting at the First Presbyterian church, Wednesday night, it was learned that William H. Shotwell had just completed his forty-seventh year as treasurer of the church, a record of which he is justly proud. During his long service the finances of the church have been kept in the best of shape and Mr. Shotwell's annual reports have always been full of interest.

FELL FROM A TRAIN; WAS INSTANTLY KILLED

An unknown man, believed to be a brakeman on an eastbound freight train, fell off an eastbound train at South Second street and Plainfield avenue, at 2 o'clock this afternoon and was instantly killed. The man fell between two cars and his arms were cut off and the body was cut in two.

A gang of men working on the railroad in the vicinity saw the man fall, but were unable to ascertain his name. It seemed to be the general opinion that the man was employed as a brakeman on the train which killed him.

The remains were removed to the undertaking parlors of George Cole, pending an investigation.

DR. A. L. FISK ADDRESSES SOMERSET PHYSICIANS

The election of officers together with an interesting paper on "The Surgical Significance of Indigestion," by Dr. Arthur L. Fisk, of New York city, made the annual meeting and dinner of the Somerset County Medical Association, held at Hotel Ten-Eyck, Somerville yesterday, one of special interest. It was decided that the society would hold an "open" meeting on Thursday, October 13, to which the public will be invited.

The subject to be considered at the coming meeting will be "Fresh Air," and the speaker will be Dr. Frank S. Meara, of New York, professor of Therapeutics at the Cornell Medical School.

These officers were elected yesterday:

President, Dr. C. R. P. Fisher, vice-president, Dr. Joseph Meigh; treasurer, Dr. Thomas H. Flynn, secretary, Dr. F. E. DuBois; reporter, Dr. W. H. Long, Jr.; censor, Dr. H. L. Kaucher; annual delegate to the State Medical Society, Dr. A. H Dundon.

GOVERNOR SUGGESTS A SEMI-OFFICIAL PROBE

Declaring that he had no authority to conduct an investigation into the Legislative scandal resulting from the charges of misconduct of members of the House of Assembly with women in the State House, Governor Fort today suggests in a letter to Speaker Ward that the latter appoint a committee of Assemblymen to make a quasi official probe into the affair.

If such an investigation is instituted it will have to be unofficial and voluntary, as a committee appointed by the Speaker without the explicit authority of the House could not be invested with power to compel witnesses to testify.

Reception to Rev. Mr. Shoop.

The congregation of Grace M. E. church tendered a reception to the pastor, Rev. Ora J. Shoop, recently re-appointed by the Newark Conference. Speeches were made by Dr. H. K. Carroll, Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson and Rev. Charles S. Kemble, to which Pastor Shoop made suitable reply. A social time followed the reception.

Camp Bagley Inspected.

Camp Bagley, Spanish-American War Veterans, held its annual insupection last night, Inspector William Kline, of Camp Mitchell, of Newark, being delegated to do the work. Commander William R. Townsend presided at the meeting.

Funeral of Miss Davis.

The funeral of Miss Mary Davis, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Evan Davis, will be held from the late residence, 426 West Sixth street, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The burial will be in the M. E cemetery.

Will Preach and Lecture.

Rev. Dr. Leslie C. Randolph, of Alfred, N. Y., will preach at the Seventh-Day Baptist church tomorrow morning and in the evening he will give an illustrated lecture on "The American Boy."

WATER QUESTION ARGUED

Mass Meeting Draws 600 Men and Women to Hear Speeches.

AN INVESTIGATION IS LIKELY.

Edward W. Bemis, Cresswell MacLachlan, Mayor Fisk and Others Speak in Theatre.

If the sentiment of the people who were present at the mass meeting in the Plainfield theatre last night is indicative of the feeling throughout the city then the result of the vote which will be taken next Tuesday is a foregone conclusion. Enthusiasm in the way of applause for the speakers was not lacking and patient listening to the very cogent reasons set forth by the different speakers gave evidence of the intense interest which has been aroused among the people. Speeches made by Edward W. Bemis, deputy water commissioner, of New York city; Cresswell MacLachlan, of Cornwall-on-the-Hudson; Mayor Charles J. Fisk, James E. Martine, Mayor N. B. Smalley, of North Plainfield; Otto 'Arens, J. W. Harrison and others laid bare the facts needed by the voters to clear the water question atmosphere and apparently when the meeting adjourned at 10:30 everyone was satisfied that the Common Council, if given the power to act, would not abuse the privilege and that their action would be satisfactory to the whole community.

Charles W. McCutchen presided and on the platform with him were twenty or more representative citizens including most of the ministers of the city, besides the principal speakers of the evening. In introducing Mr. Bemis, Mr. McCutchen said that with a knowledge of the willingness of the proprietors of local refreshment emporiums to furnish other liquid he was surprised to find so many people interested in just plain water. Regarding the conservation of the city's water resources he explained the word conservation as meaning the closing of the stable doors after the valuable horse had been stolen, but it is better late than never and we are now about to do what we should have done twenty years ago. He welcomed the gathering in a few choice words and urged the closest attention to Mr. Bemis' address.

Mr. Bemis, who has spent nearly a lifetime in the study of municipal water control and municipal ownership of other commodities, declared that the size of the audience was a tribute to the subject. He said he was now engaged in advising with a little city in Ohio, where the subject of municipal ownership is being agitated, but it will be nothing compared to the investigation which will have to be made here. The present condition, including the money value of the water company's plant with all that goes with it must be thoroughly understood before intelligent action can be taken by the Common Council and this body of men should enjoy the confidence of the entire people without reserve.

This sentiment of absolute confidence in the ability and integrity of the Common Council appears to be the keynote to the situation and the speaker urged the adoption of the wishes of those who favor municipal ownership and that the people by their vote of Tuesday show their belief in the city fathers.

Continuing the speaker said "If it were possible to learn what the water company would sell their plant for it would be the first step. The quantity of available water must be known and the quantity supplied to other cities as well. The only argument against the voting for the investigation so far as heard by me it that the Common Council might abuse the privileges accorded them by the people, but I do not for a moment think this possible. I was a member of a Committee appointed by the National Civic Association in 1906 to investigate the matter of municipal ownership both in this country and Great Britain and when the committee started out on its work several of the members were opposed to municipal ownership, but when the mater was concluded only one member was not convinced of its entire feasibility and desirability.

"The law of 1876 gives you the right to go ahead in this matter and by rights every community should be safeguarded in looking to its best interests whether they took advantage of it or not. The giving of the power to the council does not necessarily mean that they must buy or construct a water works. There are so many reasons why a municipal water plant is desirable and I predict that within very few years more than ninety per cent. of the water plants

RARITAN.

Rev. Sylvanus D. Harris, for two years pastor of the Methodist church in Raritan, died at the parsonage on Monday night, after an extended illness. The deceased was a member of the Newark Conference, and had many warm friends among the members of the conference and the churches which he filled. For two years Mr. Harris was stationed at Peking, China. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon from the church, and the interment took place today at Bloomfield. A widow and one daughter survive. Mr. Harris was sixty-three years of age.

The bans of marriage between Miss Rosiania Cassidy and Daniel Kelley, of Philadelphia, formerly of Raritan, have been published in St. Bernard's church.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. E. S. Jamison, of Andover, have been guests this week of Rev. and Mrs. William H. De Hart, at the Reformed parsonage.

Miss Anna Riley returned on Tuesday from Bloomfield, where she spent a week with her grandfather.

Miss Edna Nixon has returned from Newark, where she spent a week with an aunt.

Alvah Amerman, of Newark, was a guest this week of P. S. Quick.

Irving Benzer has returned from Passaic, where he spent a week.

Mrs. Daniel Smith has been visiting this week in Newark.

Miss Belle Cook is suffering from an attack of grip.

SOMERVILLE.

The stated spring session of classis was held on Tuesday in the First Reformed church. Rev. H. J. Wahl, of the Fourth (German) Reformed church of Somerville, succeeded to the presidency, and Rev. Lucas Boeve, of Lebanon, acted as secretary pro tem, in place of Rev. Arthur Hageman, who was unable to be present. The sermon was preached by Rev. A. A. Pfanstiehl, pastor of the Second Reformed church of Somerville, who took as his text the "Good Samaritan." A popular meeting was held in the evening in the First church, under the auspices of the Men's Missionary Movement, and presided over by Dr. Francis McConaughy. Stirring addresses were made by Rev. Dr. S. M. Zwemer, long connected with the Arabian mission and E. Sigmund, editor of the interdenominational periodical, Men and Missions.

E. L. Cushman and family moved yesterday to Highland Park, New Brunswick. Miss Cushman has a position in the Rutgers College library.

Colonel and Mrs. Dungan and daughter Ruth, of West Cliff street are at home, after a week spent in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. C. Dooley and daughter of New Brunswick, have been guests this week of Mrs. Thomas Flynn on West High street.

Mrs. Harry Lindsley, of Newark, is visiting Mrs. John L. Anderson.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

READY FOR MOTOR MEET

Preparations Completed for Races at Plainfield Driving Park Tomorrow.

SPEEDY STARS ARE ENTERED.

Auto Race for Light Cars is Also Carded—Sixteen Motorcycles Out on the Track Yesterday.

Are you going to the motorcycle and auto races? That appears to be the question on almost everybody's tongue. Everything is in readiness for the meet which will be held at the Plainfield Driving Park tomorrow afternoon and some exciting sport is assured.

Plainfield dealers are greatly interested in the meet and a large field of cars is expected to compete. So great is the interest among the motorists that yesterday afternoon sixteen cars were on the track the owners working them out to get the hang of the turns.

One event which is sure to result in some red-hot sport will be the contest between drivers and owners of light auto cars. Carlton C. Brown, Jr., has secured five local entries for this race. The auto speed trials are also attracting big interest. The program will start at 2:30 o'clock. Stages will be in commission between the trolley track and the driving park.

The track is being put in fine shape for the races and after it has its last preparation Saturday morning no cars will be allowed on it until the motorcyclists are through. The star of the motorcycle races will very likely be Walter Goerke, the Indian crack, A. G. Chapple, the Merkle speed merchant, and George Klebes, the Reading Standard expert. These three men hold world's records at different distances. In addition, will be the New Jersey Motorcycle Club's racing team from Newark for the handicaps and the New York Motorcycle Club and Harlem Motorcycle Club's teams for the same events. Among the Newarkers will be Percy Drummond, the club champion and crack handicap man, and Karl Segelbach, who is going to France for the International Endurance run in July.

President Herman C. Page, of the New Jersey Club, will head a delegation of tourists from Newark who will attend the races, while President Gutterman, of the Harlem Club, will pilot a like squad from New York. The novice race is attracting a field of beginners while the race for riders from Plainfield and vicinity will have a large entry too.

The list of officials has been completed as follows:

Honorary Referee, Rev. J. B. Thornley, of New York; referee, Dr. S. A. Aldrich, Plainfield; judges, Carlton C. Brown, J. Arthur Dow, C. H. Clever, Plainfield; timers, Dr. D. C. Adams, C. A. Lee, Plainfield, and A. A. Mariana, Reading, Pa.; starter, City Judge William N. Runyon, Plainfield; clerk of course, Claude E. Holgate, Newark; assistant clerk of course and announcer, J. H. Gunn, Newark.

PLEASED WITH REFORMATORY.

Rahway, April 15.—After a thorough inspection of the reformatory Tuesday the Reformatory Commission complimented the superintendent, Rev. Dr. Frank Moore, on his administration. Many innovations have been put into practise, all of which the commission said had helped the institution. The members spent an hour or two in looking over the grounds, and saw the physical maneuvers of the inmates. The respect which the inmates showed Dr. Moore was favorably complimented upon.

It was decided to engage John T. Crosby, of Tuckerton, as an additional parole officer. His duties will be to see that the boys after they leave the institution live up to the requirements of their parole.

Move for Change of Venue.

New Brunswick, April 15.—Prosecutor Booraem was served with a notice yesterday that application would be made before Justice Bergen on Saturday at Somerville for an order removing the libel case against Jacob H. Whitfield and others to the Supreme Court for the purpose of having a foreign jury drawn in the case. The defendants oppose the struck jury drawn here on the ground that none of its members belonged to the Theodore Strong faction and another jury is to be drawn today. Judge Lyon will then rename all of the former jury except four found to be ineligible.

Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Stuchell, of Rahway, have been guests of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Herring, of DeLacy avenue.

THE FORUM.

Taxes Higher; Rates No Lower.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I was much impressed by what William H. Sampson said in last night's Press about the water question. What struck me forceably was his assertion that: "In 1906, and since, the valuations on some of our real estate have been about doubled by the assessors, but the tax rates were not reduced fifty per cent. in consequence, as can be readily seen by the above figures. We could hardly expect an immediate reduction in water rates under municipal ownership and our tax rate might have to be considerably moved up again in case bonds were issued for the water works. Those whose real estate consists only of the dwellings in which they live, may not want to have the taxes on them increased unnecessarily.

And another assertion that to my mind should be weighted by our people is that made by Charles H. Hand. I think that he struck the key-note in this matter when he wrote: "Now this is why I am opposed to the water proposition. We have already had one most thorpugh investigation of it. This investigation was made about two years ago by the most able men in the city assisted by eminent engineers. It cost the taxpayers money but the money was well spent. They told us that public ownership would not lessen the rates. That was what we wanted to know."

There is no doubt in my mind that the question will be carried on Tuesday; neither is there any doubt that larger taxpayers will vote against the plan for they are the ones who must suffer. You cannot get away from the fact that the ultimate object is municipal ownership, which judging from the facts at hand means higher taxes and no reduction in the rates.

DEWITT C. IVINS.

Editor, The Daily Press:

You have asked an expression from me on the water question. By way of getting more light myself I attended the mass meeting of Thursday evening. The chairman made a clear, strong speech and referred to the serious error made by our representatives twenty years ago in giving away our public rights to the water company. I could not but recall that the only earnest protest against the action then taken was made in a communication to the Common Council signed by the late James Clark and myself. Mr. Clark's name had been on the board of directors (so-called) of the water company, but he held that no such company ever, in fact, existed, or had been formed under the (so-called) charter.

The next speaker, Mr. Bemis, rehearsed the arguments, pro and con in respect to municipal ownership. The same sort of discussion has been ably brought forward by Hon R. P. Porter in his book on that subject and by other excellent writers. Mr. Bemis added little to our information. The next speaker was a Humpty Dumpty, who tried, by an irreverent story and otherwise, to create a laugh, and partly succeeded; but his audience laughed at him rather than with him. He said nothing on the water question. He urged his hearers to follow the example of Mr. Roosevelt and do something—even if it was wrong. Plainfield people have already adopted such a policy. It don't pay. Mr. Martine surprised and enlightened us with the information that for twenty-five years he had favored municipal ownership—and, of course, he must, in that case, have favored municipal indebtedness. Is there any earlier record of this?

One thing ought to be clear; but nobody mentioned it at the meeting. The present water plant is well on its way to decay. Before it entirely rusts out, it may put another fortune into the pockets of its owners under some new deal with our authorities. But before its pipes become a mere streak of rust, somebody may try to force its purchase on our community. Beware of any such danger! There are good things we may do. That would be a bad thing.

The Water Question

Pumping

The Company Pumped

55 million gallons per month in 1901
135 million gallons per month in 1909

In 1901 the water in the wells stood at a 43 foot level.

In 1909 the water had dropped to a 30 foot level.

2-5 of the water is being sold outside of Plainfield.

The Population is INCREASING and the WATER is DECREASING.

These conditions will become worse unless you vote and vote "FOR" next Tuesday.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

Loose Knife-Handles.

If the handle of a table knife becomes lose, make a cement of one part sealing wax and two parts resin. Melt together and, while warm, dip the handle end of the knife in the mixture. Replace immedriately in the handle. When the cement becomes hard the joining will be quite as good as it was originally.

LATEST DECISION AFFECTS LOCAL LIQUOR DEALERS

A recent decision of the Supreme Court especially directed to liquor dealers or others who deal in intoxicants in department stores will affect the trade in this county, in fact in any other county in the State. The opinion of the court in the case of State against Kind concerned a suit in Atlantic county. It will in a large measure put a stop to the business heretofore done between dealers and customers whether for cash or C. O. D., or in any other way in which the delivery of the goods violates the interstate law regarding the traffic in liquor.

The decision means, in plain language, that if you are doing business in Plainfield and a customer in North Plainfield wants you to deliver liquor, wine or beer, whether it is paid for in advance or to be paid for on delivery, it will be contrary to the law to do it.

A formal notice will be issued in conformity with a resolution adopted at the license committee meeting on Wednesday night in which cognizance of the action taken in Atlantic county was announced. A warning will be given to all dealers in the State who deliver liquor in the State to customers here and fractures will be prosecuted after the first notice is given.

The matter as it affects the large department stores of New York city is still in abeyance and not until the Federal Courts give an opinion on the sentence of the county court punishing New York department stores for selling liquor here C. O. D. will anything more be done to stop the New York department store practices.

of the country will be owned by the municipalities. Private water companies would be handicapped if they were to start evenly with a municipality, and if communities did not grow they might stand an even chance of winning, but Plainfield is like all other cities: It is bound to grow both territorially and in population. Perhaps you can afford to secure yourselves now rather than later. In any event you are face to face with the problem which ought to be decided now." Hearty applause followed the conclusion of Mr. Bewis speech.

Mr. MacLachlin got the audience into roars of laughter at the outset of his short address and kept them in good humor throughout. He said that in order to become a great community the citizens must be good. "It is within the power of the citizens," he said, "of any communiy to make it great. Do as Theodore Roosevelt did when he was President. Do the thing even if it is wrong. Have a backbone. This election is not a political one, just an honest expression of the people and what your protective society wants is volunteers to liberate this community from the bondage of a private corporation. It is fearful to think that Plainfield is completely at the mercy of a Board of Directors of a corporation. The water belongs to you and you ought to get it and now is the time to take the preliminary steps. Get the women interested and you will accomplish all you want to do. If you haven't water to spare for other communities keep what you have here."

Short speeches, all in favor of the vote of power to the Common Council, were made by James E. Martine, Mayor Newton B. Smalley and Otto Arens. Mayor Fisk read a letter from Frank Bergen in which Mr. Bergen suggests the withdrawal of that part of the contract which relates to a special privilege which the city now enjoys. The Mayor also declared that the taxes will be raised if after taking over the water supply it did not pay for itself.

Mayor Smalley and Mr. Martine spoke along lines of municipal ownership. In answer to a question as to why none of the representatives of the water company were not present Champlain L. Riley stated that an invitation had been sent to Amos Andrews, an employe, yesterday, but that no reply had been reecived. Mr. Andrews had not been invited to speak. There was no apparent feeling against the proposition to allow the Common Council to take the matter into its hands, but the vote on Tuesday will determine that matter. More than 600 representative men and women were present and evidently were pleased with the evening's proceedings.

Codfish Baked With Cheese.

Flake a pound of fresh codfish and put it in a saucepan, covering with cold water. Let the water come to a boil and then turn the fish into a co'ander to drain. Make a cream sauce by putting a heaping tablespoonful of butter in a frying pan with a tablespoonful of flour. When blended, add one and a half cupfuls of warm milk, and a little pepper for seasoning. Butter a pudding dish, put in a layer of the fish, cover with the cream sauce, and then a layer of grated cheese. Repeat till the dish is filled. Spread buttered crumbs on top, and bake for about half an hour.

Death, the Comforter.

There are a great many miseries which nothing but death can give relief to. It puts an end to the sorrows of the afflicted and oppressed; it sets the prisoners at liberty; it dries up the tears of the widows and fatherless; it eases the complaints of the hungry and naked; it tames the proudest tyrants, and puts an end to all our labors. And the contemplation of it supports men under their present adversities, especially when they have a prospect of a better life after this.

Apple Trees in Tubs.

In Germany dwarf standard pear and apple trees about four feet tall and pyramidal in form are grown in small tubs for decoration. The trees bear from ten to 30 pears or apples which, when nourished with muriate of potash, are highly colored and effective both in the blossom and the fruit.—Helena Rutherfurd Ely in Scribner's.

Great Mystery Solved.

How many hairpins does a woman use when doing her hair? The hairpin editor of the Globe has investigated and makes this report: She uses just as many as she has. If she has only two hairpins she makes her hair stay up with two, but if she finds 20 in the top bureau drawer she uses all of them.—Atchison Globe.

Why We Live On.

What a lot of frauds we are. Many a man is living on because he hates to have the world learn that his pearl studs are bogus, his gold dinner set plated, his watch a Waterbury, his dress suit a hand-me-down and his bank account nil.—New York Telegram.

Marry Young, She Says.

An Ohio girl who, at the age of 19, has had three husbands, advises every young woman to marry some good man as soon as she can. The Ohio lady's husbands must have been good enough to make fair settlements out of court.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The First Requisite.

Tom (vainly chewing his pen)—"I say, Jack, suppose you intended to invite a young lady to go to the theater, how would you begin?" Jack—"I'd begin by pawning my watch for the price of the tickets, that's how."—Boston Transcript.

Youthful Philosophy.

A small boy declared his intention of being "extra good" next winter. "'Tain't no use to try in the summer, 'cause mother will tell me not to go bathing or fishin', an' a feller's got to do somethin' ter pass away the time."

Daily Thought.

Don't worry over annoying trifles; the more you think about them the worse they seem. Make up your mind that you will do the best you can to remedy matters and then forget them as far as possible.—Home Chat.

Sweet Revenge.

Some day a philanthropic rich man will get revenge by leaving his fortune to the lawyers, so his kin can have the satisfaction of watching them waste it in fighting among themselves. Atchison Globe.

The Philosopher of Folly.

"Women wouldn't have so much trouble with their men folks," says the Philosopher of Folly, "if they'd believe a little less of what they said before marriage, and a little more of what they say afterwards."

Nothing in It.

"Tell a lie about a friend," we heard a man say to-day, "and you will die suddenly." Nothing in it; too many people die lingering deaths.—Atchison Globe.

Arctic Ice.

Cold water thrown on the ice of the arctic regions will crack it, just as boiling water will crack a piece of glass. This is because the ice is so much colder than water.

Love.

Of yore they languished, they burned, they died for love; to-day they chat about it, they make it, and, more often, they buy it.—Jouy.

Cause of "Busted" Banks.

"It ain't the tremenjus amount uv money in a bank that busts it, it's the money that ain't there."—Boston Herald.

Clothes and the Man.

A man in expensive clothes may feel pretty cheap when he meets his tailor.

Personal Attention Required.

The man who doesn't look after his own interests soon finds out that nobody else is doing it for him.

Worthy of All Honor.

Honest toil is holy service; faithful work is praise and prayer.—Henry Van Dyke, "Toiling of Felix."

Proof of Stupidity.

Obstinacy and vehemence in opinion are the surest proofs of stupidity. —Barton.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

No more fertile subject of comedy has ever been afforded the American author and playwright than that furnished by the Afro-American. Black-faced comedy is put on the country over by men and women of more or less ability in this line and when ably presented never fails to make a hit. On Saturday, matinee and night, April 16, the patrons of the Plainfield theatre will be given an opportunity to see the comedy of the Afro-American nature together with something of its more serious side, portrayed by the members of this race. The play is entitled "A Trip to Africa," and has for its leading lady, Madame Sissieretta Jones, the original Black Patti. Madame Jones is supported by the strongest aggregation of colored talent ever gotten together. "Jolly" John Larkins considered to be the funniest colored man on the American stage today, fills the role of comedian. Others in the cast are: Edward Dorsey, Will Cook, Anthony Byrd, Charles Bougia, H. Morgan Prince, Rose Hawkins, Fanny Allen, Sarah Green-Byrd, Ruby Taylor, Irene Gaines and a chorus of dark-skinned beauties such as was never seen here before.

SPORTING STYLES.

The golf coat known to sporting women for the last six years or more has but lately become so distinctly poular in England, the land from which we get our sporting fashions and fads, that the modish outfit of today is considered incomplete without one hand-made wrap of wool.

These coats are either long or short, single or double breasted, and although they are warm and comfortable in machine-knitted qualities, the woman who crochets or knits as a recreation will find no more attractive work and no more satisfying result than in these hand-made woolen coats.

The last touch to this excellent style has been found in a Norfolk jacket shape knitted of worsteds to match the park tweed skirt.

Then separate pieces of a Norfolk jacket or a coat should be made in whatever stitch desired, and then joined together with crichet stitch, so that an elastic seam is obtained.

Stained leathers are used for belt, collar, cuffs and buttons for these golf coats, and the colors of both leather and yarn vary from olive or bottle green to russet and even old rose.

Embroidery Scarfs.

Wide sash ribbon is the base, a yard and a half in length. This will tie an ample bow after going aroupd the crown of a little girl's spring hat. The ends may be embroidered in huge coin spots after the circle has been marked, or you may even baste over the ribbon a tissue paper facing to be torn away when the work is done. An end of handsome ribbon will accommodate six to eight embroidered spots as big as a dollar mark. Pad the spaces well and do the solid work evenly. Make a choice of some rich peacock coloring like green upon blue, or, again, white upon black, according to the child's clothes.

Alice (coyly)—I am not averse to you, Mr. Spooner.

Spooner (gallantly)—No; you are a whole poem.

Plainfield in .... The Olden Days.

April 11, 1872.

Mr. Joseph Cutter, who for the past two years has been engaged in the grocery business on Front street, opposite Compton's building, has recently purchased the property wherein he is located, and shortly proposes making extensive alterations in the same by lowering the floors to conform to the street grade and otherwise improving the appearance of his store. In the meantime he is prepared to sell groceries, etc., as low as any other firm in the city.

At a meeting of the congregation of the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield Township, held April 2, 1872, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Wardens, Dr. H. H. Lowrie, Henry J. Brooks. Vestrymen, Wm. DeKlyn Frank S. Browne, H. P. Bronk, W. Denzendorf, W. O. Embury, Chas. E. Jackson, and Jos. W. Birdsall.

Parties desiring window shades made and put up and carpets made and put down in a neat an durable manner at reasonable rates, will do well to call upon D. Runyon, whose office is with B. A. Mumford, opposite depot. Damask curtains, white and buff Hollands and all kinds of shade fixtures constantly on hand.

Things had dried up considerably in Plainfield, but the rain on Sunday quickly brought back a rich harvest of mud and full flowing canals of dirty water. Is there no way by which the streets can be graded, hardened and drained?

We last week gave an account of the ravages of the small-pox among a family named Vielbig, at Mt. Bethel, N. J. On Friday night last the remaining child died, making in all eight persons, the mother and seven children who have died since they were attacked with the disease.

April 25, 1872.

We received on Monday last, a call for our old (although young) friend, M. D. Titsworth, a former resident of Plainfield, and at our time the junior member of the firm of J. D. & M. D. Titsworth, druggists, of this city. Mr. T. is at present engaged in business at Watertown, N. Y.

The large pulpit bible stolen from St. John's Episcopal church, Somerville, about a year ago, was returned one day last week from Easton. It appears that the Bible was left with a saloon keeper in that place shortly after being stolen, by a person who promised to call for it in a day or two. It was placed on a shelf and there remained until last week, when curiosity led to its examination. It was found that the inscription on a fly leaf had been partially erased, but enough was deciphered to detect its ownership, and it was accordingly returned.

May 2, 1872.

Mr. Geo. Angleman, contractor, is now actively engaged in the work of grading Rock View avenue in the vicinity of Washington Park, North Plainfield. Several elegant residences have been and are being built in that locality, and that portion of North Plainfield is yet destined to be the garden spot. A beautiful park is being laid out at the intersection of Rock View and Myrtle avenues, which, when completed, will be an ornament to that portion of Plainfield, and will greatly enhance the value of property in its immediate neighborhood.

The Central Railroad Company is pushing forward the work of straightening their line from Westfield to Plainfield with great rapidity. Already the rails are laid nearly to Berhan street in this city, while bridges are being built at the Terril road and Berhan street crossings. Although the matter of railroad elevation through this city has not been definitely settled, it would seem from he looks of the road bed of the new line of route that the company are anticipating the fulfillment of their wishes in that respect ultimately.

Shell Hairpins.

The swirl coiffure is caught with square-toped hairpins that sell from 25 cents to $50. They are of shell, real and imitation, of pearl to represent the Italian antiques, of crystals and of real gems. Four of them, if not more, are worn on each head.

Chantecler Neckwear.

The newest thing in neckwear is the chantecler frill or collar, which has taken Paris by storm. It is made of wide lace and is attached to a narrow edge of fine white batiste. Of course, it is accordion plaited.

HERE AND THERE.

"The Thlinget," whatever that means, is the title of a newspaper published at Sitka, Alaska, and for its size is some stuff. It don't pretend to be a thirty-four page illustrated daily nor even "a weekly magazine of culture and help for the friendless," but it exists and its most recent issue contains no little of interest for Plainfield folk inasmuch as it tells in simple language the elevation of one of this city's former citizens to a judgeship and later to the responsible position of postmaster.

A legend on the editorial page says "devoted to the interests of the native people of Alaska," and judging from the contents of the paper recently received by General William H. Stirling and which was read by several friends of the General in this city, the little sheet is fulfilling its destiny admirably.

One of the items of interest in the little sheet is this: "Our postmaster, Judge Sidney E. Flower, has resigned and R. W. De Armond has been appointed to succeed him."

The bright little newspaper is about eleven inches long and eight inches wide and contains many items of interest to the metropolitan reader. A photograph shows schools for boys and girls and the Sheldon Jackson museum in the background appears Sugarloaf Mountain and Mount Vestovia which is 3,500 feet high.

The Right Rev. Thomas Gailor, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Tennessee, delivered the principal address at the convention of the Christian Social Union, a National organization of the Protestant Episcopal church at Trenton, Wednesday in Trinity church, in which he deplored the political activities of ministers. He urged a wise, conservative, but unflinching policy regarding the eradication of crying wrongs. Referring to the temperance agitation in Tennessee, he said that it had resulted in unwise legislation. "Many people thought State-wide prohibition to be the ideal remedy," said the Bishop. "Instead of calling to their aid some experts on the subject and having laws framed that could be enforced, they forced through the Legislature a message that has led to civic degeneracy. It is impracticable. The reformers should leave lawmaking to wise experts, and be content with educating public sentiment. So with corporate injustice of every kind. We must educate the people to overcome these wrongs with the aid of expert socialists in economics. When a question gets into politics, it is a good thing for the pulpit to leave it alone. The pulpit must not allow itself to be dragged down into participation in premature or ill-advised reforms."

RACE SUICIDE GOSPEL FROM A SUFFRAGETTE.

Washington, April 13.—"Ten years hence to be the father of ten or twelve children will be as much of a disgrace as being a confirmed drunkard is at present," Wednesday night declared Mrs. Lareine Helen Baker, of Spokane, Wash., a suffragist, who will be heard along original lines of thought at the convention of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association, which opened in this city yesterday. Her studies of children all over the world, she said, had convinced her that "not more than ten per cent. of them are children of love and that the other ninety per cent. are not wanted."

"Roosevelt, poor, ignorant man," she continued, "urges large families, but I tell you, it is quality we want in children, not quantity. Woman suffrage will better children, for it will produce better thinking. It is the mental, not the physical, that rules progressive action today and teaches us that the greatest crime of the ages is too many children."

Parents, thinks Mrs. Baker, should be taught the responsibility of bringing children into the world. When they have learned that fully nine-tenths of all the babies born every year are nothing more or less than human culls, I believe the birth rate will decrease and we shall have a better and stronger race.

"Before I leave Washington," said Mrs. Baker, "I intend to find out how many millions of dollars are being appropriated to stamp out diseases in animals and to improve the breed of horses, pigs and live stock of all sorts, in fact, everything but the human species. What humanity needs is a Luther Burbank. I would have been imprisoned a few years ago for advocating the views which, happily, all progressive thinkers are now coming to adopt."

Anticipation Safer Than Realization.

"It is not always necessary to make a direct accusation," said the lawyer who was asking damages because insinuations had been made against his client's good name. "You may have heard of the woman who called to the hired girl, 'Mary, Mary, come here and take the parrot downstairs—the master has dropped his collar button.'"—Everybody's Magazine.

She Will Wait.

"Jane is so practical. She has postponed her wedding."

"Indeed!"

"Yes. She said she knew she would have to wait until eggs were cheaper or go without a wedding cake."

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

It has been decided to begin through electric train service from Camden to Somers Point and Ocean City by way of Pleasantville by June 1.

The Cumberland Democratic county committee will meet next week to elect a chairman to succeed James Craig, of Vineland, who has held the position many years and who was appointed a member of the County Tax Board last week.

The Fraternal Order of Sea Gulls, first organized in Atlantic City, was made a national order at a meeting there Tuesday night. Commodore Louis Kuehne was made the past supreme warden, with Tax Commissioner William R. Harris as supreme warden.

Because he insisted upon calling at 242 Kaighn avenue, on his wife, from whom he is separated, James Percival was committed to jail for a month from the Camden Police Court yesterday.

Supreme Court Justice Trenchard has granted City Solicitor Hilliard, of Salem, a rule to show cause why Mayor Robert Gwynne, Jr., should not publish two ordinances recently passed by the Council.

A convention of the Central East division of the Apostolic Holiness church, including the States of Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey is being held at Glassboro.

The Williamstown glass works has been so handicapped by a shortage of boys, who have sought work on the farms at better wages, that the firm has offered a bonus to lads who will work from now until the closing of the plant, the last of June.

Five-year-old Martha Hall, of 64 Jackson avenue, Jersey City, was badly burned about the face and body yesterday afternoon while playing at a bonfire in an open lot at Jackson and Van Nostrand avenues.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of Cumberland county recently made a contract for the rebuilding of the Mauricetown bridge, which was battered down by a towboat. The contract was for $13,000. When the builders began work it was discovered that the bridge abutments were down, and yesterday another contract for $7,000 was let for the building of these. Hankins & Campbell, of this city, were the lowest bidders. The Mauricetown bridge, with the county road approaching it, has in twenty years cost Cumberland county $150,000, and is one of the least used in the county.

RIGHT TO CHANGE CITY OFFICERS' PAY, STAYS.

Trenton, April 15.—Apart from the objections made by Newark officials to Assemblyman Radcliffe's bill, House 400, prohibiting the changing of city officers' salaries during the term for which they were appointed, Governor Fort thought that the bill would seriously interfere with the tenure of office act and the operation of the civil service law in the event of its adoption in any municipality. Governor Fort, in announcing the vetoing of the bill yesterday, said in part:

"Persons under the civil service law and under the tenure of office law have an indefinite term, and to prevent a municipality from increasing the salary of an official thus situated is wrong in principle. Besides that, it interferes with local self-government. Salaries of officials should be under the control of and regulated by the board or body having charge of municipal affairs.

"The city of Newark, through all its officials, has protested against this bill."

A letter from George Forman, auditor of the city of Newark, urging the vetoing of the bill, was made a part of the Governor's memorandum.

The "Bilk" Woman.

The woman bilk is becoming entirely too prominent in this country. If a few women of this class were sent to the penitentiary for perjury the effect would be good. As soon as a prominent man dies some disreputable woman claims that he once promised to marry her or did marry her, and the courts are kept busy with such cases.

TREATING THE OILY SKIN.

The one time an oily skin is of any advantage is when March winds blow. The enlarged pores which exude oil also prevents the dryness and chapping which follows when sensitive, dry skins are exposed to cold air.

The oil-skinned girl will not need to live with a cold cream box in her hand; she can apply it but once or twice a week, where her dry-skinned sister should rub it in each time she comes in from outdoors.

If her skin will not dry with March dust it will clog with it, and care must be taken first to clean the pores, then to close them.

Scrub with a small, stiff complexion brush, and a pure soap. Soap will be needed, as the oily skin should avoid hot water.

Cold water should be dashed freely on the face many times a day, and rinse water should always have a drop or two of tincture of benzine to act as an astringent.

Another good astringent is lemon juice, applied at night, or bathing the face with diluted alcohol. Do not use powder to counteract oiliness. It will clog the pores and do little good. Rubbing with a flannel cloth dipped lightly in talcum powder or almond meal will not hurt.

A good astringent lotion for an oily skin is made from four tablespoons of glycerin and two tablespoons of borax mixed in three pints of camphor water.

Remember that camphor water and liquid camphor are not the same; the former is made by soaking a large lump of camphor in water for several days; in the latter alcohol is used in the solution. The girl with an oily skin should avoid steaming the face with hot cloths unless she uses applications of ice and an astringent lotion latter.

As she is more liable to blackheads than if she had less open pores, their appearance must be guarded against. If they form they should judiciously be pressed out with a watch key. In bad cases wash with a lather of green soap. Rinse well with cool water, then apply cold cream or a soothing lotion.

In extreme cases of blackheads professional treatment is necessary, as there is danger of permanent injury to the skin by wrong use of metal.

Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, of New York, will speak at the Unitarian church, Park avenue, Sunday night on a popular theme.

Pleasant Reading for the Fat

What a simple and inexpensive solving of the fat woman's problem the Marmola Prescription Tablets provide. She takes one of these harmless, pleasant, little tablets after each meal and at bedtime and loses from 12 to 16 ounces of fat each day, and yet suffers no harm, creates no disturbances inwardly, and produces no wrinkles. This elegant preparation (made exactly in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription) has rendered exercising and dieting for the reduction of excess flesh as superfluous as a fifth wheel. A further recommendation is that it is the least expensive fat reducer on the market, a large case, costing only 75 cents from any druggist or by mail from the Marmola Co., 988 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., containing a quantity of tablets large enough to give very decided results in most ever case.

A SUMMER BLOUSE CASE.

Have you seen the new blouse case that are being made up for use next summer? They are built with wedge-shaped ends to give more room, and are useful alike for packing in a trunk or to put on a table when cramped for room.

The cases when finished are 24 inches long by 18 inches deep, with an envelope flap eight inches deep. Wedge-shaped pieces the depth of envelope and four inches wide at bottom by two inches at top are sewed into each end to give extra fulness.

Heavy white or natural-colored linen, crash or pique may be used for the cases. It is cut into a straight strip 42 inches long, folded into an 18-inch pocket. The ends are overcast to the sides of the case, and bound or buttonholed on the wrong side.

The lower edge of the flap is cut in a straight line with sloping sides. Bind the entire flap or just lower edge with inch-wide wash ribbon or linen tape the color of embroidery.

Above binding of flap have a conventional design in two tones of old blue cotton. A fleur-de-lis design is good, or a border of Egyptian lotus. This should be arranged to leave a medallion in centre in which is embroidered the words "Waists" in the lightest shades of floss.

Where initials or monogram is used put it in the centre of pocket beneath flap. The lettering can be alike or the monogram can be heavier than "Waists." If alike a corded outline filled in with seeding is not too heavy. Use darkest tone for cording.

When monogram is heavily padded and worked in satin stitch, the other lettering can be outlined or worked in close French dots along stamped lines.

Fasten with a loop on centre of flap and a button on pocket, or patent fasteners can be used in corners of flaps.

When cases are intended for utility, brown, dull green or mahogany-colored linens can be used for binding and embroidery in deep tone. A serviceable and stylish one may be made from khaki bound and worked in dark green, brown or dull tones of red.

One that will prevent white waists from yellowing is made from deep blue muslin. Bind with white linen tape and work simple design of interlaced scrolls, done in chain stitch or briar stitching. For such a case, which will be hidden in a drawer, lettering may be omitted, or, if used, should be worked in outline or chain stitch.

Larger blue muslin cases, big enough to fit in tray of trunk, are serviceable to hold lingerie frocks when one is visiting. If, after wearing, they are folded neatly and placed in such cases they need much less pressing.

Tiaras for the Hair.

The new coiffures launched and ordained by the fashion authorities have, as was to be expected, brought novelties in ornaments of much originality. One of the strictly new ideas already in high favor is the tiara, or semi-diadem of antique designs—just the thing to add a finishing touch to the Louis XVI coiffure—"a large tape." This coiffure tends to show the original contours of the head, doing away with all artificial puffs and wavy roll and showing the hair piled flatly over the crown and back of the head, renders the features rounder and softer. The ornament is then loosely pressed into the waves of the front and side hair, apparently separating them from the flat chignon and holding this latter in place.

A Corset Hint.

A demonstrator of a French corset is responsible for the following suggestion as to disposal of strings: Instead of letting them dangle at the waist line to make a hump in the middle of the back, the lacers are crossed, not tied, brought around to the front and fastened just within the top hook, and the surplus ends tucked into corset.

This removes any strain around the waist line or hips, and is a smoother and better tying than to draw lacers through the extra front hook with which corsets are supplied.

Fastened in this way it is easy to draw in the hips and keep them so securely girded that the corset does not slip or slide on the figure.

JOHNNY CAMPBELL SHOWS GARRABRANTS THE WAY

Johnny Campbell had smooth sailing in the last games of the home and home series with Garrabrants, the Newark expert, which were rolled on the local alleys last night, the local bowler winning six out of the eight games rolled. Campbell's record is 11 victories to Garrabrants' 7. When the bowlers met in Newark last week they broke even, each winning five games.

A large crowd witnessed the games and intense excitement prevailed. There was a lot of betting and the Plainfield sports "took home the bacon with them." Garrabrants' pair of victories were in the fifth and seventh contests. In the eight games Campbell totalled 1,617 pins to the Newarker's 1,531.

In fairness to Garrabrants it must be said that the Newark man was not familiar with the alleys. After the series was completed, however, he got his eyes on the groove and registered some classy scores, some of which soared to the 250 mark. The scores:

Campbell—
186 221 225 202 199 193 190 201

Garrabrants—
178 190 170 191 220 191 200 191

Practice Game Tomorrow.

The Plainfield and Y. M. C. A. teams will engage in a practise game on Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon. Manager Dorflinger announced today that he is going to give local talent an opportunity to make the team and all candidates are requested to be on hand early.

WOMEN HELD SUPPER FOR MISSIONARY CAUSE

Under the auspices of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the First M. E. church, a successful supper was given in Vincent chapel, last night. There was a large attendance and liberal patronage was accorded. Between the hours of 6:30 and 8 o'clock all the tables were filled with patrons of the affair, and the supply, while sufficient for all, was exhausted when the last persons were served. The proceeds from the affair will be used for mission purposes.

The general committee in charge of the supper comprised Mrs. Charles E. Prior, chairman; Mrs. Maurice E. McGrath, Mrs. Nelson Y. Hill, Mrs. John M. Lewis, Mrs. William Camp and Miss Susie E. Jackson.

The above committee was assisted by Mrs. Charles M. Anderson, the pastor's wife; Mrs. W. R. Benham, Mrs. W. A. W. Burnett, Mrs. George R. Cornwell, Mrs. Samuel Bingaman, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. M. L. Winter, Mrs. N. W. Pike, Mrs. G. M. Rittenhouse, Mrs. Daniel R. Sherwood, Mrs Thomas MacDonald, Mrs. George H. Whitney, Mrs. Ephraim Vail, the Misses Huling and Sharp.

Miss Edna French was chairman of the waitresses, and those who served were the Misses Martha Camp, Helen Edgar, Frances Rittenhouse, Hannah Bingaman, May Doane, Edith Randolph, Helen Whitney, Ethel Prior, Florence Prior.

During and after the supper sociability was a feature enjoyed by everyone. The net proceeds are not known as yet, but doubtless will be large.

On Borough Census.

Justice Thomas Snape started today on his rounds to obtain the population of North Plainfield. He calculates that it will take at least three weeks' time to complete the job.

—A great selection of vegetables for economic housekeepers for Saturday, as well as every day, at Neuman Brothers include Jersey asparagus, green and wax beans, spinach, dandelion, fresh tomatoes, cucumbers, Boston head lettuce, Romain lettuce, celery, rhubarb, egg-plant, cauliflower, new beets, water cress, oyster plant, new carrots, summer squash, radishes, green peppers and green mint.

Edward D. Pound, of East Fifth street, is improving from an attack of rheumatism.

NEWARK CLASSIS MEETS AT NUTLEY ON WEDNESDAY

The Spring meeting of the Classis of Newark will be held at Franklin Reformed church, Nutley, on Wednesday, April 20, at 10 o'clock in the morning. Trinity Reformed church will be represented by Elder H. E. Gayle, the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek and Rev. J. Tucker Lansdale, pastor of Marconnier chapel.

Pastor Broek will make the report for Trinity church, and the financial statement which is most gratifying, will be as follows:

Number of families in church, 337; Marconnier chapel, 14, total, 351; members received on confession, (Trinity) 20; on certificate, 24, total 44; members in full communion, active list, 668; absent list, 213. Marconnier chapel, 28; total, 909; baptisms, infants, 29; adults, 9; total, 38.

Enrollment of Sunday school—Main school, 623; home department, 380; main school Marconnier chapel, 90; home department, Marconnier chapel, 26; total, 1,119; cradle rol', not reported to Classis, 64; grand total, 1,184. Contributions—Congregational, $6,377.96; denominational benevolences, $1,059.65; other benevolences, $779.06; Marconnier chapel, $550; total, $8,766.67.

W. E. DOUGHTY TO GIVE AN ILLUSTRATED TALK.

Doubtless one of the most interesting and instructive missionary meetings in recent years will be held this evening at the First M. E. church, when W. E. Doughty will lecture and show moving pictures on "India and the Silver Bay Conference." The moving picture machine is playing an important part in the campaign of missionary education that is being carried on throughout the country and Mr. Doughty has been singularly successful in presenting by this means, ways and methods by which young people can assist in the work.

The pictures and description give an excellent idea of foreign mission work, which can be gained in no other way, except by travel abroad. How the natives live, dress and work; the children in the mission schools and orphanages; the medical missionaries and industrial workers are shown true to life.

The life at Silver Bay on Lake George will be given its place with illustrations. W. D. Murray, of this city, is chairman of the association which controls this unique vacation resort. B. C. Bonnarjee, who accompanies Mr. Doughty, is a converted Hindu and an expert machine operator. He will probably tell something concerning his own condition before conversion, and those of his people who are still without the influence of Christianity.

The meeting tonight has been made possible through the efforts of the young people of this city and while it is under their auspices and for their edification, everyone will be welcome, whether especially interested or not.

Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Feley, (nee Daisy Dunn), formerly of this city, but now of New York, are parents of an eight-pound girl, which has been named Laura Barkalew Feley.

New Lorgnette Chain.

It is no longer thought to be the proper thing to have the lorgnette chain reach almost to the knees. The newest chains are just long enough to reach a little below the bust line with the lorgnette hanging pendant from it. The change was brought about from utility, as the long chains were constantly catching and breaking, whether they dangled the full length or the lorgnette was tucked in the blouse or belt. The one objection to such a chain is when it is worn with a tortoise shell lorgnette, which is likely to break if one should unexpectedly lean against a desk or table.

WOMAN AT HER BEST.

Oh, woman, in our time of woe, you are the mammoth big tent show; when pain makes furrows in our brow, no other maketh good like thou. We've only to sit up and take some catnip tea and antiache, goose gizzard oil and specac, two porus plasters on our back, a flaxseed poultice, also squills, and Dr. Quackem's sawdust pills, hot-water bags and paregoric, cold-water cloths and drinks caloric, and all the housewife's category—'tis then we see you in your glory.

Had Nothing on Noah.

Noah was inspecting the animals as they trooped into the ark.

"I don't claim to be a faunal naturalist," he said, "but I'm making T. R.'s Smithsonian institution collection look sick."

In due time, moreover, he sailed away with the greatest aggregation of living wild animals ever seen in captivity.

More Appropriate.

Kitty Flies—The lobster! He gave me an engagement ring and now he demands its return.

Belle Wings—Call him a terrapin, dear.

Kitty Flies—Don't be ridiculous! Why should I call him a terrapin?

Belle Wings—Because he wants his diamond back.

"Oh, far worse! He told the girl that Hugley's favorite cigars are those that come in a box with 'Season's Greetings' lithographed on the cover."

His Convert.

"She says that since meeting you she has become convinced of the truth of the Darwinian theory."

"Why, I never in my life talked to her on that subject!"

"She did not say you had; she said that merely being in your society a few times had convinced her."

EXACTLY.

Josh—The snow is quite comprehensive.

Josh—Meaning what?

Josh—It covers the ground.

Preference.

I have no use for lazy men
And, too, I hate a bookworm;
I'd rather live with crazy men
Or hobnob with a hookworm.

Dint of Practice.

"How did Jobbins come to be such a logical and unanswerable debater?

"By force of habit. His wife always makes him put down the carpets, so he knows how to floor his opponent and keep him nailed down."

That Endless Discussion.

"Peary says that he is the only man that ever stood at the pole. That would seem to cork Dr. Cook."

"No, he will probably claim that he is the only man that ever sat at the pole."

It Was.

"Did you see that fool boy chasing that fool girl past here just now?"

"Yes, I noticed 'em."

"It was a sort of reminder that life is just one darned thing after another, wasn't it?"

A Color Change.

"I know one thing which will make a woman change color quicker than anything else."

"What is that?"

"When she gets blue because she finds out she's gray."

Knew Human Nature.

"To what do you attribute the popularity of your work?" we asked of the comic supplement artist.

"To the streak of human nature that causes people to grin when the other fellow gets it in the neck," he replied.

A Precious Pair.

"I don't like Jagsby and his wife. They are always running other people down."

"Not Jagsby. She, I know, is a great gossip, but he seldom talks."

"He owns an auto, though."

The Retort Courteous.

He—I detest a liar above everything.

She—Well, you're certainly not egotistical.

An Unkind Note.

"That woman's face is a perfect vaudeville show."

"Yes, in which the wrinkles are headliners."

SAVING MONEY

"No, I don't save money because I like to," protested the girl with the soft hair, tearfully. "It's horrid of you to say so. But I should think it very wrong not to save money."

"What is your idea?" stormed the mutinous girl, brandishing her celery heart threateningly. "Here you are, with just about enough to live on happily if you spend every cent you get, and yet you sit there and tell me you are saving money!"

"Why—why, if I save something every week, in time I shall have enough to—to invest. Capital, you know, they call it. Why, Connie Barton, everybody knows it's the thing to do," she finished, breathlessly.

The girl with the stormy eyes looked at her witheringly. "Everybody's other name is Goose," she remarked, dryly. She bit into an olive savagely. "Save your allowance by all means if your bourgeois ancestry compels you to," she began afresh, "but don't preach that doctrine to me. I know wha I'm about. I'm not taking everybody's word. I'm using my eyes. And I can assure you that it is no part of my plan to acquire a competency. If there is one calamity I pray may never befall me it is to become comfortably well off."

"Gracious! Isn't that being an anarchist?" whispered the girl with the soft hair, timidly.

The mutinous girl gulped her chocolate and went on talking without a break.

"This thing of having just enough money so that you never feel free to indulge yourself in a real extravagance could never appeal to me," she declared. "I have seen far too much of it. There were the Badgers, for instance. Betty Badger was the most hopelessly limited person as to means I ever encountered. This was solely because her father had an ample income. In the winter the whole family pinched conscientiously and methodically to support the big town house and servants and to meet the harrowing expenditures for dressing Betty's mother and Betty to appear at stupid functions they couldn't afford to miss. Their automobile ate up so much that they couldn't afford an electric. The opera drained Betty's allowance for the theater, so that Betty had to think twice about vaudeville."

"Just like our cousins on the North shore," sighed the girl with the soft hair.

"In summer it was even worse," continued the mutinous girl, warming to her subject. "The necessity of appearing at a couple of smart watering places forbade the idea of an occasional jaunt across the lake or up into the pine woods with the rest of us. Lingerie dresses are so expensive that Betty never could afford to romp for an instant. Positively half the time that poor girl hadn't a gingham dress to her name. And the pity of it is that Betty was no snob; just a nice, lively girl with all the normal girl's tastes and longings for fun. Poverty had done it, my dear; the grinding poverty of the economical rich!"

The girl with the soft hair was impressed, but not altogether convinced. "But, Connie," she protested, "surely you don't mean that it wouldn't be nice to have plenty of money."

"Certainly not," agreed her friend. "But that is precisely what money that has been saved up penny by penny never gets to be. If you were saving to go to Europe next summer and spend every cent you have in the world, I shouldn't say a word. That's not saving; that's just postponed extravagance—the worst kind. For think of all the good times you might be having while you were screwing that hoard out of your poor little pittance."

The stormy girl looked triumphantly at the soft girl. She hadn't planned such a neat climax herself. "Pittance" was rather good, she believed. Reflecting upon it, she could almost shed tears over the soft girl's poverty-stricken state.

But the soft girl stiffened. "Oh, well, Connie," she murmured, "I don't think you would call it a pittance, you know. I can always afford hats." There was just the softest emphasis on the pronoun.

The stormy girl flushed and began to gather up her belongings. Her own hat, as it happened, was the visible result of subtracting a bargain in etchings from the vanishing fraction of her allowance. But she was not silenced.

"I'm sure you see what I mean," she maintained as she took virtuous possession of the check. "If I can be wildly, wonderfully wealthy, so that I need never count the cost, all right. But if you ask me to be comfortably well-to-do at the expense of endless thought about the matter and incessant prudent economies, I shall flatly refuse. Let us be poor, but free!"

How Could He?

"I never do anything behind a person's back that I would not do to their face."

"Then it is true, as my wife tells me, that you never spank your children?"—Houston Post.

So Different.

"She's as like you, as Cervantes says, as one egg is like another."

"Well, in these days, one egg isn't like another if one's fresh and the other's cold storage."

A Mouse and a Problem

The woman came down from the "L" steps and stopped as she reached the sidewalk. She looked up and down the avenue. The cab horses were shivering under drenched blankets and their heads were bent down as if unable to withstand the weight of the rainfall. The sky seemed to be prepared for an all-day deluge.

The woman was garbed for the weather. Her hat seemed to be rainproof. Her boots were thick-soled and her rain cloak of serviceable material was made with wide folds running from shoulder to hem, and the sleeves were generously roomy. As she looked leisurely over the rainscape, undetermined as to which of the water courses to take, she held her umbrella with one hand, while the other was on the catch prepared to raise it as she left the shelter.

Suddenly she put her hand on the coat sleeve. For an instant she appeared startled. Then she laughed. She walked briskly into the nearby store with her hand still on her sleeve. A clerk came forward.

"Will you be kind enough to assist me? There is a mouse in my sleeve and I need a little help in getting it out," she said.

The clerk stared. He was not employed to assist women who carried mice around in their clothing. He looked beseechingly at the proprietor. "This lady wants me to help her get a mouse out of her sleeve."

The proprietor was busy behind the counter. He stopped his employment. "What's that?" he asked.

"There is a mouse in my coat sleeve and I would like some one to help me get it out." The woman's face grew red as she repeated her request. The proprietor leaned over the counter and looked down on the floor. He saw no mouse there. He seemed suspicious. "Where is the mouse?" he asked, as his eyes traveled from the woman's boots to her hat.

"It is here in my sleeve."

"What are you doing with a mouse in your sleeve?"

"I am holding it until some one helps me off with my coat," she said, with a show of asperity.

The proprietor came from behind the counter and called to the clerk, who had gone to the opposite side of the store. "Here, help the lady off with her coat." The clerk came up cautiously. He looked the woman over first from the front, then from the rear. Then he asked dubiously: "Where is the mouse?"

"Here under my hand. I am holding it."

The clerk ventured around in front and looked at the sleeve critically.

"If you will hold the sleeve above and below my hand," said the woman, "I can slip my arm out."

"Take hold of the sleeve, there," commanded the proprietor bravely, as he stepped briskly behind the counter, "and hurry up. The lady does not want to wait all day."

The clerk stood off at arms-length and reached for the sleeve.

"Here boy," he called as the woman slipped off the coat. "Take this coat out of doors and shake it." He wadded the coat up into a ball and thrust it into the boy's arms. The boy started for the door, but the mouse had other plans. While the boy was turning the wadded garment over for a suitable place to shake from, the mouse dropped to the floor.

"Look out! There he goes," cried the proprietor from behind the counter.

"Get a stick," called out the clerk, who hopped over a chair that was in the way.

"I'll get him," shouted the boy, as he dropped the coat and grabbed a broom.

The mouse by this time was clipping off a world's record, the boy with the broom close after, the broom falling with resounding whacks.

"He is going around the counter," warned the clerk.

"Open the door! Run him out!" The proprietor was getting excited.

The boy and the broom made a wide lunge and somehow the mouse was hit. The boy took up the mouse by the tail and grinned as he started to the door.

The woman walked to where her cloak lay on the floor. The polite clerk hastened to assist her in putting it on. The proprietor came out from behind the counter. "Lucky you caught it while it was still in your sleeve," he began, in effusive congratulation.

The woman put her coat on and thanked them for their active interest in the mouse. As she crossed the street two men and a boy watched her as she disappeared around the corner.

"I wonder," said the proprietor, "how the devil a mouse got up her sleeve."

And he is wondering yet.

When the Boat Upset.

Helen—Of course, he clasped you in his arms when the boat upset?

Hazel—No; just the opposite.

Helen—Just the opposite? What do you mean?

Hazel—Why, the boat upset when he clasped me in his arms.

A Sure Conclusion.

"I pity lambs when they stop gamboling on the green."

"Why so?"

"Because like humans in like case, they must feel so sheepish."

Do you realize that Spring is here, and within a few days you will be forced to lay aside your heavy garments for those more suitable?

Why not prepare yourself for the change of climate, and place your order now for a strictly high-class tailored light weight suit or overcoat. It takes time to make good clothes and make them right; therefore, an early call will prove profitable to you.

If you are particular about your clothes, here is the place for you to get finest materials, keen craftsmanship, and perfect fit at a price in keeping with your purse.

Fancy striped blues, plain blues, conservative grays, and the much talked about cassimeres and tweeds are well represented amongst the complete line now awaiting your inspection.

Special Election Notice

To the Legal Voters of the City of Plainfield.

Public notice is hereby given that in accordance with the resolutions presented to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, and adopted on the 7th day of March, A. D. 1910, and approved by the Mayor of said city on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1910, and of which the following is a true copy:

Resolution providing for the submission to the legal voters of the City of Plainfield, of the question of the adoption of the provisions of an act entitled, "An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Resolved, That the question of the adoption of the provisions of an Act entitled, "An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, be submitted to the legal voters of the City of Plainfield at an election to be held in said city on Tuesday, the 19th day of April, A. D. Nineteen hundred and ten; that the City Clerk of said city be and he hereby is directed to cause public notice of the time, place and purpose of holding the election to be given by advertisements signed by himself and set up at least eight days prior to and within thirty days next preceding the day of election, in at least five of the most public places within said city, and published in the newspapers printed therein, to wit, The Daily Press and The Plainfield Courier-News, for at least six days previous to the day of such election; that the said City Clerk shall provide for each voter voting at such election ballots, upon which ballots shall be printed the following words: "For Against the adoption for this city of the provisions of an act entitled 'An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water, approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six," and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto." If the word "For" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall be counted as a vote against the adoption for said city of the provisions of said act; if the word "Against" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall be counted as a vote in favor of the adoption for said city of the provisions of said act; and in case neither the word "For" nor the word "Against" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall not be counted as a vote either for or against such proposition, nor shall the person depositing in the ballot-box a ballot on which neither the said word "For" nor the said word "Against" is marked off be counted as a voter or as voting in respect of or upon the question or proposition submitted. If voting machines shall be used at such election, all voting by means thereof shall be conducted in the manner specified by the statute in such case made and provided:

It is Further Resolved, That the polls for such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual general election in said city, and shall open at six o'clock in the morning, and close at seven o'clock in the evening, and shall be kept open during the whole day of election between the hours aforesaid; provided the Board of Election may adjourn such election from one o'clock until two o'clock in the afternoon, or for such shorter time between those hours as they shall see fit; and such election shall be conducted by the proper election officers of said city for the time then being, and in the manner as may then be prescribed by the Ordinance of said city, if any, regulating elections therein, and such officers shall return to the Common Council of said city, a true and correct statement in writing, under their hands, of the result of said election, the same to be entered at large upon the Minutes of said Common Council.

an election will be held in said city of Plainfield, New Jersey, on Tuesday, the 19th day of April, A. D. 1910, and the polls for such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual general election in said city, that is to say:

First Ward, 1st District, No. 138 North Avenue;

First Ward, 2nd District, No. 545 East Third Street;

Second Ward, 1st District, No. 319 Watchung Avenue;

Second Ward, 2nd District, No. 420 Richmond Street;

Second Ward, 3rd District, No. 1103 South Avenue;

Third Ward, 1st District, Charles J. Fisk's Barn on the Southwesterly side of Arlington Avenue between West Seventh and West Eighth Streets.

Third Ward, 2nd District, Neumann's Barn, Easterly corner of Spooner Avenue and Essex Street;

Fourth Ward, 1st District, No. 204 West Second Street;

Fourth Ward, 2nd District, No. 672 South Second Street;

Fourth Ward, 3rd District, No. 921 West Third Street.

and shall open at six o'clock in the morning, and close at seven o'clock in the evening, and shall be kept open during the whole day of election between the hours aforesaid, provided the Board of Election may adjourn such election from one o'clock until two o'clock in the afternoon, or for such shorter time between those hours as they shall see fit, for the purpose of voting for or against the adoption for this city of the provisions of an act entitled "An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

The Board of Registry and Election will meet in their several districts at the places above named, on Tuesday, the 12th day of April, 1910, from one o'clock in the afternoon to nine o'clock in the evening, for the purpose of revising and correcting the original registers.

By order of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

Diet of the Jerboa.

The jerboa in the arid parts of the Sudan lives through the drought on preserved melons. He preserves them by burying them in sand, biting off the melon just as it is ripe and digging away the sand from under it so that it sinks below the level of the ground. The wind then covers it up; so the jerboa keeps his larder from the hot sun. One jerboa will bury 40 melons in a season.

Butter and Microbes.

Butter is an excellent breeding place for bacteria which tend to decompose it until it is useless as food, unless it is kept in a cold place. Salt also retards their growth, but has this disadvantage, that it makes the decomposition difficult to detect either by taste or smell. Hence the preference for sweet butter by those who are particular about having it fresh.

For Better Health.

One heroic cure for dyspepsia is to eat only when really hungry. As an experienced doctor says: "No man ever died of starvation without being hungry." If the appetite does not return stimulate it by active exercise. Babies sometimes suffer from too much attention, too much dressing, too much feeding and sometimes too much medicine.

A Free Translation.

"Gentlemen of the jury," continued the earnest young lawyer, "the case before you hangs upon that old Latin maxim—'Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus.' Now, gentlemen, what does that mean? It means, gentlemen, that if a man will tell one lie, he'll tell a whole omnibusful of lies."

Memory Worth Preserving.

There is an organization known as the Order of the Runnymede. It is composed of the descendants of the Barons of England who were instrumental in compelling King John to sign the Magna Charta, or Great Charter, at Runnymede, five miles from Windsor Castle, in June 1215.

Much Money in Junk.

Much money is made by the sale of old rope and string. Thousands of dollars are netted by the buying and selling of old fishing nets alone; but the amount is a mere bagatelle to the cash that is turned over in the handling of old cordage at the docks.

A Home Hint.

Many people having home and loved ones close around them let dullness creep in, when by just a little effort and congeniality, a little loosening of the tension of duty, a little yielding to a sense of humor, all might be sweet and good.—Woman's Life.

Guidance.

Guide the people by law, subdue them by punishment, they may shun crime, but will be void of shame. Guide them by example, subdue them by courtesy, they will learn shame.—Confucius.

Philosopher's Tribute.

Women, according to a German philosopher, are the poetry of the world, in the same sense as the stars are the poetry of heaven. Clear, light giving, harmonious, they are terrestrial planets that rule the destinies of mankind.

Division of Trouble.

"What men think," remarked the knowing woman, "causes fully one-third of all the trouble in the world." "Yes," rejoined the mere man, "and what women say causes the other two-thirds."—Chicago Daily News.

A Journalistic Providence.

Young Housewife—"Can't you make that story in your journal go on a little longer? Our cook reads it, and I think she will stay as long as it continues."—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Addition to Shackles.

One of the first reforms wanted in this country is for husbands to tell their wives what incomes they have. —Judge Willis.

Up-to-Date Caution.

Mother Bird—"Run along and play now; but be careful you don't get run over by any of those flying machines."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Especially Woman Nature.

Human nature is so queer that even the man who lives to be a hundred years old never fully understands it. —Sommerville Journal.

Friendship.

Friendship decreases whenever there is on the one side too much happiness and too much misfortune on the other.—Carmen Sylva.

Enthusiasm.

When there is nothing left for a man to be enthusiastic over he might as well be dead.

Start at the Foundation.

The only real way to take care of "No. 1" is to see that "No. 1" is a good man.

The Man in Lower Ten

By Mary Roberts Rinehart
Author of
The Circular Staircase

Illustrations by M. J. KETTNER

(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

It was the first time I had seen her since I put her in the cab at Baltimore. Outwardly I presume I was calm, for no one turned to stare at me, but every atom of me cried out at the sight of her. She was leaning, bent forward, lips slightly parted, gazing raptly at the Japanese conjurer who had replaced what McKnight disrespectfully called the Columns of Hercules. Compared with the draggled lady of the farm house, she was radiant.

For that first moment there was nothing but joy at the sight of her. McKnight's touch on my arm brought me back to reality.

"Come over and meet them," he said. "That's the cousin Miss West is visiting, Mrs. Dallas."

But I would not go. After he went I sat there alone, painfully conscious that I was being pointed out and stared at from the box. The abominable Japanese gave way to yet more atrocious performing dogs.

"How many offers of marriage will the young lady in the box have?" The dog stopped sagely at "none," and then pulled out a card that said eight. Wild shouts of glee by the audience. "The fools," I muttered.

After a little I glanced over. Mrs. Dallas was talking to McKnight, but she was looking straight at me. She was flushed, but more calm than I, and she did not bow. I fumbled for my hat, but the next moment I saw that they were going, and I sat still. When McKnight came back he was triumphant.

"I've made an engagement for you," he said. "Mrs. Dallas asked me to bring you to dinner to-night, and I said I knew you would fall all over yourself to go. You are requested to bring along the broken arm, and any other souvenirs of the wreck that you may possess."

"I'll do nothing of the sort," I declared, struggling against my inclination. "I can't even tie my necktie, and I have to have my food cut for me."

"Oh, that's all right," he said easily. "I'll send Stogie over to fix you up, and Mrs. Dal knows all about the arm. I told her."

(Stogie is his Japanese factotum, so called because he is lean, a yellowish brown in color, and because he claims to have been shipped into this country in a box.)

The cinematograph was finishing the program. The house was dark and the music had stopped, as it does in the circus just before somebody risks his neck at so much a neck in the dip of death, or the hundred-foot dive. Then, with a sort of shock, I saw on the white curtain the announcement:

THE NEXT PICTURE
IS THE DOOMED WASHINGTON FLIER, TAKEN A SHORT DISTANCE FROM THE SCENE OF THE WRECK ON THE FATAL MORNING OF SEPTEMBER TENTH. TWO MILES FARTHER ON IT MET WITH ALMOST COMPLETE ANNIHILATION.

I confess to a return of some of the sickening sensations of the wreck; people around me were leaning forward with tense faces. Then the letters were gone and I saw a long level stretch of track, even the broken stone between the ties standing out distinctly. Far off under a cloud of smoke a small object was rushing toward us and growing larger as it came.

Now it was on us, a mammoth in size, with huge drivers and a colossal tender. The engine leaped aside, as if just in time to save us from destruction, with a glimpse of a stooping fireman and a grimy engineer. The long train of sleepers followed. From a forward vestibule a porter in a white coat waved his hand. The rest of the cars seemed still wrapped in slumber. With mixed sensations I saw my own car, Ontario, fly past, and then I rose to my feet and gripped McKnight's shoulder.

On the lowest step of the last car, one foot hanging free, was a man. His black derby hat was pulled well down to keep it from blowing away, and his coat was flying open in the wind. He was swung well out from the car, his free hand gripping a small valise, every muscle tense for a jump.

"Good God, that's my man!" I said hoarsely, as the audience broke into applause. McKnight half rose; in his seat ahead Johnson stifled a yawn and turned to eye me.

I dropped into my chair limply, and tried to control my excitement. "The man on the last platform of the train," I said. "He was just about to leap; I'll swear that was my bag."

"Could you see his face?" McKnight asked in an undertone. "Would you know him again?"

"No. His hat was pulled down and his head was bent. I'm going back to find out where that picture was taken. They say two miles, but it may have been forty."

The audience, busy with its wraps, had not noticed. Mrs. Dallas and Alison West had gone. In front of us Johnson had dropped his hat and was stooping for it.

"This way," I motioned to McKnight, and we wheeled into the narrow passage behind us, back of the boxes. At the end there was a door leading into the wings, and as we went boldly through I turned the key.

The final set was being struck, and no one paid any attention to us. Luckily they were similarly indifferent to a banging at the door I had locked, a banging which, I judged, signified Johnson.

"I guess we've broken up his interference," McKnight chuckled.

Stage hands were hurrying in every direction; pieces of the side wall of the last drawing room menaced us; a switchboard behind us was singing like a tea-kettle. Everywhere we stepped we were in somebody's way. At last we were across, confronting a man in his shirt sleeves, who by dots and dashes of profanity seemed to be directing the chaos.

"Well?" he said, wheeling on us. "What can I do for you?"

"I would like to ask," I replied, "if you have any idea just where the last cinematograph picture was taken."

"Broken board—picnickers—lake?"

"No. The Washington Flier."

He glanced at my bandaged arm.

"The announcement says two miles," McKnight put in, "but we should like to know whether it is railroad miles, automobile miles, or policeman miles."

"I am sorry I can't tell you," he replied, more civilly. "We get those pictures by contract. We don't take them ourselves."

"Where are the company's offices?"

"New York." He stepped forward and grasped a super by the shoulder. "What in blazes are you doing with that gold chair in a kitchen set? Take that piece of pink plush there and throw it over a soap box, if you have not got a kitchen chair."

I had not realized the extent of the shock, but now I dropped into a chair and wiped my forehead. The unexpected glimpse of Alison West followed almost immediately by the revelation of the picture, had left me limp and unnerved. McKnight was looking at his watch.

"He says the moving picture people have an office down-town. We can make it if we go on now."

So he called a cab, and we started at a gallop. There was no sign of the detective. "Upon my word," Richey said, "I feel lonely without him."

The people at the down-town office of the cinematograph company were very obliging. The picture had been taken, they said, at M———, just two miles beyond the scene of the wreck. It was not much, but it was something to work on. I decided not to go home, but to send McKnight's Jap for my clothes, and to dress at the Incubator. I was determined, if possible, to make my next day's investigations without Johnson. In the meantime, even if it was for the last time, I would see Her that night. I gave Stogie a note for Mrs. Klopton, and with my dinner clothes there came back the gold bag wrapped in tissue paper.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Shadow of a Girl.

Certain things about the dinner at the Dallas house will always be obscure to me. Dallas was something in the fish commission, and I remember his reeling off fish eggs in billions while we ate our caviar. He had some particular stunt he had been urging the government to for years—something about forbidding the establishment of mills and factories on river-banks—it seems they kill the fish, either the smoke, or the noise, or something they pour into the water.

Mrs. Dallas was there, I think. Of course, I suppose she must have been; and there was a woman in yellow; I took her in to dinner, and I remember she loosened my clams for me so I could get them. But the only real person at the table was a girl across in white, a sublimated young woman who was as brilliant as I was stupid, who never by any chance looked directly at me, and who appeared and disappeared across the candles and orchids in a sort of halo of radiance.

When the dinner had progressed from salmon to roast, and the conversation had done the same thing—from fish to scandal—the yellow gown turned to me.

"I Have Not Forgotten—Anything."

"We have been awfully good, haven't we, Mr. Blakeley?" she asked. "Although I am crazy to hear, I have not said 'wreck' once. I'm sure you must feel like the survivor of Waterloo, or something of the sort."

"If you want me to tell you about the wreck," I said, glancing across the table, "I'm sorry to be disappointing, but I don't remember anything."

"You are fortunate to be able to forget it." It was the first word Miss West had spoken directly to me and it went to my head.

"There are some things I have not forgotten," I said, over the candles. "I recall coming to myself some time after, and that a girl, a beautiful girl—"

"Ah!" said the lady in yellow, leaning forward breathlessly. Miss West was staring at me coldly, but, once started, I had to stumble on.

"That a girl was trying to rouse me, and that she told me I had been on fire twice already." A shudder went around the table.

"But surely that isn't the end of the story," Mrs. Dallas put in aggrievedly. "Why, that's the most tantalizing thing I ever heard."

"I'm afraid that's all," I said. "She went her way and I went mine. If she recalls me at all, she probably thinks of me as a weak-kneed individual who faints like a woman when everything is over."

"What did I tell you?" Mrs. Dallas asserted triumphantly. "He fainted, did you hear? when everything was over! He hasn't begun to tell it."

I would have given a lot by that time if I had not mentioned the girl. But McKnight took it up there and carried it on.

"Blakeley is a regular geyser," he said. "He never spouts until he reaches the boiling point. And by that same token, although he hasn't said much about the Lady of the Wreck, I think he is crazy about her. In fact, I am sure of it. He thinks he has locked his secret in the caves of his soul, but I call you to witness that he has it nailed to his face. Look at him!"

I squirmed miserably and tried to avoid the startled eyes of the girl across the table. I wanted to choke McKnight and murder the rest of the party.

"It isn't fair," I said as coolly as I could. "I have my fingers crossed; you are five against one."

"And to think that there was a murder on that very train," broke in the lady in yellow. "It was a perfect crescendo of horrors, wasn't it? And what became of the murdered man, Mr. Blakeley?"

McKnight had the sense to jump into the conversation and save my reply.

"They say good Pittsburgers go to Atlantic City when they die," he said. "So—we are reasonably certain the gentleman did not go to the seashore."

The meal was over at last, and once in the drawing room it was clear we hung heavy on the hostess' hands. "It is so hard to get people for bridge in September," she wailed. "There is absolutely nobody in town. Six is a dreadful number."

"It's a good poker number," her husband suggested.

The matter settled itself, however. I was hopeless, save as a dummy; Miss West said it was too hot for cards, and went out on a balcony that overlooked the Mall. With obvious relief Mrs. Dallas had the card table brought, and I was face to face with the minute I had dreaded and hoped for for a week.

Now it had come, it was more difficult than I had anticipated. I do not know if there was a moon, but there was the urban substitute for it—the arc light. It threw the shadow of the balcony railing in long black bars against her white gown, and as it swung sometimes the face was in the light. I drew a chair close so that I could watch her.

"Do you know," I said, when she made no effort at speech, "that you are a much more formidable person to-night, in that gown, than you were the last time I saw you?"

The light swung on her face; she was smiling faintly.

"The hat with the green ribbons!" she said. "I must take it back; I had almost forgotten."

"I have not forgotten—anything." I pulled myself up short. This was hardly loyalty to Richey. His voice came through the window just then, and perhaps I was wrong, but I thought she raised her head to listen.

"Look at this hand," he was saying. "Regular pianola; you could play it with your feet."

"He's a dear, isn't he?" Alison said unexpectedly. "No matter how depressed and downhearted I am, I always cheer up when I see Richey."

"He's more than that," I returned warmly. "He is the most honorable fellow I know. If he wasn't so much that way, he would have a career before him. He wanted to put on the doors of our offices, Blakeley and McKnight, P. B. H., which is Poor But Honest."

From my comparative poverty to the wealth of the girl beside me was a single mental leap. From that wealth to the grandfather who was responsible for it was another.

"I wonder if you know that I had been to Pittsburg to see your grandfather when I met you?" I said.

"You!" She was surprised.

"Yes. And you remember the alligator bag that I told you was exchanged for the one you cut off my arm?" She nodded expectantly. "Well, in that valise were the forged Andy Bronson notes, and Mr. Gilmore's deposition that they were forged."

She was on her feet in an instant. "In that bag!" she cried. "Oh, why didn't you tell me that before? Oh, it's so ridiculous, so—so hopeless. Why, I could—"

She stopped suddenly and sat down again. "I do not know that I am sorry, after all," she said after a pause. "Mr. Bronson was a friend of my father's. I—I suppose it was a bad thing for you, losing the papers?"

"Well, it was not a good thing," I conceded. "While we are on the subject of losing things, do you remember—do you know that I still have your gold purse?"

FOUR-CYLINDER REO $1,250
Thirty horse-power—50 Miles an Hour—An ENGINEERING VICTORY

It is comparatively easy for a maker to build a car that will "do things" if he puts enough money and weight into it. But money is money, and weight is money, too—money for big and quickly worn-out tires, money for more fuel and expensive maintenance.

The Reo is a triumph of engineering. Mr. R. E. Olds is a genius at doing that very difficult but useful thing—making a car of very high quality at low cost. The Reo is full of cost where cost earns its money, and full of economy where economy counts. It has the remarkable get-there-and-back ability of every Reo ever built; it is powerful, light, buoyant, graceful, efficient, comfortable.—Let us demonstrate.

THE WAYS OF MEN

One of the girls who had met downtown wore a white serge suit that was gray, as are so many white serge suits in Chicago. The other girl wore a cutaway tailor suit of men's goods and about ten yards of gray willow plumes on her taupe-color hat and she dangled a gold bag in her hand.

"Charlie was out to see me the other day," said the girl with the willow plumes, languidly. "In his car. He has a perfectly splendid car—you ought to see it!"

"Goodness!" said the girl in near-white serge, "I've seen Charlie's car so often I could tell it in the dark, dear! I used to be quite crazy about it, but with so many others at my disposal—far better ones, too—I've rather lost interest in Charlie's. Of course, to a person without so many chances to go riding as I have Charlie's car might seem rather wonderful!"

"Really!" gasped the girl with the willow plumes. "Do you know, I think it is dreadfully flat to pretend to lose enthusiasm and interest in things! No matter how much I have of anything I am always just as interested at the finish as at the start! Somebody said that was why I reminded him of perpetual youth!"

"How pleased you must have been!" murmured the one in the near-white serge. "After a person gets along in life it must be so pleasant to know that one is still attractive in some ways.

"The last time I saw Charlie," went on the girl in near-white serge, "I thought he looked dreadfully seedy and discouraged. I didn't feel in the least to blame, though, for I told him from the very first that I never would—that is—well, everybody knows how crazy he was about me for years! I never saw a man hang on so—it was pathetic!"

"He seems to have recovered beautifully," said the girl with the willow plumes, smiling an acid smile. "The other day he was simply stunning! Charlie's an awfully good-looking man. I happened to mention your name to him once and he said yes, he knew who you were—nice girl, but—well, I didn't mean to quote him!"

"What did Charlie Ferguson say about me?" demanded the girl in near-white serge, furiously. "Tell me this instant!"

"There's such a different way of saying a thing, you know," temporized the girl with willow plumes, as if trying to soften the blow. "I'm sure Charlie spoke in the kindest way. Still he said—if you must know—he said you were a nice girl, but a man soon grew dreadfully tired of you because you said the same thing over and over again. He explained that he went about with you as much as he did because he couldn't bear to hurt your feelings and you seemed to expect it. Now, if you had heard him say it—"

The girl in near-white serge seemed on the verge of apoplexy. "Heard him!" she sputtered. "I don't believe he ever said it! You simply made it up! If you think I care a penny about Charlie Ferguson—that back number with his ramshackle car, which never exceeds the speed limit because it would fall to pieces if it did—you're much mistaken! Why, I had forgotten he was on earth till you mentioned him!"

"I suppose," said the girl with the willow plumes, "that you can't help feeling vindictive toward Charlie. Some girls are that way—if a man doesn't care anything at all about them they simply can't say enough hateful things. My nature is so different—I never cherish revenge!"

"How lucky!" said her friend in near-white serge. "If it were otherwise you would be kept busy, wouldn't you, dear? I heard that you were terribly cut up last summer when Arthur suddenly married the Springer girl. After all your patient angling, too! I felt so sorry for you! Still, I knew all along it would turn out that way."

The young woman with the willow plumes was smiling with dangerous brilliance. "Your sympathy is so sweet, dear," she said, "because I know you speak from experience. Only you are mistaken. Of course, I knew all about the Springer girl, for Arthur had told me. You can't understand a friendship like his and mine."

"That, too, is lucky," isn't it?"

"Yes, aren't they!" agreed the girl with the willow plumes. "Especially in regard to girls they think they like. Only I notice they generally get over the attacks quickly and permanently—like Charlie, for instance. I'm so sorry to have to leave you, but he was to meet me with the car to take me home and I don't suppose you care to see him?"

"Him!" echoed the girl in near-white serge, scornfully, as she gathered up her purse and parcels. "I should say not! I wouldn't interfere with you for worlds, dear, and if he saw me again—you know how men are! It would start his old infatuation all over again! Besides, I have an engagement myself!"

"Why, how nice!" said the willow-plumed one, in condescending surprise. "I'm so sorry you have to go home this muddy day on the street car! Good-by, dear!"

"Cat!" said the girl in near-white serge to herself, as she departed.

The girl with the willow plumes paused to reflect. "I'd better take the elevated home," she told herself; "otherwise she and I might meet on the street car."

Hay fever, hay fever
Must be rather bad.
Nobody who has it
E'er seems to be glad.

The cheeriest person
I ever did see
When he had hay fever
Was cross as could be

AN EASY WAY.

One of the easiest ways in which a young man may get rid of the girl who has begun to take him too seriously is by giving her for a present a pair of gloves that are about two sizes too large.

The Substitution Evil.

"Am I really and truly your first and only love?" queried the dear girl.

"No," answered the truthful drug clerk, "but you are something just as good."

A Sufficient Excuse.

"Why don't you and your wife run around sometime of an evening and see us?"

"I would, but the cook won't let us have an evening out."

OPINIONS OF TAXPAYERS ON THE SPECIAL ELECTION

More Communications on the Water Problem Expressing Voters Ideas.

LAWYER GIVES HIS VIEWS.

W. S. Angleman Writes on the Law —A. M. Johnson and Charles H. Hand Also Gives Their Ideas.

As previously announced in these columns no communications on the water problem will be received prior to the special election on Tuesday, April 19. This is necessary because at the eleventh hour it would be impossible to publish all the communications which would be received for the day before the election.

These communications were received today:

The Law on the Subject.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I have been very much surprised in the discussion of the water question at the studied attempt to mislead the voters as to what the special election on Tuesday was really called to decide.

In the first advertisement of the Plainfield Protective Association, it was declared that the law provided no other way for public ownership, nor for an intelligent investigation by the Council, nor for a new and better contract with the company, nor for municipal ownership later and a temporary contract now than by voting yes. Not one of these statements is true. There is another law under which Plainfield can have its own water works. There has already been an investigation by authority of the Common Council. There can be another, if necessary. The Common Council has already made one contract with the company, and the same law which authorized that one holds good for a renewal. If the Council can not get any better terms, it must then acknowledge itself outgeneralled in business acumen and not say that it has no authority.

Nor is the election on Tuesday called to decide whether there shall be municipal ownership or not. It is called, in the language of the official notice by the City Clerk and published in the papers, to decide "the question of the adoption of the provisions of an act entitled "An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April 21, 1876, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

How many of those who are so strenuously advocating voting for the question on Tuesday have read the provisions of that act, or know into what a financial quagmire the provisions of that act may lead the city? Did the Council, before voting to submit this question to the people, get the opinion of the city's legal adviser as to the legal effect of the provisions of this law as applied to Plainfield's situation? If so, where is it? If the Council did not, why not? Or did they take some offhand curb-stone opinion, or jump at conclusions? What business man would sign a contract for a million dollars or more without submitting the terms to his lawyer for the most careful scrutiny?

Let us look at some of the provisions of this act, and see how far they are from preconceived ideas. The act says (section one) that the city may purchase of any water company owning water works within the city "all the real estate, personal property and works, and all the corporate rights, powers, franchises and privileges of said company," for a sum to be mutually agreed upon. If an agreement can not be reached, then (section two) the circuit court "shall on application of either party" appoint three commissioners to ascertain the price to be paid. Does any one want to put the water company in a position to force Plainfield to purchase "all the real estate, personal property and works, and all the corporate rights, powers, franchises and privileges of said company" willy-nilly? At first the most that could be spent in this way was $80,000 (section 7). This was later amended to $1,000,000, and still later to $1,500,000, at 5 per cent., payable in not less than ten nor more than fifty years. The amendment making the amount $1,500,000 also adds the pledge of "the property and credit of said city for the payment of the same." That means the general tax levy. Can't you see it jump?

How many of those who are advocating the affirmative of this question realize that they are advocating, not merely the purchase of the water works, but also the purchase of "all the corporate rights, powers, franchises and privileges of said company," and how many know what "all the corporate rights, powers, franchises and privileges of said company" are or what even a moderate valuation of them is. The supplying of Plainfield with water is but a fraction of its rights, and the law does not allow of cutting the company up into bits.

Other sections provide for advance payments for water rates to the city, and that both tenant and landlord shall be responsible for the water rates.

Another section provides that, if a person does not care to take city water but is content to rely upon his own well or pump, as many do, then the city may charge him the price of a single hydrant, and, further, may annually assess water rents against all vacant lots.

There are many other interesting and illuminating clauses along this beautiful highway of progress toward "emancipation," but enough has been shown to mark the act as one with which Plainfield, for her own good, has no need to deal.

If Plainfield wants to have her own water works, then adopt some other law, or have a law framed which will fit her needs and be fair and just to the city and its inhabitants; but do not let us be blinded by glittering generalities nor by abstract theories into adopting a law, the provisions of which are but so many millstones around our necks.

W. S. ANGLEMAN.

Mr. Johnson's Objections.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In the matter of taking over by the city the management of the water supply, I wish to ask why take on a large debt, when you get the same comforts without the debt. What is to keep Plainfield her present or increase its population with new outlets for New York city business men. The tunnels under the East and North River. We are located on an old system of railroad with as much business as it can do for eight months of the year. We are one hour in time from New York city on most of the trains, while under the new outlets under the river many of the nice parts of New Jersey can be reached in thirty minutes. The country is now on a high tide as to the cost of things. As per report of the Penn. R. R. it cost them as high as 60 per cent. for betterment than three to five years ago. Why put your experts to work on the cost of buying the waterplant, or building one, with this condition existing. If you have for years kept the city in the hands of its most conservative citizens as your official, why at this time allow anything to be done to draw toward you these who know how to get things done. The willingness of other cities to allow its affairs to take care of themselves and the waste which has been the results. We all hope at the near future the people will not be so busy, but what they will look after these matters. But now at this time. This is a good home in city affairs and one own's business to go slow. You can overload a city's credit as well as a business firm, and it takes but little to make the condition felt, and this the city's credit would drop. You must not compare Perth Amboy with an inland town for they have few conditions which are the same. Perth Amboy has a large shipping interest, many large factories and under favorable conditions the city grows about 1,000 in population each year, or draws from about 50,000 people to support its stores. I beg to say I worked very hard to get city water in Amboy. We voted at three different elections before we succeeded. I have often thought that it came when it was really needed. I should advise small holders to go slow and wait until you see the effect of new transit conditions. I am sure I never heard of a big debt on a city being a drawing card for home buyers. City and business firms are up in the financial world and they must keep their liabilities well in hand or their credit go off and thus you would soon be selling your bonds at a discount. If I am correctly informed, the number of nice homes in the market for sale is large. This in itself shows that the owners of the same are trying to withdraw from under the large expense incurred. With this increase debt the number would increase at once and the buyer if any, would wait the outcome of this new condition. The old saying in England in former years—"God help the rich, the poor can beg." If you get this debt on this city it will be, God help the small landholders, the rich can move away. They must also remember at this election each must vote as his interest may appeal to him. If I am correctly informed, the bond limit would be drawn on so closely that other improvements would have to be postponed until some future date. As it is now, you have

MRS. ADELBERG INJURED; BABY ONLY SCRATCHED

Mrs. Hyman Adelberg and her eighteen months' old baby were thrown from Mr. Adelberg's automobile last night on Mountain avenue near Terrell road shortly before 10 o'clock, and Mrs. Adelberg received what is believed to be a fracture of the right arm, but the baby miraculously escaped with a few scratches on its face. The cause of the accident was the sudden setting of the emergency brakes on Mr. Adelberg's automobile when he was confronted by a buggy in which a couple were driving and carrying no lights.

Dr. A. H. Dundon attended the wounded woman and the full extent of her injuries will be known later. Mr. Adelberg denounced the habit of driving without lights which seems to obtain with people who have no respect for the laws of the road. He claims that had there been a light on the wagon he would have seen it before its sudden emergence from the gloom and his wife and baby would not have been injured. The couple drove off without ascertaining what had been the results of their carelessness.

BEVAN, HEDGES & CO., FORM RABBIT TRUST

New Jersey, the home of Trusts, has had another added to the long list and the end is not yet in sight. The new infant prodigy which has for its object the exploitation of the rabbit industry has just been formed in this city and from the prospectus of the new corporation bids fair to outstrip anything of its kind heretofore attempted.

Bunny has the front seat in the grand stand from now on and Reginald M. Bevan and E. Walton Hedges, Jr., propose to make others in the business hustle to keep their business going and no favorites will be played. The buying and selling of rabbits is not the only feature of the new enterprise. There is to be a select boarding house for the pets of others where special attendants will be provided to care for the little animals while their owners are out of town enjoying their summer vacations. Something else, too, which shows that the promoters of the new concern are lovers of dumb animals as well as dealers in them is the fact that they will not sell rabbits to anyone who will not give a guarantee that they will be tenderly cared for and properly fed.

The new company, which is known under the title of the Bevan, Hedges Rabbit Company, limited, will sell their product at reasonable prices and most of the transactions will be for cash. Only in cases where first class references can be produced will credit be given. However, in every case where a single animal is bought the customer will be required to pay spot cash. A note, properly endorsed, will be accepted in cases of large purchases. The company will assume all responsibility for rabbits left to be boarded and will guarantee the best of care. A special rate of five cents per week will be given for the care of a rabbit. The price list will be sent on application but reference must be given. While it is not proposed at first to absorb all the other rabbit concerns in the country in all probability anyone else in the business is likely to receive a visit from a representative of the new company with offers for their holdings of live stock. The shares of the new company will not be listed on 'change, but it is fair to assume that in event of the business warranting the move, blocks of stock may be traded in on the curb. At present there is none for sale. The office of the new concern is at 703 Watchung avenue.

EASTER MART NETTED $500 FOR WHITE PLAGUE LEAGUE.

The net proceeds from the Easter Mart held recently at the parish house of Grace church were $500 and this will be given to the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield for its work here. There was a lot of fine stationery left over from the Easter Mart and those in charge have decided to hold a special sale Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock at the parish house to dispose of it. It will be sold at cost.

Talks to Juniors.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., at its meeting, last night, entertained a number of visitors, including the initiatory team from Friendship Council, of New Market, which conferred the degrees on eight candidates. One member was reinstated and nine propositions were received. Rev. Ora J. Shoop gave a talk.

WATER TALK IN BOROUGH

North Plainfield Association Launches Boom for Municipal Water Plant.

WASHINGTONVILLE THE SUPPLY

Mayor Newton B. Smalley and James K. Arnold Urge Boroughites to Patronize Home Industries —Banquet April 28.

The establishment of a borough municipal water board was proposed at the meeting of the North Plainfield Association in Debele's Hall last night by Mayor Newton B. Smalley. In sounding the slogan for a borough water company Mayor Smalley declared that "water should be the cheapest thing on earth, but instead, it is one of the highest priced commodities. If there is anything that will bring profit to a municipality, I believe it is water. I am confident we can get all of the water we will need for years right here in the borough. Should Plainfield take it up in the right manner and combine with North Plainfield, it could be made profitable. Should Plainfield vote in favor of municipal ownership, before it is established, North Plainfield should take it up."

Dr. J. H. Cooley endorsed Mayor Smalley's views by declaring that there is plenty of water in the Washingtonville watersheds to supply the borough forever. "The water is better and it would be cheaper, I believe the water proposition is a very important one," declared Dr. Cooley. The speaker added that city water is costing him fifteen times higher than the water he pumps from springs on his mountain property.

The water agitation received a start when Councilman L. B. Woolston expressed unfavorable views on the city water problem. Following the expressions of sentiments of Mayor Smalley and Dr. Cooley, Mr. Woolston added that he had received more enlightenment on the water question after listening to Dr. Cooley's remarks than he had acquired reading newspaper arguments and in personal talks during the past three months. "It would be a good thing for the borough to own its water plant," he said, "if water could be secured by gravity. We would get water at half the price that we are now paying for it."

"Boost North Plainfield" was the keynote of the meeting before the water question bobbed up. Mayor Smalley in an address called attention to the members of the club that the borough has many disadvantages and that some times it is pretty hard sliding. "We are in a district in the farthest end of the county," said the Mayor, "and we receive less attention than other communities that are centrally located and in that respect we are greatly handicapped."

Referring to the sewer question Mayor Smalley declared that if Plainfield joins with the borough in the proposed system, North Plainfield would be greatly benefited. He endorsed the objects of organization and wished it success.

"Business interest in the borough," said Mayor Smalley, "is lacking and conditions in this respect are worse than they were twenty years ago, and it is to be deplored. I regret that some citizens neglect to patronize home industries. The many vacant stores on Somerset street is evidence that borough people go to Plainfield and spend their money.

"The borough needs help from all quarters and all citizens should lend a hand and boost for all they are worth. Unless there is more boosting done in the future than there has been in the past ten years the municipality will go back faster. Everybody should be awake to the situation and make every move count."

Former Councilman J. K. Arnold also endorsed the sentiments expressed by Mayor Smalley. "If the citizens in North Plainfield support borough business men, there will be a row of stores from the bridge to Jackson avenue. That's where you get increased valuation. I don't believe that Plainfield should gobble North Plainfield. We have been playing tail to the cat long enough."

Permanent officers were elected as follows: President, Alexander Milne; secretary, B. J. Phelps; treasurer, Nelson A. Miller. The committee on organization was instructed to prepare a set of by-laws to submit at the meeting next Friday night. David J. Carney and T. L. Jones were named to constitute a publicity committee. Years ago Mr. Milne's father was president of a similar oragnization in the borough.

Tickets were placed on sale for the banquet which will be held in Debele's Hall on Thursday night, April 28.

FREEHOLDER ROBISON, AGED 70 YEARS, DEAD

Freeholder John Robison died at his home in Scotch Plains early today after a two weeks' illness. Mr. Robison was in his seventieth year and was born and lived in Scotch Plains and vicinity all his life. He had been in failing health for the last three years and two weeks ago he was obliged to take to his bed.

Mr. Robison had served as a member of the Union County Board of Freeholders for about twelve years, as the representative of Fanwood township. He was also a member of Fanwood Council, Royal Arcanum, and also a member of Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company.

Surviving Mr. Robison are his wife, two daughters, Mrs. William Noble and Miss Louise Robison, of Scotch Plains, and a son, Richard Robison, of Roselle Park.

The funeral service will be conducted at his late residence on Forest road, Scotch Plains, on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

BOROUGH PUPILS GIVE SONG RECITAL

Assisted by the Bound Brook Symphony orchestra pupils of the North Plainfield school gave a delightful song recital in Y. M. C. A. auditorium last which was largely attended. The choristers included the pupils who will compete in the singing competition to be held in the High School auditorium on April 28-29.

The rendition of the different numbers by the pupils reflected unstinted credit on the musical training received by the choristers in the borough school and it is evident that N. P. H. S. will be a strong factor in the coming competition. Miss Clara Van Fleet was the accompanist.

The orchestra, under the directorship of Herbert Lloyd, performed in a creditable manner. The artists were as follows:

First violins, Miss Dorothy Flynn, Miss Evelyn Forman, Miss Grace Lloyd, Winthrop Phelps, William Schure; second violins, Mrs. Herbert Lloyd, Miss Sarah C. Davies, Miss Elisabeth Franke, Miss Mary Laughton, Floyd Casterlin, David Hastings; flute, Craig Harvey; clarionet, James McNabb; cornet, Whitney Frazee; drum, Harvey Smalley; cello, George W. Hart; bass, Jacob Byer; piano, Miss Helen Olendorf.

SUNDAY'S PROGRAM AT NETHERWOOD REFORMED.

Rev. Dr. William I. Chamberlain, who will occupy the pulpit at the Netherwood Reformed church tomorrow morning and evening, is a graduate of Rutgers College and the Seminary. He received his Ph. D. at Columbia University and afterward became president of Ralph Voorhees College at Velore, India. Later he was appointed professor of philosophy and psychology at Rutgers College, resigning in 1906 to become secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reofrmed church in America.

In the morning his theme will be "The Quest of Faith; the Sanctuary of Life," and in the evening, "The Power of an Endless Life." The quartet choir, Miss Elizabeth Bartlau, soprano; Mrs. R. M. Guinn, contralto; F. Clyde Doane, tenor and Roy Titsworth, tenor, under the direction of Miss race P. Karr, organist, will sing.

This will be the morning program:

Prelude, Gloria from Mozart's Mass; hymns, Come Thou Almighty King, Gardini; The Church's One Foundation, Wesley; Draw Nigh, Gounod; anthem, Hold Thou My Hand, solo by Roy Titsworth; postlude, Andante, Mayer. This program will be rendered in the evening:

Prelude, Traumerei, Schumann; hymns, O, Saviour, Precious Saviour, Haydn; Lead, Kindly Light, Dykes; Now the Day is Over, Barnby; offertory, Hark, Hary My Soul, Rockwell, duet, Mrs. Guinn and Miss Bartlau; postlude, The Parting Hour, Mendelssohn.

Some Interesting Reading.

The offer of the water company made to the water investigating committee, but never made public and never accepted, rejected or withdrawn will be published in these columns on Monday. It makes interesting reading for it sought to protect the interests of the people by preserving their water supply and by giving the customers exceptionally favorable terms. ***

S. Rijout will deliver a Gospel address in the hall, 209 East Front street, tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock.

MISS GRACE KAUFMAN WEDDED TO F. W. COLE

Miss Grace Kaufman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Talmadge Kaufman, of West Seventh street, and Francis Watkinson Cole, of Hartford, Conn., were married at the home of the bride's parents this afternoon. There were about one hundred guests. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which the bride is a member, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Ursula Rowland, as bridesmaid, and Richard Cole, a brother of the groom, was best man. After an extended trip the couple will reside in Hartford, where the groom is engaged in the practice of law. He is a graduate of Yale and of the Harvard Law School.

WHAT POLICE BLOTTER SHOWED THIS MORNING

Several juvenile delinquents were arraigned before Judge William N. Runyon this morning in the city court and all were put in charge of probation officer Hamilton.

Harry Roberts, formerly of Newark, a driver now in the employ of a livery on East Fifth street, was arraigned for being durnk. He was attempting to ride a bicycle and was saved from being run down by an automobile by Patrolman Flatley and was taken to police headquarters for his own safety. He received a suspended sentence on his promise of future good behaviour.

Roland Perrine, a nine-year-old schoolboy, was knocked down by an automobile while crossing the street near the Bryant School yesterday at noon. The boy was not injured. The automobile belongs to the Martin Automobile Company. The driver was not to blame as the boy ran directly in the path of the machine, according to eye witnesses of the occurrence.

REV. W. E. DOUGHTY GAVE AN ILLUSTRATED LECTURE

Under the auspices of young people of the city, especially those of the local Methodist churches, a missionary conference was held at the First M. E. church last night, when Rev. W. E. Doughty gave a lecture and displayed stereopticon and moving pictures of India and the Silver Bay Conference, assisted by B. C. Bonnarjee, a native of Hindu, who has been converted to Christianity.

The conference was held at 7:15 o'clock in Vincent chapel, when a committee comprising Mansfield Smith, Clarence La Rue, Mrs. P. H. Wood, Athol Neuman, Miss Harriet Halloway, Miss Ashwell, R. C. Burdick, James R. Joy, Rev. Ora J. Shoop was appointed to arrange for sending delegates to the Silver Bay Conference.

NEIGHBORS' OBJECTION TO ERECTION OF SHACK

The question of granting a permit to Alfonse Buoepau, an Italian, to erect a small store directly in front of his residence at 721 East Second street, which has been discussed by the Councilmanic fire and building committee, was again taken up last night at a meeting of Mayor Fisk and the Common Council, at a meeting of that body as a committee of the whole. William A. Coddington appeared for L. V. F. Randolph and other property-owners in the vicinity. A letter of protest was also received from Mr. Randolph.

It is reported that people gather at the Italian's place and make themselves objectionable, according to Mr. Coddington, who said that it was the belief of the protesting property-owners that the one-story building is intended for purposes other than is announced by Buoepau. Mr. Coddington also opposed the granting of the permit on the ground that the application of the owner is not in accord with the building ordinance.

The Mayor and Council afterward decided to refer the matter to Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh for the purpose of ascertaining what can be done.

Dr. Krebs' Article.

An interesting article on "Revising the Course of Study," by Supervising Principal H. C. Krebs, appears in the current issue of School Progress.

NOTABLES IN THE CAST

Edward Sheldon and Effingham Pinto to Be Seen in Pinero Play.

FOR BENEFIT OF THE HOSPITAL.

"Trelawny of the Wells" at the Theatre May 20 and 21— Seats to Be Placed on Sale Saturday.

No less a light in the theatrical world than Edward Sheldon, a playwright whose fame is as great on the Continent and in England as in this country, will be a member of the cast for "Trelawny of the Wells," to be produced at the Plainfield theatre on Friday and Saturday, May 20 and 21. Mr. Sheldon's most recent masterpiece, "Salvation Nell," with Mrs. Fisk in the title role, was seen at the Plainfield theatre recently.

Not only a playright but an actor whose remarkable ability has attracted the favorable attention of the best critics, Effingham Pinto, has joined the cast. Mr. Pinto has just closed an unusually long run in one of Broadway's greatest successes in recent years, "The Climax." After the engagement at Weber's, the company appeared for many nights in Chicago and in other cities before being taken by Charles Frohman to London. Mr. Pinto is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Pinto, of this city.

The others in the cast include Judge William N. Runyon, A. M. Abbott, William L. Saunders, L. H. VanBuren, Miss Louise Saunders, Mrs. A. M. Abbott, Mrs. Henry C. White, Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, W. T. Pelletier, Charles H. Lyman, Miss Louise Curtis, Mrs. Harry L. McGee, Mrs. L. H. VanBuren, Harry L. McGee, Hugh S. Jarvis, William R. Cock, VanWyck Brooks and William T. Glenney.

The sale of seats for the performances, which are given under the auspices of the Muhlenberg Hospital Women's Auxiliary Board, will begin at the theatre box office promptly at 6 o'clock next Saturday afternoon. At the opening sale no one person will be permitted to purchase more than fourteen seats at one time. No seats will be reserved.

SUBSCRIPTION DANCE HELD AT TRUELL HALL.

The subscription dance given at Truell Hall, last night, was attended by thirty couples. Paroubek's orchestra furnished the music for dancing, which included two-steps, waltzes, barn dances, Paul Jones and the Boston waltz.

The committee in charge of the affair comprised Leo Kenney, Clarence Hand, Harry W. Nash, George Seavers and F. Rollin Williams. The patronesses were Mrs. Andrew E. Kenney, Mrs. George B. Whitfield, Mrs. L. B. Woolston, Mrs. Charles I. Nash and Mrs. Frank Hand. Among the guests were several from New York and Brooklyn.

Dutch Arms Sociable.

The members of the Dutch Arms enjoyed a social evening last night in the Sunday-school rooms of Trinity Reformed church. There was no special speaker, but the members themselves were induced to become entertainers through the medium of a hatful of subjects which the members selected haphazard and spoke upon. Another source of amusement was a spelling match which owing to the lateness of the hour was not completed.

Miss Elmae G. G. Coons.

Miss Elmae G. G. Coons, aged twelve years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Coons, died last night at the home of her parents, 248 Somerset street, following a long illness. She was a great sufferer with rheumatism and heart trouble. The funeral services will be held from the home of the parents Tuesday afternoon at2 o'clock.

Juniors Going to Church.

The members of the four Jr. O. U. A. M. Councils will attend divine services at Trinity Reformed church tomorrow night, when Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor, will preach a special sermon to them. The Juniors will meet in their lodge rooms at 7:15 and proceed to the church in a body.

Mrs. Mary Kline.

Mrs. Mary Kline, wife of the late Peter Kline, colored, died yesterday. The funeral services will be held at the parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, 402 Park avenue, Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Relatives and friends are invited. The burial will be at Hillside cemetery.

Louis Donald Bennett.

Louis Donald Bennett, aged thirteen years, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Bennett, of Watchung avenue, died on Thursday. The funeral will be private.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield Park Commission report that they have secured nearly all of the property desired for the extension of the park system this summer and expect to have them open to the public within the next two months.

The census enumerators, Jacob Wall and Charles Taggert, commenced their work here yesterday. They experienced considerable difficulty with the Italian population.

Charles Clark, of Westfield, is at Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, where he went to have an operation performed on his throat. The operation was not a serious one.

William L. Cook, of Bayonne, has purchased a house on Harrison avenue, of H. C. McVoy. Mr. Cook will occupy the house with his family.

The baseball team of the High School will open the season today at the old ball grounds, playing the Roselle High School team.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The regular monthly meeting of the Middlesex Volunteer Fire Company was held last night in the firehouse. A bill of $2.00 was paid to the P. S. C. for lighting. The hose committee reported receiving $6.00 toward the hose fund, $5.00 was given by William A. Norman and the other $1.00 was sent by Mrs. Charles Brantingham, of South Dakota, a former resident of this place. Fifty dollars was paid to the Diamond Rubber Co. for hose. Plans for a dance or picnic was discussed but no action was taken by the company.

Rev. J. J. Allen, pastor of the Baptist church, will preach tomorrow morning on the theme "Faith," and in the evening "Departure from the City of Destruction," it being the second in the series of illustrated sermons on "The Pilgrim's Progress." There will be special music in the evening.

George Arrowsmith and family have moved from Church street to the house on Front street recently occupied by Mrs. A. Ryno.

James and John Thornton were proposed for membership at the meeting of the fire company last night.

James Thornton is suffering from a slight injury received by running a rusty nail in his foot.

Painting and repairs are being done on the home of Mrs. Mary McDonough here.

Mrs. P. McDonough visited relatives in Elizabeth yesterday.

William Thornton has started in the bakery business here.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Members of the Methodist Sunday-school have began making preparations for the observance of Children's Day. The various committees include Mrs. E. Krinic, William Giddes, Miss Elizabeth Herlich, Mrs. L. Kennedy, Miss Helen Shiveley, Miss Edna Shiveley, Miss Viola Titus, Miss May Apgar, Miss Delia Sanford and Miss Lillian Kennedy.

At the First Baptist church tomorrow morning the subject of Pastor Gardner will be "The Fifth Petition, or the Prayer for Forgiveness," and in the evening the topic will be "The Voyage of Life."

The Brotherhood of the Methodist church held its monthly meeting and entertainment last night. This organization is growing fast and is popular among the men of the church.

The Junior Epworth League will meet in the Methodist church next Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. E. Krinic has been appointed superintendent and Mrs. O. Weber assistant.

An entertainment will be given at the New Market school on Monday night, the proceeds to be for the library fund.

Mrs. E. J. Herlich has been entertaining friends from New York and Brooklyn.

Flag Presentation.

A special presentation program will be conducted by Ivanhoe Council, No. 72, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Somerville, at the Lafayette School, in East Somerville, on Thursday evening at 7:45, at which time the Council will present to the Board of Education a handsome flag nine by fifteen feet. State Junior Vice Councilor William B. La Rue will make the presentation address. L. M. Codington, of Somerville, president of the board, will respond. There will be special music by the Raritan band. The public generally is invited to attend.

Proctor's New Show.

Proctor's new show for today is a good one. The Les Trayers in an operatic sketch, are excellent and it is an entertaining act. Blake & Harvard sing popular songs and the jokes are good. Joe Ward, character song artist, has made a hit. Nelesco & Leonia, comedy magicians, present a clever act. The celebrated pictures of the Roosevelt party in Africa will be shown on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

FOUR-CYLINDER REO $1,250

Thirty horse-power—50 Miles an Hour—An ENGINEERING VICTORY

It is comparatively easy for a maker to build a car that will "do things" if he puts enough money and weight into it. But money is money, and weight is money, too—money for big and quickly worn-out tires, money for more fuel and expensive maintenance.

The Reo is a triumph of engineering. Mr. R. E. Olds is a genius at doing that very difficult but useful thing—making a car of very high quality at low cost. The Reo is full of cost where cost earns its money, and full of economy where economy counts. It has the remarkable get-there-and-back ability of every Reo ever built; it is powerful, light, buoyant, graceful, efficient, comfortable.—Let us demonstrate.

SPORTS

NEWS AND NOTES

BY GEORGE E. FIRSTBROOK

LOCAL BOXING FANS TO SEE NEWARK SHOW.

A delegation of local sports will journey to Newark on Monday night to attend the boxing show at Gus Troxler's Central Institute. Tony Bender, of Elizabeth, and Jeff Smith, of Bayonne, are the headliners on a program of ten bouts. There will be other bouts between Tom Hogan and Bert Chambers; Ray Hatfield and Chris Hanselman; Carl Healy and Kid Alberts; Tibby Watson and Arthur Conley; Fred Feig and Matty Mathews; Joseph Tierney and Frank Sanders; Frank Donning and Austin Waldron; John Lynch and John Day and Young Herman and Young Geisele.

Race Horse Drops Dead.

Westfield, April 16.—Fred V., a local horse, dropped dead at the Fairacres track here yesterday afternoon. The horse was attached to a speed wagon, and his owner, J. S. Irving, a local horseman, was warming him up. He held a record of 2.25, but had stepped many times in 2.20 and better.

Lewis E. Waring a Judge.

Lewis E. Waring, of this city, has been selected as one of the judges for the first annual exhibition of the New Jersey Horse Show to be held at the Essex Troop Armory, Newark, May 12, 13 and 14. There will be about forty classes.

Story by Dr. Ketcham.

The Westminister, the Presbyterian Journal, under date of April 9, contains an interesting story from the pen of Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian church, but now of Freeport, L. I., which appears in "The Open Hearth," department. It is entitled "Time Tables" and the story recalls incidents in the life of a thoughtful boy in this city many years ago.

Brooklyn Editor to Live Here.

The Ritter farm, comprising ten acres and a farm-house, located on King street, Fanwood, has been sold to an editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, who after making extensive repairs, will reside there during the summer months.

The members of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will give a reception to Rev. and Mrs. C. S. Kemble on Tuesday night upon their return from conference.

HERE'S DOC WHELAN AGAIN—"Doc" is an ardent rooter for the Giants, as every fan on North avenue knows. The Giants were whipped in their first game by the lowly Boston, and as a result he was the butt for the jokers on the thoroughfare yesterday.

"Well, what do you think of your pet Giants now" asked one of the kidders.

"First winners are last losers all the time," was "Doc's" rejoinder.

CHICAGO FANS ARE TICKLED because Ed Reulbach, one of the star twirlers of the Cubs, is improving from his illness. Reulbach, however, will not be able to pitch until June 1.

JOHNNY KLING is still keeping the fans guessing by his refusal to join the Cubs.

LARRY LAJOIE, although in the ranks, is reported to be drawing $12,000 this year.

"MISTER UMPIRE" with the accent on the "Mister" will be the way National League players will have to address the arbitrators this season. And the arbiters will have to speak in a soft voice or they will get a taste of Lynch law.

DUMMY TAYLOR is deaf and dumb, yet he is kicking on joining the Buffalo club this season, just on account of a deduction in salary.

IS BASEBALL POPULAR? NO MABEL—Just 144,224 witnessed the opening games in the big league on Thursday. The American League led the way with a total of 76,224 to the National League's 68,000.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

There will be a special election in Paulsboro the first Tuesday in June, on the question of bonding the borough for $7,000 for street improvements.

Early Thursday morning, while Woodbine's lone policeman was sleeping, robbers were looting the safe in the postoffice there of $150 in cash, $200 in stamps and checks.

Harry White, alias James H. Smith, the negro who attempted to kill his employer, Thomas Sorkins, with an ax, was committed to the county jail by Mayor Smith, of Millville, without bail Thursday.

Dynamite may be resorted to in order to remove the wreck of the schooner yacht Mist, which beached near Tennessee avenue, Atlantic City, some three months ago. A storm last week routed a contractor who had started an effort to dig the craft out.

Mayor Ellis, Senator Bradley and other Camden officials Thursday accompanied members of the State Riparian Commission on a tour along the city's water front, with a view of gleaning information as to the city's riparian rights. A trip was made on a tug.

While holding her lead pencil in her mouth at school Wednesday afternoon, Anna Green, the eight-year-old daughter of George Green, driver of the Bridgeton fire department, accidentally swallowed it. She is now out of school and under a physician's care, but so far she has felt no ill-effects. It was about half the size of an ordinary pencil, had a brass cap on it and a coating of blue enamel.

Howard M. Cooper was elected president of the Camden County Bar Association at the annual meeting in the Law Library at Camden Thursday. The other officers are as follows: Vice presidents, Howard Carrow, C. V. D. Joline; secretary, S. Conrad Ott; treasurer, William Early; managers, William J. Kraft, William T. Read, Lewis A. Starr, William T. Boyle and John Meirs. By the will of James Carpenter his 1470 volumes of law books become the property of the association, whose library consists of 12,000 volumes and is worth $12,000.

Dunellen Going to Advertise.

The Dunellen Board of Trade has entered upon a campaign to advertise that borough among New York folk. A pamphlet has been published describing the advantages of the town and beginning on Sunday advertisements will appear in the New York Sunday papers.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

If crowded houses and pleased audiences are any criterion, "The Lady from Lobster Square" has proven one of the greatest successes of the present season. This laughable farce from the pen of George Feydeau, the author of "The Girl from Maxim's" bids fair to rival the success of that former play. Filled with bright snappy dialogue and funny situations, it possesses just enough spice to make it particularly appealing. It is the class of entertainment that is broad without being offensive and there is not a dry moment in the entire three acts. A splendid cast of brilliant stage favorites appear in the principal roles. This includes such well-known favorites as Georgia Caine, Lucy Weston, William Pruette, Fritz Williams, Lillian Lee, Wilfred Clarke, Ray Beveridge, Orlando Daly and Frank Goldsmith. The production is magnificently staged under the personal direction of George F. Marion and nothing has been neglected by its producers to make it the best. There are three song numbers in the play, each one having scored an individual hit. Two are sung by Miss Weston and the third by William Pruette.

Charles Frohman announces that Maude Adams will play "Chantecler."

Marie Tempest will shortly begin rehearsals for the revival of "Caste" at the Empire theatre, announced for April 25th.

Billie Burke in "Mrs. Dot" closes her Boston engagement April 9. She will then play some of the smaller New England cities.

People who have gone to Francis Wilson's play, "The Bachelor's Baby," to find out "What Horse's Bones are made of" have found out.

"The Dollar Princess" has been seen by more than 250,000 different people. And still they flock. All of which proves that "The Dollar Princess" is in the language of slang "the goods."

Dunellen Lodge Demonstration.

Washington Camp Patriotic Sons of America, of Dunellen, have completed arrangements for a rally in that borough on Thursday night, one of the features of which will be a street parade, in which the visiting lodges will participate. The affair will be enlivened by a band and two drum corps.

Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will observe its fourth anniversary Monday night, April 25.

OPINIONS OF TAXPAYERS

both the water plant in full supply, your small debt gives you good credit. If I am correctly informed, a few years ago many houses were unoccupied and were selling very slowly; while now they seem to be well rented. Why not let this condition alone and let us go on in our present condition. A few years will demonstrate if these high prices are to remain. I don't see that you lose any of your rights by delaying this power you are about to give the Council under Act 1876. After they have once got it from you, it is theirs forever. You will be like one giving one a power of allowing over his affairs without the power to withdraw. This means they can build or buy without any further restraint on your part. I have looked over the city carefully and the homes are mostly in expense, and would feel this new debt very much directly and indirectly.

A. M. JOHNSON.

Mr. Hand's Comments.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I have reliable authority for saying that a very important proposition was made by the Water Company to a committee of the Common Council two or three years ago. It has never been accepted or rejected or made public. It covers the vital issues in the present discussion. Why has it not been published? If important information is kept from the people now will we get more consideration after we give the Council absolute power to do as they please?

There are two or three curious features about the campaign now going on. Mr. Mygatt was quite talkative a month ago, but nothing has been heard from him since Mr. Woolston publicly asked him to answer several questions some weeks ago. The solid men of the city with few exceptions are silent. The members of the large and strong committee that spent more than a year, and also spent several thousand dollars in an investigation of the water problem are not urging the people to vote "For" on Tuesday, instead of consulting them, Bemis late of Ohio, and McLaughlin, of Cornwall, were imported to entertain and instruct us.

A vote "For" on Tuesday certainly means a large expense for lawyers and experts in a long litigation with the Water Company, and probably means a large debt saddled on the City.

CHARLES H. HAND.

Church's Financial Condition.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your report of the annual meeting of the Congregational Society held last Wednesday evening you say that I stated that the balance was on the right side for the first time in twenty years. What I said was that the balance was on the right side for first time in twenty years without taking up a special collection for purpose of making up a deficiency. The Congregational Society has no debts and has had none for twenty years.

J. E. MORSE.
President Board of Trustees.

Entertain Dean Johns.

Mr. and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph have for the last two days entertained Rev. Dr. and Mrs. C. H. W. Johns, of England. They sail for home today on the "Vaterland." Dr. Johns is canon of the Cathedral of Norwich and master of Saint Catherine's College, Cambridge, England. He is a distinguished archaeologist and assyrioligist, and has recently delivered in Philadelphia, under the auspices of scholarly authorities, a series of lectures on "The Religious Significance of Ancient Babylonian Nomenclature."

Fanwood and the Telephone.

The Fanwood Township Committee met last night and besides listening to the argument of Mr. McCabe, a representative of the New York Telephone Company, transacted only routine business. Regarding the telephone franchise which the company is anxious to obtain, definite action was postponed until a future date, although it is certain that a majority of the citizens are in favor of the company extending its service.

The Water Question

The REASON for the Election

The State Law of 1876 provides that if the voters say so at an election held for that purpose, THEN, the Common Council shall have the power to investigate, that is find out what it will cost the City to buy the plant of the Water Company, find out what it will cost to build a new plant; go into the matter thoroughly and reasonably.

The Common Council has no power at this time to do anything except make a contract with The Plainfield Union Water Co. This is GOOD for the Company and BAD for Plainfield. it is one sided and unfair, because the City is at the mercy of the Company and must accept the Company's terms.

We Must Stop This

A Water Plant will not increase taxes because it pays its way. Over 80 Per Cent. of the Cities in this country own and control their water supply. WHY?

Twenty years of waiting is enough — LET US NOW ACT.

Tuesday, April 19th is the time — Plainfield the place and "FOR" the word.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Once dwelt upon a spacious field
The people of the Plain,
The fertile earth their food did yield,
Heaven quenched their thirst with rain.

Like serpent in old Paradise
A charmer said, "Let me
Collect the showers, make water ice
And serve you (almost) free!"

Those simple people of the Plain
They turned a willing ear
Unto the tempter's "so cheap" strain;
The lesson cost them dear.

Their children's children, strong in grit,
Grappled this water leech—
"Now you disgorge, dry up, or git!"
They told him in Plainspeech.

Against their bondage well they fought,
And won, like Plainfield Men,
Flung off the fetters he had wrought,
And took their own again!

"The rule of Right we'll hold by Might;
Earth gives us food and flowers,
The Air gives life, the Sun gives light,
So Water, too, is Ours!"

* * * *

Who'd have thought it? A right royal rousing meeting, on a summery night, in a theatre too, and of all tame subjects—a watery one. It was a whiff of the great days of old, when sturdy patriots lifted the town's meeting to the heights of Senate Statesmanship by power of stern words inspired by manly standing up for rights whithheld. A pity so fine a city has not a City Hall, with a chamber worthy of civic family gatherings like this, and adaptable for concerts, lectures, banquets, school celebrations, not forgetting the sacred functions beloved by devotees of things politic and impolitic. Stage scenes and a theatre atmosphere sadly dim the glory of His Majesty the People when he speaks from his throne—the town meeting, this by the way.

A more satisfactory public meeting for the common weal could hardly be desired. Mr. McCutchen presided with the natural grace of one who speaks with the authority of experience mellowed by the wisdom which is so superior to mere knowledge, calm, pithy, and good humored. Mr. Bemis, who besides being a Water Commissioner for New York city is a distinguished expert in the engineering and legal problems incident to the municipal ownership of public utilities, was present to expound the main features of the undertaking on which our citizens will embark next Tuesday. His address was literally a perfect model of exposition, the like of which is seldom heard, even in high courts of Chancery, where subjects as dry and technical as this of municipal waterworks are chiefly to be heard. There, advocates speak from briefs prepared by others from special information. Mr. Bemis, whose appearance, voice, and manner strikingly recalled President McKinley, spoke from fullness of firsthand knowledge. His clearness of thought, and rare simplicity of utterance, kindled and kept our genuine interest from first to last to a degree that made it an actual pleasure to listen with both ears and the brain. So much for cold water eloquence; in the hands of a master like this a common pair of kitchen bellows would discourse sweet music.

Mr. Creswell McLaughlin is Water Commissioner for Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, so need not have apologized for the preliminary sip he took to oil his joints after getting cramps while wriggling in "the undertaker's chair." Whatever may have been concealed in that tumbler he certainly delighted us with a spirited compound of stingo sense and champagne nonsense, a half and half tonic invaluable after a hour of scientific sermonizing. Then up rose Mr. Martine, whose name we had to ask from our neighbor. Speaking from the floor, as one of us commoners sitting below the platform lords, his musical tones, his straight from the shoulder plainspeech, with much of the old time methodist gesticulation, and a general hilarious cocksureness of fact, argument, and winning in a canter, gave precisely the ideal finishing touch to a meeting that meant business, was eager for the fight, and just gloried in the gatling volley fired by this gallant champion. Questions were invited but few were put, and the absence of capable opponents bespoke success for the cause. Never before have we known so modest a city exhibit two mayors speaking in one voice. Mayor Fisk and Mayor Smalley made a pretty prose duet, matter of fact and crisply put, crowning the occasion with laurel wreath of civic dignity.

* * * *

The most profoundly interesting district in New York city is its East side, from Fourteenth street to Brooklyn Bridge, along the riverside, and from the river to Second avenue and the Bowery. Within these bounds you can explore a dozen Palestines and Meccas and Salems, Syrian, Russian, Arabian, Turkish, and of many lands beside. Years of familiarity with place and people only deepen the fascination, and the mystery of it all. Quieter folk than the Jews of this quarter are not to be found in Christendom, yet see how even their women, ancient and in their prime, are temporarily possessed with the demon of revenge, because their mystic Kosher meat is put up a cent or two per pound. To suggest a temporary diet of nonflesh foods would be to goad them into tenfold pious fury against us as Egyptian oppressors of these latter ages. Rather than pay this extra tribute the good mothers and wives have been marching on their foes the butchers, armed with bottles, and all sorts of weapons, destroying the meats with kerosene and the shops with fire and smashing up. Here and there a butcher has chased them away with horsewhips, only to have his skull cracked and his house ruined. If peace-loving women can come to this over a trade grievance, what may not the lawless hordes be and do in a great panic of poverty?

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Manager Joe Alberts has announced the lineup for the local ball team and it looks good. Deegan, p; H. Albert, c; Brown, 1b; J. Albert, 2b; Carlstrom, ss; Washburn, 3b; Reick, lf; Baldwin, cf; and Hand, rf. This combination together with "Wille" Deegan in the box should be fast enough to keep the best of the semi-professional teams busy. The opening game will be played early in May.

J. E. Ruth is the local representative of your Uncle Sam, and will pry into your affairs for the next few weeks taking the Government census. Don't blame the census man, remember the government puts up the questions.

A number of the young people from town will attend the dance given tonight in Schott Hall, Berkeley Heights, for the benefit of the Gillette baseball team.

The weekly prayer and praise meeting of the Methodist church will be held tonight. Rev. Mr. Hollingshead will lead the meeting.

The Shamrock bowling team, which was to have rolled the local team Thursday night on Lee's alleys, failed to show up.

The Glazer trial, which was to have been heard in Justice Clark's court yesterday was again postponed for a week.

The condition of Freeholder John Robison, who is seriously ill was critical yesterday.

Abram Wade, of Stanbury avenue, is around again after a long and tedious illness.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

A classic stage attraction, but one which appears each season new as the newest in its added features, is the Black Patti Musical Comedy Company, which presents this year "A Trip to Africa," a musical comedy in three acts, prepared by John Larkins. The show scintillates with bright comedy gems, and is alive with musical and novelty features. Madame Sissieretta Jones, the original Black Patti, the musical star of this attraction, is a singer than whom none of her race, and few of any race can claim a higher niche in the hall of fame of singers. In arranging for the presentation of "A Trip to Africa" due deference was paid to the question of balance. The show this season is better than ever before. The musical numbers, as they deal with the chorus, are all new, and are fine examples of the brightest and best in humorous and sentimental music. Madame Jones will sing two songs in the second act. In the third act she will appear as the Princess Lulu and also sing with the sextette which will give selections from the Grand Opera, Lucia de Lammamoor. Plainfield theatre tonight.

HALLET & DAVIS

"The House of Superior Pianos and Right Prices"

We carry as fine a line of pianos as can be found anywhere, including a special department for player-pianos.

We have been manufacturing pianos since 1839, but this would mean nothing to the careful buyer (who refuses to pay for a name) if our prices were not right—but our prices are right—just right.

There is no false economy in buying here. The Hallet & Davis Piano is everywhere recognized as the world's standard. To pay more than the price of a Hallet & Davis is to waste money. A colonial model Hallet & Davis is $365—other styles a little more, according to cases.

We carry other makes of pianos for any purse. For example, for those who want a new piano at less than $365 we say:

SEE OUR NEW PIANO FOR $275

Terms as Low as $10 Down and $5 a Month

Our selling plan is absolutely one price. Every piano is plainly tagged—no mystery about the price. It is this fair and right plan, combined with our experience, superior factory facilities and ample capital, that form the foundation of our enormous business, the largest in New Jersey.

Write for catalogs of pianos or player-pianos. We have many interesting booklets showing piano construction, etc.

TRENTON ORGY INQUIRY URGED BY GOVERNOR

In a letter to Speaker Harry P. Ward, made public yesterday, Governor Fort declared that in his opinion there should be an investigation of the scandal connected with the closing hours of the House of Assembly and that the inquiry should be undertaken by the House itself through the initiative of its Speaker. At the same time he announced his willingness to co-operate by reviewing the evidence or in any other way that might seem proper to the House. That there should be an inquiry the Governor regards as a duty to the public and to those members of the House who were not implicated in the revelry of the last night.

Governor Fort's view that he himself was without authority to order an investigation and that the inquiry must be undertaken as a voluntary act on the part of the Assemblymen themselves was fortified by an opinion from Attorney-General Edmund Wilson, a copy of which was included in the letter to Speaker Ward. The Attorney-General said it was scarcely conceivable that members or officers of the House would refuse to give testimony or to cheerfully cooperate in ascertaining what really occurred during the closing session.

If undertaken in the proper spirit Attorney-General Wilson pointed out that the result of the investigation would be to relieve from censure the body of the members of the House who did not participate in the objectionable scenes and would place the burden of ignominy and shame where it properly belongs. This is the view which has been taken generally by innocent members of the House.

The action of the Governor was the result of a conference with Speaker Ward last Tuesday when he promised to carefully consider the questions which had been brought to his attention.

W. C. T. U. INSTITUTE TO BE HELD AT WESTFIELD.

The Union County Women's Christian Temperance Union will hold its spring meeting at the Methodist church, Westfield, Thursday, April 21. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of this city, the county president, will preside and the local union will be largely represented.

The morning session will begin at 10 o'clock, the afternoon session at 2 o'clock and the evening session at 8 o'clock. Special features will be an address on "Facts and Theories of Equal Suffrage," by Mrs. Champlain Riley, secretary of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield; department symposium by State superintendents; "Round Table," conducted by the State president, Mrs. Emma Bourne, of Newark.

There will be a "Silver Medal Contest," in the evening by six members, subjects to be presented as follows: "The Road to Heaven," "A Woman's Logic," "The Saloons Must Go," "How Mrs. Hennessey Saved Her Boy," "The Vine Theory Disproved," and "The Goose Tale."

LARGE WOOLEN MILLS SOLD FOR A TRIFLE.

The Somerville Woolen Mills, owned by Bacon & Co., woolen brokers, of 92 Franklin street, New York, were sold yesterday at public auction here by J. E. Conant & Co., auctioneers, of Boston.

The property consisted of four large mill buildings, including the Laurel mills, five dwelling houses, storehouse, stables, etc., situated in the heart of the town, and 645 lots of machinery.

The real estate, which was valued at more than $300,000, brought just $44,487.50, and was knocked down to ten different purchasers, who will utilize it for various manufacturing purposes in the future. The machinery was sold in small lots to woolen manufacturers from Eastern cities and brought low prices.

Think Boys Were Firebugs.

Attempts at incendiarism believed to be the work of boys were made Thursday night in Westfield in a shed in the rear of Voehl's bakery, but the flames were detected in time to prevent a serious blaze. Paper on which kerosene oil had been poured was ignited and the Mayor who saw the smoke put out the fire, then made a tour of investigation. While he was walking around the block, another fire in the same place was started, and a general alarm was sent in for fire engines. One turned out and the other was ready to leave the fire-house when back taps halted them. A fireman was stationed at the scene of the blaze all night. Half a dozen families live in the block.

Miss Carroll Will Sing.

Miss Grace Carroll, of this city, will take part in the cantata, "The Rose Maiden," to be given by the Choral Society of Bound Brook, Friday night, April 22. Miss Anna L. Case, who was to have taken part, has been called West and her place will be taken by Miss Maude Estelle Klotz.

The Young People's Society of the Church of the Heavenly Rest will meet at the parish house Tuesday night.

DOING THEIR DUTY.

Sscores of Plainfield Readers Are Learning the Duty of the Kidneys.

To filter the blood is the kidneys' duty.

When they fail to do this the kidneys are sick.

Backache and many kidney ills follow;

Urinary trouble, diabetes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure them all.

Plainfield people endorse our claim.

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Though I have had no occasion to use Doan's Kidney Pills in the past few years, I value them as highly as ever. My kidneys were weak for years and I suffered severely from backache. I was unable to sleep well and when I arose in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Every cold I caught settled in my kidneys and aggravated my suffering. I doctored but the medicines I used did me no good. At length I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procuring a supply at Randolph's Pharmacy, I began taking them. They went directly to the seat of my trouble, disposing of the pains and making me feel like a different person."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Do you realize that Spring is here, and within a few days you will be forced to lay aside your heavy garments for those more suitable?

Why not prepare yourself for the change of climate, and place your order now for a strictly high-class tailored light weight suit or overcoat. It takes time to make good clothes and make them right; therefore, an early call will prove profitable to you.

If you are particular about your clothes, here is the place for you to get finest materials, keen craftsmanship, and perfect fit at a price in keeping with your purse.

Fancy striped blues, plain blues, conservative grays, and the much talked about cassimeres and tweeds are well represented amongst the complete line now awaiting your inspection.

PROPOSALS FOR COAL, OATS, HAY AND STRAW.

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J., at a regular meeting held April 4, 1910, notice is hereby given that the Common Council will meet on Monday, the second day of May, A. D. 1910, at 8 o'clock p. m., at the Council Chamber, No. 149-151 North Avenue, at which time and place said Common Council will receive sealed proposals for furnishing the following, that is to say:

180 Tons of Coal, stove and nut, of quality equal to best Lehigh, delivered in bins at the different departments, more or less.

500 Bags of Oats, of best quality, more or less.

25 Tons of Hay, of best quality, more or less.

25 Tons of Straw, more or less.

To be delivered at the various Engine Houses, Police Station, Alms House, and Street Department, in quantities as required by each of said departments, during the remainder of the current year.

Upon receipt of the bids or proposals the Common Council will immediately proceed to unseal the same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding or their agents, provided said parties or agents choose to be then and there present, and also make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Council.

The right to reject any or all bids is expressly reserved by the Common Council. Proposals should be endorsed "Proposals for Coal, Oats, Hay and Straw."

By order of the Common Council.

SIGHTS HALLEY'S COMET WITHOUT ANY TAIL

Halley's comet, racing toward the earth, was sighted by Professor Philip Fox, director of Dearborn Observatory at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., at 4:24 yesterday morning. It remained in view for ten minutes until it was merged into the dawn in the eastern sky. The comet appeared as a nebulous mass of about the fifth magnitude, but somewhat brighter than when it was in the western sky several weeks ago.

Its body gave forth a faint writish glow that encompassed the comet and lighted up the sky for a short distance on every side. The observations are made through the big eighteen-and-one-half-inch telescope, and considering the fact that it was necessary to penetrate a considerable haze that overhung Lake Michigan, the comet appeared remarkably plain.

The comet was caught yesterday by the spectograph at Yerkes Observatory, and the first definite knowledge of its present composition was obtained. The spectograph and a long observation were made by Edwin B. Frost, director of the observatory. Professor Edward E. Barnard attempted to get a photograph, but does not expect to obtain a good negative for more than a week.

"I observed the comet from the time of its rising until about twenty minutes before sunrise," said Professor Frost. "I was able to determine with the spectograph that the light it is now giving is principally either reflected sunlight or the light of the nucleus itself, the solid particles, and it is not of a gaseous origin. The spectrum was curious. There was no tail, but I believe the comet was a little brighter than it was yesterday and the day before. It is not visible to the naked eye."

She did not reply at once. The shadow of a column was over her face; but I guessed that she was staring at me.

"You have it!" She almost whispered.

"I picked it up in the street car," I said, with a cheerfulness I did not feel. "It looks like a very opulent little purse."

Why didn't she speak about the necklace? For just a careless word to make me sane again!

"You!" she repeated, horror-stricken. And then I produced the purse and held it out on my palm.

"I should have sent it to you before, I suppose, but, as you know, I have been laid up since the wreck."

We both saw McKnight at the same moment. He had pulled the curtains aside and was standing looking out at us. The tableau of give and take was unmistakable; the gold purse, her outstretched hand, my own attitude. It was over in a second; then he came out and lounged on the balcony railing.

"They're mad at me in there," he said airily, "so I came out. I suppose the reason they call it bridge is because so many people get cross over it."

The heat broke up the card group soon after, and they all came out for the night breeze. I had no more words alone with Alison.

I went back to the incubator for the night. We said almost nothing on the way home; there was a constraint between us for the first time that I could remember. It was too early for bed, and so we smoked in the living room and tried to talk of trivial things. After a time even those failed, and we sat silent. It was McKnight who finally broached the subject.

"And so she wasn't at Seal Harbor at all."

"No."

"Do you know where she was, Lollie?"

"Somewhere near Cresson."

"And that was the purse—her purse with the broken necklace in it?"

"Yes, it was. You understand, don't you, Rich, that, having given her my word, I couldn't tell you?"

"I understand a lot of things," he said, without bitterness.

We sat for some time and smoked. Then Richey got up and stretched himself. "I'm off to bed, old man," he said. "Need any help with that game arm of yours?"

"No, thanks," I returned.

I heard him go into his room and lock the door. It was a bad hour for me. The first shadow between us, and the shadow of a girl at that.

CHAPTER XVII.

At the Farm House Again.

McKnight is always a sympathizer with the early worm. It was late when he appeared. Perhaps, like myself, he had not slept well. But he was apparently cheerful enough, and he made a better breakfast than I did. It was one o'clock before we got to Baltimore. After a half hour's wait we took a local for M——, the station near which the cinematograph picture had been taken.

We passed the scene of the wreck, McKnight with curiosity, I with a sickening sense of horror. Back in the fields was the little farm house where Alison West and I had intended getting coffee, and winding away from the track, maple trees shading it on each side, was the lane where we had stopped to rest, and where I had—it seemed presumption beyond belief now—where I had tried to comfort her by patting her hand.

We got out at M——, a small place with two or three houses and a general store. The station was a one-roomed affair, with a railed-off place at the end, where a scale, a telegraph instrument and a chair constituted the entire furnishing.

The station agent was a young man with a shrewd face. He stopped hammering a piece of wood over a hole in the floor to ask where we wanted to go.

"We're not going," said McKnight, "we're coming. Have a cigar?"

The agent took it with an inquiring glance, first at it and then at us.

"We want to ask you a few questions," began McKnight, perching himself on the railing and kicking the chair forward for me. "Or, rather, this gentleman does."

"Wait a minute," said the agent, glancing through the window. "There is a hen in that crate choking herself to death."

He was back in a minute, and took up his position near a sawdust-filled box that did duty as a cuspidor

"Now fire away," he said.

"In the first place," I began, "do you remember the day the Washington Flier was wrecked below here?"

"Do I!" he said. "Did Jonah remember the whale?"

"Were you on the platform here when the first section passed?"

"I was."

"Do you recall seeing a man hanging to the platform of the last car?"

"There was no one hanging there when she passed here," he said with conviction. "I watched her out of sight."

"Did you see anything that morning of a man about my size, carrying a small grip, and wearing dark clothes and a derby hat?" I asked eagerly.

McKnight was trying to look unconcerned, but I was frankly anxious. It was clear that the man had jumped somewhere in the mile of track just beyond.

"Well, yes, I did." The agent cleared his throat. "When the smash came the operator at MX sent word along the wire, both ways. I got it here, and I was pretty near crazy, though I knew it wasn't any fault of mine.

"I was standing on the track looking down, for I couldn't leave the office, when a young fellow with light hair limped up to me and asked me what that smoke was over there.

"That's what's left of the Washington Flier,' I said, 'and I guess there's souls going up in that smoke.'

"'Do you mean the first section?' he said, getting kind of greenish-yellow.

"'That's what I mean,' I said; 'split to kindling wood because Rafferty, on the second section, didn't want to be late.'

"He put his hand out in front of him, and the satchel fell with a bang.

"'My God!' he said, and dropped right on the track in a heap.

"I got him into the station and he came around, but he kept on groaning something awful. He'd sprained his ankle, and when he got a little better I drove him over in Carter's milk wagon to the Carter place, and I reckon he stayed there a spell."

"That's all, is it?" I asked.

"That's all—or, no, there's something else. About noon that day one of the Carter twins came down with a note from him asking me to send a long-distance message to some one in Washington."

"To whom?" I asked eagerly.

"I reckon I've forgot the name, but the message was that this fellow—Sullivan was his name—was at M——, and if the man had escaped from the wreck would he come to see him."

"He wouldn't have sent that message to me," I said to McKnight, rather crestfallen. "He'd have every object in keeping out of my way."

"There might be reasons," McKnight observed judicially. "He might not have found the papers then."

"Was the name Blakeley?" I asked.

"It might have been—I can't say. But the man wasn't there, and there was a lot of noise. I couldn't hear well. Then in half an hour down came the other twin to say the gentleman was taking on awful and didn't want the message sent."

"He's gone, of course?"

"Yes. Limped down here in about three days and took the noon train for the city."

It seemed a certainty now that our man, having hurt himself somewhat in his jump, had stayed quietly in the farm house until he was able to travel. But, to be positive, we decided to visit the Carter place.

I gave the station agent a five-dollar bill, which he rolled up with a couple of others and stuck in his pocket. I turned as we got to a bend in the road, and he was looking curiously after us.

It was not until we had climbed the hill and turned onto the road to the Carter place that I realized where we were going. Although we approached it from another direction, I knew the farm house at once. It was the one where Alison West and I had breakfasted nine days before. With a new restraint between us, I did not tell McKnight. I wondered afterward if he had suspected it. I saw him looking hard at the gatepost which had figured in one of our mysteries, but he asked no questions. Afterward he grew almost taciturn, for him, and let me do most of the talking.

We opened the front gate of the Carter place and went slowly up the walk. Two ragged youngsters, alike even to freckles and squints, were playing in the yard.

"Is your mother around?" I asked.

"In the front room. Walk in," they answered in identical tones.

As we got to the porch we heard voices, and stopped. I knocked, but the people within, engaged in animated, rather one-sided conversation, did not answer.

"'In the front room. Walk in,'" quoted McKnight, and did so.

ABOUT DELFT CHINA.

Were you to wander through Holland today (or next summer), it would be the quest of the windmill china alone that would tempt you in the direction of Delft. And when once you had halted on your journey from Rotterdam to The Hague, you would realize that Delft was not the one huge windmill you'd always thought it.

There is a royal mausoleum there, a placid canal and a quaint market place; but the history of the town reads like a fairy tale.

Once upon a time a king lived there, and the quiet village grew in elegance until it was a fit abode for royalty. There were magnificent carriages rolling through its streets and rich tapestries upon the walls of Dutch interiors, and finally gold and silver plate replaced pewter and delicately moulded procelain was substituted for rough earthenware.

Delftshaven was the nearby port to which came the vessels of the East India Trading Company. Rare porcelains from the Orient were brought, to the dismay of the old Holland potters; but the Dutchmen went quietly to work to copy with their national love for detail, and this it was that brought forth perfection of the Delft ware that we know today.

Of that some wise persons know, for most of us have made the acquaintance of only the very ordinary bits of decorative Delft that find their way to America.

The highways and byways of Holland are filled with potteries, but Delft overshadows them all—a giant, as it were, beside the pygmies.

The color of this china is not invariably dull blue upon a greenish white surface. There are pieces in red and gold touched with yellow and blue, and there are parti-colored Chinese effects after the vases copied in that early attempt to imitate the oriental.

More characteristic than the windmill (though maybe not so well known) is the persistent border of Chinese design that appears on so many of the curiously shaped edges of Delft dishes.

The border is rarely a plain round or oblong, but takes on a scrool idea, with frequently a seashell pattern. Many of these patterned borders are embossed and heavily ridged. The designs are never flowing, but their edges are so clearly marked as to often appear positively sharp in a way that would be criticised were it not so thoroughly characteristic of a particular china.

P. H. S. NINE LOSES TO MORRIS HIGH TEAM

Morris High School's baseball nine, of New York, defeated Plainfield High by the score of 3 to 2 on Crescent Oval this morning. The twirlers of both teams were in fine fettle, Daley striking out eleven to Van Zandts ten.

The local schoolboys rallied in the ninth and negotiated one run across the pan but that was not enough to win. Plainfield's chances were lost when Daly fanned Bristol with two men on the sacks. The score:

FAIRVIEW'S TWIRLER PUTS UP A RECORD

Here's a pitching record for the season which should make some of the big leaguers take water. C. Harper, the crack twirler of the Fairview Cycle Club's nine, performed a notable feat this morning when he fanned nineteen players, in the contest played on Hyde Field with the Y. M. C. A. Juniors.

That's about the whole story to the game as the Juniors were walloped by the score of 17 to 1. The Fairviews excelled in fielding and batting. M. McDonough, Clarence Smith, Moulton and McNamee starred in the game by brilliant performances. The lineup:

Fairview Cycle Club—M. McDonough and A. McDonough, rf; C. Harper, p; W. Birch, 3b; C. Smith, c; V. Goldsmith, 2b; E. Kenny, 1b; J. Harper and C. Beekman, cf; F. Lowe, lf; F. McDonough, ss.

Y. M. C. A.—Moore and Bersem, rf; Serviss and Bower, cf; Dickerman, 3b; Ball, 1b; Hetfield, ss-p; Leighs, 2b; Bergen, lf; McNamee, c; Moulton, ss.

THE FORUM.

Alcohol and Tuberculosis.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The subject of tuberculosis, its prevention and cure, may be considered the topic of the day, claiming the attention not only of physicians but of educators and the public generally. Family history is gone over to determine whether there are hereditary tendencies; methods of prevention or eradication are studied and with the first symptoms of an abnormal condition of the respiratory organs, cordials, slings and cocktails are resorted to under the impression of averting the White Plague. It is taken as a stimulant, forgetting its secondary effect as a depressant, interfering with the organs of nutrition and devitalizing the blood it leaves the patient pitiably helpless in his struggle for life.

Let us read the testimony of a few of the world's great physicians—Dr. Knopf, of New York, honorary vice-president of the British Congress on Tuberculosis, says, "Alcohol never cured and never can cure tuberculosis. It will prevent or retard recovery. It is like a two-edged weapon, one one side it poisons the system and on the other side it ruins the stomach and prevents proper digestion. The late Dr. Flint, a specialist on heart and lung diseases, asked if his pneumonia patient had ever been a drinker and hearing that "Sammy had sometimes taken his cups," declared, "that settles it, he will not live twenty-four hours."

Prof. Wiersdt, of Heidelberg University, upon being asked not to say that his patient must drink beer, replied, "It is never necessary to drink beer or wine under any circumstances whatever."

Everywhere throughout beer drinking Germany the health resorts are known as places where water is the only beverage. At Bad Nauheim, Dr. Schott was asked how many of the 20,000 patients there were not from beer-drinking. His reply was, "Beer makes the heart felt, it makes the liver hardt unt, it makes them schtupid like dogs." Students, see literature in the Public Library.

WHAT WATER CO. OFFERED

Terms of Contract Proposed by Concern Would Protect the City.

NOTHING DONE ABOUT IT.

Provisions of Agreement Would Have Insured. Favorable Arrangements for Supply for Next Thursday.

That the efforts of some of the more ardent advocates of municipal ownership of the water supply to convey an impression among the voters that the water company is a hard-hearted corporation whose object it is to make money at any cost without any regard for the rights of the people seems to be disproved by some documents referred in the Water Investigating Commission's report. Evidence of this plan to make the water company appear as being a business concern diametically opposed to the people's interests is found in the P. P. A. circular letter, which was received by every voter today where this question is put:

"Do you feel safer in the hands of the water company, a corporation controlled by people living out of our city and having no interest in our welfare except from the standpoint of dollars and cents, and who are taking the water which we need and selling it to Elizabeth and intermediate places to swell the dividends of their capital stock?"

Chairman Frederic E. Mygatt, of the Councilmanic public affairs committee, which has the water proposition in charge, admitted that there is in existence a proposition made by the water company which shows that it is not the creature it is being painted. This proposition is referred to in the Water Commission's report submitted to the Common Council in January, 1909. The reference in question was made to a draft of a contract which the company had submitted to the Councilmanic public affairs committee in 1906. That draft it appears was never reported to the Common Council nor ever made public except by a general reference to it in the report of the Investigating Commission. In other words, it has never been accepted, rejected or withdrawn.

When Mr. Mygatt was asked about the offer in question he said that he recalled it but that he did not have a copy of it. He recollected that in it the company agreed to cut off outlying towns and give Plainfield a preference if the water began to fail and he confirmed the report that the offer was made for a ten years' term, which is the legal limit, with a privilege of renewal. This renewal was for two more terms of ten years each. Other offers contained in the contract submitted included one not to extend the company's mains into any other towns and another to give a five per cent discount for cash payment of bills. Still another clause was one whereby meters would be installed on request.

Here is the contract in full:

THIS AGREEMENT, made and executed in duplicate this day of nineteen hundred and six, between the INHABITANTS OF THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD, a municipal corporation of the State of New Jersey (hereinafter called the City), of the first part, and PLAINFIELD-UNION WATER COMPANY, a corporation also of said State (hereinafter called the Company), of the second part, WITNESSETH.

That the parties hereto each in consideration of the sum of ONE DOLLAR to it in hand paid by the other, and of the mutual covenants and agreements herein contained, do hereby covenant and agree each with the other as follows:

(1) The said Company agrees to supply pure and wholesome water to the said City and to the inhabitants thereof for extinguishing fires, flushing sewers and for other public purposes, and also for domestic use, on the terms, in the manner and at the prices hereinafter stated, FOR THE TERM OF TEN (10) YEARS FROM THE DATE HEREOF, WITH THE OPTION TO THE SAID CITY TO RENEW THIS CONTRACT FOR TWO SUCCESSIVE PERIODS OF TEN YEARS EACH.

(2) The Company shall maintain three hundred and twenty-five (325) hydrants at the places where the same are now located in said City, and shall erect and maintain such other hydrants of the same or similar description as may be directed by the Common Council of the said City at other points in or along the streets, highways or public places thereof, provided, however, that the Company shall not be required to make any extension of its mains for the purpose of supplying a hydrant or hydrants unless the annual income along the same from all sources shall amount to at least ten (10) cents per lineal foot thereof. Hydrants shall be removed by the

SOCIALISM CONDEMNED

Rev. Dr. Slicer Lays Bare the Doctrine of the Schemers to Disrupt the Family.

"SOME MEN ARE PIRATES."

Family Relation too Sacred to be Changed—Brain and Initiative Better Than Subversion of Capital.

If Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church of New York city, had continued his address for another hour or two last night the mixed congregation which was large, would gladly have remained to listen. Dr. Spicer's topic, "The Vain Hope of Socialism," so fully covered the question as to its non-desirability as a factor in our body politic that there were but few shreds of a sense on which to base hope of ultimate victory for the cult.

Dr. Slicer said that it is important, if not utterly germain to thinking people, to understand the question thoroughly so that the principles involved in the question be not laid aside as of no importance individually and as a nation. He declared that "vain hope" is used not in the sense that it may not come to pass in the United States, but that it might after years obtain a foothold in spots sporadically and work insidiously.

"I am opposed to socialism," he said, "because it is not convincing nor is it an economic factor in any sense. The definition of socialism by the converts to it leaves much to be desired and its explanation is never the same when coming from more than one source. The hope of socialism seems to be to capitalize the Beatitudes so that they will declare a dividend for the other thing. Leading socialists know what they want, but it is not the Beatitudes. Society needs the individual for the initiative. The social group is bound together by tradition, custom and social form. These tend to monotony, stagnation and work against progress. They think the capitalists have all the riches of God and the disposition of the devil. I do not appear for the capitalists, but for economic knowledge and economic practice.

"I certainly do object to the groups of men who have acquired wealth at the expense of their less able competitors. I cannot distinguish the difference between this class and the old fashioned buccaneel who plied his trade on the high seas in piracy. If you want to cure an anarchist of his anarchy or a socialist of his economics, give him something to own. He will soon become something beside an enemy of the present social system against which he now rails.

"Socialists advocate the seizure by the State of all land, industrial concerns, capital and the means of production generally. Four ways are proposed by them: Confiscation, Compensation, Excessive Taxation and A Time Limit. But it is distinctively unsocial and distinctive immoral and tends to frustrate the design of Brotherhood. It is merely the creature of class consciousness and is born of rancor, hatred and envy."

Dr. Slicer read a few extracts from a child's socialistic primer, fashioned after the old New England school primer and which contains a secular parody of the Ten Commandments. The primer also describes a certain book written by Marks, a leading socialist, as the "Bible of Social Democracy."

"The Wage Slave", said Dr. Slicer, "is too thin to last over night. Socialism decries the wage slave and wants him abolished from the earth, but cannot supply the means except in the annihilation of the whole race of mankind. Some of the things you would have to submit to if socialism ever became universal would be: "Your children would be taken from you to be cared for by the government. You could no longer sell your services for their actual worth; you could have no choice as to the work you should do, nor have the right to select your employer; and the socialist State would control every moment of your life from the cradle to the grave. And let me say that these tenets are not always preached in public, but make their way through the insidious literature published wherever the socialistic press has followers.

"Immigration need not be restricted", continued the speaker, "but the gregarious herding of the masses in the great cities should be prevented. In one block above the fifties in Manhattan more than 6,000 people are housed. If this rate obtained throughout the city the entire population of this country could find quarters on Manhattan island alone." The mountaineers of Tennessee and Carolinas, which are the very symbols of American manhood would never leave their free lives for a change to this condition."

Speaking of individual enterprise which socialism is so strongly opposed to Dr. Slicer told what could be done with seventy-five cents' worth of iron ore, by the use of brains, initiative, control and brains. This barrel of ore can be converted into $2,500,000 worth, of watch arbors, yet they do not want the man whose brains contrives this marvellous product to get the return for his ingenuity.

On the sex problem Dr. Slicer said the matter from the socialistic viewpoint was too utterly depraved from the viewpoint of a Christian to be tolerated for a moment. The sanctity of the home, the overthrow of religion and the breaking of the family relation appeared from their own professions to be the one particular aim which should be a factor in forever relegating socialism

PREACHES TO JR.O.U.A.M.

Trinity Reformed's Pastor Addresses the Four Local Councils.

THE BIBLE HIS SUBJECT.

Rev. John Y. Broek Gives Some Facts, Figures and Some Estimates of Great Men Concerning Holy Writ.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, preached a sermon the four councils of the Jr. O. U. A. M., of the city, last night, taking for his theme, "The Beacon Light to Men," Psalm 119:130; "The Entrance of Thy Word Giveth Life." There was a good attendance of members of the order and all enjoyed the discourse, which in part follows:

"The Bible is the great beacon light to men. It is the world's greatest and best book. More copies of the Bible are sold annually than any other book. Portions of the Bible, at least, have already been translated into 411 languages and dialects, making the knowledge of the Scripture accessible to four-fifths of the human race.

"Yet on the other hand, it is estimated that ninety per cent of murders in our country in the last twenty-five years occurred in families where there were no Bibles. A large percentage of smaller crimes took place in families which had Bibles, but did not read them.

"Men of history have borne prominent testimony to the Bible. Sir Walter Scott said: 'There is but one book—the Bible.' Gladstone called it 'The impregnable rock of Holy Scriptures.' There was a time in Abraham Lincoln's life when he possessed but two books—the Bible and Bunyan's Pilgrim Progress, but these books also possessed Lincoln. Theodore Roosevelt says, 'Almost every man who has added by his life-work to the sum of human achievement of which the race is proud, has based his life-work upon the teachings of the Bible.' And the late Chief Justice Brewer brings this testimony, 'The man who brings this Bible home to the people of our nation is a patriot.'

"The Bible is not a man-made book. God is its author. The Bible needs no defense of any of its friends. It is its own defense. It will always stand. It will never fail. This book has been attacked, assailed and abused, but it still is the 'Word of God that liveth and abideth forever.'

"It is a book which is clothed with divine authority. We receive our Christianity not from the 20th Century, but direct from the Scriptures. It is our authority and teacher. All that is necessary for salvation.

"It has a message for every man. It has a wonderful influence on character. The Bible is well worth our reading from a physical standpoint. It tells us to keep our bodies clean. It is the best guide book to health which the world knows. The Bible is the basis of literature, art and music. The Bible reveals to us the two greatest poets that it is possible for man to know. These facts are the discovery of God and the destiny of a human soul. The Bible begins 'In the beginning God,' and no mortal can penetrate behind that thought. The Bible is worth our reading, for it contains a perfect code of ethics and morality.

"The Bible tells of Christ. He is the substance and crown of all. All history, all prophecy, all miracles. It is the only book that we have about Christ and that maker of a priceless book. And throughout the Bible there is a stream of blood which tells of Calvary. Dear old book, old-fashioned, but not obsolete—a light to our path and a guide to our way. Throughout the journey of life, our rod and staff on which to lean and our solace in sorrow."

BOROUGH COURT HAD A BULKY BLOTTER.

John Brennan was arraigned in the borough police court this morning on the charge of calling names at Mrs. Charles Wicht, of Harrison avenue. The trial was put over until tomorrow morning. William G. De Meza is counsel for the complainant.

Gustav Barfuss was arrested on the charge of obstructing Somerset street with automobiles. He will also have a hearing tomorrow morning.

Frank Carroll and Frank Wissa, who were arrested on a drunk and disorderly charge, escaped with suspended sentences.

THE WEATHER.

A SHOE DEALER FOR 25 YEARS.

Survived by Wife, Two Sons and Daughter—Funeral Wednesday Afternoon at Late Residence.

Horace Sherwin, aged fifty years, who for twenty-five years was engaged in the retail shoe business in this city, died at his home, 105 Richmond street at 1.30 o'clock this morning from heart trouble. He had been ill for several months and during the past few weeks it was known that he could not recover his health and strength.

Mr. Sherwin was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Orren Sherwin, and was a native of Jersey City. He came here about twenty-five years ago and engaged in the retail shoe business, being one of the pioneer merchants. His first store was where E. A. Laing now conducts a stationery business. Later he removed across the street, adjoining L. L. Baker's confectionary store. A few years ago he took a position as traveling salesman for the George West Shoe Company, of Philadelphia, and later with the Endicott-Johnson Shoe Company, of New York, with which firm he remained until taken ill.

Mr. Sherwin was a member of the First Baptist church and for years a regular attendant at the services. He leaves beside a wife, two sons, Walter M. Sherwin, an actor, and Robert Sherwin, of this city, a daughter, Miss Anna Sherwin, a sister, Miss Eleanor Sherwin, who holds a responsible position as Wellesley College and a brother, George Sherwin, of Newark.

The funeral services will be held from the late home on Richmond street, Wednesday afternoon, and Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Edwin Shaw, of the Seventh-day Baptist church, will have charge.

TEACHERS ENTERTAIN AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

Under the auspices of the teachers of the Plainfield Public Schools an entertainment and reception was held at the High School Auditorium, Saturday night, followed by a dance. The sketch "Ici on Parle Francais" was given by the teachers.

S. B. Howe, Jr., was the star of the cast, taking the part of a Frenchman. The rest of the cast deserve great credit. Lindsay Best played the part of "Mr. Spriggins" to perfection, while Miss Elmina Eason, as his wife, was excellent. Charles Lewis was the "Mayor" and made a hit. Miss Katherine Ball was the Irish maid and showed the independence of that race. Miss Fanny Beckwith and Miss Myrtle Reynolds completed the cast.

After the sketch all adjourned to the "gym" for refreshments. Benjamin Evans proved himself a capable caterer. After refreshments the teachers and their guests returned to the auditorium where dancing was enjoyed. Miss S. Lena Bass was chairman of the committee in charge of the entertainment.

PICTURED AMERICAN BOY AS JOLLY GOOD FELLOW

Rev. Dr. Lester C. Randolph, of Alfred, N. Y., gave a delightful talk at the Seventh-day Baptist church, Sabbath evening on the subject, "That Jolly Fellow—the American Boy." The affair was held under the auspices of the Men's Club of the church, and there was a large and appreciative audience present.

Dr. Randolph spoke more especially of the future of the American boy, who he said is the embryo of the American citizen to be, and in this connection dwelt at some length on the importance of the proper training of the boy for a useful citizenship.

The speaker also gave some excellent advice to parents as to how they should train their boys, all of a practical nature. Dr. Randolph interspersed his lecture with funny stories, his witticism being a marked feature of the talk. He had a fund of good stories, all of which were applicable to his subject and at the conclusion everyone felt as though they had spent a profitable and pleasant evening.

Dr. Randolph occupies the pulpit of the church in the morning, preaching an excellent sermon.

Mother Goose Party.

A mother Goose party will be given at the Y. W. C. A. on Thursday night. Girls sixteen years and older are invited to attend.

—Robert M. Pierce, a real estate broker of Dunellen, has sold Alvin Burdick's house on Penfield place, Dunellen, to a man in Hackensack, possession to be taken at once.

MISS BRADLEY MARRIES

She Becomes the Bride of Charles F. Norton at Scotch Plains Church.

TO RESIDE IN BROOKLYN.

Miss Dorothy Taylor Maid of Honor and E. H. Ahlefeld Best Man —Rev. Mr. Mathiews Officiates.

Miss Natalie Bradley, daughter of the late William H. Bradley, of Brooklyn, and Charles Frederick Norton, also of Brooklyn, were married at the Scotch Plains Baptist church, Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, in the presence of a large and fashionable assemblage of guests from Brooklyn, New York and Fanwood. Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

The bride, gowned in faille Francais, embroidered with roses, seed pearls and duchess lace and carrying white roses and lilies-of-the-valley, was attended by Miss Dorothy Taylor, of Westerly, R. I., as maid-of-honor. Her gown was pink crepe meteor with crystal over-dress and garniture of silver and roses. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaids were Miss Amy Budd Chapman, Miss Elizabeth Wilson, Miss Jennie Gould, of Brooklyn, and Miss Mina Fennell, of New York. Their gowns were of pink crepe meteor with crystal overdress, and garniture of pink roses. They carried bouquets of pink roses.

The best man was Edwin H. Ahlefeld, of Brooklyn, and the ushers were Reginald H. Pelz, Harry W. Barley, Howard L. Close, of Brooklyn, and Joshua Brush, of New York.

William H. Gage, of Montclair, presided at the organ, and while he was playing the Wedding March from "Loehengrin," the bridal party entered the church. The ushers led the way, followed by the maid-of-honor, the bridesmaids and the bride. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride from 7 to 10 o'clock. Music was furnished by Zentner's orchestra, of New York. The bride and groom received the congratulations of their guests, after which supper was served.

The church was lavishly decorated for the occasion with white roses, palms, smilax and lilies, and the house was also decorated with similar flowers, arranged by Stanley.

The bride received a large collection of handsome and valuable gifts. In the exchange of gifts among the members of the bridal party, the bride received from the groom a pearl and diamond ring, the groom received from the bride a pearl scarf pin surrounded with diamonds. The bridesmaids received pearl brooches and the maid-of-honor a pearl chain. The best man received a pearl scarf pin surrounded with diamonds while the ushers received crown of pearl scarfs pins.

The bride and groom formerly lived in Brooklyn, and upon their return from a wedding trip will reside at 232 Decateur street, that city. The groom is a commission merchant in New York. He is a member of the Crescent Athletic and Seminole clubs, of Brooklyn, and the Polytechnic Alumni Association, also of the Alpha Sigma Phi. The bride is a graduate of Packer Institute and a member of the alumni association of that school; also of the Gamma Sig Phi.

AUTOMOBILE FEES SHOW BIG INCREASE

Basing his estimate upon the receipts of the first three months of this year, J. B. R. Smith, State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, believes that the total receipts of the department for the year will be $325,000, as against $245,196 from this source last year.

Receipts for March this year were $52,184, which is $25,521 more than for the same month last year. The showing is even better when the first five months of the present fiscal year are considered, from November 1 to April 1. The receipts of the department for this period were $169,315, as against $116,655 for the same period last year.

Since January 1 the department has issued 15,233 automobile registrations, 16,930 drivers' licenses, 1,556 tourists' licenses and 1,043 motorcycle licenses.

"Our James" Will Be There.

James E. Martine will be a guest at a dinner to be given by the Circumnavigating Club tonight at the Astor Hotel in New York. Colonel William J. Bryan and half a hundred prominent Democrats will also be present.

The Owls Will Dance.

The Owl Social club has arranged to give a ball in Saengerbund Hall on Friday night, May 13. The committee in charge is George F. Slicke, George M. Smith, Edward Mattell, Jacob Schlick and M. A. Nichols.

Mrs. Joseph Sheppard, of West Fifth street, is quite ill at her home.

JERSEY PRINTERS MEET

Typos from All Parts of the State in Semi-Annual Session.

SEVENTEEN UNIONS ASSEMBLE.

Many Speeches Are Made, Much Music Heard and a General Good Time Had—The Banquet a Feature.

Printers all the way from Cape May to Sussex were in town yesterday at the semi-annual meeting of the New Jersey League of Union Printers. The session was held in Company K. Hall and according to reports presented the printing industry in New Jersey is in a flourishing condition. There were no rumors of strikes or holdouts for higher wages, on the contrary all the delegates reported satisfactory conditions all along the line.

Assemblyman Cornelius J. Ford, of Hoboken, president of the association was unable to attend, and L. W. Niles, vice president, of this city, presided over the meeting. Of the twenty-one unions in the state seventeen were represented. The largest delegation was from Passaic, the typos from that district chartering a special trolley car to make the trip.

Robert Emmett Scott, of the Daily Press composing room, called the meeting to order, and placed the session in charge of the state officers. Mr. Scott in his remarks complimented the state union on its growth and also informed the delegates that the Plainfield union is in fine condition.

There were many addresses. Elmer Throssell, of the Newark Evening News, made a rattling good speech, and so did John C. O'Connor, the "Boy Orator" of the Newark Junior Typo Union. Other speakers were Cyrus Barnhart, president of the Trenton Union; William H. Garrabrant, president of the Newark Allied Printing trades, John E. McLaughlin, of Brooklyn, John C. Brown, of Paterson, Joseph Vreeland, of Paterson, Walter H. McKee, of New York, Joseph P. ..... of Hoboken and John Tolan, of New York.

One of the enjoyable features of the meeting was the selections by the Kingsley quartet of Passaic which consisted of John Rigg, David Rigg, James McMullen and Harry Richard. Joseph Vreeland, of Paterson, gave an Indian dance and J. R. Doss and Thomas McGunn appeared in a humorous sketch. Jas. Kenmode, of Somerville, also rendered solos, which were enthusiastically applauded.

The convention terminated with a banquet served by Timbo & Co., which was supervised by E. Y. Neighbour in an efficient manner. The local committee was as follows: Winferd Cram, chairman; Robert Scott, John Jeffrey, Harry Thomas and Clarence Francisco.

TRIAL STEEPLECHASE AT LINDEN SATURDAY

The trial steeplechase meet attracted a small field to the Linden race track on Saturday. There were but a limited number of entries. Rufus C. Finch, of this city, entered Manifesto II and Lady Ann, but the latter did not start.

The fifth event, a steeplechase over about two miles and a half for horses that have been regularly hunted, was the race of the day. That is, it resolved into a due between A. J. Davis' paprica, a son of The Pepper, and Essex B, Peter Hauck, Jr's roan son of Bannockburn. The latter was ridden by Hugh Gormley, of this city, who was only twenty pounds overweight. Essex B raced alongside Mr. Davis' gelding for a mile and three-quarters, when Mr. Gormley rolled off, landing over the far fence. He quickly remounted, but in the meantime Paprica sailed away and won as he pleased.

Lewis E. Waring, of this city, was one of the stewards of the meet, and E. S. Hooley was one of the judges. The majority of the horses started were big and lusty, which was to be expected, as the meeting was earlier than has been the case since the National Hunt people took control.

Y. M. C. A. Had a Walk.

Seventeen members of the Young Woman's Christian Association took a walk to the mountains back of Scotch Plains yesterday. On next Saturday a jaunt will be taken to Washington Rock, the start being made at 3 o'clock.

Will Hold Class Initiation.

Court Watchung, No. 3871, Independent Order Foresters, will hold class initiation tomorrow night, followed by an old-fashioned smoker and social time with music and refreshments.

Odd Fellows 91 Years Old.

Odd Fellows from all parts of New Jersey will gather at Trenton Monday evening, April 25, to celebrate the ninety-first anniversary of the establishment of the order in this country.

N. P. H. S. Wins.

N. P. H. S. trounced Rahway High on Saturday by the score of 27 to 3. The locals hit the ball for a total of fifteen hits. C. Smith led with four bingles.

TOMORROW ELECTION DAY

Vote to Be Taken on the Water Proposition Submitted by Council.

HOW TO REGISTER YOUR VOTE.

A List of Polling Places All of Which Will Be Open From 6 O'clock in the Morning to 7 at Night.

From 6 o'clock tomorrow morning until 7 o'clock tomorrow night the taxpayers will have the opportunity of saying whether they do or do not desire to empower the Common Council to institute condemnation proceedings against the Plainfield-Union Water Company. A favorable vote will give the city fathers the right to make a friendly agreement with the private company for the purchase of its plant; to bring proceedings in the courts to have a price fixed on the plant; to investigate the cost of a new plant, and also to make another contract with the private company for a term of years if it is deemed advisable.

In the polling districts where paper ballots are used, if the voter approves of the Common Council's plans, he must draw a straight line through the word "AGAINST," on the other hand if he is not in favor of the proposition he must draw a straight line through the word "FOR." All those who were registered last fall are entitled to vote in addition to all those who had their names placed on the list last Tuesday. In the districts where the voting machine is used, a pointer will be found on the machine between the words "FOR" and "AGAINST." If you wish to vote "FOR" simply turn the pointer to the left. If you wish to vote "AGAINST" merely turn the pointer to the right. That is all. But be sure and don't tamper with any other parts of the machine.

Here is a list of the polling places:

First Ward, 1st District, No. 138 North Avenue;
First Ward, 2nd District, No. 545 East Third Street;
Second Ward, 1st District, No. 319 Watchung Avenue;
Second Ward, 2nd District, No. 420 Richmond Street;
Second Ward, 3rd District, No. 1103 South Avenue;
Third Ward, 1st District, Charles J. Fisk's Barn on the Southwesterly side of Arlington Avenue between West Seventh and West Eighth Streets.
Third Ward, 2nd District, Neumann's Barn, Easterly corner of Spooner Avenue and Essex Street;
Fourth Ward, 1st District, No. 204 West Second Street;
Fourth Ward, 2nd District, No. 672 South Second Street;
Fourth Ward, 3rd District, No. 921 West Third Street.

FETE CHAMPETRE PLAYGROUND BENEFIT.

Under the patronage of a number of prominent women a "Fete Champetre," will be given on the spacious grounds adjoining the Park Club on the afternoons and evenings of May 26, 27 and 28, for the benefit of the playground work in this city. The Misses Margaret and Emma Florance, of Elizabeth, who, it will be remembered, had charge of the kirmess at the Plainfield theatre for the hospital, will take charge of the coming affair, and it will be more elaborate than anything of the kind ever given here before.

The committee of women who will plan and direct the affair will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. W. Butler, of East Ninth street, after which the details will be announced and the names of the other committees made public. Mayor Charles J. Fisk suggested the proposed affair and the women were quick to respond to his plans.

REV. DR. CHAMBERLAIN AT NETHERWOOD REFORMED.

Rev. Dr. W. I. Chamberlain, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in America, occupied the pulpit of the Netherwood Reformed church yesterday morning and evening and interested large congregations at both sessions. Just after the morning service Dr. Chamberlain was notified of the moribund condition of his uncle, Rev. Dr. Henry Nitche Cobb, in East Orange, and hurried to the bedside of his relative. He arrived just prior to the death of Dr. Cobb and returned in time to preach at the evening service.

Rev. Dr. Cobb was a son of the late Sanford and Sophia Cobb and was seventy-six years old and had been in the Reformed Church ministry for over fifty years.

Weekly Chase Postponed.

On account of the "Trial Steeplechase Meet" at Linden on Saturday, the Watchung Hunt Club did not hold its weekly chase after the hounds in the afternoon. Weather permitting it will be held next Saturday. Several local horses will be entered in the steeplechase meet to be held at Cedarhurst, L. I., April 30, under the auspices of the Rockaway Hunting Club.

Shamrocks and T. A. B.'s

The Shamrock and T. A. B. bowling teams are negotiating for a series to be rolled on Campbell's alleys. It is probable that the initial clash will take place on a date to be arranged next week.

Women's Hand-Made Underclothes From Paris ⅓ Off

Both Buildings—Second Floor

It is about time for our buyer to go again to Europe and choose the new underclothes for the coming season. But before she goes, she wants to have disposed of everything we now have. The consequence is that all of our French underclothes, from night gowns, corset covers, petticoats, chemises, drawers and "bridal sets," all the way through, have been reduced one-third.

$1.50 and $1 75 night gowns reduced to $1, up to the most extravagant lingerie that we have—all ⅓ under last week's prices.

A Wonderful Corset Bargain—$10 to $15

La Vida Corsets for $5.00

Both Buildings—Second Floor.

Bought under price from the maker because he can get no more of these beautiful fabrics from France. We have had all that he had of these particular materials made up into the models that sell best in our stores here—the regular $10 to $15 models—and will sell the entire lot at $5 each. They are of beautiful brocades broches and silk batistes, richly trimmed with lace, embroidery and ribbons, fitted with the new style hose supporters. There are six distinct new models, the latest the La Vida Co. have made. Fitters will be in attendance in both stores. Sizes 18 to 30.

$3.00 White Petticoats for $1.79

Both Buildings—Second Floor.

These are made with flounces, some of them with embroidered flounces, some are trimmed with both embroidery and lace and are finished with cluster tucks, ribbonand beading.

$4.00 Petticoats for $2.95

Mohair with taffeta and fancy striped messaline flounces; black, navy blue, brown, gray, tan and gun metal.

$1.00 Petticoats at 89c

Made of black sateen and moire—with the new ruffle; many of these are made of quite novel fabrics.

BIG CROWD AT THE RACES

Frank Hart, of New York, Carries Off Bulk of the Honors.

ACCIDENT THRILLS THE CROWD

Metropolitan Association of Motorcycle Clubs 'Scares" Off Star Riders Who Were Entered for the Event.

Plainfield's first motorcycling meet at the Driving Park on Saturday afternoon attracted about 700 people despite the frigid weather. The honors of the day went to Frank Hart, of New York, and Harry Klebes, of Philadelphia. Hart was winner in three events and Klebes in one. The latter was scratch man in all of the events he appeared and his riding was on the sensational order.

A high wind which swept down the home stretch handicapped the riders and clouds of dust from the wind made it unpleasant for the spectators in the grand stand and field. Scores of the spectators went to the meet in automobiles and scores also came on bicycles.

The meet fell short of being the artistic success from a racing standpoint as intended by the management owing to the non-appearance of a number of star riders who had sent along their entries. The management placed the blame on the newly organized Metropolitan Association of motorcycle clubs.

The new association, which seeks to control motorcycling in the east, on Friday notified the management that it would have to pay over $50 as an entrance fee, or the riders taking part in the meet, would be blacklisted. The Plainfielders interested in the meet, and the management, refused to hand over the $50 graft and as a consequence the association partly carried its point by scaring off several of the star riders who were carded to compete for the prizes. One of these was Arthur G. Chapple who failed to appear. While there was considerable grumbling on the part of some of the spectators owing to the small number of competitors in the different events it is readily seen that the troubles were beyond the powers of the management.

Hart, the star of the meet, finished first in the five and ten-mile handicaps and in the two-mile novelty race. Victory in the novelty contest came easy but the New Yorker was compelled to hustle in the five and ten-mile events. Hart won the ten-mile owing to an accident to Klebes' machine which resulted in the rider being thrown to the ground.

The accident brought the spectators to their feet and hundreds swarmed on the track. Klebes escaped with a few cuts and bruises about the face but his machine was badly damaged. The Quaker City rider looked like a winner in the race until his spill.

The Honeyman brothers, Bert and Edward, appeared in the five-mile Union county handicap championship, the former being the victor.

City Judge William N. Runyon was the starter, Dr. D. Aldrich, the referee, and Joseph Gunn, announcer. The summaries follow:

Two-mile novice race, limit 30.50 cubic inches, won by Alex Reagan, New York city; 4 horse power Reading-Standard; A. D. Honeyman, Plainfield, 4 horse power Reading-Standard, second; E. R. Honeyman, Plainfield, 3 horse power Reading-Standard, third. Time, 3:34 2-5.

Three-mile scratch, limit 30.50 cubic inches, Harry Klebes, Philadelphia, 4 horse power Reading-Standard, first; William James, N. J. M. C., Newark, 3½ horse power Indian, second; Frank Hart, N. Y. M. C., New York, 4 horse power Reading-Standard, third. Time 4:46 1-5.

Five-mile handicap, limit 50 cubic inches, won by Frank Hart, New York, 4 horse power Reading-Standard; George Reichey, N. J. M. C., Newark, second; Harry Klebes, Philadelphia, third. Time 6:38 1-5.

Two-mile novelty race, limit 50 cubic inches, won by Frank Hart, New York, 4 horse power Reading-Standard; George Rieckey, N. J. M. C., Newark, 5 horse power, Indian, second; Edward Swain, New York, 4 horse power Reading-Standard, third. Time 3:20 2-5.

Five-mile handicap, limit, 30:50 cubic inches, won by E. R. Honeyman, Plainfield, 3 horse power Reading-Standard, first; A. D. Honeyman, Plainfield, 4 horse power Reading-Standard, second. Time 9:53.

Ten-mile handicap, limit 50 cubic inches, won by Frank Hart, New York, 4 horse power Reading-Standard; Harry Klebes, Philadelphia, 4 horse power Reading-Standard, second; William Stubner, New York, 6 horse power Reading-Standard, third. Time, 17.09.

City Ownership and Operation of a Water Plant.

To Vote In Favor

Strike Out the Word A-G-A-I-N-S-T.

RESOLUTION:

WHEREAS the Board of Trade of Plainfield and North Plainfield, The Merchants Association and The Plainfield Civic Society, represented by their respective committees in joint session today,

RESOLVED unanimously that they do endorse the city ownership and operation of a water plant and to that end respectfully urge every voter to vote FOR the proposition on April 19th, by striking out the word AGAINST; and it was further resolved

THAT the water question has nothing whatever to do with the taxes, and any bonds issued for a water plant would not be added to the city debt, and that it is the only available local public utility that will carry and redeem itself,

THAT the reports which are being circulated, calculated to intimidate property owners and tenants, are without foundation,

THAT it is the duty of every Plainfield man to support the municipal ownership and operation of water.

Respectfully submitted,

Board of Trade, Plainfield and North Plainfield,

A. S. HERR, Secretary. WILLIAM JEFFERY, President.

J. S. Johnston George M. Christian Herman Schwed

Merchants Association, Plainfield and North Plainfield,

A. E. FORCE, President.

Herbert Schuldenfrel, Vice-President. F. A. Duttenhofer, 2nd Vice-President. H. P. Greenwood, Secretary.

Jacob A. Fass Isaac Schwed

Plainfield Civic Society,

A. S. HERR, Secretary. WILLIAM JEFFERY, President.

James E. Martine J. Fred MacDonald John Manley Jacob Sachar

Next Tuesday, April 19th, every man can vote who voted last November; the registry for the Water Election was merely to add the names of new voters

"The City Water Chant"

Tune, John Brown.

The water question comes before you on the 19th day
Of April, and it's up to you to vote and have your say
To give the City Council power and find the proper way,
Strike out the word "Against."

"Some folks" will kick up their heels and shout with all their might,
When Plainfield people get the guage and water is in sight,
The workingmen of this old town can set the Council right,
Strike out the word "Against."

Some years ago we're told the franchise could be bought for nil,
That time has gone and we must get it now or never will,
And if you lose this chance, my friends, you'll take a bitter pill,
Strike out the word "Against."

Plainfield water being sold to towns along the way,
It don't reduce the price of water which we have to pay
So let us all in one accord with all our ballots say,
Strike out the word "Against."

If Plainfield votes to give the Council power to go ahead,
It may condemn the water plant but then it won't be led,
Let us trust the Council and after all is said,
Strike out the word "Against."

Should the Council see it fit to have a reservoir,
Upon the hills and gravitate the water to your door,
A city water plant, indeed, we ask it more and more,
Strike out the word "Against."

We do believe the Council will complete a proper plant,
So let us all dig in and sing the city water chant,
Our own supply of water will be close "forninst beyant,"
Strike out the word "Against."

And workingmen of Plainfield, you're the same as o'er the hills,
'Tis time to get together and adjust the water ills,
We bank on you to do it, eliminate the frills,
Strike out the word "Against."

Don't forget in voting, you must leave the word FOR stand,
Run a line right through AGAINST with pencil in your hand,
The working people are the salt, the pepper of the land,
Strike out the word "Against."

Chorus:

City water now or never,
Get it with the public lever,
Let us all keep right together
To end monopoly.

WILLIAM JEFFERY.

During the first four days of April there were opened in our Special Department accounts by residents of the following six towns in Somerset and Hunterdon counties: Glen Gardner, Whitehouse, Lebanon, Clinton, Somerville and Annandale. This would certainly indictae that The Plainfield Trust Company occupies the same place in the confidence of neighboring towns as it does in its home city.

MISS KAUFMAN A BRIDE

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W T. Kaufman Wedded to F. W. Cole.

REV. DR. ZELIE OFFICIATED.

Ceremony at Home of Bride's Parents —Miss Ursula Rowland Bridesmaid—Richard Cole Best Man.

Miss Grace Kaufman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Talmadge Kaufman, of West Seventh street, and Francis Watkinson Cole, of Hartford Conn., were married at 4.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of about seventy-five relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Ursula Rowland, of this city, as bridesmaid, and the best man was Richard Cole, a brother of the groom. The bride's gown was of white satin and white marquisette embroidered and she wore a rose point veil; also a diamond pendant the gift of her parents and a diamond bracelet, the gift of the groom and a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaid wore a gown of pink satin and lavender chiffon, with picture hat to match and she carried a shower bouquet of pink sweet peas.

As the bridal party descended the stairway, an orchestra played the Wedding March from "Lohengrin," and during the ceremony, "O, Perfect Love," and the Mendelssohn March afterward.

The house was attractively decorated for the affair, the color scheme being white and green. The decorations comprised Easter lilies, palms, foliage and potted plants. The ceremony was performed in a hall alcove, which was transformed by flowers into a floral labyrinth. A floral altar was used.

A reception was held after the ceremony, during which the couple received the congratulations of the guests, and supper was served. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Cole left on an extended wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside in Hartford, where the groom is engaged in the practice of law. He is a graduate of Yale University and the Harvard Law School.

The bride has been prominent here among the younger society set and is a favorite in a large circle of friends. During the past few weeks several teas were given in her honor by friends.

When Using Glycerine.

Glycerine is one of the most valuable cosmetics we have, as it whitens and softens most skins, and also is a powerful bleacher.

There are some skins with which it does not seem to agree, probably because it is not diluted sufficiently. If used in too concentrated a form it abstracts so much moisture from the skin that it has the effect of burning.

For dry or sensative skins glycerine should be diluted about one-third part to two-thirds of some perfumed water, for the average skin one-half of each will be weak enough.

Elderflower, violet, rose, lavender or orange-flower water all combine well with glycerine, while a nice cleaning combination is made from a third each of rosewater, glycerine and pure alcohol.

More Trouble.

"I may as well tell you," said the suffragette, "that the disturbances we are creating now are nothing compared to those we are prepared to cause."

"That's right," answered the big town boss. "If you raise all this row to vote, what will you do when you get the ballot and find it isn't being counted?" — Washington Evening Star.

French Rolls.

Sift one pound of flour and rub into it two ounces of butter. Beat three eggs very light, add a tablespoonful of strong yeast and an even teaspoonful of salt. Cover the dough and set it near the fire to rise. It should be light in an hour. Put it on a paste board and divide into small rolls of round cakes. Lay them in a baking pan and bake in a quick oven.

Pastors Referred to Election.

In several of the churches yesterday the pastors referred to the special election to be held tomorrow on the water question. At the First Presbyterian church Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring delivered an extended discourse advocating municipal ownership.

Bishop's Visitation.

Right Rev. John Scarborough, Bishop of New Jersey, confirmed 58 young people in three of the Episcopal churches yesterday, thirty-one at Grace, sixteen at the Church of the Heavenly Rest and eleven at Holy Cross.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Reckless Legislation.

Senate 79, the "mystery" bill introduced by Senator Wakelee, of Bergen, and passed by the Legislature, is as much of a mystery as ever, though there have been all sorts of explanations as to the meaning and effect of the measure. The text of the bill, which is described in its little title as an act "amending the act of March 27, 1874, relative to statutes," and which provides that "the repeal of any statute shall not impair the validity of any proceedings, suit or prosecution in any civil cause started before said act was repealed," has been printed in full. Lawyers of standing in their profession have studied its provisions, and here are some of the things they claim the legislation was intended to accomplish; to put into effect once more the promoters' liability law, which was repealed in 1907; to revise lapsed charters with extensive power; to restore perpetual franchises that had been permitted to die; to kill the effect of the McCran anti-water diversion act just passed by the Legislature, and permit the Hudson County Water Company to carry out its contract with Staten Island; to modify the power of the State Railroad Commission, which on July 4 will become the public Utilities Commission; to help out the Pennsylvania Railroad in track elevation litigation in Rahway; to reenact the charter of the Easton and Amboy Railroad Company limiting the bringing of suits against that corporation. It may be that all the lawyers are right about it and that the bill, if made a law, would accomplish all of these things, and a lot more besides. Anyway, the mystery is so deep that there is no question of the dangerousness of the measure. Though the suspicious nature of the bill was known, Senator Wakelee pushed it through the Senate without deigning to explain to his fellow-members the objects he sought to obtain. In the very last hours of the session the Assembly passed the bill with the simple explanation by Assemblyman Scharff that it was "another of Wakelee's good bills and ought to be passed." In spite of all, Governor Fort has signed the bill and made it a law. In doing so he has given out a statement that adds little light to the darkness surrounding the mystery, from a layman's point of view. Time alone will tell what private interests were so much concerned in the placing of this law on the statute books and what they will accomplish as a result of its enactment. —Newark News.

Plain to Be Seen.

A Denver man who visited the museum at City Park recently tells of a farmer he saw there. The ruralist stepped in front of a portrait which showed a man sitting in a high-backed chair. There was a small white card on the picture, reading:

"A portrait of E. H. Smith, by himself."

The farmer read the card and then chuckled to himself.

"Regular fools these city fellers are," he said "Anybody that looks at that picture 'ud know Smith's by himself. They ain't no one in the paintin' with him."—Denver Post

An Appreciated Distraction.

"So you think that the automobile has made life much pleasanter?"

"It has for me," answered the comfortable citizen. "I drive a fast horse and my son rides a bicycle. The automobile has taken the minds of the police off both of us."

The Proctor Show.

Ashbourne's pony and dog circus is a big feature of the Proctor show. Rex, the educated pony, is a intelligent animal. He makes a hit with the littles ones. The acrobatic dogs are well trained. Dan Barrett & Co., in an Irish comedy sketch, are a scream, as are Laurie & Aleen, comedians. The Wilbur Sisters are clever singers and dancers. The "Roosevelt in Africa" motion pictures will be shown Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

company from one place to another along its mains when such removal is directed by the Common Council of the City, but the actual cost of making such removal shall be paid by the City.

(3) All hydrants shall be under the control of the officers of the Fire Department of the City on occasion of fire or alarm of fire, and the Fire Department shall be at liberty to use the same for reasonable practice, and to inspect or test their efficiency.

(4) In case any hydrant shall remain out of order or fail to supply water of ten (10) days after written notice from the Mayor, Common Council or Fire Department of the city has been delivered to the Company, then the City shall be entitled to deduct from the rental of said hydrant the sum of one dollar ($1.00) per day from the date of delivery of said notice as long as the hydrant is not in good working order; provided, however, that the amount so deducted shall not exceed the annual rental thereof. No other remedies for any breach of this contract are to be barred by this paragraph.

(5) The annual rental of hydrants erected and to be erected and maintained in pursuance of this agreement shall be fifteen dollars ($15) each, payable in quarterly instalments on the first days of January, April, July and October in each year.

(6) The Company shall provide, set up and maintain at its pumping station an apparatus by means of which the height of the water in the stand-pipe at said station shall be continuously and automatically indicated, and such apparatus shall at all times be subject to examination by any person appointed for the purpose by the Mayor or Common Council of the said City or any committee of said Council, and in case the use of the said stand-pipe shall be discontinued, an apparatus shall be installed and maintained at said station by means of which the pressure in the mains of the company at and near the pumping station shall be continuously and automatically indicated, which pressure shall not be less than that afforded by means of the said stand-pipe as now and heretofore used.

(7) The City may maintain at the pumping station of the Company all such electrical apparatus as its Common Council may deem necessary for the purpose of signalling alarms of fire, and shall have a right to connect the same with its fire alarm system. The Company shall provide and maintain at the pumping station proper telephone connections with the public telephone exchange in operation in the City.

(8) The following are the terms and particulars of the tests to which the water works shall be subjected when it is desired by the Common Council of said City or its appropriate committee or by the Chief of the Fire Department to show their efficiency in case of fire; namley:

Five (5) streams shall be thrown, each one eighty (80) feet high to extreme drops, at one and the same time each through fifty (50) feet of two and one-half (2½) inch hose, with one and one-eighth (1⅛) inch straight conical nozzles from any five hydrant on the mains of the company within that part of the City bounded by Richmond Street, Green Brook, Grant Avenue and Ninth Street, which shall be designated by said Council or committee or Chief; but if more than four (4) such tests shall be made in any one year, the City shall pay for the water used in making such additional tests, unless the water is not thrown as required thereby.

(9) The Company agrees that (subject to unavoidable accidents) the works shall always be in readiness to comply with the fire test hereinbefore described and to keep said hydrants supplied with water and in effective working order at all times, and will always and immediately upon alarm of fire being given, take whatever steps are necessary to insure immediate use of the full power or pressure above stipulated; provided the company shall not be responsible for property destroyed or injured by fire due to temporary absence of water or pressure in the mains caused by sudden or unforeseen breaks or accidents, but shall proceed immediately to repair all breaks and other injuries to its works by which such pressure may have been interrupted, and to restore the same as soon as practicable.

(10) The Company shall give the Chief of the Fire Department previous notice of voluntary stoppage or shutting off of water, and where practicable, two hours before such stoppage of water.

(11) The Company shall at all times use every practicable means to keep and maintain said water works and all the machinery, appurtenances and apparatus connected therewith in a first class, serviceable and god condition and ready for instant use.

(12) The Company shall supply water to the City for flushing its sewer system at the rate of ten (10) cents per thousand gallons, or at the rate of four dollars ($4) per year per hydrant subject to use by the city for extinguishing fires therein; or for the sum of fifty dollars ($50) per mile of such sewers per year, as said City may prefer.

(13) Water shall be supplied to the residents of the said City and to other consumers at annual rates not exceeding those in the following schedule:

Dwelling Houses.

For one faucet $6.00. For each additional faucet, $2.00. For one water closet (pan or tank) $5.00. For each additional closet (pan or tank) $2.00. For one bath tub, $4.00. For each additional bath tub, $2.00. For one set wash tubs, not exceeding three, $3.00. For each additional set of tubs, $2.00.

Where two faucets are used, one for hot and one for cold water, both emptying into one vessel, but one charge will be made for both.

Where dwellings are occupied by more than one family, each family will be charged at above rates.

In cases where closets, tubs, faucets or other fixtures supplied with water, are used by more than one family, extra charges will be made.

Stables.

Hotel, livery, omnibus and boarding stables, having not more than five stalls, $10.00. For each additional stall, $2.00. For each carriage or other vehicle, $1.00. Private stable, not exceeding two horses, $6.00. For each additional horse, $2.00. For one carriage, $2.00. For each additional carriage, 1$.00. For one cow, $2.00. For each additional cow, $1.00.

Additional fixtures will be supplied at similar rates, and water for other purposes at special rates.

Hydrants, according to needs, $6.00 to $15.00. Street washers on sidewalk, $5.00. Street washer for corner property, $7.00. A hose bibb, when hose is used, shall be chargeable as a street washer. Drug stores, $10.00. Barber shops, stores and offices, $6.00 and upwards. Butcher shops, $8.00 and upwards. Building purposes, brick, per thousand 10 cents. Lime or cement, extra per barrel, 10 cents.

The Company may in any case require the use of a meter, and charge a rate of not more than twenty-five cents per thousand gallons for water supplied through meters. Any consumer not in arrears for water rent may upon demand have a meter installed by and at the expense of the Company. All meters shall remain the property of the company and may be removed by the company whenever the use of water shall be discontinued on the premises.

The charge for tapping shal be ten dollars, which shall include a service pipe from the main to the curb lines.

In case meters are used the annual minimum rates shall be as follows: For 5-6 inch meter, $10.00. For ¾-inch meter, $12.00, and for 1-inch meter, $25.00.

No meter of smaller size than the service pipe on which it is placed shall in any case be used. All meters shall be of a standard pattern, and shall be maintained by the company in a serviceable condition. Any consumer may have his meter tested at any time, provided that if it shall be found to be within five per cent of strict accuracy the expense of making such test shall be borne by the consumer. If inaccurate to the extent of five per cent or more the expense of making the test shall be paid by the company.

Bills for water supplied to private consumers shall be issued semi-annually AND A DISCOUNT OF FIVE PER CENT shall be made on all such bills provided the same are paid on or before the fifteenth of the month in which they are rendered, and provided further that the bills shall have been mailed to consumers on or before the fifth of the month in which they are rendered.

The provisions of this contract respecting rates to be charged residents and other consumers in said city are hereby agreed to be of the essence of this contract, and any willful and continued violation of any of such provisions shall entitle said city at its option, in addition to any other remedies open to it, to rescind this contract, or any renewal or extension thereof.

That the company shall continue to supply the City and its inhabitants with water from its wells at Netherwood in said City, and shall not draw water from said source to be used anyhere except in said city and in the Borough of North Plainfield and the municipalities along the Central Railroad of New Jersey between Plainfield and Elizabeth which are now supplied with water from said source; but the mains in the said city, borough and municipalities may be extended from time to time as their growth may require. PROVIDED THAT WHENEVER IT SHALL APPEAR THAT THE SUPPLY OF WATER AT NETHERWOOD IS NOT SUFFICIENT FOR THE NEEDS OF SAID CITY, BOROUGH AND MUNICIPALITIES, THE COMPANY SHALL FORTHWITH DESIST PARTIALLY OR IF NECESSARY ENTIRELY FROM SUPPLYING WATER FROM THE SAID SOURCE TO PERSONS OR MUNICIPALITIES OUTSIDE OF SAID CITY AND BOROUGH, IT BEING THE PURPOSE AND INTENTION OF THIS PARAGRAPH TO SECURE TO SAID CITY AND BOROUGH AN ADEQUATE SUPPLY OF WATER AT ALL TIMES FROM SAID SOURCE OF WATER SUPPLY AT NETHERWOOD. The Company, however, shall be at liberty to suply pure and wholesome water in said city from some other source whenever the supply at Netherwood shall become insufficient for the needs of said city and borough and their inhabitants.

The contract made by the inhabitants of the City of Plainfield and The Plainfield Water Supply Company, dated May second, 1892, and subsequently extended shall be and the same is hereby rescinded.

Whenever the laying of any pipes or mains by the company or the work conected therewith shall interfere with any road bed, sewer, drain, pipes, conduit, street crossing, sidewalk, curb, gutter or other things, either public or private, or cause defects therein, the same shall be replaced and restored by the company without unnecessary delay and left, as far as possible, in as good condition as before such interference; and where streets have been macadamized or spread with crushed stone extends shall be made with crushed stone.

All work shall be conducted in the most expeditious manner, and so as to obstruct the streets and highways for as short a time and as little as possible, and wherever settlements or defects shall appear along the lines of any main or appurtenance the same shall be forthwith repaired.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, said party of the first part has caused these presents to be impressed with its corporate seal and signed by its Mayor, and attested by its City Clerk, and said party of the second part has caused these presents to be impressed with its corporate seal and signed by its President and attested by its Secretary, by authority of its Board of directors, the day and year first above written, in duplicate.

Silly Stuff.

There was a man in our town
Who grew so very fat,
His fiancee one winter's day
Broke their engagement, flat.

And then from grief and pain he lost
A lot of flesh; and when
He'd lost a score of pounds or more,
She took him back again!

WAY OF OBTAINING OXYGEN.

The old method of obtaining oxygen by decomposing an oxid or a salt by heat are now disuused on a commercial scale, although still common in the labratory, says The Literary Digest. For some time oxygen was obtained from the atmosphere by utilizing the peculiarity of baryta, by which it absorbs oxygen while cooling and gives it out when heated, but this, too, is no longer used commercially. The oxygen of commerce, we learn from The Revue Scientifique, is now chiefly obtained form decomposing water electrically or by means of liquid air, from which the nitrogen being more volatile than the oxygen, evaporates, leaving the latter. Says this paper:

"It is well known that with liquid air two processes are used, that of von Linde, whose machine give 600 to 1,500 cubic feet of oxygen per hour, and that of Claude, whose apparatus yields 1,500 to 3,000 cubic feet hourly. . . . The Linde company has at present in Germany four factories for the separation of the oxygen from liquefid air. . . . At Paris the factory of Bardot is using powerful Linde machines, and at this moment two factories for producing 15,000 cubic feet are in process of construction at Hamburg and Gleiswitz. The quantity of oxygen turned out by the Linde processes alone is estimated at about 30,000,000 cubic feet yearly.

"It is well known that oxygen is transported compressed in steel cylinders, previously tested by water under high pressure. Explosions of these cylinders are rare. H. Le Chatlier reports several accidents; in 1905 an explosion at the Institute of Physics at Winterthur, in which one man was killed; in 1907, in a factory in the north of France, a workman's head was blown off in a similar explosion. In 1902 three workmen were killed at Bitterfeld during the process of compression.

"The causes of these explosions have not always been clear. At Winterthur, the oxygen had been prepared by electrolysis and contained 20 per cent. hydrogen—enough to make an explosive mixture. In other cases it is supposed that the ignition of lubricating oils or rusting of the cylinders were responsible. The probability of such accidents, Mr. Le Chatlier says, is very slight, there is no question of giving up the industry for fear of a danger infinitely smaller than that of being crushed in the street. Notwithstanding this, however, it is, of course, necessary to regulate the new oxygen industry strictly in order that it may be extended without danger.

A NEW HAIR BAND.

As usual, the dictators are not content with the continuance of a style that is generally adopted for evening wear. They, with ruthless disregard for our purses, have decreed that a departure from the straight bandeau of metallic lace, tapestry or jeweled ribbon is now in order.

The flowered wreath is the latest form for the evening coiffure. Soft silver or gold tissue is the material to be used to make the petals of the glistening forms.

Metallic ribbon of the thickness of gauze can be used, and prevents the nerve-racking fraying of the edges of the materials with which you are working. Fold the strips and, beginning at the edge, sew in quick running stitches a series of pointed lines, first up to the folded edge, then down to the double edge. Draw the thread as you proceed and the petals will be there in any required number. Twist these in a flower-like form and fasten together. The tiny yellow stamens can be purchased at the milliner's, and when added to the centre of each flower give an attractive touch.

These golden daisies should then be sewed upon a narrow ribbon or strip of gauze, the band just long enough to encircle the head. A hook and eye will insure a comfortable method of fastening.

THE MOTHER AND THE BOY.

A boy's heart is full and overflowing. He need some one who will listen to his confidences. If he is repelled and finds himself alone, he becomes fretful, indolent or worse. His affairs are not "nonsense." A good mother never says, "Run away; I am busy." She listens, encourages.

Important discoveries may be made in these outpourings. She gives sympathy, enters into his feelings, sees things from his point of view. If he tells her of something which proves that he is at fault, she does not reprimand at the time, because this will check further confidences. She gives her attention quietly, tells him she is glad he has confided in her, and that she will talk of it again with him.

If a mother has insight she can solve many problems. She is interested in her boy's sports, collections, his school and companions. The choice of his companions should not be left to chance. It is well if they are from families known to his parents.

At the Dock.

"What are your impressions of America?" asked the enterprising interviewer at the gangplank.

"It is superb—splendid—so kind, so hospitable," said the enthusiastic foreigner.

"Good! I'm glad I asked you now instead of waiting till you were through the hands of the customs inspectors." — Washington Evening Star.

Which Shall It Be, The Silent Piano. or

THE HARDMAN AUTOTONE

THE PIANO ALL CAN PLAY

Sold in Newark Only at Hahne & Co.'s

In many a home there stands a piano that is seldom if ever touched. The head of the house never did play. The wife has become so engrossed with parental and other duties that, tho she once played, she seldoms opens the piano to play. The children have not yet learned to play—and there stands the piano—dead so far as use is concerned—an expensive piece of furniture.

Now look at the home where there is an autotone—there is music there—music all the time, any time anyone wants it—music of high or low degree—the best and most difficult music in the world, or the simplest rag-time—as the mood inclines you.

If yours is one of those homes in which repose a "dead" piano you ought to be interested in knowing something of

THE BEST OF SELF PLAYERS

The Hardman Autotone is the combined piano and player-attachment built as a unit—the player as much an integral part of the piano, when in process of construction, as the sounding board or the "action" itself.

It is the tone of the Hardman Piano that attracts and enthuses musical artists—that the Hardman is musically perfect is a fact which at once demonstrates itself to the trained musical ear.

The Accentor—An Exclusive Autotone Feature—It is the Accentor which gives to the Autotone its "human touch" and enables the player to accent the melody, to subdue the accompaniment, to emphasize any note or series of notes at will and, in a word, to give to any composition that individual expression which constitutes the chief charm of good hand-playing.

The Autotone as an Exponent of Musical Feeling—In a letter to the makers, the noted tenor, M. Bonci, lays especial stress in the first place upon the musical feeling with which the Autotone enables him to render any of the most beautiful musical compositions.

He then proceeds to consider some of the exclusive features of the Tutotone by which, and by which only, this musical sensitiveness is rendered possible.

Other Exclusive Features of the Autotone—In additon to the devices particularized by M. Bonci may be mentioned the Transposer Adjuster, which enables one to instantly transpose any composition from its original key, and the Patent Combination Tracker-Board, by which the Autotone is enabled to play not only the 65-note music rolls, but the 88-Note Rolls, which include the entire keyboard.

A Player-Piano that plays only 65-note music can never give you the full musical value of really great compositions. On the other hand, one that plays only the 88-note rolls closes to you forever the thousands and thousands of rolls which have been cut for 65-note players, many of which will never be recut for 88-note players.

The Autotone is the instrument upon which both 65 and 88-note rolls may be played with equal success. While other makers are still experimenting, the Autotone has successfully accomplished this for three solid years.

The Hardman Piano as the Basis of the Autotone

Finally, in his reference to the remarkable quality of the Hardman tone, M. Bonci recognizes the important fact that the basic instrument of the autotone is the Hardman piano, famous for 67 years for its superb tonal qualities, and that player and piano are the production of one maker, and are not two instruments; but one grand, harmonious whole!

Hardman Autotones, at $850 and $950.
Harrington Autotones, at $550 to $725.
Hensel Autotone, at $500.

Hardman Grand Pianos, at $700 to $1,000.
Hardman Upright Pianos, at $425, $460 and $500.
Harrington Upright Pianos, at $250 to $350.
Hensel Upright Pianos, at $275.

You can purchase a Hardman Autotone (or any piano in our warerooms) on easy monthly payments, and a generous allowance is made for either piano or organ that may be taken in exchange. Free informal demonstration at our warerooms daily.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Co-respondent.

The order of Vice-Chancellor Howell in a recent Plainfield divorce case has caused much and highly favorable comment. In recommending the granting of a divorce to a husband who had clearly proved his legal right thereto, the vice-chancellor ordered that all the costs of the court and the counsel fees be paid by the co-respondent named in the case. This is an unusual order, and perhaps it is not one that could be judiciously made in every divorce case; but it is in full accord with intelligent moral sentiment that the party guilty of breaking up a home and bringing deep and lasting disgrace upon the members thereof, should be punished with severity. To many minds the failure to administer such punishment is the weakness of the divorce laws. Under the unwritten law such parties have been killed and the slayer has been acquitted; but under the statutory law it is quite possible for such a one to escape without penalty of any kind. Even the bringing of civil suits for damages is not always successful. If any one is deserving of severe punishment at the hands of the law it is the villian who wilfully invades and destroys a home.—Newark News.

THE DAILY PRESS.

Plainfield, N. J., April 18, 1910.

to the winds. The very leaders of the cult are above their own ideals in its logical outcome. They cannot believe that when mankind returns to nature prostitution will vanish, because they themselves love their wives and their offspring. These things are preached by certain classes of the socialists to their children, but they do not actually believe it. It is insidious and fallacious and none of them say ought but that they believe in human welfare and they are actually breaking or attempting to break that down.

Much more than this could be said of the matter of the social relation, but the speaker left it with his hearers to determine what was left unsaid. It was an eloquent appeal to common sense. Next Sunday night Rev. Berriard J. Newman, of Temple Pilgrim chapel, of Brooklyn, will speak on "the Dousing Problem."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Her Son," a new play by Charles Bradley, now being seen in Brooklyn, staged by E. F. Bostwick, will be presented at the Plainfield theatre on Friday evening, April 22. It is a play of today, and deals with present day problems of New York life. It is marked by moments of keenest suspense and scenes of thrilling intensity. The title gives some inkling of the nature of the story, for every parent understands the lengths to which a mother will go, the sacrifices she will make for the sake of her son. Interwoven with this idea is a story of business and social life in New York that makes a play of remarkable power. There is of course a love interest and this provides many charming moments during the three acts.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

The Water Question

The best arguments in favor of voting "FOR" and thus empowering the Council to act are found in the reports of the two Investigating Committees.

READ WHAT THEY SAY:

The FIRST COMMITTEE SAYS:

"It will be to the benefit of the City of Plainfield as a measure of economy as well as for other reasons, to own its water supply system. The time may not be very far distant when the Water Company must exercise a choicé between supplying Plainfield or supplying other Communities * * * * and it is by no means sure * * * * Plainfield will have the preference, and if it does IT MAY BE MADE TO PAY DEARLY FOR THE PRIVILEGE."

"The tendency in late years has been for Communities to acquire the Water Works."

The SECOND COMMITTEE SAYS:

"The permanent preservation by the City of its Water Supply is without doubt the question of first importance."

"The matter of cost is not to be compared with the seriousness which would result from the loss of the control of our Water Supply."

The first Committee were Joseph O. Osgood, W. L. Saunders and B. S. Church.

The second Committee were Charles J. Fisk, chairman, J. B. Dumont, George P. Mellick, Jos. O. Osgood, Justus H. Cooley, N. B. Smalley, William A. Coddington, Ralph I. Tolles, William Newcorn, George H. Frost, William S. Tyler, Henry L. Hall, Wm. R. Craig, H. G. Runkle, W. L. Saunders.

THE LAW as stated by the Corporation Counsel to the Common Council is summarized as follows:

"Before the City can exercise any powers under the acts of the Legislature, the voters must give their consent.

"The Common Council is not obliged to proceed to condemn the present plant. It may build a new plant.

"The City is not under any obligations to accept the plant if condemnation proceedings should be instituted.

"The City would not be bound to take all of the property, etc., of the Company, but may take such as may be necessary to accomplish the public purpose in view."

THIS IS THE LAW AND THE FACTS

Strike out the word "AGAINST" and vote "FOR" and thus permit the Council to act.

The Man in Lower Ten

In the stuffy farm parlor two people were sitting. One, a pleasant-faced woman with a checked apron, rose, somewhat embarrassed, to meet us. She did not know me, and I was thankful. But our attention was riveted on a little man who was sitting before a table, writing busily. It was Hotchkiss!

He got up when he saw us, and had the grace to look uncomfortable.

"Such an interesting case," he said nervously, "I took the liberty—"

"Look here," said McKnight suddenly, "did you make any inquiries at the station?"

"A few," he confessed. "I went to the theater last night—I felt the need of a little relaxation—and the sight of a picture there, a cinematograph affair, started a new line of thought. Probably the same clew brought you gentlemen. I learned a good bit from the station agent."

"The son-of-a-gun," said McKnight. "And you paid him, I suppose?"

"I gave him five dollars," was the apologetic answer.

Mrs. Carter, hearing sounds of strife in the yard, went out, and Hotchkiss folded up his papers.

"I think the identity of the man is established," he said. "What number of hat do you wear, Mr. Blakeley?"

"Seven and a quarter," I replied.

"Well, it's only piling up evidence," he said cheerfully. "On the night of the murder you wore gray silk underclothing, with the second button of the shirt missing. Your hat had 'L. B.' in gilt letters inside, and there was a very minute hole in the toe of one black sock."

"Hush," McKnight protested. "If word gets to Mrs. Klopton that Mr. Blakeley was wrecked, or robbed, or whatever it was, with a button missing and a hole in one sock, she'll retire to the Old Ladies' home. I've heard her threaten it."

Mr. Hotchkiss was without a sense of humor. He regarded McKnight gravely and went on:

"I've been up in the room where the man lay while he was unable to get away, and there is nothing there. But I found what may be a possible clew in the dust heap.

"Mrs. Carter tells me that in unpacking his grip the other day she shook out of the coat of the pajamas some pieces of a telegram. As I figure it, the pajamas were his own. He probably had them on when he effected the exchange."

I nodded assent. All I had retained of my own clothing was the suit of pajamas I was wearing and my bath robe.

"Therefore the telegram was his, not yours. I have pieces here, but some are missing. I am not discouraged, however."

He spread out some bits of yellow paper, and we bent over them curiously. It was something like this:

Man with p—— Get—— Br——

We spelled it out slowly.

"Now," Hotchkiss announced, "I make it something like this: The 'p—' is one of two things, pistol—you remember the little pearl-handled affair belonging to the murdered man—or is it pocketbook. I am inclined to the latter view, as the pocketbook had been disturbed and the pistol had not."

I took the piece of paper from the table and scrawled four words on it.

"Now," I said, rearranging them, "it happens, Mr. Hotchkiss, that I found one of these pieces of the telegram on the train. I thought it had been dropped by some one else, you see, but that's immaterial. Arranged this way it almost makes sense. Fill out that 'p—' with the rest of the word, as I imagine it, and it makes 'papers,' and add this scrap and you have:

"'Man with papers (in) lower ten, car seven. Get (them).'"

McKnight slapped Hotchkiss on the back.

"You're a trump," he said. "Br—is Bronson, of course. It's almost too easy. You see, Mr. Blakeley here engaged lower ten, but found it occupied by the man who was later murdered there. The man who did the thing was a friend of Bronson's, evidently, and in trying to get the papers we have the motive for the crime."

"There are still some things to be explained." Mr. Hotchkiss wiped his glasses and put them on. "For one thing, Mr. Blakeley, I am puzzled by that bit of chain."

I did not glance at McKnight. I felt that the hands with which I was gathering up the bits of torn paper were shaking. It seemed to me that this astute little man was going to drag in the girl in spite of me.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A New World.

Hotchkiss jotted down the bits of telegram and rose.

"Well," he said, "we've done something. We've found where the murderer left the train, we know what day he went to Baltimore, and, most important of all, we have a motive for the crime."

"It seems the irony of fate," said McKnight, getting up, "that a man should kill another man for certain papers he is supposed to be carrying, find he hasn't got them after all, decide to throw suspicion on another man by changing berths and getting out, bag and baggage, and then, by the merest fluke of chance, take with him, in the valise he changed for his own, the very notes he was after. It was a bit of luck for him."

"You Don't Think He Locked the Door Himself?"

"Then why," put in Hotchkiss doubtfully, "why did he collapse when he heard of the wreck? And what about the telephone message the station agent sent? You remember they tried to countermand it, and with some excitement."

"We will ask him those questions when we get him," McKnight said. We were on the unrailed front porch by that time, and Hotchkiss had put away his notebook. The mother of the twins followed us to the steps.

"Dear me," she explained volubly, "and to think I was forgetting to tell you! I put the young man to bed with a spice poultice on his ankle; my mother always was a firm believer in spice poultices. It's wonderful what they will do in croup! And then I took the children and went down to see the wreck. It was Sunday, and the mister had gone to church; hasn't missed a day since he took the pledge nine years ago. And on the way I met two people, a man and a woman. They looked half dead, so I sent them right here for breakfast and some soap and water. I always say soap is better than liquor after a shock."

Hotchkiss was listening absently; McKnight was whistling under his breath, staring down across the field to where a break in the woods showed a half dozen telegraph poles, the line of the railroad.

"It must have been 12 o'clock when we got back; I wanted the children to see everything, because it isn't likely they'll ever see another wreck like that. Rows of—"

"About 12 o'clock," I broke in, "and what then?"

"The young man upstairs was awake," she went on, "hammering at his door like all possessed. And it was locked on the outside!" She paused to enjoy her sensation.

"I would like to see that lock," Hotchkiss said promptly, but for some reason the woman demurred. "I will bring the key down," she said and disappeared. When she returned she held out an ordinary door key of the cheapest variety.

"We had to break the lock," she volunteered, "and the key didn't turn up for two days. Then one of the twins found the turkey gobbler trying to swallow it. It has been washed since," she hastened to assure Hotchkiss, who showed an inclination to drop it.

"You don't think he locked the door himself and threw the key out of the window?" the little man asked.

"The windows are covered with mosquito netting, nailed on. The mister blamed it on the children, and it might have been Obadiah. He's the quiet kind, and you never know what he's about."

"He's about to strangle, isn't he," McKnight remarked lazily, "or is that Obadiah?"

Mrs. Carter picked the boy up and inverted him, talking amiably all the time. "He's always doing it," she said, giving him a shake. "Whenever we miss anything we look to see if Obadiah's black in the face." She gave another shake, and the quarter I had given him shot out as if blown from a gun. Then we prepared to go back to the station.

From where I stood I could look into the cheery farm kitchen, where Alison West and I had eaten our al fresco breakfast. I looked at the table with mixed emotions, and then, gradually, the meaning of something on it penetrated my mind. Still in its papers, evidently just opened, was a hat box, and protruding over the edge of the box was a streamer of vivid green ribbon.

On the plea that I wished to ask Mrs. Carter a few more questions, I let the others go on. I watched them down the flagstone walk; saw McKnight stop and examine the gate posts and saw, too, the quick glance he threw back at the house. Then I turned to Mrs. Carter.

"I would like to speak to the young lady upstairs," I said.

She threw up her hands with a quick gesture of surrender. "I've done all I could," she exclaimed. "She won't like it very well, but—she's in the room over the parlor."

I went eagerly up the ladder-like stairs, to the rag-carpeted hall. Two doors were open, showing interiors of four poster beds and high bureaus. The door of the room over the parlor was almost closed. I hesitated in the hallway; after all, what right had I to intrude on her? But she settled my difficulty by throwing open the door and facing me.

"I—I beg your pardon, Miss West," I stammered. "It has just occurred to me that I am unpardonably rude. I saw the hat downstairs and I—I guessed—"

"The hat!" she said. "I might have known. Does Richey know I am here?"

"I don't think so." I turned to go down the stairs again. Then I halted. "The fact is," I said, in an attempt at justification. "I'm in rather a mess these days, and I'm apt to do irresponsible things. It is not impossible that I shall be arrested, in a day or so, for the murder of Simon Harrington."

She drew her breath in sharply. "Murder!" she echoed. "Then they have found you after all!"

"I don't regard it as anything more than—er—inconvenient," I lied. "They can't convict me, you know. Almost all the witnesses are dead."

She was not deceived for a moment. She came over to me and stood, both hands on the rail of stair. "I know just how grave it is," she said quietly. "My grandfather will not leave one stone unturned, and he can be terrible—terrible. But"—she looked directly into my eyes as I stood below her on the stairs—"the time may come—soon—when I can help you. I'm afraid I shall not want to; I'm a dreadful coward, Mr. Blakeley. But—I will." She tried to smile.

"I wish you would let me help you," I said unsteadily. "Let us make it a bargain; each help the other!"

The girl shook her head with a sad little smile. "I am only as unhappy as I deserve to be," she said. And when I protested and took a step toward her she retreated, with her hands out before her.

"Why don't you ask me all the questions you are thinking?" she demanded, with a catch in her voice. "Oh, I know them. Or are you afraid to ask?"

I looked at her, at the lines around her eyes, at the drawn look about her mouth. Then I held out my hand. "Afraid!" I said, as she gave me hers. "There is nothing in God's green earth I am afraid of, save of trouble for you. To ask questions would be to imply a lack of faith. I ask you nothing. Some day, perhaps, you will come to me yourself and let me help you."

The next moment I was out in the golden sunshine; the birds were singing carols of joy; I walked dizzily throught rainbow-colored clouds, past the twins, cherubs now, swinging on the gate. It was a new world into which I stepped from the Carter farmhouse that morning, for—I had kissed her!

CHAPTER XIX.

At the Table Next.

McKnight and Hotchkiss were sauntering slowly down the road as I caught up with them. As usual, the little man was busy with some abstruse mental problem.

"The idea is this," he was saying, his brows knitted in thought, "if a left-handed man, standing in the position of the man in the picture, should jump from a car, would he be likely to sprain his right ankle? When a right-handed man prepares for a leap of that kind, my theory is that he would hold on with his right hand, and alight at the proper time, on his right foot. Of course—"

"I imagine, although I don't know," interrupted McKnight, "that a man either ambidextrous or one-armed, jumping from the Washington Flier, would be more likely to land on his head."

"Anyhow," I interposed, "what difference does it make whether Sullivan used one hand or the other? One pair of handcuffs will put both hands out of commission."

As usual when one of his pet theories was attacked, Hotchkiss looked aggrieved.

"My dear sir," he expostulated, "don't you understand what bearing this has on the case? How was the murdered man lying when he was found?"

"On his back," I said promptly, "head toward the engine."

"Very well," he retorted, "and what then? Your heart lies under your fifth intercostal space, and to reach it a right-handed blow would have struck either down or directly in.

"But, gentlemen, the point of entrance for the stiletto was below the heart, striking up! As Harrington lay with his head toward the engine, a person in the aisle must have used the left hand."

McKnight's eyes sought mine and he winked at me solemnly as I unostentatiously transferred the hat I was carrying to my right hand. Long training has largely counterbalanced heredity in my case, but I still pitch ball, play tennis and carve with my left hand. But Hotchkiss was too busy with his theories to notice me.

We were only just in time for our train back to Baltimore, but McKnight took advantage of a second's delay to shake the station agent warmly by the hand.

"I want to express my admiration for you," he said beamingly. "Ability of your order is thrown away here. You should have been a city policeman, my friend."

The agent looked a trifle uncertain.

"The young lady was the one who told me to keep still," he said.

McKnight glanced at me, gave the agent's hand a final shake, and climbed on board. But I knew perfectly that he had guessed the reason for my delay.

Special Election Notice

To the Legal Voters of the City of Plainfield.

Public notice is hereby given that in accordance with the resolutions presented to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, and adopted on the 7th day of March, A. D. 1910, and approved by the Mayor of said city on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1910, and of which the following is a true copy:

Resolution providing for the submission to the legal voters of the City of Plainfield, of the question of the adoption of the provisions of an act entitled, "An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Resolved, That the question of the adoption of the provisions of an Act entitled, "An Act to enable cites to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, be submitted to the legal voters of the City of Plainfield at an election to be held in said city on Tuesday, the 19th day of April, A. D. Nineteen hundred and ten; that the City Clerk of said city be and he hereby is directed to cause public notice of the time, place and purpose of holding the election to be given by advertisements signed by himself and set up at least eight days prior to and within thirty days next preceding the day of election, in at least five of the most public places within said city, and published in two newspapers printed therein, to wit, The Daily Press and The Plainfield Courier-News for at least six days previous to the day of such election; that the said City Clerk shall provide for each voter voting at such election ballots, upon which ballots shall be printed the following words: "For Against the adoption for this city of the provisions of an act entitled 'An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water, approved April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-six," and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto." If the word "For" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall be counted as a vote against the adoption for said city of the provisions of said act; if the word "Against" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall be counted as a vote in favor of the adoption for said city of the provisions of said act; and in case neither the word "For" nor the word "Against" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall not be counted as a vote either for or against such proposition, nor shall the person depositing in the ballot-box a ballot on which neither the said word "For" nor the said word "Against" is marked off be counted as a voter or as voting in respect of or upon the question or proposition submitted. If voting machines shall be used at such election, all voting by means thereof shall be conducted in the manner specified by the statute in such case made and provided:

It is Further Resolved, That the polls for such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual general election in said city, and shall open at six o'clock in the morning, and close at seven o'clock in the evening, and shall be kept open during the whole day of election between the hours aforesaid, provided the Board of Election may adjourn such election from one o'clock until two o'clock in the afternoon, or for such shorter time between those hours as they shall see fit; and such election shall be conducted by the proper election officers of said city for the time then being, and in the manner as may then be prescribed by the Ordinance of said city, if any, regulating elections therein, and such officers shall return to the Common Council of said city, a true and correct statement in writing, under their hands, of the result of said election, the same to be entered at large upon the Minutes of said Common Council.

an election will be held in said city of Plainfield, New Jersey, on Tuesday, the 19th day of April, A. D. 1910, and the polls for such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual general election in said city, that is to say:

PROPOSALS FOR COAL

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Board of Education of the City of Plainfield, N. J., at a meeting held April 4, 1910, notice is hereby given that the Board of Education will meet on Monday, April 18th, 1910, at eight o'clock, at the Board room in the High School building, corner Ninth street and Arlington avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at which time and place said Board of Education will receive sealed proposals for furnishing eight hundred tons (more or less) of the best anthracite coal for steaming and hot-air purposes; in the different sizes. The quantity required of each size can be obtained at the office of the Secretary of the Board. High School building, Ninth street and Arlington avenue.

Parties bidding will be required to specify in their bids the name of the coal and shippers of same.

All coal to be thoroughly screened over a seive fine enough to take out all dust and small particles of coal, and to be prepared acceptable to the Committee on Fuel, or their agent or representative.

All coal to be placed in the coal bins within the public school buildings without any extra expense to the Board for handling or trimming the coal in the bins, and to be delivered at such time as the Board may direct.

Bids to specify whether long or short tons.

Payment for all coal contracted for to be made after July 1, 1910.

All proposals to be endorsed "Proposals for Coal," and addressed to the Secretary of the Board.

Upon receipt of the bids or proposals the Board will immediately proceed to unseal the same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding, or their agents, provided such parties or their agents choose to be then and there present; and also to make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Board.

No bids will be received until the day and hour above named, and none thereafter.

The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

JIM POLE'S TAVERN

"I had been up against the hotel problem to such an extent in that part of North Carolina," said John Gilbert, the traveling groceryman, "that I had become shy of tackling it, and one day meeting on the road a darky who was on his way somewhere driving a bull hitched to a wabbly wagon on which were loaded a dozen or so sticks of lightwood, I thought it might be well to see if he couldn't give me some information as to the probable fate that might be in store for me at the inn lying in wait at the mountain town I was approaching. I stopped him and asked him if there was a good hotel there.

"The darky leaned forward with his elbows on his knees, looked at me, cocked one eye up toward the sky as if he was pondering on the subject I had brought forward, and then coming back to earth gave his bull a whack with the gad he carried and exclaimed:

"'W'oa, yo' p'intedly ol' hoodoo.'

"The bull hadn't stirred since the darky stopped him in the road and he didn't stir under the whack of the gad; so I assumed that this little show of disciplining was but a diverting habit of the bull's owner. I was on the point of pressing my question when the darky rested his elbows on his knees again, and turning to me said: 'I reckon yo' nevuh did know ol' Jedge Gillam, w'at kim frum ovuh yon in de Chowan kentry?'

"I replied that I had never known Judge Gillam.

"'But co'se yo' done heah 'bout him?' said the darky.

"'No,' said I. 'I never heard about him either.'

"That seemed to surprise the darky not a little.

"'Shoo!' he exclaimed after staring at me a while. 'Whah yo' done come f'um, sah?'

"I told him I was from the north, and even that didn't seem to excuse me for not having ever heard of old Judge Gillam. The darky sat in a pondering attitude half a minute or so, and then looking at me again as if I was something of a curiosity, he gathered up his lines preparatory to starting on his way and said:

"'Jim Pole, he done kip hotel up yon, suh.'

"'But hold on!' I said. 'I don't care who keeps the hotel. Is it a good one? And what has old Judge Gillam got to do with it?'

"The darky leaned forward with his elbows on his knees again and he grinned as he said:

"'I nevuh did stop at Jim Pole's, suh, in my life, but ol' Jedge Gillam one time he kim ovuh hyuh to lay down de law du'in' 'de cote time, an' he stow hese'f away at Jim Pole's.

"'One o' de baddes' nigguhs dat bean 'roun' hyuh den he bean fotch up befo' de ol' jedge. Dat nigguh he bean a bad un, too, an' dey fine him guilty de wuss kyne.

"'Ol' Jedge Gillam he bean stoppin' den, two, free days at Jim Pole's. He lookin' desput sot in he mind w'en dey fotch in dat po' nigguh w'at dey foun' guilty.

"'"Stan' up dah, yo' nigguh!" he say.

"'He stan' up, mos' skeeuh to deff.

"'"Nigguh," de ol' jedge say, "dis hyuh a monst'us t'ing yo' done bean foun' guilty fo'! My haht it bean des' lack stone ag'in you' an' I mighty regretful to find dat de law an' de cons'itution, dey standin' in de way o' my 'flictin' on yo' te'ble punishment I des' pinin' to give yo'.

"'"Ef de law an' de cons'itution dey didn't stan' in de way o' my doin' it, I shore done sentence yo' to stop one whole week at Jim Pole's tavuhn, des sho's yo' bo'n! Ez case it done stan', dahfo'," de ol' jedge lay it down to dat po' shiv'n nigguh. "I cain't do it, an' de wus' I kin do to yo' is to sen' yo' to de pen'tenshry fo' ten yeahs!" de ol' jedge say, an' dey done took dat bad nigguh away.'

"The darky on his load of lightwood rolled his eyes up at me, while his grin spread wide across his face, and continuing, he said:

"'Co'se, I nevuh did stop at Jim Pole's in my life, suh, an' so I cain't say wevvuh de hotel bean a good un or no, but I heah folks declar, many times, dat ol' Jedge Gillam he suttenly do let dat nigguh off mighty lucky!'

"With that the darky started up his bull and went on his way. As I gazed after him he glanced back and I heard him say:

"'Nevuh did heah of ol' Jedge Gillam! Sho! Dat shore bean mohs'ous queeuh!'

"There was another tavern in the place, and I didn't stop at Jim Pole's, but, relying on the darky's tale of old Judge Gillam's opinion, if this one wasn't a branch of Jim Pole's, then the proprietor must have learned hotel keeping from Jim Pole, and I'd have been willing to bet on it."

Sarcasm.

The balloon pilot landed in the little backwoods village and told the loiterers the thrilling story of his escape.

"And at one time," he related, with dramatic force, "I was in a storm and sweeping over a vast desert. There was nothing to do but throw out sand and prepare for the worst. Gentlemen, at one time I felt as if I had lost my head and gone plumb crazy."

The oldest inhabitant lighted his pipe and drawled, with a sarcastic smile:

"You must have been plumb crazy, bub, to throw sand on a desert. Didn't you think there was enough sand there already?"

BEDROOM DECORATIONS.

With the love of all things colonial in our housefurnishings we seem to have evolved a simplicity in window draping that is both charming and economical, in that these curtains can be made at home and without the aid of a seamstress engaged by the day.

Plain net, in either square or round mesh, may be made with a hem about an inch in width along the two sides and across the bottom, or fine linen tape, half an inch in width, can be sewed on the under side just within a narrower hem and made into a simple design at each corner.

These curtains should hang next the pane, while, for the inside hangings, across the top of window casings and down each side of a group of windows, figured cretonne or English chintz is generally used.

The longer strips reach just about two inches below the sill, and are only a width of the material, while the valance along the top, which is pleated on rings in scant box-pleats, is about fourteen inches long when finished, and extends across the longer pieces at the sides of the window.

In tone, these draperies carry out the color scheme of the room, but need not be of the same design. It is best when intending to use hangings of this sort to have the papering or wall decoration as simple as possible, unless a paper can be found to exactly match the material.

A room recently seen and much admired had the head andfoot of the plain iron bed covered with the chintz, while the spread and roll for the pillows were of the same material.

The dressing table, bureau, chiffonier and table tops were covered with a transparent scrim lined with the cretonne and edged with a heavy cluny lace of a deep cream color.

The walls were of green satin-striped paper and the rug of soft natural coloring.

Do you realize that Spring is here, and within a few days you will be forced to lay aside your heavy garments for those more suitable?
Why not prepare yourself for the change of climate, and place your order now for a strictly high-class tailored light weight suit or overcoat. It takes time to make good clothes and make them right; therefore, an early call will prove profitable to you.
If you are particular about your clothes, here is the place for you to get finest materials, keen craftsmanship, and perfect fit at a price in keeping with your purse.
Fancy striped blues, plain blues, conservative grays, and the much talked about cassimeres and tweeds are well represented amongst the complete line now awaiting your inspection.

PAVEMENT PHILOSOPHY.

There is always a man higher up.

It's a long face that has no smile.

The play's the thing if it's a game.

Then, too, there is the pessi-optimist.

Clothes do a lot for some people, and ruin some others.

Love makes the world go round with its arm in a sling.

Yea, even a boiler maker may hammer at the door of fame.

It's a poor rule that won't work any way you want it to.

There wouldn't be so much alimony if there were more alibi.

When some women don't figure well it is on account of the figures.

Some auto traps are not noticeable, while some others are pretty noisy.

Choose the lesser of two evils, but always dodge both of 'em if you can.

The reason some people don't make a good showing is because they show too much.

The wit of the average after-dinner speaker is usually crowded out with other good things.

Many a happy youngster will be able to tell you who has the north pole on Christmas morning.

No wonder the enemies of Dr. Cook are on nettles while he is in hiding; they fear he might bob up with another pole.

The road to success may be paved with good intentions, but most travelers find the intentions are more or less bumpy as they go along.

RAM'S HORN BROWN.

Nothing has more courage than love.

We rob God and ourselves when we fail to do our best.

The man who stands on the truth has God's hand under him.

The Lord made some laws to show how much He hates idleness.

There was only one window in the ark, but it opened toward heaven.

You can't measure a man's religion by the length of his face in church.

Hiding a light under a bushel is not much better than putting it clear out.

We do not have to be great in anything except faith to obtain great favor with God.

How easy it would be to forgive those who have wronged us if we could only know their wrongs.

A rich man may give the Lord too little, but a poor man cannot give Him too much.—Indianapolis News.

No man ever takes the Lord for his shepherd as long as he can find any kind of green pasture for himself.

SAYS THE OWL.

Most of the fish in small puddles imagine they are big.

The people who are paid to be good never earn their salary.

The man who is afraid of work deserves to be scared to death.

Women remind us of angels because they are always flying around.

Why is it that little girls always smile and little boys always grin?

Marriage is the process by which a woman tries to get a job as boss.

Anyway the woman who marries a man with a dimple in his chin had fair warning.

Don't waste valuable time explaining why you failed. Get busy and make good.

Wise is the husband who, instead of trying to be all things to all men, tries to be everything to one woman.

One kind of pessimist is a man who wonders if another man's wife knows her husband half as well as he does.

JUST THOUGHTS.

It's a good plan to hope for the best but it's a better plan to hustle for it.

The truth in a nutshell is alright in theory, but it would take a squirrel to find it.

A life insurance company will some times reject a man as heartlessly as his best girl.

The man with a clear conscious and a good appetite is richer than many a millionaire.

The self-made man generally acts as though he thought he ought to take out a patent on himself.

A woman can generally twist a man around her little finger, unless she happens to be married to him.

APRIL NINETEENTH.

1861—Baltimore rioters attacked the Sixth Massachusetts volunteers marching to the defense of Washington.

WATER POLLS LIGHT VOTE

Commutors in Several Dis- Failed to Show Up This Morning.

RUSH EXPECTED LATE TODAY.

Predictions Are 4 to 1 in Favor of Proposition—North Plainfield Saloons Busy.

The special election which is on today, up to 2 o'clock this afternoon did not seem to have excited the interest which had been expected by the partisans of municipal ownership of the water supply in this city. At the various polling places this morning only desultory voting was going on. It was noticed, too, that the using of voting machines, which by the way is the last time they will be used, was objected to so strenuously that in some cases voters refrained from using their prerogative because of the machine.

Lots of strange things happen on an election day when politics is not the issue. For instance, this morning early one individual was observed trudging along carrying a bundle of dodgers to be distributed among the voters in which there was an argument against giving six councilmen the power the advocates of city ownership want to give them. The man was told he was likely to get into trouble for distributing the literature and he immediately threw the circulars away. But the joke, for such it was, was explained and he gathered up the printed matter and went on his way to fulfill his contract of distribution.

It is believed that the larger part of the vote will be registered after the trains have brough their loads of commuters back to town tonight. Up to 11 o'clock this morning but thirty-five votes had been polled in the first district of the first ward and at 2 o'clock only fifty-four votes had been registered. In the first district of the fourth ward the vote was equally light not more than fifty votes having been cast up to 2 o'clock.

However much some of the people were interested in water a good many were inclined to take cognizance of the dearth of other stuff and the pilgrimages to North Plainfield were numerous and often. There the dispensaries were patronized to the extent of calling forth the smiles of the proprietors. Every bar had its contingent of well wishers for the success of the water vote. "but as for me, well, I like mine neat and sometimes I take it with just a little water for a chaser," said one.

As a matter of fact it seemed that interest was not so much centered in the outcome of the vote as was the discussion of the merits of the councilmen into whose hands it is proposed to put the power to involve the taxpayers in what has been called "a stupendous outlay." Questioned as to the probable outcome of the vote those most interested are noncommittal. The advocates of municipal ownership are sanguine as to the outcome and expect that the vote "for" will outnumber the "against" four or five to one. Tonight will tell the tale and the question will then be left to the discretion of the city fathers for the election will surely be carried.

FAITHFUL SERVANTS GET AWARDS FROM MURRAYS.

According to the agreement made some time ago, the Murray Employment Registry has announced the winners of prizes offered for maids who have served the longest terms with employers, the servants having been obtained from their agency. These are the winners:

Mattie Matthews, Fourth street and Central avenue; Bridget McGlone, 80 Washington avenue and Lizzie Stevens, of Rockview avenue, North Plainfield. These women in the order named have the best records for servants furnished by this agency. Tokens of appreciation have been forwarded to them. At the end of the present year another award will be made on the same basis.

Attending Cousin's Funeral.

Mrs. Nelson Y. Hull, Miss Minnie Sharp, and Miss A. W. Booraem, of this city, went to Franklin Park today to attend the funeral services of their cousin, William Wilson, who died very suddenly on Saturday night after retiring. He had been a resident of Franklin Park for many years and was held in high esteem.

William Carey to Speak.

William Carey, of Newark, the converted railroad engineer, will conduct the meeting at the Plainfield Rescue Mission, Sunday night and there will be special music by a vocal trio.

DIRECTORS OF BOROUGH NATIONAL BANK FEAST

Thirteen of the directors of the Borough National Bank sat around the festive board in the private dining room of the Waldorf last evening at 7 o'clock to celebrate, at the invitation of M. C. Van Arsdale, Hyman Adelberg and Judge William Newcorn, the first anniversary of the bank's existence. The only absentees at the feast were President W. A. Clark and George F. Brown. President Clark was unable to be present owing to sudden illness and Mr. Brown has been ill for some time.

Matters of interest were discussed over the coffee and cigars and the banqueters adjourned to their homes at about midnight. The menu discussed was one of Mr. Windham's best efforts and was hugely enjoyed. Those present were M. C. Van Arsdale, Mayor Newton B. Smalley, Justus H. Cooley, Jacob Voehl, Nelson A. Miller, Hyman Adelberg, Frank A. Weeks, Dr. A. H. Dundon, Charles A. Lee, Frederick Coriell, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, John H. Kitchen and Judge William Newcorn.

EXCITING HEARING IN BOROUGH COURT

The case of Mrs. Kate Wicht against John Bremmer, Harrison avenue residents, before Recorder Dolliver in the borough police court this morning produced some genuine excitement.

Mrs. Wicht and Bremmer engaged in an altercation Sunday morning. The former charged Bremmer with calling her names in a complaint issued by Chief Weiss. It was the same old story of neighborly wrangles. Mrs. Wicht furnished the first ripple of excitement by fainting after giving her testimony. As the hearing progressed Mrs. Wicht gave away several times under the strain and had to be removed to the sidewalk to secure air.

George Hanson made matters hum in the court room for a while. He was one of Mrs. Wicht's witnesses. He imbibed freely, it is alleged, before reaching court with the result that he was unable to find his way to the witness chair. Hanson refused to leave the stand when ordered to by Chief Weiss. This resulted in his arrest. It took the united efforts of the Chief and Marshal Keller to get him into a cell.

The hearing came to an abrupt ending when Mrs. Bremmer collapsed while giving testimony. Mrs. Bremmer was attacked with heart trouble while being cross-examined by William G. DeMeza, attorney for Mrs. Wicht. Recorder Dolliver announced that he would render a decision in the case next Tuesday. Bremmer was represented by Francis J. Blatz.

ITEMS OF INTEREST CONCERNING COMPANY K

After the regular drill of Co. K last night a business session was held when H. J. Manning was elected sergeant to fill a vacancy and Private James Conkling was elected corporal. The latter has been a member of the company since organization, but owing to other duties was unable to discharge his duties. He is now starting all over again and is a junior corporal.

Sergeant J. S. Parker, U. S. A., conducted a school for the non-commissioned officers, instructing them in patrol work and first aid to the injured. He has been deputized to take up the military tactics in detail preparing the men for their summer work, and especially the members of Co. K for their trip this summer to Gettysburg. As soon as the weather permits the men will take up outdoor drilling.

On Sunday, May 1, the non-commissioned officers will meet at the armory and then go out on a tramp for patrol work and for the purpose of learning the points of the compass and the important detail work which will fit them for the summer campaign.

Modern Drama.

Following the presentation of Current Events by a number of club members, a paper full of interest on "The Tendencies and Values of the Modern Drama" was presented by Mrs. Hugh Francis Fox at the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club held yesterday at the Hartridge School Auditorium. An interesting discussion followed.

Miss Anna Goodwin, of Plainfield avenue, is visiting friends at Flemington for a couple of weeks.

SCHOOL SUPPLIES BIDS

Education Board Receives Offers for Coal, Desks, Chairs, Fixtures and Piano.

AND FOR STATIONERY TOO.

Only One Contract, That for Coal, Is Awarded—Action on All Other Supply Estimates is Deferred.

Bids for coal and school supplies were opened at a special meeting of the Board of Education in the board rooms last night and only one contract was awarded, that for coal. Wadley and Goodenough were the successful bidders for this commodity agreeing to furnish 823 tons for $3,888.25, the other bidders were C. T. Rogers & Co., $4,593.35; Consumers Coal Co., $3,938.95.

There were four bidders for furnishing steel lockers as follows: Narragansett Machine Co., $1.83 each; Pendar Co., $1.90 each; Merritt & Co., $2.00 each, and the Art Metal Construction Co., 360 lockers for $1,200, or about $3.55 each.

Five bidders presented figures for the desks and chairs, two kinds being considered. In these bids the figuring was very close between Kennedy Bros. & Wolkins and the American Seating Co. These were the figures submitted: Kennedy Bros. & Wolkins, $3.25 and $4.50; American Seating Co., $3.35 and $4.35; New Jersey School Furniture Co., $3.90 and $4.30; Cleveland Seating Co., $3.90 and $4.45; Heywood Co., $4.25 and $4.80.

For lighting fixtures the lowest bidders were the Mitchell, Vance Co. closely pressed by the A. B. Laing Co., of this city. These are the figures: Browe Co., Newark, $391.22; E. A. Craig, Plainfield, $379.00; Mitchell, Vance Co., New York, $363.77; Cassidy Sons Co., $383.00, and A. B. Laing Co., $378.00. The following bids were submitted for school supplies, stationery, etc.: Peckham, Little Co., $1,551.05; Mathias Plum, $1,432.94; Office School Supply Co., $1,570.00; Kenney Bros. & Wolkins, $1,686.05; J. L. Hammet Co., $1,663.56. Miscellaneous furniture, teachers' desks, etc., only one bid, that of John Wanamaker, was received, $423.92.

For the piano three bids were received: Sohmer Co., $395.75; Aeolian Co., $318.75, and W. F. Rieger, $310.00. Altogether these bids were the lowest ever submitted for school supplies. All but the coal are for the new Jefferson school.

CRYSTAL ICE COMPANY HOLDS ANNUAL ELECTION.

The Crystal Ice Company, manufacturers of hygeia ice, at its annual meeting elected these directors for the coming year: C. Frank French, William R. Codington, Christian Gloekner, Fred Endress, L. A. Hummer, B. Frank Coriell, John D. Loizeaux and John E. Dunn. Afterward these officers were chosen: President, B. Frank Coriell; vice-president, Fred Endress; treasurer, C. Frank French; secretary, John E. Dunn.

The company has now been in business about one year and has been successful. It has one of the best ice plants in the country, thoroughly equipped with every modern appliance for the manufacture of pure and wholesome ice. Water is pumped from a well 250 feet deep, distilled and boiled before the freezing process, making the ice just as pure as possible and safe for all household purposes. The company use what is known as the can system, the capacity being about fifty tons a day.

The company pumps about 12,000 gallons of water a day, but if anything should happen to the pump arrangements have been made whereby the city water can be used at short notice. The ice is turned out in 300 pounud cakes and is as clear as crystal, it being possible to read a newspaper through the ice. In making ice water or iced tea this kind of ice is ideal for the purpose there being absolutely no danger of contagion.

Assessment Commissioners Meet.

Joseph Harrigan, Harry B. MacDonald and Andrew J. Gavett, the commissioners appointed by the Court of Common Pleas to estimate and assess benefits conferred by the macadamizing of certain streets, met at the Common Council rooms at 7:30 o'clock, last night, to receive complaints or hear any interested property-owner. No one appeared and the meeting adjourned to Tuesday night, April 26, at 7:30 o'clock at the same place.

Captain Daly Ill.

Captain James Daly, of fire headquarters, is off duty owing to an attack of illness. Captain Daly was obliged to give up his post on Sunday morning.

MRS. SHEPPARD DEAD AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

Mrs. Mary C. Sheppard, wife of Joseph F. Sheppard, aged about 60 years, died at 1 o'clock this morning at her home, 210 West Fifth street, from acute Bright's disease with which she was taken last week.

Mrs. Sheppard was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Bowman, who lived with her, and she was a native of Pennsylvania. She had been a resident of Plainfield about thirty years. She was a member of the First M. E. church for many years and when health permitted a regular attendant at the services.

Besides her parents she is survived by a husband, a daughter, Mrs. Maurice E. McGrath, of the borough, a son, Frank Sheppard, and two brothers, John and Edward Bowman. The funeral will be held from the late home Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, will officiate.

HOLY CROSS WOMEN TO SERVE A DINNER

The women of Holy Cross church will serve a table d' hote dinner in the large assembly room of the parish house on Thursday night. According to the rector these annual affairs conducted by the women have a well earned reputation; the bill of fare is sure to be bounteous, delectable and satisfying. All the first class appointments of an up-to-date dining place will be observed. Accommodations for 125 people at a time will be made. A coat room will be arranged where wraps may be checked. The main dining room with an auxiliary room of smaller proportions will be bright with special electrical lighting and the softer subdued lights of multitudinous candelabra wax tapers. The abundance of spring flowers assures beautiful effects in decoration. The committee in charge will have some surprises which will be eye openers to local florists.

It is understood that parties of four, six, or eight people and possibly ten may have tables reserved at a slight extra cost. The high cost of living has had nothing to do with this dinner. The excellence of it at a moderate cost will certainly be a welcome surrpise and comfort to many people. It will be a convenience to those whose servants are off duty on Thursday.

The dinner will be served from 6 to 8:30 o'clock to suit the convenience of commuters and householders in general. Mrs. J. O. Stevens is at the head of the culinary arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Gertrude Conklin, Mrs. Frank Allen and other well known women of the church. Mrs. Fred'k Creary and Mrs. Hiram A. Woodruff have been busy with the soliciting work, ably seconded by Mrs. Coddington and Mrs. Jacob Long. Mrs. Herbert Langford has charge of the waiters, Mrs. Ida Moore has assisted Mrs. Woodruff in the menu and ticket work, Mrs. Warner, the Misses Davis, Mrs. F. O Ball, Mrs. Alston Abbott and Mrs. Frances DuBois will take charge of the decorations.

The dinner is not only a popular church and neighborhood affair, but is open to the general public as well. Tickets are on sale at Armstrongs' Randolph and Nagles' drug stores The date is Thursday, April 21.

TEMPLARS WILL ATTEND ASCENSION DAY SERVICE.

Ascension Day falls on Thursday, May 5, and according to the annual custom the members of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., have arranged to attend divine services on the evening of that day. The Commandery has accepted the invitation extended by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, to attend the services to be held at that church. Dr. Anderson will preach a sermon to the Knights.

There will be special music by the church choir under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff, organist, including a processional, a recessional and several anthems. The service is an impressive one and usually largely attended not alone by members of the Masonic fraternity.

Guest at Holland Dutch Dinner.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, attended the session of the Raritan Classis at Raritan, yesterday, and last night was a guest at the "Holland Dinner" given at the Second Reformed church, Somerville, when only Holland Dutch language was used. A nominal fine was imposed on any one using anything but Holland Dutch language.

MAN'S LIFE CRUSHED OUT

Ernest Langfield Receives Fatal Injuries at Hall Printing Press Shop.

DIED IN MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL

Lancaster, Pa., Man Caught Between Huge Crane and Iron Post—Was Conscious When Taken to Hospital.

Ernest Langfield, aged twenty-four years, of Lancaster, Pa., received fatal injuries while at work at the Hall Printing Press Company plant, Dunellen, yesterday afternoon, and died at Muhlenberg Hospital early this morning.

Langfield was employed by the General Fire Extinguisher Company, of Philadelphia, whose men were at work installing a system of sprinklers throughout the Hall plant. The gang had been in the main shop all the morning and after dinner conducted its work in the foundry.

An electric crane is operated through the main shop and half of the foundry and Langfield it appears was standing on a portion of this crane track when a moulder instructed the operator to move the crane backward, having at the time no knowledge of Langfield's presence on the track. The crane was rushed back and Langfield's life was almost crushed out as he was caught between the machinery and an iron post. The victim's cries brought the shop men quickly to his assistance. He had not lost consciousness.

The ambulance was summoned as quickly as possible and the injured man removed to the hosptial. The physicians found at once that Langfield did not have a chance to recover, but everything possible was done to make him comfortable.

Langfield was unmarried. He has a mother, sisters and brothers at Lancaster and they were notified yesterday of the accident. Today the victim's relatives made arrangements to have the body removed to Lancaster, where the funeral and burial will take place.

LAWRENCE WHITALL WEDS MISS ALICE HOFFMAN TONIGHT.

Lawrence Whitall, son of Mrs. Charles Whitall, of 1127 Thornton avenue, and Miss Alice Hoffman, daughter of Stewart Hoffman, of Somerville, will be married at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Frank Thomas Seibert, of North avenue, Elizabeth. Rev. Clarence M. Dunham, an Episcopal clergyman of New York city, will perform the ceremony. Mrs. Seibert will attend her sister as matron-of-honor.

A reception will follow the ceremony and after a wedding trip the couple will reside in this city. Mr. Whitall is engaged in business on Park avenue as a commission merchant.

POLICE BOARD RECORDS MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEAR.

The minutes of two important meetings of the Councilmanic Police Board have disappeared from the Mayor's office and despite the persistent efforts of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, in whose desk they were placed for safe keeping, no trace of them can be found. The minutes the Mayor says were placed in the regular book following the board meeting last Wednesday night and put in the usual drawer in his desk.

It is the Mayor's opinion that someone has stolen the papers which contained several important resolutions and some changes proposed in the administration of the department.

Jumel Descendant Suicide.

Word reached East Orange yesterday of the suicide on Saturday night at the Morris Plains Hospital for the Insane of Miss Ida Bowen, great-granddaughter of Mme. Jumel and a lineal descendant of George Washington. Miss Bowen, who was thirty-seven years old, had been committed as an indigent patient from East Orange on April 9. Brooding over an unhappy love affair is said to have driven her insane.

Kunzman Bought Property.

A. Kunzman purchased the West property at 15 Elm place which was offered for sale at auction on last Thursday. The price paid for the property was $3,975. The sale was conducted by William H. Shotwell and John H. Van Winkle, executors of the N. W. West estate.

Funeral of Horace M. Sherwin.

The funeral services of Horace M. Sherwin, who died yesterday morning, will be held tomorrow afternoon from the late home, 705 Richmond street, at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, will officiate.

ORDINANCE IS DRAFTED FOR SEMI-MONTHLY PAY

Mayor Charles J. Fisk has received from Corporation Counsel Craig A Marsh a drafted ordinance, which if passed by the Common Council, will permit the paying of the city employes semi-monthly instead of monthly as at present. The ordinance is drafted in accordance with a new State law which authorizes cities of Plainfield's class to pay its employes twice a month.

Several weeks ago, Mayor Fisk called the attention of the Council to the matter and urged that favorable action be taken. He explained that a month is a long time for some of the men to wait for their money, especially where they try to pay their bills weekly, and in his opinion the change would work no hardship ony any official and at the same time would be appreciated by the employes.

The matter was referred to the finance committee. Mr. Fisk requested the corporation counsel to draft a suitable ordinance, which he has done.

IF IT KILLS A CANARY WILL IT KILL A CRANE?

If "rough on rats" will kill a canary will it have a similar effect on a Crane? That is the question which is agitating the members of a certain household in this city just now and perhaps the people interested in the matter are glad that the experiment was not made with one of them.

It appears that a certain woman wanted a canary in the house and her husband bought a fine songster for her. After a day or two it was noticed that the bird had stopped singing and was getting worse every hour from some unknown malady. The services of bird fancier were obtained who immediately discovered that the poor little thing had been poisoned and pointed to the bottom of the cage as the source of the trouble. There scattered around lay the rough on rats which the bird had undoubtedly breathed.

Both the woman and her husband were puzzled to know how any poison could have gotten into the cage and a thorough search of the home revealed a forgotten package of the poison. The next question and a very pertinent one was how did it get into the cage. A domestic in the house was the only one having access to the closet where the package was stored was closely questioned and after a few minutes of the third degree confessed to having placed the stuff in the cage to see what effect it would have on the bird. She was discharged forthwith and the couple are wondering whether they escaped a trial on themselves. The bird's life was saved and the poison has been thrown out, and more care will be exercised in selecting the successor of the discharged servant.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE FREEHOLDER JOHN ROBISON

The funeral service of the late Freeholder John Robison which was conducted at his late home at Scotch Plains yesterday afternoon, was largely attended. The service was conducted by the Rev. Franklin Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church.

There was a large representation present from the Union County Courthouse which included Sheriff Kirkland, all of the freeholders and other county officials. There were also delegations from Fanwood Council, Royal Arcanum, and the Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company, of which organization the deceased was a member. There were scores of beautiful floral tributes.

Interment was made at Scotch Plains the bearers being L. W. Miller, William Lake, Charles A. Smith, T. J. Nicholl and John Bornmann.

Of the floral set pieces were offerings from the Scotch Plains Library Association, Fireside Council Royal Arcanum, Exempt Firemen's Association, Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company and the Board of Freeholders. One of the floral tributes was from the New York Public School, in which the deceased's daughter, Miss Louise Robison, is a teacher.

Sentenced Suspended.

H. Barfuss appeared in the borough court this morning on the charge of obstructing Somerset street, in front of his garage, with automobiles. Sentence was suspended on Barfuss' agreement to abide by the borough ordinance in the future.

PRESBYTERY IN SESSION

Rev. L. R. Howard is Selected as Delegate to the General Assembly.

REV. NORTHRUP MODERATOR.

Chairman of Standing Committees Presented Reports at Afternoon Session—Dinner Served by Ladies' Aid Society.

Ministers and laymen of the Presbytery of Elizabeth opened their eighty-ninth stated meeting at Hope chapel this morning. A second session is being held this afternoon and another will take place tonight.

Rev. L. R. Howard.

About sixty pastors are in attendance. Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, was highly honored at the morning session by being elected delegate to the General Assembly at Atlantic City in May.

Mr. Howard was placed in nomination by the Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, and his selection was practically unanimous. Ten years ago the honor was conferred on the Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, who was then Hope's pastor. At the close of the morning session there was a deadlock on for the other misterial delegate, one of the trio of candidates being the Rev. F. D. Tildon, pastor of Bethel chapel. In making the nominations Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, stated that Mr. Tildon was well fitted for the honor, and that he thought the Presbytery of Elizabeth could do nothing better than to confer the honor on the local colored congregation. Two elders were also selected as commissioners to the Assembly, A. F. Bouton, of the First Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, and W. H. C. Coles, of the Rahway Presbyterian church.

The annual clerk elected was the Rev. William B. Hamilton, pastor of Hope chapel, Elizabeth. W. A. Russon, of the First church in Elizabeth, was formally received into the Presbytery by a unanimous vote. Mr. Russon is a candidate for the ministry.

The session was opened by Moderator John T. Reeve, of Basking Ridge, Rev. James H. Northrop, of Perth Amboy, was elected Moderator for this year.

The reports of the regular standing committees took up a greater part of the afternoon session. Reports were made as follows: Education by Rev. Samuel Parry, of Somerville; American Bible Society, Rev. J. H. Northrup, of Perth Amboy; American Tract Society, Rev. Ernest O. Brown, of Dunellen; Sabbath Observance, Rev. Mr. Ferguson; Temperance, Rev. Mr. Mason; Evangelistic Work, Rev. Mr. Stuchell; Presbyterian Brotherhood, Rev. Mr. Whitaker; Religious Instruction of Children, Rev. Mr. Hoppaugh.

The visiting ministers and lay delegates were entertained at dinner at noon by members of the Ladies' Aid Society.

First Quarterly Conference.

The first quarterly conference of the First M. E. church, was held in Vincent chapel, last night. There was a small attendance on account of the weather. Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent, was incharge. Reports for the past three weeks of the present quarter were presented and there was an informal discussion of the coming year's budget.

Funeral of Mrs. Kline.

The funeral services of Mrs. Mary Kline, widow of Peter Kline, were held yesterday afternoon from the undertaking parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, of Park avenue. Rev. G. W. Bailey, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, officiated. There was a large attendance of friends. The burial was in Hillside Cemetery.

ADMIT PRINCETON COLLEGE TO ESSAY CONTEST

Princeton, April 19.—An opportunity to compete for economic prizes amounting to $2,000 has again been given to the students of Princeton University. The invitation comes from Professor J. Laurence Laughlin, of the University of Chicago, who is chairman of the committee in charge of the contests.

The prizes have been offered from year to year by Hart, Schaffner & Marx for the past six years, and have brought out so many excellent studies of commercial and economic subjects that they are now renewed for the seventh year. The subjects of the essays cover such important topics as:

The value of protectionism to American workingmen.

The valuation of railways.

The effect of modern immigration in the United States.

The value of organized speculation.

The history of the rate of interest in the United States.

The universities whose students have produced winning essays in the past are: Washington and Lee, Harvard, University of Chicago, Oberlin College, University of Wisconsin, University of Pennsylvania, University of Illinois, Wesleyan University, the Branch Normal College of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, Northwestern University, University of Michigan and Bowdoin College. Some of the essays have been of such merit that they have been published in book form.

The prizes are to be divided as follows: Class A, first prize, $1,000; second prize, $500; Class B, first prize, $300; second prize, $200.

Class B includes only those, who at the time the papers are sent in, are undergraduates of any American college; Class A includes any other Americans without restriction. A contestant in Class B is eligible to a prize in Class A.

Members of the committee in charge of the essays are as follows: Professor J. Laurence Laughlin, University of Chicago, Columbia University; Professor Henry C. Adams, University of Michigan; Horace White, Esq., New York city; Professor Edwin F. Gay, Harvard University.

JERSEY TROOPS DETAILED.

Second Brigade to Go to Gettysburg Maneuvres.

Elizabeth, April 19.—General Dennis F. Collins yesterday received orders detailing the Second Brigade, N. G. N. J., to Gettysburg July 11 to participate in the army maneuvers. The orders were received from Adjutant-General Morehead and came by telephone. Companies I and C, of this city, are part of the Second Brigade, which consists of the Second and Third Regiments, Battery BB and the Second Troop.

The maneuvers will be at one of the many camps of instruction being organized by the War Department. Troops from Pennsylvania, Maryland, New York and several other States will be mobilized there. Troops representing all branches of the regular service will also be in camp. The troops will remain at Gettysburg, according to the present plans, for one week.

Got Some Advice.

"Sir, I have grown gray in your service," began the old bookkeeper, preliminary to asking for a raise.

"I was intending to speak to you about that," responded the head of the firm. "Get a bottle of hair dye. Otherwise the junior partner will be wanting to replace you with a younger man."

Refined Procrastination.

"I must say that man annoys me by his extreme delicacy about going right to the vitals of a matter."

"He unquestionably uses a great deal of red tape."

"He doesn't even use red tape. He uses pink ribbon." — Washington Evening Star.

CAUSE OF ECZEMA EXPLAINED.

After years of debate medical authorities are now agreed that Eczema and other skin diseases are not seated in the blood, but are caused by myraids of microscopic animals gnawing the flesh just below the epidermis. The patient is perfectly healthy, it is only the skin that is diseased.

Hence, scientists are now agreed that you must cure the skin through the skin. The medicine must be in liquid form in order to penetrate properly. And we can say with confidence that we have the true remedy for Eczema in our store.

The instant you wash with this soothing liquid you will find the itch relieved. We positively assure you of this. Will you try a bottle (at only 25c), on our recommendation? Ask for D. D. D. Prescription.

OLD KID GLEASON LET OUT BY PHILLIES.

The unconditional release of Bill Gleason, the last of the old school of Phillies, removes a conspicuous figure from major league baseball.

Always aggressive and fighting, Gleason has been the mainstay of several teams in his long career. But finally Bill's speed left him and the veteran for two seasons acted in a sort of advisory capacity to Manager Murray. He was also stationed on the coach line and was the nominal field marshal of the Phillies.

But when Murray, a bench manager, was succeeded by Dooin, a playing manager, Gleason's usefulness to the team unhappily ended.

He is now free to go where he pleases, and if he wishes to remain identified with the sport he so long adorned, there will be no difficulty of his getting placed.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The fear that Jeffries may overtrain is about the only thing that worries the boilermaker's training camp. Once he got started, there has been nothing slothful about the giant's conduct.

The daily routine of long walks, gymnasium work, sparring, rubdowns, relieved now and then with a hunt in the mountains or a game of cards, has apparently put the white man on the road to superb physical condition.

But the real test for Jeffries when he faces Johnson in the ring at Emeryville will be endurance and judgment of distance in sending in his blows.

The Garwood Athletic Club has a strong baseball team. The nine is regarded as one of the fastest teams in Union county, and Manager Richar Watt says the team will make a better record this season than last. Last season the Garwoods defeated, among other teams, the Somerville B. B. C., Irvingtons, Red Banks and New Brunswick.

The opening game of the season for the locals will take place there on April 23, the Bound Brook nine being the opponent of the Garwood team. Manager Watt is desirous of completing his schedule and would like to arrange games with Orange Valley, Rosevilles, New Brunswicks, Freehold, Boonton, Duquesne of Jersey City, and other teams of like calibre. Address Richard Watt, Garwood.

It is whispered in St. Louis that George Stone, of the Browns, is to be traded for Charley Schmidt, of Detroit.

Jim Vaughn, who pitched for Louisville last year, looks to be good for a regular place with the Yankees.

If Pitcher Coveleskie can find that recipe he fed the Giants in 1908, the Cincinnati Reds will be a hard team to beat.

Outside of missing a few trains and getting lost now and then, "Bugs" Raymond, of the Giants, is attending strictly to business.

Frank Smith, of the White Sox, pitched 365 innings last season, which was sixty more innings than any other American League pitcher.

Manager Jack Dunn, of the Orioles, is up against it trying to play Sunday ball in Baltimore. The county commissioners won't stand for a test case.

Cleveland wants Sunday games. The Cincinnati team, in the National League, and the Columbia team, in the American Association, are allowed to play at home on Sunday.

Chief Bender is slated to oppose New York this afternoon. The Indian is probably Mack's "best bet" just now.

Clarke Griffith will soon hear the usual "anvil chorus" in Cincinnati. The Reds have lost two straight now and that usually starts the "knockers."

Tom Tuckey, the left-handed pitcher of the Boston Nationals, was released last night by Manager Fred Lake. He will go to the Waterbury team of the Connecticut League.

Manager Monte Cross, of the Scranton, Pa., club, has started to cut down his playing squad. Abe Rachlin, the Newark boy, is to be kept and used in the box.

Harry Bay, the former Cleveland player, is playing left field for Nashville.

A song-and-dance act by "Cy" Morgan and "Paddy" Livingston is a hit with the Athletics.

On account of a fire at his Newark park, in which he lost a new cap, "Iron Man" Joe McGinnity has organized a fire brigade among his players.

Oxford students have honored L. C. Hull, the American Rhodes scholar, by electing him president of the Oxford University Athletic Club. This is the first time an American ever has been elected to manage an Oxford athletic team. It is a tribute not only to Hull's athletic prowess but also to his popularity as a man.

Y. M. C. A. Athletic Dinner.

The physical department committee of the Young Men's Christian Association has completed arrangements for the dinner to be given the athletic and basketball teams on Thursday night.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The official board of Grace M. E. church will hold an important meeting tomorrow night after the prayer-meeting to elect a member of the board.

There will be special music at the prayer-meeting at the First M. E. church tomorrow night. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, the pastor, will be in charge.

There will be a group rally of Epworth Leagues from the Elizabeth district at Raritan on Thursday night, and the chapters from the local M. E. churches will send large delegations.

The regular communion service will be held at the First M. E. church Sunday morning, May 1, and those who plan uniting with the church are asked to consult the pastor, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson.

While the Bible class suppers have come to a close at the Y. W. C. A., Miss Eliabezth Chadbourne will continue her slass on Monday evenings until May 1. The second term of the educational classes have also been completed, but Miss Lough will continue a five weeks' term in embroidery every Monday evening.

G. O. P. PLANS OUTING.

Union County Republicans to Have Excursion.

Elizabeth, April 19.—At a meeting of the Union County Republican Committee last night it was reported that plans were progressing favorably for the outing to be held this summer.

The committee appointed at the last meeting to draw up resolutions on the death of S. Rusling Ryno, a member, presented an engrossed set of memorials.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, of Newark, returned home yesterday after a visit with friends here.

A. R. Fisk, who a week ago met with an accident at the home of his parents, where he was thrown out of a carriage by a frightened horse, has recovered.

THE FORUM.

For a Children's Court.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Appropos of the recent letters appearing in your columns relative to a separate session of the city court for hearing cases in which children are involved, and also keeping the names of child offenders from the public, I wish to ad my name to the list of those who have already endorsed such a course. For a number of years I was connected with the largest and greatest child-saving organization in the world, the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and in that way I saw the beneficial effect of such a measure. In New York State, Chapter 414 of the laws of 1896, provides that: "All cases involving the commitment or trial of children for any violations of the Penal Code, in any Police Court, of Court of Special Sessions, may be heard and determined by the court, at suitable times to be designated therefor by it, separate and apart from the trial of other criminal cases, of which session a separate docket and record shall be kept."

This law was later amended and today no child under the age of sixteen years is allowed to come in contact in any way with adult offenders. The law was first operated under in the city of Buffalo and all cases of children were heard in private on special days of the week designated by the police magistrate, the parents of the children involved and other persons actively concerned being the only ones present. In this modest way the Children's Court had its beginning. As the years went on and cases of child offenders against the law became more numerous the advisability of a Children's Court became self-evident and New York city, quick to see the need of such an institution was the first city in the world to establish a separate building in which cases of children only were heard. This it did about 1902. Since then that Court has handled millions of cases of children and its record in that time for reformations, complete and absolute, has been in the neighborhood of ninety per cent. —a wonderful achievement.

The old adage "As the twig is bent so is the tree inclined," is forcefully demonstrated by the writer's experience with children who had been arrested charged with crime, and who seemed to gloat over the notoriety they had gained. Had these children been allowed to come in contact with adult offenders during the period which their trial covered, undoubtedly they would have gained more knowledge in the ways of vice and later would have become adepts in crime; but they were by the law removed from such contamination and in the end reformation usually followed.

As to publicity regarding a child's arrest and arraignment at Court this should not be encouraged. The mere fact that a child has committed a crime should be sufficient cause for every one to endorse a request for a separate and private trial or hearing for children and thus lend a helping hand to the offender who often commits crime through ignorance, and who immediately after realizes what he has done. A celebrated philanthropist has likened vice and crime to an infectious disease which when once absorbed in the blood requires something more than a mere change of air to eradicate it and unless the treatment is not only judicious but kind and in addition to purifying the atmosphere something is done to restore the child's enfeebled constitution mentally and morally as well as physically, the exposure to the disease will show in after life the deadly effects of the contagion when young.

Let us all, therefore, encourage the movement for a separate hearing for children's cases and absolute privacy in such proceedings.

Yours very truly,
NELSON M. HAAS.

HERE AND THERE.

London is mildly interested just now in an attempt to revive in corporate form the ancient British-Hebrew church, first formed, tradition says, at Glastonbury among Hebrew exiles by Joseph of Arimathea in A. D. 35, the year of the first persecution. The legends of the sect affirm that the ancient British people were descended from a band of Hebrew exiles who reached Ireland under the leadership of the prophet Jeremiah and Tephi, the daughter of Zedekiah, the last King of Judah. Through her marriage with Heremon the pedigree of King Edward III. is traced back to David, King of Israel and Judah.

A settlement of these Hebrews practicing Hebrew rites was in being at Glastonbury when, according to tradition, quoted by Baronius, a Roman historian, and Maelgwyn of Llandaff, a writer of the fifth century Joseph of Arimathea, Lazarus, the Virgin Mary, Martha, Mary the Magdalen and others found refuge in this colony and made their first converts to the Christian faith ten years before the founding of the church at Rome. From the fact that the word "Hebrews" means "those who have crossed the flood" they infer that the epistle bearing that name was addressed to the Hebrew Christian church in England.

The service at present consists entirely of Biblical readings followed by a sermon. There is no singing. Baptism is administered by means of immersion on profession of belief and the Passover supper is observed annually on the fourteenth day of the Jewish month of Nisan, the elements being pure grape juice and pierced unleavened cakes. For officers a plurality of leaders are elected, one of the present holders of the office being a cousin of the late Cardinal Wiseman. He also holds the office of angel, or messenger, a post corresponding to that of preacher.

Professing, in common with other Protestant churches, that the Bible only is their sole rule of faith and practice, the British Israel Essiesia, as they designate themselves, are anti-Trinitarian in theology. They hold, nevertheless, the doctrine of the divinity of Jesus Christ and the sanctity of the Holy Spirit. They also hold strong views on the necessity for observing Saturday as the Sabbath, and look for the establishment of a Messianic kingdom on earth in which the Jewish race will be predominant.

For further confirmation of their tenets they point to the fact that the word Briish is from he Hebrew "brit," a covenant, and they conclude therefrom that the British race are the covenant people. The stone in the British coronation chair in Westminster Abbey, they assert, is not Jacob's pillow, but part of the rock which Moses smote and out of which water flowed.

M. Carpentier of the French Academy of Science has invented an apparatus which promises to be a great step toward the practical use of aeroplanes. It is a gyroscope actuated by a small dynamo, and the experiments carried out so far show that by its use the flight of flying machines is rendered as steady and secure as the flight of a bird.

The scientists of the Academy are much impressed by the appliance and have baptized it the brain of the aeroplane. In fact it seems that an aeroplane fitted with it may even dispense with an aviator, as the machine can be made to travel from one point to another alone. Once the motor has stopped the aeroplane will descend smoothly, supported by the action of the gyroscope.

During the hearing of a case in one of the London children's courts an official said that the reformatories were full at the present time. He explained that this was due not to an increase in the volume of juvenile crime but to a growing tendency on the part of parents to free themselves from their responsibilities with respect to the care of their children.

A well known police court missionary took a similar view, and said there is no doubt that many parents use the reformatories to shirk responsibility. They bring their children to court on the slightest pretext and seek to have them sent to a reformatory. When a boy is sent to a reformatory his parents are made to contribute so much a week toward his maintenance, but the amount is often considerably less than the cost of keeping him at home.

That fact, he concluded, induces an unscrupulous parent to make a charge of petty theft against a child, to declare that the little one is beyond control, and to ask that the offender be detained in a reformatory.

HOUSE PARTIES ABROAD.

The house party is an essentially British institution. True, we Americans imitate it, but there is something formal and stiff about the gorgeous gatherings which take place in the houses of the New York Four Hundred.

All over the Continent, at the shooting and hunting time of year, parties of friends assemble beneath the hospitable roofs of the magnificent castles and chateaux, but, although these entertainments are often very interesting and delightful, they have none of the quiet, restful charm of a typical British house party, where most of the guests probably know one an other already, and where the formal ostentation of dress, or in the choice of amusements, which is such a feature of Continental gatherings, would be of bad form.

The ideal house party is composed of a number of interesting men and women who, although of varying ages, ranks or professions, are yet all bound together by friendly and cordial feeling. It must have no jarring elements, in the shape of spiteful busybodies or people with grievances to destroy a great deal of the pleasure and sense of comfort which should rule the ideal house party.

In this connection it may be whispered that a house party at which royalty is present is never quite so pleasurable as one of the ordinary kind. The reason for this is that royalty is hedged round, even more than it was fifty years ago, with a very stiff cordon of etiquette, and spirit of freedom which forms the most delightful part of country house life.

Country house parties may be divided into two kinds—that in which the guests are invited for two—or at the most three—nights, and that which lasts between five and ten days, or even longer.

In the political world the week-end party is a luxury that has become almost a necessity, and, fortunately for jaded members, it can now be enjoyed in the heart of the country—thanks to the motorcar. During this last summer, when Parliament sat so late as to accustom M. P.'s to extraordinary hours, many energetic week-enders thought nothing of motoring into the country during the early morning hours in order to begin their week-end breakfast time.

The "long stay" visit has also a great many good points. Very often even the most genial people have scarcely time to get together in the short space of forty-eight hours, and are very glad to have more time together.

More genuine regret is often felt at the end of a "long stay" party than after the most brilliant and amusing week-end, at which many notable people have gathered.

TWO HATS OR ONE?

When we go away on the long-looked-forward-to visit to some far-away friend, we want all the trunk room we can squeeze for the clothes we may or may not need, and the question of hats for proper occasions becomes a most serious one. The softly draped turban of maline of cloth-of-gold is too rich in possibilities to be left at home, but the large-brimmer garden hat is sure to be a necessity, with summer in the distance. Why not combine the two?

Make, or have your milliner make for you, the draped maline turban, wreathing it in tiny flowers of your favorite color. See that it fits the head comfortably and at a becoming angle. Then have her make for you a wide curving or enveloping brim of white chantilly lace lined with a shade to match the flowers and with just skeleton crown enough to hold the turban in place.

There, you have it! Two in one. One in two. And room in the trunk besides.

The unique idea can be carried out in darker colorings and in straw and flowered turban for crown, if desired. In fact, its possibilities are innumerable.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

MOTOR DEP'T CHIEF LIKELY TO LOSE JOB

State House official circles are considerably exercised today by the act of Governor Fort in transmitting to Secretary of State Dickinson a copy of the examination conducted by the State Auditor into the affairs of the Motor Vehicle Department, which are administered by J. B. R. Smith, deputy Secretary of State. State Auditor Drake advises the Governor that while the work of the department has been honestly conducted the administration of it by Mr. Smith has not been efficient and business-like.

In submitting the report of the auditor Governor Fort writes Secretary of State Dickson to the effect that it is up o him o remedy the conditions set forth, as the Governor says that he is without power to deal with the situation because of the lack of statutory or other authority. He says, however, that it is the clear duty of the Governor to make such derilictions public. "It was my purpose to send this report to the Legislature," explains the Governor, "but after conference with Senators Frelinghuysen, Wakelee and Ackerman, it was decided that the remedy was entirely in the control of your department."

Aside from the statement by the auditor that the Motor Vehicle Department affairs have been conducted in a very loose manner all around, the most serious charge is that "The cash received in the department in the State House has been used for personal purposes." The auditor cites an instance where a check drawn by Mr. Smith was carried in the cash drawer of the department for over a year, in explanation of which a clerk stated to the auditor that "Mr. Smith had taken the money from the cash drawer and had left the check in lieu thereof."

The auditor declares that he "disapproves of the action of Commissioner Smith in taking money belonging to the State from the cash drawer for his personal use and placing his personal check therein and counted as cash by his subordinates."

Auditor Drake summarizes the deficiencies of the department as follows: "Defective in organization, lacking in executive management, relations of the head of the office to the agencies throughout the State not properly co-related; no adequate system of charging when sending to agencies supplies of registration certificates, etc.; no proper returns made of the certificates issued; from the records of the department and agencies it is impossible to know what supplies were delivered to the agencies, what and how many registrations were received and fees collected."

In concluding his report Auditor Drake says: "The necessity for a completed reorganization of the department and the placing of it under the charge and direction of an officer who will give it personal and undivided attention is manifested clearly."

GEORGE JUNIOR REPUBLIC LOCATED AT FLEMINGTON.

Backed in their venture by such men as George J. Gould, former Governor Stokes, Governor Fort and Hamilton W. Mabie, six George Junior Republic boys and two girls have arrived at Flemington to establish a juvenile republic, patterned after the Freeville institution.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has furnished a farm of seventy-five acres upon which they will build. The republic will be the seventh in a chain of like institutions, which the founder, William R. George, proposes to establish in every State in the Union.

Price of Coal Reduced.

I wish to announce to the public that beginning today and continuing for the rest of the month of April, the price of my coal delivered to any part of the city, will be $6.00 per ton on nut, stove and egg sizes, with 50 cents per ton discount for C. O. D. and 25 cents discount for ten days; $5.00 per ton for pea coal, 50 cents discount C. O. D., 25 cents discount ten days. My coal is strictly first-class Lehigh and well screened.

Now is the opportune time to lay in your winter supply before you complete your housecleaning and while the price of coal is at low water mark. Richard Parrott, Jr., 686 South Second street. **

Laurlie & Aleen, comedy singers and dancers, pleased the audience so much that they had to fight to get away. The Wilbur sisters, couple of girls singing popular sons. Don't miss the Roosevelt Pictures Thursday.

—P. H. Latourette, auctioneer, will sell several choice building lots at Netherwood and Midway avenues tomorrow at 2 p. m. See adv.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

A new play from the pen of Charles Bradley, "Her Son," will be presented at the Plainfield theatre on Friday evening, April 22. It is called "a play of today," and is said to be one of the most powerful and intense presentations of problems of the present time that has been placed upon the stage. The scene of the play is in New York, in the year 1910, and the situations around which the author has woven his story can be duplicated from the files of the District Attorney's office and the records of the secret service of more than one country. These furnish many a thrilling moment, but they are not allowed to overshadow a delightful love story which provides a charming central theme. A distinguished cast has been organized for this production. All the principles are well known and have taken prominent parts in some of the greatest stage successes. The list includes Miss Katherine Emmet, Hall McAllister, Miss Beatrice Irwin, Miss Louise Randolph, Joseph Kaufman, William Riley Hatch and Miss Margherita Sargent. The play has been staged under the direction of E. F. Bostwick.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Excelsior H. & L. Co. held its regular monthly meeting last night in the company's rooms. Besides the regular routine fire business, the question of a new floor in the hall was discussed. The Bachelors Club which has been running a series of dances in the hall during the past winter have assured the company that if it will put in a hardwood floor to replace the heavy floor now in use that the club will agree to hold a certain number of dances, the income from which will defray the expenses incurred. The proposal was looked upon favorably and the chances are that the new floor will be laid within a week or two.

25 BUTCHERS CLOSE SHOPS IN NEWARK.

Twenty-five butchers in the Hill section of Newark, in the neighborhood of Prince and Broome streets, where there were meat boycott disturbances last week, have decided that they will keep their shops closed for an indefinite period, merely saying that they will open again when wholesale prices become lower, as under no other conditions can they lower the retail prices.

This has caused consternation among those who last week declared for a boycott against buying meat, and yesterday those who had been loudest in demanding the closing of the butcher shops were making efforts to have the butchers change their plan of closing. The butchers declined to listen and remarked that since the people had inaugurated the strike method of dealing with the situation, the butchers would now do the same thing.

Only one butcher has decided to remain open and a police guard is constantly kept at his place.

STOKES WILL APPEAL DIRECT TO PEOPLE.

The friends of former Governor Edward C. Stokes are circulating today in Cumberland, his home county, seventy petitions indorsing him as a candidate for the United States Senate at the primary election next September to succeed Senator John Kean.

The former Governor stated yesterday that he will not take any part in the contest for seats in the State Legislature, but will make his fight for the United States Senate directly before the people.

This is a start in placing a name as a candidate for the Senate directly before the people to be voted on at the primary, as provided for in the new law which was passed recently by the New Jersey Legislature.

Oppose Congressman Gardner.

The Democrats of the Second Congress District of New Jersey are lining up with the independents to fight Congressman John J. Gardner, the "Grand Old Man of Atlantic," who will head the regular Republican ticket next fall. Captain E. Burd Grubb, who ran against Gardner at the last Congressional election, and was defeated after a hot battle at the polls, is talked of for nomination, and the name of J. H. Birch, a prominent capitalist of Burlington, has been mentioned by leaders.

DECISION IS RESERVED FOR ARMOUR EXTRADITION

Governor Fort yesterday reserved decision on the application of Pierre Garven, Prosecutor of Hudson county, for requisition papers for the extradition of J. Ogden Armour, Louis T. Swift and Edward Morris, of the meat packing companies which were indicted for conspiracy by the Hudson County Grand Jury. Governor Fort did not say when he would announce his decision in the matter, but from the fact that he told counsel to be sure to submit briefs before the end of the week it is not expected that any decision will be announced until the first part of next week.

The interests of the three individuals who were indicted were looked after by Samuel Untermyer and Richard V. Lindabury, while the State was represented by Prosecutor Garven and Attorney General Wilson, although the latter took no part in the discussion. Counsel agreed that argument on the extradition application should be confined to the case of J. Ogden Armour, and whatever disposition was made of that case, the same should apply to the other two men.

Mr. Untermyer, who opened the hearing, argued that it must be shown by the State that Mr. Armour was a fugitive from justice before he could be extradited. He also based his argument on the fact that even if it were shown that the conspiracy was committed outside of the State of New Jersey, Mr. Armour could not be extradited unless it were shown that he was a fugitive from justice. He finished his argument by saying that the State had failed absolutely to show that Armour was in any sense a fugitive from justice, and for that reason the Governor could not order his extradition.

Mr. Garven, in his argument, said it was only necessary to show that a crime had been committed and that the indicted persons were fugitives. This, according to Mr. Garven, was apparent, inasmuch as they were outside of the State. Mr. Garven said the alleged crime was committed in New Jersey, and he therefore asked the Governor to sign the papers so that he might bring on the indicted men and have them stand trial on the charge of conspiracy.

FATE OF FIREWORKS RESTS WITH PUPILS.

Principals of all the public schools in Montclair will hold a conference with Mayor Henry V. Crawford, of Montclair, tomorrow to discuss the method of submitting to the pupils the question as to whether or not they favor a "noiseless Fourth of July" in that town. The question to be submitted to the children is as follows:

"Would you be willing to forego the use of fireworks and firecrackers on July 4 providing you were permitted to use the money that would be expended for these explosives for some other purpose?"

The vote will probably be taken Thursday and Friday of this week. If a majority decide in favor of a noiseless Fourth the Town Council will enact an ordinance prohibiting the sale of fireworks and firecrackers, and if the vote favors the old fashioned celebration it is expected that Montclair will have the usual racket on Independence Day.

New Appointments on the Lehigh.

New York, April 19.—Four new appointments were anonunuced on the Lehigh Valley Railroad yesterday. R. K. Barton was appointed Assistant General Freight Agent with office at 143 Liberty street, New York city. J. K. Dyer was appointed New England Freight Agent with offices at 262 Washington street, Boston, Mass., and 39 Church street, New Haven, Conn., in place of J. S. McCrea who was appointed Commercial Agent with office at Room 1003, Chamber of Commerce, Buffalo, N. Y. Oliver M. Barres was appointed Division Freight Agent, South Bethlehem, Pa., succeeding R. K. Barton, promoted.

Murderer Gets Thirty Years.

Thirty years in State prison—the maximum penalty for murder in the second degree—was the sentence imposed on Barbeto Zarro in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, in Newark, yesterday. He shot and fatally injured Mrs. Cattalia Neri at her husband's tailor shop, No. 401 Central avenue. The shooting occurred during a quarrel between Neri and Zarro over a suit of clothes. Mrs. Neri stepped between them and received the bullet that was intended for her husband.

Saloonkeepers Arrested.

Justice of the Peace John W. Hughes, upon the application of the State Law and Order Society of Camden, issued about sixty warrants for local saloon and hotel keepers at Atlantic City. Forty-six arrests were made, and more than half of the men were obliged to appear before him and give $100 bail for their appearance before the May grand jury.

Martha Washington Council, No. 23, D. of A., will meet tonight in its new rooms in the Coward Hall, 109 Park avenue, and will initiate eight candidates. A number of propositions are also expected.

REV. DR. HERRING'S VIEWS ON THE WATER PROBLEM

In several of the churches yesterday the pastors called the attention of their congregations to the water election to be held tomorrow, and urged the men to be sure and vote. In a few instances the pastors talked briefly on the subject.

At the First Presbyterian church Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring said:

"The greatness of Moses began when he decided to sacrifice his personal interests for the interests of his own people. He gave up living in the palace with all its luxuriousness and ease when he saw his own flesh and blood suffering under the lash of the Egyptians. In his act we have a picture of pure patriotism. It is that sort of patriotism that I would hold up to you today. Real patriotism is not having one's heart stirred by the sight of the flag or by the hearing of national airs. Patriotism means that one is ready to sacrifice and suffer for the common good. Moses could not enjoy prosperity and see his own people crushed by slavery, so he allied himself with their life and interests. Has this incident any real practical bearing upon our lives at the present moment? I think it has. A plea has been made to each voter of Plainfield to vote next Tuesday that the city may control its own water supply, or that the Common Council may at least be empowered to investigate the whole matter of municipal water supply. I notice this plea in the letter which has been sent to every voter of Plainfield, "Will the men not go to the polls even at a little trouble to themselves!" Why should it not be the patriotic duty of every citizen to put himself out for the common good? We would have cleaner government if every man took as his motto the words of Nelson and applied them to his own city, "Plainfield expects every man to do his duty every time the opportunity is presented to him to express his views."

"Moses might have said when he started to deliver Egypt from the yoke of Egyptian oppression, "O what's the use? My people have been enduring this slavery four hundred years and Egypt is a great power. Jacob should never have come to Egypt. The mistake was the mistake of our forefathers."

"But the Jewish people hold Moses in the highest esteem because he did not reason after this manner. We have an Old Testament today because Moses said in effect, 'Well, what of it? We'll change conditions now,' and he did.

"Some twenty years or more, Plainfield gave over the control of its underground lake to a private concern and it is now feeling the bondage of it. Moses changed conditions in his time. Why cannot the voters of Plainfield also start that which will eventually mean Plainfield's liberation?"

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH'S VISIT TO PLAINFIELD

Right Rev. John Scarborough, D. D., LL. D., confirmed a large number of young people in the diocese yesterday, thirty-one at Grace, sixteen at the Church of the Heavenly Rest and at the Church of the Holy Cross eleven new members were added to that church.

At Grace church the services were decidedly impressive. The bishop addressed the confirmation class upon their new duties as members and the obligations resting upon them in the attendance upon communion and the attention to the daily prayers. At this church the music of the service was especially fine. Organist and choirmaster S. Frederick Smith presented a choir of unusual strength and in the new boy soprano, Chester Chamberlain, of New York he has a wonder.

At the Church of the Heavenly Rest two addresses were given by the bishop, the first to the confirmation class and the other to the congregation. To the congregation he drew lessons from the Easter season and spoke of the present difficulties of the rectors of churches in making ends meet owing to the high cost of living. It was his intention, he said, to bring the matter before the next diocesan convention so that provision might be made for the clergy where salaries are not large enough for present exigencies.

At the Church of the Holy Cross, Bishop Scarborough told the congregation of the necessity for special attention to missions, both home and foreign. The attendance at all the Episcopal churches was splendid in spite of the stormy weather.

Second Regiment Loses Shoot.

Had it not been for Major Martin's shooting on Friday night perhaps the members of the Second regiment would have beaten the sharpshooters of the First. Major Martin filled in for the contingent from the First regiment because they were a man short. As it happened the shooting squad of "our boys" were not disgraced as they only lost the match by fifteen points. The shoot took place in Newark and only 13 prints separated the contestants at the finish. It was not an important match, more in the nature of practice and as usual Sergeant Apgar with Sergeant Dabb, led for the home team in scoring. Each of these experts got 88 out of a possible 100. Major Martin and Lieutenant Graff of the First Regiment scored 90.

Rev. Mr. Maguire Will Speak.

The Christian Endeavor Union will hold a mass meeting at the Seventh-day Baptist church, New Market, on May 26, under the auspices of the executive committee. The speaker on that occasion will be Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church. His subject will be "In Africa," and he will in additon exhibit a number of curios collected by himself in Africa.

SOME BROADWAY STARS TO WITNESS PERFORMANCE

Several distinguished actors who are prominent in the Lambs club in New York will attend the second night's performance of "Trelawny of the Wells" to be given on Friday and Saturday nights, May 20 and 21 at the theatre by talented amateurs for the benefit of the hospital. As a rule there is a larger crowd on the opening night but because of the presence of these Broadway stars it is believed that many will prefer to attend the show on the second night.

There has been some misunderstanding as to the reservation of seats. The only restriction in this respect is that prior to the opening of the sale, which begins at 6 o'clock on Saturday afternoon no seats will be reserved for anyone, not even for members of the cast or the press. In other words there will be no private advance sale as has been the case unfortunately in times gone by.

Robert Boyce Breaks His Arm.

Robert Boyce, of 437 North Avenue, while cranking an automobile at Laing's auto garage on Saturday, broke his arm and was obliged to go to the hospital for treatment. The accident was caused by the crank flying backward and striking Mr. Boyce's arm. He was able to leave the hospital today, but will be detained from work for sometime.

Will Help Pay Off Mortgage.

The profits from the series of lectures on "Current History," given by Miss Janet Richards, of Washington, in this city, and amounting to about $200 has been given to the Y. W. C. A. to help pay off the mortgage on the property. The lectures were not given for that purpose, but those in charge decided to assist the Y. W. C. A. in its work.

Mrs. Perkins, of Rochester, N. Y., is visiting her mother, Mrs. Stephen A. Ginna, of Watchung avenue.

The Man in Lower Ten

By Mary Roberts Rinehart
Author of The Circular Staircase

Illustrations by M. J. KETTNER

(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

He was very silent on the way home. Hotchkiss, too, had little to say. He was reading over his notes intently, stopping now and then to make a penciled addition. Just before we left the train Richey turned to me. "I suppose it was the key to the door that she tied to the gate?"

"Probably. I did not ask her."

"Curious, her locking that fellow in," he reflected.

"You may depend on it, there was a good reason for it all. And I wish you wouldn't be so suspicious of motives, Rich," I said warmly.

"Only yesterday you were the suspicious one," he retorted, and we lapsed into strained silence.

It was late when we got to Washington. One of Mrs. Klopton's small tyrannies was exacting punctuality at meals, and, like several other things, I respected it. There are always some concessions that should be made in return for faithful service.

So, as my dinner hour of seven was long past, McKnight and I went to a little restaurant downtown where they have a very decent way of fixing chicken a la King. Hotchkiss had departed, economically bent, for a small hotel where he lived on the American plan.

"I want to think some things over," he said in response to my invitation to dinner, "and, anyhow, there's no use dining out when I pay the same, dinner or no dinner, where I am stopping."

The day had been hot, and the first floor dining room was sultry in spite of the palms and fans which attempted to simulate the verdure and breezes of the country.

It was crowded, too, with a typical summer night crowd, and, after sitting for a few minutes in a sweltering corner, we got up and went to the smaller dining room upstairs. Here it was not so warm, and we settled ourselves comfortably by a window.

Over in a corner half a dozen boys on their way back to school were ragging a perspiring waiter, a proceeding so exactly to McKnight's taste that he insisted on going over to join them. But their table was full, and somehow that kind of fun had lost its point for me.

Not far from us a very stout, middle-aged man, apoplectic with the heat, was elephantinely jolly for the benefit of a bored-looking girl across the table from him, and at the next table a newspaper woman ate alone, the last edition propped against the water bottle before her, her hat, for coolness, on the corner of the table. It was a motley Bohemian crowd.

I looked over the room casually, while McKnight ordered the meal. Then my attention was attracted to the table next to ours. Two people were sitting there, so deep in conversation that they did not notice us. The woman's face was hidden under her hat, as she traced the pattern of the cloth mechanically with her fork. But the man's features stood out clear in the light of the candles on the table It was Bronson!

"He shows the strain, doesn't he?" McKnight said, holding up the wine list as if he read from it. "Who's the woman?"

"Search me," I replied, in the same way.

When the chicken came, I still found myself gazing now and then at the abstracted couple near me. Evidently the subject of conversation was unpleasant. Bronson was eating little, the woman not at all. Finally he got up, pushed his chair back noisily, thrust a bill at the waiter and stalked out.

The woman sat still for a moment; then, with an apparent resolution to make the best of it, she began slowly to eat the meal before her.

But the quarrel had taken away her appetite, for the mixture in our chafing dish was hardly ready to serve before she pushed her chair back a little and looked around the room.

"I Beg Your Pardon, Sir; the Lady in Black, Sir, Would Like to Speak to You."

I caught my first glimpse of her face then, and I confess it startled me. It was the tall, stately woman of the Ontario, the woman I had last seen cowering beside the road, rolling pebbles in her hand, blood streaming from a cut over her eye. I could see the scar now, a little affair, about an inch long, gleaming red through its layers of powder.

And then, quite unexpectedly, she turned and looked directly at me. After a minute's uncertainty, she bowed, letting her eyes rest on mine with a calmly insolent stare. She glanced at McKnight for a moment, then back to me. When she looked away again I breathed easier.

"Who is it?" asked McKnight under his breath.

"Ontario." I formed it with my lips rather than said it. McKnight's eyebrows went up and he looked with increased interest at the black-gowned figure.

I ate little after that. The situation was rather bad for me, I began to see. Here was a woman who could, if she wished, and had any motive for so doing, put me in jail under a capital charge. A word from her to the police, and polite surveillance would become active interference.

Then, too, she could say that she had seen me, just after the wreck, with a young woman from the murdered man's car, and thus probably bring Alison West into the case.

It is not surprising, then, that I ate little. The woman across seemed in no hurry to go. She loitered over a demi-tasse, and that finished, sat with her elbow on the table, her chin in her hand, looking darkly at the changing groups in the room.

The fun at the table where the college boys sat began to grow a little noisy; the fat man, now a purplish shade, ambled away behind his slim companion; the newspaper woman pinned on her business-like hat and stalked out. Still the woman at the next table waited.

It was a relief when the meal was over. We got our hats and were about to leave the room, when a waiter touched me on the arm.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said, "but the lady at the table near the window, the lady in black, sir, would like to speak to you."

I looked down between the rows of tables to where the woman sat alone, her chin still resting on her hand, her black eyes still insolently staring, this time at me.

"I'll have to go," I said to McKnight hurriedly. "She knows all about that affair and she'd be a bad enemy."

"I don't like her lamps," McKnight observed, after a glance at her. "Better jolly her a little. Good by."

FINE IMPORTED FRENCH
Hand-Made Underclothes

There is a good reason for this proposition. Our buyer is making preparations to sail for Europe, and is anxious to see our present holdings of imported undergarments so low before she sails that she will be able to buy generously of the very latest French products in hand made lingerie. So we are going to dispose of as much of the present stock as we can within the next few days, at just half the selling prices.

The collection includes the very best foreign product—Bridal Sets, Night Gowns, Petticoats, Chemise, Corset Covers and Drawers, all strictly hand made, and, notwithstanding their excellence and superiority over ordinary undergarments, are very fairly priced regularly. To get them at half price is a treat that all women should appreciate.

ABOUT WRITING HOME.

"I wish you would write more often, dear," says mother, when her boy pays her one of her rare visits.

And the tall son bends down, and kising her, says that he really will write every week.

But sometimes he goes back to town and forgets all about it.

In the press of business he cannot somehow find time to write the few lines that would give so much pleasure to the woman who loves him so.

It is a curious fact that many a young man is quite devoted to his mother, and perhaps helps considerably to support her, yet never seems to realize that she values more than any money the letters which tell all about his doings. Little everyday things that he doesn't think worth mentioning.

She loves to read little scraps of his letters to her friends, and to talk in her tender mother way of the wonderful son who is making such strides in his profession, and every little praise and advancement that he achieves makes her heart beat faster with pride for his sake.

It is only forgetfulness, of course, that makes the letters so few and far between, but it is worth while to snatch time from a busy day to save her that little stab at the hear when the postman passes without knocking at the door.

HOW WOULD YOUR WIFE INVEST $5,000 ?

If you left her that much Life Insurance. would she invest it safely and profitably? If you leave it in the form of a Monthly Income, she will not have to invest it. You will do it for her when you secure the policy, and the Company pays the income once a month while she lives. Send for particulars of Monthly Income Policy.

GOLF.

The most gluttonous golfer can have no plaint at the prodigious bill of fate submitted for the season. Beginning Thursday at Lakewood there is practically no cessation until the snow flies in November. Apart from sections further afield the Metropolitan territory is dotted all over with tournaments and what not, and the wonder is where are all the players to come from, to substantially support every meeting, week in and week out. Our local classic contingent is not numerically strong. When one has named W. J. Travis, Jerome Travers, Fred Herreshoff, Findlay Douglas and Robert C. Watson one has about exhausted the list of the top notchers. True, Albert Seckel, the doughty intercollegiate champion, hard by at Princeton, but his native heath is on the prairie plains around Chicago.

Others, such as Charles Seely and Archie Graham, are too absorbed in amassing fortunes, while John Reid, Jr., and his brother Archie never have wandered for from Yonkers. George T. Brokaw at about this time is invariably busy collecting championships in Switzerland, the Tyrol and Southern Germany, and John M. Ward between farming and legal duties has no time to swing a golf club.

Lakewood, however, has an aroma of classic struggles which can never be effaced. Many matches part and parcel in golf history have lived at Lakewood, and last but by no means minor in importance was last year's final. Then Mr. Herrshoff triumphed over W. J. Travis.

Following precedent, Atlantic City is the week after Lakewood, and then comes Garden City, where if last year's field is any criterion W. J. Travis, Frederick Herreshoff, R. C. Watson and Albert Seckel will start from the first tee. Here the Metropolitan whirl begins and continues until July, when the summer recess intervenes until the call to Shinnecock Hills resounds during the first week in August. The meetings include Fox Hills, Nassau, Wykagyl, Montclair, Apawamis and Ardsley, the latter returning to the fold after some ten years of retirement from prominent participation.

Besides these tournaments the amateur championship of the Metropolitan championship starts at Montclair May 31. The same week the British amateur championship will be in progress at Hoylake, also the French open championship at La Boulie, while on June 2 the New Jersey State championship begins at the Essex County Country Club, Orange.

The women's inter-city matches for the Griscom Cup are set for June 6 and 7 at Huntingdon Valley, the Metropolitan women being called on to defend the trophy they won last year at Baltusrol. Then on June 8 and 9 the Women's Eastern championship will be played over the same course.

While Montclair is holding its invitation meet W. A. Kammer will be defending his title in the Staten Island championship at Fox Hills, and on June 17 and 18 the national open championship is to be played at the Philadelphia Cricket Club. On June 20 and two following days the British open championship, in which "Willie" Smith, the American champion of 1899, is entered, will be decided at St. Andrews. The Ardsley meeting brings one into July, when golf is more befitting where ocean breezes and mountain air are to be found.

PERSONAL.

William Johnston, of West Fourth street, has returned from Roanoke, Virginia.

Mrs. Edmund Pack, of Park avenue, is confined to her room with an attack of the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Cooley have returned from their wedding trip to their home on Rockview terrace.

Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, of Central avenue, has been visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Johnson, in East Orange.

Mrs. Carson and her daughter, of Port Deposit, Md., are visiting at the home of Mrs. Carson's brother, C. C. Tomkinson, of Grove street.

Miss Eleanor Sherwin, a teacher at Wellesley College, has been spending a few days at the home of her brother, Horace M. Sherwin, of Westervelt avenue.

Professor Howard A. Roush and his friend, Professor William Luft, have returned to New York city, after a visit of a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. James Conroy, of North Plainfield.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

A cottage prayer-meeting will be held at the home of Thomas Leech, 321 Lyman place, this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Danish Lutheran services will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the W. C. T. U. rooms, with preaching by Rev. Theodore Beck.

The weekly praise and prayer service will be held at Trinity Reformed church tomorrow night. The subject will be "The Man for the Hour."

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church will meet in the lecture room tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The topic will be Pilgrim's Progress Series IV., 'The Lights in the Interpreter's House." The leader will be Millard McAfee.

Horse Chewed Piske's Whip.

Frank Spullutto, a green grocer, having a stand in the city market, left his horse standing in front of French's mill on Somerset street yesterday afternoon and the animal was near enough to a wagon belonging to Henry Piske, of Dog Corner, to nab the latter's whip and chew it into fragments. When Piske discovered his loss he became angry and when Spullutto appeared started something. The appearance of Patrolman Dan McDonald on the scene had a tendency to quiet the men and Spulutto bought a new whip for Piske.

Spoke to High School Pupils.

Rev. Mr. Boone, a colored clergyman of the Noxuber Colored School at McLeod, Mississippi, addressed the pupils of the Plainfield High School this morning. He spoke of the great advancement of education that has taken place among the negroes of the south in recent years and related some experiences among his people, showing that they are not a worthless sort after all, but are worth educating.

No Meeting Was Held.

The local restaurant proprietors did not meet last night to discuss a readjustment of prices, as anticipated. It was learned today that they are not quite ready to make the desired changes. Doubtless a meeting will be held in the near future to take up the matter.

—Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Herring will remove next Wednesday from DeLacy avenue, the borough, to an apartment in The Bristol on West Front street, and S. H. Smith, of Orange, will remove to the DeLacy avenue house.

ASSEMBLY ORGY DENIED

Speaker Ward Tells Governor Fort So in Letter Yesterday.

SENSATIONAL PAPERS BLAMED.

"No Act of Disorder Occurred Within the Jurisdiction of the House Which Would Cast Dishonor on It."

The following are extracts from a letter sent yesterday to Governor Fort by Speaker Harry P. Ward, of the Assembly, in which the alleged orgy of which the assemblymen are accused is shown to have been made out of whole cloth and is denounced in unmeasured terms. Speaker Ward claims that the whole thing was a fabrication concocted by the sensational New York newspapers and suggests the remedies which may be applied to remove the stigma of unbecoming conduct from the accused members.

Honorable John Franklin Fort,
Governor of New Jersey.

My dear Sir:

I herewith acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 14, with an opinion from the Attorney General annexed thereto and made a part thereof.

The Attorney General's opinion is based upon the opening sentence which reads: "You have asked for my opinion as to what power you, as Governor, have to investigate the alleged acts of disorder which are said to have occurred on the floor of the House of Assembly and in the Committe rooms adjacent, during the closing hours of the recent session."

My understanding of this opinion is to the effect that "the organic law of this State prescribes definite limitations not only upon the powers of the lawmaking body and the Judiciary but upon the executive as well," and by reason of these limitations "such an investigation, if prosecuted by you as Governor, would be not only without precedent but without legal warrant or authority" as such "authority cannot be found in the constitution or in the statute law;" that "a research upon your part with a view of ascertaining the facts, if attempted, must be voluntarily assumed;" that "any such voluntary assumption of such a duty might be properly characterized as both fruitless and meddlesome;" and that "whatever you might do then in the premises could, in the nature of things, be no more than any private citizen might accomplish upon his own initiative and responsibility."

The Attorney General also quotes Section 4, Art. 4 of the constitution which declares "each House shall choose its own officers, determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two-thirds, may expel a member" and then says, "it is true, of course, that the House of Assembly has adjourned, and it would, therefore, follow that as an official body it could not deal with the question here presented." He suggests, however, that "its individual members and officers might conduct a voluntary investigation." "They too," he says, "would be without power to summon witnesses, administer oaths, and to do such other things as are essential to a wholly efficient investigation."

* * * * * * *

Before any investigation should be undertaken the matter to be investigated should be clearly stated.

Who is it that charges that acts of disorder occurred on the floor of the House of Assembly and in the committee rooms adjacent, and what are the acts of disorder charged?

From the columns of a New York newspaper under date of April eighth among other things the following appears: "In a little room back of the Assembly Speaker's chair and under the historic relics, champagne was flowing fastest." As you well know and as I recently stated in the public press, "the room on the ground floor immediately back of the Speaker's rostrum is the private office of the Speaker with the Clerk's office to the left and the Speaker's secretaries' room to the right." These rooms, together with the room of the Committee on Municipal Corporations, are the only rooms which fall within the bar of the House. Not a single woman and no liquor of any kind were in these rooms at any time.

These statements in this newspaper are absolutely falsehoods and can be so easily proven to be such that it does not seem probable that is representative who wrote the story would voluntarily appear and submit to an examination which, if he told the truth, would result in the legal liability of himself and his employers.

Subsequent newspaper stories, I believe, shift the scene of the "alleged orgy" to the office of the Sup-

LAWRENCE WHITALL WEDS AT ELIZABETH

Miss Alice Hoffman, of Somerville, and Lawrence Whithall, son of Mrs. Charles Whitall, of 1127 Thornton avenue, of this city, were united in mariage at Elizabeth last night. The ceremony was solemnized at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Frank Thomas Seibert, and was witnessed by about by fifty friends and relatives. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Clarence M. Dunham, of New York.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Seibert, as maid of honer, and Charles Whitall, a brother of the bridegroom, of Westerly, R. I., was best man. The guests from this city included the family of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. William Whitall, of Truell Hall, Miss Louise Jenkins and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Whitall, of North Adams, Mass. After their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Whitall will reside in this city.

One of the marked features of the weding was the rendition of several selections by a quartet from St. Bartholomew's church, New York, which also sang at the Gould-Drexel nuptials yesterday. The quartet rendered the Processional, "Perfect Love" and other selections.

MR. HINMAN'S BIBLE CLASS ENJOYS ANNUAL DINNER

The annual dinner and reception under the auspices of the adult Bible classes of the First Presbyterian church, taught by Grove P. Hinman and Charles M. Hummer, held in the chapel, last night and was a great success. There were about fifty-five members and friends present. The dinner was served in the Sunday school room about 7 o'clock by Timbo, under the direction of Mrs. L. C. Kelly, who was chairman of the entertainment committee. The rooms were attractively decorated with American flags and flowers.

At the speakers' table were Mr. Hinman and Mr. Hummer and several other prominent workers. Following the repast short addresses were made by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor; Charles M. Hummer, I. B. Hill, LeRoy H. Gates, W. D. Williams, while Allen E. Beals entertained the gathering with several humorous stories which kept everyone in good humor.

An excellent program then followed which included vocal solos by Charles P. Titsworth, the new baritone member of the church choir; soprano solos by Mrs. E. W. Poinier and Mrs. Freeman Shotwell, the latter singing "Annie Laurie," and other Scotch ballads; piano duet, Mrs. Charles E. Hering and Clifford A. Braider; reading, Miss Ida Englehardt.

After the program the company had lots of fun guessing all sorts of advertisements. During the evening there was an election of officers and these were chosen for the coming year:

President, L. A. Hummer; vice-president, Mrs. Frederick Ayers; secretary, F. O. Dunning; assistant secretary, T. H. Clark; treasurer, I. B. Hill. Following the election, the president-elect made a happy speech in which he urged every member to do his and her best during the coming year and try if possible to double the membership. Then followed a social time and the happy affair terminated about 10:30, all agreeing that the affair had been one of the best given by the classes.

BEGINS SLAUGHTER OF STRAY CANINES.

Cranford, April 20.—The entire Cranford police force started out yesterday to rid the town of worthless dogs. Sergeant William Jennings and his men, with shotguns and plenty of shells, visited the Aeolian Park section, where they slew at least twenty-five dogs. They killed three worthless curs.

The first report of the policemen's guns aroused the neighborhood, and the result was that dog owners ran out of their houses and took their pets inside.

One citizen worried the cops by discharging a rifle. The officers heard the report, but were unable to locate the man. The police believe it was an attempt to frighten them.

Sergeant Jennings and his men will make another trip today and will keep up the work until the citizens observe the proclamation of Mayor Heins and muzzle their dogs.

2.10 Inches of Rainfall.

Weather Prophet John Neagle reports the total rainfall for the past three days to be 2.10 inches.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Douglass, of Grove street, are receiving congratulations on the arrival of their little son.

YOUNG PEOPLE GIVE AN ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT

The second dramatic entertainment under the auspices of the Young People's Society of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, was held in the parish house last night, and was a great success. Despite the wet weather the attendance was large.

The opening number, "Life is a See-Saw," was especially well rendered and the stage arrangements for it carefully and artistically carried out. The see-saw itself illuminated with colored electric bulbs, the pretty pink costume of Willie Patterson, as cupid, with flowered bow and arrow, was well received. Miss Susie Bennet and Claude Borden took the other parts.

The "living pictures" which illustrated Mr. and Mrs. William Ochiltree in the rendition of "Her Sweethearts," was a feature. The bride and groom charmed the audience with their presentation of the pictures, Mr. and Mrs. Ochiltree had no trouble in interpreting its various phases as would naturally be expected.

The sketch "Obstinacy" was a clever piece of dramatic work, the performers, the Messrs. VanAlstyne, Vail and Mosher and the Misses Susie Bennet, Jennie Bennet and Cozzens taking their parts perfectly. The different amusing episodes of the piece kept the audience in roars of laughter. The other sketches, also the songs, drills and recitations were up to the rest of the program. There was a tableaux and serenade by Miss Agnes VanOrden and Claud Borden; a sketch, "Getting Ready for a Visit," by Miss Lillian Nicholson, Miss Annie Hull and David Sutton; also a recitation, by Richard Borden, "A School Boys' Composition on Animals," by John Hall and a song by David Sutton.

After the entertainment dancing was enjoyed until near midnight. A large number of young people were present to encourage their friends of Heavenly Rest, who were asisted in the entertainment by some of the young people of Holy Cross church. Mrs. Charles Borden, under whose direction and supervision the entertainment was given, deserves great credit for bringing to a successful conclusion such an enjoyable affair.

A. M. E. CONFERENCE BEGINS AT CAMDEN TOMORROW.

The First Newark District A. M. E. annual conference of New Jersey meets in Camden tomorrow morning the opening session beginning at 10 o'clock in the Macedonia church. Bishop Wesley Gaines will preside.

The delegates from this city will include Rev. J. T. Diggs, of Mt. Zion church and his wife; Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Maynard, Miss Josephine Till, Spencer Kelley, Albert Wilson and Omer Thompson.

Funeral of Miss Coons.

The funeral services of Miss Elmae G. G. Coons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Coons, of 248 Somerset street, were held from the home of the parents at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and were largely attended, especially by the young friends of Miss Coons. Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, conducted the services, and in the course of his remarks he spoke of the patient suffering of the young woman. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were young friends of Miss Coons.

Misuse of Commutation Tickets.

The practice of loaning and hiring Central Railroad commutation and fifty-trip tickets, when discovered last summer, resulted in the issuance by the Court of Chancery, of an injunction restraining this practice. That injunction applies not only to the defendants in the suit instituted by the railroad company, but to all persons in the State of New Jersey engaging in such practice. The Central Railroad has given notice that all persons violating this injunction will be proceeded against according to law.

George Hanson Released.

George Hanson, who appeared yesterday as a witness in a case at the borough police court in an intoxicated condition, and who was arrested by Chief Weiss, appeared before Recorder Dolliver this morning, who suspended sentence.

Fell While Running for Trolley.

Joseph Noyes, while running to board a trolley car at the corner of Somerset street and Craig place yesterday, stumbled and fell. In falling Noyes struck his head on the curb and inflicted a deep gash.

W. C. T. U. Meeting Postponed.

The meeting of the W. C. T. U. which was to have been held tomorrow afternoon in the rooms on Madison avenue has been postponed on account of the meeting of the County Institute at Westfield.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC RAPPED

Elizabeth Presbytery Commended Senators Who Voted for Local Option Bill.

REV. F. D. TILDON HONORED.

Bethel Chapel's Pastor Elected Delegate to General Assembly—Large List of Committees Appointed.

Rev. J. G. Mason, of Metuchen, furnished fuel for a strong arraignment of the liquor traffic at the closing session of the Elizabeth Presbytery at Hope chapel yesterday afternoon. Dr. Mason who is chairman of the temperance committee attacked the liquor interests in the State and endorsed the work being carried on by the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League in its fight for a local option law.

Dr. Mason supplemented his report by the introduction of four resolutions touching on the liquor question, three of which were adopted by the Presbytery. The resolutions that passed were one approving the work of the Anti-Saloon League; another commending the six Senators who voted for the local option bill, and one petitioning the Senate and Assembly to exclude all intoxicating liquors from the State House in the future.

The resolution which failed of passage was the one calling on the Governor and Legislature to investigate the alleged orgy that marked the closing of the Legislature. This resolution was laid on the table as some of the clergymen entertained the opinion that there was insufficient evidence in hand as to the alleged orgy. It was on a resolution introduced by the Rev. John T. Reeve, of Basking Ridge, that the last named resolution was tabled.

In urging the adoption of his resolutions Dr. Mason said in part:

"Two large party machines in our State are dominated by the liquor interests by fear of the saloon. No party should expect the support of Christian men when it is subservient to the rum interests. The saloon is in the way of advancing the kingdom and it must be destroyed, it is the biggest obstacle which the Church is forced to combat."

Dr. Mason also referred to the fight in behalf of the local option law and complimented Senator Gebhard, of Hutnerdon county, on his stand he made for the measure. He referred to the speech of Senator Gebhard as "victory itself."

"If a local option bill is enacted," predicted Dr. Mason, "sixteen out of the 21 counties in the State will surely vote 'dry.'" The churches, he declared, must continue in its work to cultivate a sentiment for such a bill.

Considerable routine business was transacted at the session. Rev. F. D. Tildon, of this city, was elected as delegate to the General Assembly, at Atlantic City next month, along with the Rev. L. R. Howard, who was chosen at the morning session.

Rev. Lewis Bond, of this city, was received into the Presbytery from the Philadelphia Presbytery.

The Presbytery also voted favorably on the dissolution of pastoral relations between the Rev. Mr. Kline and the First German church of Rahway. These are the committees appointed:

Foreign Missions—Ministers, W. I. Steans and E. B. Cobb; elder, William P. Stevenson.

"IKEY" THE FIRE CAT NEARING LIFE'S END

"Ikey," the pet maltese cat of fire headquarters (also champion mouse and rat exerminator of the First ward), according to Assistant Chief Andy Jennings) is flirting with the Death Angel as a result of an attack of the mumps, and great is the sorrow thereof in that vicinity.

"Ikey's" illness dates back to only Saturday afternoon last when he contracted a cold while on a run to the two fires.

"Ikey" has refrained from going to fires for four years, or since the time "Abey," his old pal, went to a blaze and never came back. But on Saturday "Ikey" couldn't help going. He was taking a snooze in the hose wagon when the alarm came in. Well "Ikey" was so deep in slumber that he made no attempt to jump from the apparatus as it dashed on its journey to the West End.

When the blaze was reached "Ikey" stretched himself and bolted to the street, where he shivered and shivered until the firemen completed their work. Returning to the house "Ikey" went to bed and he has never since risen.

Yesterday the cat's face and neck started to swell and it is swelling yet according to bulletins issued by "Dr." Bill Jaeger who is in charge of the case. This morning "Doc" Jaeger posted a bulletin:

"'Ikey' is critically ill with the mumps."

It is needless to do any joshing on the illness of "Ikey" as all of the fire-fighters stationed at headquarters are taking it very much to heart. This is the situation as found by a Daily Press reporter when he appeared at headquarters for "news" this morning. From a dozen or more saddened firemen he was informed:

"'Ikey' is sick and cannot live."

"Ikey" has seen about a dozen of summers and the department cat expert declared to the reporter that "Ikey" can hardly hope to live much longer if he does recover from the mumps.

COURT WATCHUNG HOLD CLASS INITIATION AND ENJOY SMOKER

Court Watchung, No. 3871, Independent Order Forsters, met in Jr. O. U. A. M. hall last night and had class initiation, followed by an old-fashioned smoker. There were twelve candidates to be initiated and the secret work was in charge of Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger Bingaman, of Elizabeth. After the initiatory work, which was performed in a creditable manner, an entertainment was provided. There were musical selections by the court quartet, violin solos by George H. Speer; also interesting remarks by Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger Bingaman, the chief ranger and vice-chief ranger of Cranford.

Then an old-fashioned smoker was enjoyed, there being plenty of corncob pipes, cigarettes and tobacco for everyone. Refreshments were also served and games of all kind were played until a late hour. Court Watchung is making rapid progress these days, the membership being increased at nearly every meeting. The recent mass meeting held at the Plainfield theatre had a tendency to stir the interest in Forestry in this city.

THE WEATHER.

Fair tonight and Thursday; moderate south to southwest winds.

Maximum, 53; minimum, 35.

Three Budding Journalists.

Three bright lads in the eighth grade of the public school at Nutley, Essex county, have started a little weekly paper called the "Nutley Weekly," and as it now looks their venture may amount to something to be proud of in the future. The little paper is about 6x9 inches in size and to save expense is typewritten instead of being printed. It is sold at two cents a copy and has grown in four weeks from a single page to four pages in size. The editor is Russell M. Elliott and his brother, Edward D. Elliott is secretary. They are sons of the late Clive N. Elliott, a rising young architect, who was drowned in the Connecticut River in September, 1908. Master M. M. Michael is treasurer. The first issue states that "the purpose of the paper is to keep the people of Nutley in touch with the various athletic and other events of interest."

Woman's Home Mission Meeting.

In the absence of Mrs. Reuben Knox, president of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the First Baptist church, Mrs. Marie A. Zook, one of the vice-presidents, presided. The devotional service was led by Mrs. Hannah Flanders. Church Events were given by Miss Ida Yerkes. The reading of the paper on "The West and East," prepared by Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, was postponed until next month.

SUIT FOR $10,000 AGAINST JOHN MAIR FOR FALSE ARREST

Papers were served yesterday by Constable Walpole in the $10,000 suit in tort brought by James Guttridge against John Mair, of Fanwood township, for false arrest, and they are returnable in the Supreme Court next October. Judge William Newcorn represents Mr. Guttridge.

This action is another chapter in the bitter fight that has been waged for a long time between the residents of Fanwood township and the Glaser Fertilizing Company, of Alton. About four weeks ago Mr. Mair caused the arrest of Mr. Guttridge, who is a stockholder in the fertilizing company, in an effort to put a stop to an alleged nuisance at the fat rending place. That case was dismissed against Mr. Guttridge and he immediately started a suit for $10,000 against Mr. Mair.

There is still another action of Mr. Mair against Theodore Glaser, Jr., which will be heard before Justice Clark at Scotch Plains on Friday. Instead of bringing action against the company, Mr. Mair decided to sue members of the company individually, and because of Mr. Mair to prove his case against Mr. Guttridge, the latter now seeks redress for false arrest.

RECEPTION TENDERED TO REV. AND MRS. C. S. KEMBLE

The members of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church joined in a reception to Rev. and Mrs. Charles S. Kemble last night, and despite the bad weather the church was well filled with people to extend a hearty welcome to the pastor and his wife upon their return from conference. The edifice was prettily decorated with flowers, palms and foliage. Walter M. McGee, superintendent of the Sunday-school, was chairman of the affair and had charge of the program, which opened with a soprano solo by Mrs. C. K. Shreve, and a violin solo by Ernest Higham.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent, then made a short address of welcome, bespeaking a prosperous year for both pastor and people. A bass solo by Charles L. Lewis, "She Stoops to Conquer," with an encore, preceded an address of welcome by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, in which he emphasized the delightful unity and co-operation now existing among the Methodists of city and borough.

After another violin solo by Ernest Higham, Rev. Ora J. Shoop, of Grace M. E. church, spoke a few words of welcome to Pastor Kemble and his wife, expressing his pleasure over their return. Mrs. Shreve then sang "Slumber Boat," which was followed with words of welcome by Mr. McGee, with a happy response by Pastor Kemble in which he thanked one and all for the very cordial reception.

During the social hour which followed, refreshments were served. Mansfield Smith had charge of the program, while Mrs. Ira Van Arsdale, as president of the Ladies' Aid Society, was in charge of the decorations and refreshments.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE SHOWS AN INCREASE.

The attendance in the city schools has increased greatly this year. It is now running about 350 more than last year at this time. The growth is quite generally distributed over the city but slightly greater in the Fourth ward.

The High School now has 36 pupils more than last year; the Stillman, 42; the Franklin, 69; the Bryant, 37; the Lincoln, 51; the Washington and Irving combined, 142.

Rat's Dash for Liberty.

A huge rat which had been searching for food in the ash barrel in the cellar of The Daily Press building took an inopportune moment for its quest this morning with the result that it was buried under a load of ashes. When the ashman came along to empty the stuff in his cart the rat had burrowed its way to the surface and when the can reached the sidewalk made a dash for liberty. The last seen of the rodent was his tail disappearing through the door of a building on Park avenue and it is not certain that the monster has yet been captured.

Lecture on "The Passover."

The Hebrew School committee met last night in the rooms of the Y. M. H. A. and engaged Dr. Lyon Katelovitz to take charge of the school. He will begin the sessions on May 2. Next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock a lecture will be given by a local speaker in the auditorium whose subject will be "The Passover," it being the beginning of the great Jewish feast.

CITY OWNERSHIP WANTED

Voters Declare Their Faith in Common Council by Vote of Four to One.

COMPARATIVELY SMALL VOTE.

Every District in Favor of Municipal Control of Water—Activity of Plainfield Protective Association.

The power to investigate the water question and to buy by condemnation proceedings, erect a new plant or renew the contract with the water company was given to the Common Council by the voters of this city by an overwhelming majority yesterday. The final vote showed 1236 for and 318 against, making a total of 1554. Thirty-nine votes were found defective and were not counted.

Hustling was the order of the day with the members of the Protective Association and their work was manifested in the very first returns when the voting machine of the first district of the first ward showed a vote of 167 with 122 for and 45 against. This proportion did not obtain in all the other districts as in some cases, notably the first district of the third ward where the proportion was about six to one. The grand average of the total vote in favor of the proposition was slightly less than four to one as predicted in this paper yesterday.

The vote by wards was as follows: First ward, first district, for, 122; against, 45; second district, for, 74; against, 42; rejected, 11. Second ward, first district, for, 121; against, 36; second district, for 132, against, 18; rejected, 4; third district, for, 52; against, 14; rejected 1. Third ward, first district, for, 211; against, 33; second district, for, 129, against, 23. Fourth ward, first district, for, 90; against, 30; second district, for, 124; against, 54; rejected, 13; third district, for, 141; against, 23; rejected, 10.

Considerable jubilation was shown by the members of the Protective Association last night as the returns came in, each district showing that a large vote considering the weather, was being polled. Interest was high in various parts of the city especially after 4 o'clock when the commuters began to arrive from the city and visited the polling places before going to their homes. Many votes were lost owing to the continual downpour, but enough were cast to show that the people have the utmost confidence in the probity and intergrity of the councilmen to whom the power to investigate the proposition of municipal ownership of the water plant is given.

While the Civic Society and the Board of Trade were thoroughly in sympathy with the movement to empower the Common Council to take the necessary steps in the matter of investigation the greater part of the canvass devolved upon the protective association, and nothing was left undone by the members of this organization which would bring out an expression of public option. Therefore the credit for the result of the election can safely be given to the association.

The Protective Association was organized in February, 1906, and three months later had interested itself in the electric lighting and gas subject so far as to have obtained a reduction in the price of electricity from 18 cents to 12 cents per kilowatt, which was again reduced to 11 cents and finally to 10. An agreement was reached with the Public Service Corporation in January, 1909, by which the price of gas was reduced from $1.25 to $1 per thousand cubic feet. This reduction was granted practically throughout northern New Jersey. In addition to the reduction in rates the plant was put in better shape. The examination of the plant in this city showed a deplorable condition.

Another matter in which the association became much interested and which they finally managed to correct was the five-years' lighting contract which the city proposed to make with the P. S. C. The terms of this contract were considered unfavorable to the city by the association and the subject was fought out in the press and the circulation of literature in the city. This resulted in the defeat of the contract and subsequent action by the Common Council. Following this the proposal of the P. S. C. to run their high tension wires connecting the Cranford plant down through North avenue to Richmon street on poles. This plan was frustrated through the medium of diplomacy and after several conferences, so that the wire was brought to the city line while the conduit was extended to the water company's park. This was done after the opinion of the Corporation counsel had

WESTFIELD.

H. C. Lockwood is having his property on South avenue cleared up, cutting down many of the older trees and taking out the under brush. This does away with a dark place on the road that has been the scene of many holdups and a favorite camping place for tramps.

Westfield Council has again taken up the question of municipal ownership of a water plant. Councilman Schmitt has been working on the matter for over a year and will place the result of his work before the Council at an early meeting.

The mission work among the Italian population at Westfield has been combined by the various churches and will be handled under the direction of the Methodist mission.

The Italian Republican Club of Westfield has reorganized and will hold regular meetings. The organization has twenty-eight naturalized members.

Hiram L. Fink represented Westfield Presbyterian church at the meeting of the Elizabeth Presbytery at Plainfield yesterday.

The ordinances for sprinkling streets with tar were passed by the Council Monday night without any dissent.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Board of Trade had quite an exciting session on Monday night when a heated debate took place on the advisability of draining the old Sanford property which was recently purchased by a New York development company. The promoters, it is understood, are willing to stand a liberal share in the expense involved in the work and the Council will probably go on record at the next session. The company, it is reported, is willing to donate $500 for the purpose.

Everything is in readiness for the rally of the Patriotic Sons of America tomorrow night. About two hundred visiting lodge men are expected to be on hand. A street parade which will start at 7::30 o'clock will be one of the features.

Defender Fire Company's dance is down for tonight. Indications point to a large attendance and an enjoyable time.

Rev. Ernest O. Brown attended the meeting of the Elizabeth Presbytery held at Hope chapel in Plainfield yesterday.

Justice vonMinden is getting his motor boat in shape for the season on New Market lake.

William McComb has returned from a trip to Philadelphia and Scranton.

Mrs. Alfred Osmun has been entertaining friends from Plainfield.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel will meet this afternoon at the chapel.

"God's Promises," will be the subject of the prayer meeting at Hope chapel tomorrow night.

The annual offering at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church for the chapel fund amounted to $3,000.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet Friday night for Bible study.

"Giving Christ Place, Prominence or Pre-eminence," will be the topic of the prayer meeting at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tonight.

The Brotherhood of the First M. E. church will meet in Vincent chapel, Friday night, April 29, to plan for a "Brotherhood Night" to be held soon.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church will meet tomorrow afternoon instead of Friday, as Pastor Goodrich will be away on Friday.

During May the women of the First M. E. church will hold a series of teas, the proceeds of which will be used for the chapel refurnishing fund. The first one will be held at the home of Mrs Charles M. Anderson, wife of the pastor.

GIVES DUTCH SUPPER.

Orator Hagan Makes Good Promise to Arcanians.

Cranford, April 20.—Orator Hagan, of Cranford Council Royal Arcanum, made good his promise last night to treat the lodgemen to a Dutch supper in the event of Cranford Council winning the prize for bringing in the largest number of new members in the Union County district.

The supper was held at the lodge room in Masonic Hall and enjoyed by a large gathering of Arcanumites. During the evening Supreme Deputy Barr presented Dr. Vail, Kenyon Messick, L. A. Jussell and W. T. Revers with fountain pens for bringing in new members, and W. T. Wild, Jr., with a handsome American flag.

Shore Paper Sold.

New Brunswick, April 20.—Articles of incorporation were filed here yesterday for the South Amboy Printing Company. The company has taken over the South Amboy Citizen, a weekly newspaper, and the South Shore American. It is capitalized at $100,000, and starts business with $5,000 subscribed as follows: Francis P. Coan, of South Amboy, $1,600; John A. Coan, of South Amboy, $1,700, and A. C. Quimby, of Highland Park, $1,700. Mr. Quimby, who for the past year or two has had hold of the South Shore American at South River, will also edit the South Amboy Citizen.

Reception for Pastor.

Cranford, April 20.—A reception will be tendered the Rev. Mr. Compton, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church, in the chapel in Eastman street tomorrow evening.

NEWARK O.N.T.'S TO BE HERE SATURDAY

The lid of the local baseball season will be pried off at Crescent Oval on Saturday afternoon when the Plainfields will tackle the strong O. N. T. aggregation of Newark. Umpire Van Arsdale will give the "play ball" command at 3:30 o'clock.

Just what the personnel of the local team will be is hard to conjecture as dope from Manager Ernest Dorflinger has been just as scarce as sunshine rays have been during the past few days. But it is known that the local pilot is always on his job and will be prepared to furnish the lineup by Friday.

Warry McLaughlin will likely be in the box for the locals while Seery may be behind the bat. Brit Martin, Norman Barnes, Boyd and other favorites will also be seen.

The O. N. T.'s are one of the best known independent teams in the State. The veteran Sam Lunn, who has piloted the club for thirty years probably enjoys the distinction of turning out more players to the minor leagues than any manager in New Jersey.

Water was the winner any way you put it yesterday.

Old Jupiter Pluvius, who has raised havoc with baseball schedules for three days, surrendered this morning to Old Sol and now the Giants and Highlanders will surely play.

The Eastern League season opens tomorrow. A delegation of local fans will journey to Newark where Joe McGinnity's Indians and the Champion Rochesters will hook in the opening engagement.

Ty Cobb and Hans Wagner are up to their old tricks. One day the Pirate slugger will clean up the sacks, while Cobb when he gets a solitary bingle waits until the bases are filled to make the hit count.

Looks a bit lop-sided to see the Boston Nationals at the top of the National League standing and the Washingtons heading the American League parade.

WOMEN NOT TO ENTER IN JERSEY AUTO RUN.

Entries of five well-known women motorists in the two-day reliability contest from New York to Atlantic City and return on May 10 and 11, have been rejected by the Motor Contest Association, 1777 Broadway, by whom the Around New Jersey Tour is being conducted. The rejection of the entries was made in accordance with the 1910 contest rules of the American Automobile Association and the five women were notified that men only would be permitted to compete in any kind of an automobile contest that is recognized and sanctioned by the national asociation.

The women who were anxious to enter the Jersey event were Mrs. J. N. Cuneo, Mrs. Evelyn B. Buckman, Miss Mildred B. Schwalbach, Mrs. Peter Back and Miss Alice Heyes, of Brielle, N. J., all being trophy winners in a touring contest last summer, in which only women competed.

The latest accepted entry is a Cole "30," which was nominated by the Colt-Stratton Company, of Broadway and Sixty-eighth street. The car will be driven by Harry Endicott, a brother of the young pilot, who has driven a Cole to numerous victories in the stock car races on the Los Angeles Motordrome during the present month, breaking two world's stock car records.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Attended by the usual flag raising ceremony and the pitching of the first ball into play by Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, the American League baseball season in Boston was opened yesterday morning and celebrated by a Boston victory over Washington by a score of 2 to 1. Boston, by a rally, also won the afternoon game, 5-4. More than 45,000 fans saw the two games.

Fred L. Cameron, of Amherst, Nova Scotia, and half a dozen fellow Canadian runners, captured most of the honors in the Boston Athletic Association's fourteenth annual marathon road race yesterday, over the twenty-five miles from Ashland to Boston.

While no records were broken, Cameron's time of 2 hours, 28 minutes, 52 3-5 seconds was the third best time made in this event and was only four minutes and twenty-eight seconds behind the record made by Tom Longboat, the Indian, three years ago.

The country at large was well represented among the winners at the opening of the bicycle racing season at the Revere track in Boston yesterday. Frank Kramer, of East Orange, the national sprint champion, won the five-mile open race, but only finished third in the half-mile professional handicap. Phil Wright, of Salt Lake City, won both the quarter-mile open amateur race and the two-mile amateur handicap. Eddie Root, of New York, led in the two-mile consolation.

A. E. Meier, of St. Louis, it was announced yesterday, will succeed William J. Clarke, manager of the Albany New York State League baseball club, as coach of the Princeton team. Meier is a graduate of the Princeton 1902 class, and played with the Pittsburg team in 1907.

The boat race between the Harvard and Navy eights, heretofore announced to take place at Annapolis next Saturday, will be rowed tomorrow at 4 p. m., wind and weather permitting. There was some misunderstanding as to the date, which was settled yesterday when Superintendent Bowyer consented to tomorrow.

SEER DECLARES JEFFRIES WILL WIN.

Passaic, April 20.—Professor Gustave Meyer, Hoboken's American scientific astrologer, says that after making a careful study and comparison of the places of the birth of James J. Jeffries, Carroll, Ohio, and Jack Johnson, Galveston, Tex., he has come to the conclusion that Jeffries will win the battle for the world's heavyweight championship, July 4.

In his interview Mr. Meyer said further:

"The fight will not prove a lengthy one. It will be a short and fierce battle.

"Previous to this fight both Jeffries and Johnson will experience some great bereavement, much grief and vexation. Their health will need the greatest of attention and their lives will be in jeopardy during the remainder of this month and the middle of June."

Mrs. H. C. Krebs, of Fairview avenue, is sojourning at Atlantic City.

Mrs. Charles Staats, of Brooklyn, has returned home after a visit with Plainfield friends.

Miss Estelle Moore, of Jersey City, who has been spending several days in this city, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Dayton have removed from East Sixth street to Flemington, where they will live on a farm.

PERMITS GRANTED FOR EIGHT DWELLINGS

April, as anticipated, is going to be a very light month in local building trades circles. Thus far only eight permits for the erection of dwellings have been granted by Building Inspector Doane. The lack of activity is no doubt due to the demand for higher wages made by the mechanics to go into effect on May 1. The permits granted follow:

Emile Beys, two one-family dwellings at 1090-92 Arlintgon avenue.

Hyman Adelberg, dwelling on East Second street.

Thomas H. Leggett, addition to dwelling on West Seventh street.

Catharine MacDonald, barn, 507 Plainfield avenue.

Mrs. Nicholas Bronard, chicken house, 1003 West Seventh street.

Louise Terry, dwelling on West Eighth street.

Alfred Spangenberg, auto garage, 951 West Fifth street.

Joseph Harrigan, two dwellings, 921-925 South avenue.

S. Taub, two family dwelling, 716 Richmond street.

Rachel Liefke, dwelling, 934 West Front street.

James Chamberlain, dwelling, Spooner avenue.

WIRELESS SHIP NEWS FOR LEHIGH VALLEY.

Arrangements have just been perfected by the Lehigh Valley Railroad to receive daily wireless reports of the movements of transatlantic vessels and to flash the reports along the line from New York to Buffalo.

The principal stations will receive bulletins giving the points with which the steamers are in touch by wireless telegraph, and the date and precise hour at which they are expected to dock at New York.

The bulletins will be transmitted in code from New York over the company's wires, and must be promptly posted in conspicuous places in the passenger offices. It is expected that this new service will save both time and money for travelers who are coming to New York to meet friends or relatives arriving from Europe.

The Cat Went Back.

Mr. Penn—They say the streets in Boston are frightfully crooked.

Mr. Hubb—They are. Why, do you know, when I first went there I could hardly find my way around.

"That must be embarrassing."

"It is. The first week I was there I wanted to get rid of an old cat we had, and my wife got me to take it to the river a mile away."

"And you lost the cat, all right?"

"Lost nothing! I never would have found my way home if I hadn't followed the cat!"—Exchange.

THE UNHAPPY MEDIUM.

There was once upon a time a man who undertook to interfere with the affairs of an erring husband who was beating his docile, but wailing, wife, and, if you remember the story, the expostulations of the medium were rewarded by a sudden cessation of the blows, followed by the combination of forces of husband and wife. His angelic and righteous indignation at the gentle art of using force was soon reduced to pulp. After he left the hospital he made a vow, which he has striven to keep to the letter.

Now, this is not an unusual occurrence. Indeed, it seems to be natural that an intruder, even if he be in the guise of a friend, is given a frosty greeting and is frequently sent on his way sorrowing at the ingratitude of humanity.

There is the medium who undertakes to inform the fond and adoring mother of her son's erring ways. "Mrs. Browning," this friend says, "I am grieved to say that as an outsider I have seen many things that you do not suspect." Whereupon a tale is unfolded that makes each particular hair of the listener stand on end, not in horror, but in wrath: How dare she?

The medium through which a reform is to be instituted is shown the nearest way to the door, and it is closed upon her. The feeling that she has done her duty, and has pointed out the wrong, does not alter the fact that there is one friend less, and an irate enemy added to her list.

If you have ever played the role of a calm but determined medium through which the lines of an engagement were to be retracted, you will understand how unhappy the launching of truth can make one.

Did the young woman ever believe you? Try as hard as you might, the engaged John was lauded and petted in proportion to the evidence. If the medium was young and a woman, there were unpleasant accusations of jealousy, sour grapes and catty motives. In nine cases out of ten it did not pay.

The medium of talebearer between two women is wildly exciting, but dangerous. Backward and forward the unhappy carrier is sent, and the caustic remarks somehow gain in strength. Like a huge snowball, the great tale accumulates little white lies and altercations. Finally the recipient of the greatest accusation in fury turns upon the medium. Or there is a chance meeting of the two enemies and a "making-up." The talebearer is decried as a wilful prevaricator and virtually is thrown away. Unhappy is no name for it.

Now the peculiar part of this is that most peace-making mediums mean well. Out of the kindness of their hearts they try to adjust the affairs of their little universe, but to no avail. People insist upon finding out little unpleasant facts themselves. It is hard enough to know a few thing that are true of our loved ones, but the additional knowledge that there is another wise one who secretly is cognizant of what fools we have been is too much for most human beings. The medium, therefore, comes in for his or her share, and generally exists a most unhappy person.

AS TO FAMILY MANNERS.

It is only on the ground of their pure selfishness of view that any belief can be placed in those who deplore the disappearance of family manners, says the London Lady's Pictorial. By family manners is not iming the right thing at the right moment which belongs to the manners of private functions and public conveyances, but the disciplinary state of rule which was once supposed to exist in every family—if only for the sake of proving the lack of its evidence.

There can be no doubt, however, that at one time of domestic history family manners were a very real, stern, terrible and ridiculuous factor in home life. The manners of a father parent embraced the manners of a despot, the manners of a mother parent those of an ambassadress, the manners of elder dauughters those of administrators of the younger sister department of State, and the manners of elder sons those of lord high executioner of younger brothers.

But these only marked the more important offices, which are subdivided and subadministrated with a degree of tyranny which was made endurable solely owing to the fact that those who suffered were able to retaliate upon members of the family one degree lower in rank. When there were no more family upon whose head vengeance could be reeked, the domestic regions were harassed for such opportunities for inflicting suffering as they might offer.

People who belonged to the old school of family rule regarded this system of household division as an excellent training for sons and daughters. We know that they must have found an immense amount of personal satisfaction in occupying the posts of supreme command themselves. But the present generation has only a shadowy idea of what the true parental manners are like, and they have scarcely tasted the power which once went with the rank of elder son or daughter. Children, above all, look upon such records as being to the fabulous past, like the story of Cinderella and the ugly sisters, which carries no moral with it today, when the ugly sister is always helped by a united family effort to marry the man with the comforting fortune.

It has taken us very many years to place every member of a family upon an equal footing and bring about a kind of republicanism of family manners. Yet it may be said at the present day that the father parent is not greater or more important than the mother parent, that both are not above accepting the wordly advice of elder sons and daughters, while younger brothers and sisters are responsible for the delightful freemasonary which goes to insure the real happy family of the twentieth century. The few people who endeavor to keep up a friction of family manners are those who still take an unaccountable pride in family vanities, tempers, superstitions, and even cherish the uncovetable tendencies of family features.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

PLEA FOR ARBOR DAY OBSERVANCE ON MAY 6

Last spring a good many people failed to have knowledge of Arbor Day because no proclamation was made by the Governor as had been the custom. The proclamation was not made, and will not be made this year, because the law now provides that in New Jersey the first Friday in May in each year shall be designated and observed as Arbor Day. The observance this year will therefore be on May 6 and the State Forester urges that it be made an occasion to emphasize the special needs of this State with respect to its forests.

When Nebraska started Arbor Day back in the seventies, the school children planted trees and the older people planted trees because the State had few forests, and trees were needed to protect the homes against sun and wind, to furnish lumber and firewood, and to civilize the newly established communities. This was logical and right, but New Jersey has never had the same need. We once had too much forest and still have quite enough—such as it is. We need more shade trees of course, and in some localities may well have more forests, yet our chief aim should be rather to improve what we have than to strive for more. The State is fortunate in having a great area of wood land on which are at once the remnants and the germs of valuable forests. The land that needs to be planted is comparatively insignificant.

New Jersey's problem is forest fires! Year after year they ravage the woods, destroy the young trees and impoverish the soil. These must be stopped or all hope of better forests be given up. That they can be stopped, or at least controlled, is proved by the experience of other nations. The task is no easy one, for a whole people must be educated and the habits of generations be broken up, yet the record of the Forest Commission for the past three years shows a steady progress. Let the children be taught that every forest fire, no matter how slight, is harmful because it destroys the young trees, and because it robs the soil of the food, the decaying leaves, twigs and bits of bark, upon which the old trees as well as the young ones live. A fire set thoughtlessly in a dry grass field may, often does, run into the woods and do great damage. Let all the people know that in no way can forestry be so advanced as by upholding and strengthening the forest fire service which aims to stop these burnings. The State has two hundred firewardens, it needs more; it has three hundred miles of wide fire lines, it needs ten times as much: it must have above all the active support, not merely the passive good will, of every man, woman and child. If Arbor Day shall give this it will have accomplished as much for New Jersey as it has for Nebraska, or can accomplish for any State.

LITERATURE ON COMETS FROM LIBRARY SHELVES

The approaching visit of Halley's comet has become such an absorbing topic all over the world that it has been deemed wise by the librarian of Plainfield's public library to make a special list of the books on comets and place them together for the benefit of the public. The list comprises some thirty-one volumes and is as follows:

Arago, M., and others. The approaching comet. April 11, 1835. Edinburgh Revelew 61:82.

Ball, Sir Robert S. Comets in his "Story of the Heavens."

Chamber's Geo. F. Halley's comet in his "Handbook of Astronomy." Vol. 1.

Gave a Birthday Party.

Mrs. John Melick gave a birthday supper at her residence, 1427 Willever street, last night, covers being laid for fourteen. Charles Winn acted as toastmaster. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Winn, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Carlson, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. William Meddick, Mr. and Mrs. David Sisk, Miss Doretha Meddick and Masters Raymond and George Winn.

Silk Mill Reopened Today.

The Watchung Silk Mill re-opened its doors today after four weeks idleness owing to a strike inaugurated by the weavers. All of the strikers were given back their jobs, and the other hands, who were idle on account of the trouble returned to work. The weavers failed in their efforts to secure an increase in wage rates.

An Historical Musicale.

The program of Miss Mona Downs' historical song recital, which is to be given in the High School auditorium on Friday night is one which will appeal to all music lovers. Miss Downs will be assisted by Miss Smith and Mr. Rodney, of New York.

McCready Pleads Guilty.

Joseph McCready, who was arrested on a charge of stealing three coats, two vests and a pair of trousers from Charles L. Hyde, pleaded guilty in the Union county court this morning and will be sentenced next Wednesday.

A. L. Brown, of Ocean Grove, spent Sunday with his family at 706 West Fourth street.

ervisor of Bills, and the time is now stated to be when the House was adjourned for lunch and the Supervisor of Bills was away.

The room of the Supervisor of Bills, as you know, is located on the floor above the main floor of the Assembly Chamber, and is not contiguous to it and does not fall within the bar of the House.

* * * * * * * *

I have investigated these stories certainly as thoroughly as any volunteer committee could and I have not discovered anything which would in any way reflect upon the House of Assembly or its Members or Officers nor anything which could by any stretch of imagination be made the basis for the outrageous libels which have been printed by the sensational press regarding the matter.

What would then be the result should it so happen that no charges on the question submitted by you to the Attorney General should be presented before this self-appointed, powerless investigating committee working without legal authority? Would it not merely present an opportunity for the members and officers of the House to voluntarily come forward and state that they had been accused in the public press of participating in an alleged disgraceful orgy of which they had no knowledge, and that they were guiltless of participating in any such alleged acts of disorder? This has already been done by the individual members and officers.

No Member of the House of Assembly has requested me to appoint such a committee and no charges of any kind have been lodged with me. Therefore, would not any voluntary assumption, upon my part, of such a duty be properly characterized as both fruitless and ridiculous equally with the Attorney General's characterization of such an act upon your part as "fruitless and meddlesome?"

During the closing session of the 134th Legislature from the time of the rap of the Speaker's gavel calling the House to order until its fall at the closing moment of the session when sine die adjournement was declared and the Speaker was divested of his mantle of authority, no acts of disorder occurred within the jurisdiction of the House which would cast dishonor upon that Legislative body.

decided that the P. S. C. could not be stopped.

Taken altogether the election of yesterday is another victory for the association, but it was not gained without considerable hard work and attention to detail. Yesterday afternoon every residence in the city was provided with leterature sent out by the association and in which forty of the High School students were the means. It cost something to do this, but the end justified the extra labor.

The campaign as conducted by the Protective Association included this program: A meeting with the councilmanic committee by the executive committee. A meeting of the executive committee at which it was decided to take up the water question by advertising in the newspapers, holding public meetings with competent speakers engaged to explain the features of the question. Letters and ballots were distributed by mail to every voter in the city and signs were printed and displayed conspicuously all over the city.

It was learned yesterday by Messrs. Moy and Depew that the polling places were in some instances in obscure places and difficult to find and they immediately took steps to correct this condition by placarding the places making their locations known from a distance. As was noted yesterday, much complaint was heard about the voting machines but as they will not be used again there will be no further cause for this complaint.

The boys who aided the campaign to materially were marshalled under four lieutenants, one for each ward. These were Gordon Moy, Osgood Sewall, Harry Brick and Fred Loizeaux, under whom served Alfred Clark, Ernest Van Zandt, Howard Runyon, John Thompson, John Kenney, Frank Putam, Thomas Rickett, Jack Riffert, Nelson Ramsey, George Murray, Sewall Ulrich, Everett Smith, Roy Titsworth, Fred Krom, Arthur Van Zandt, Alfred Manley, Raymond Manley, Philip Schuyler, Egbert Fountain, Lester Sutton, Ned Jenkins, Frank Cullen, Luther Banks, Silas Guttridge, Eugene Lidgate, Gardner Bristol, Schuyler Line, Walter Weber, Russel Huston, Nathan Wilson, Arthur Lewis, Fred Hamilton, William Bullock, Benjamin Burst, Frank Schwed.

As a mater of comparison the vote of 1905 is given here. It shows but little difference from that of yesterday. Total votes cast, 1,548; for, 1,141; against, 407. And yet there are those who say that yesterday's vote was not a full expression of the people's wishes.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Her Son," the play by Charles Bradley, that is to be presented at the Plainfield theatre on Friday evening, April 22, was suggested by a big newspaper sensation. Several years ago the cables were hot with the story of a painting, a picture of the Madonna, that had been stolen from an historic cathedral in Europe. As in the case of the famous Gainsborough portrait, it was decided that the painting must have been smuggled to this country, and half a dozen detective agencies searched for months without success. It was not alone that the picture had been cut from the frame and stolen that stirred the government of France to spend an enormous sum of money in the search, but that hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of jewels, diamonds, pearls, rubies, garnets and emeralds, that had been hanging in strings from the frame, had also disappeared. These were offerings to the Virgin by wealthy Catholics, and indignation was very intense at the sacrilege. The new play, "Her Son," may suggest a clue to the way the picture and jewels were disposed of. It is used as a very strong thread of the story, leading to more than one scene of suspense.

Friends of City Judge W. N. Runyon, who have in the past sat in audiences where the clever acting of this popular city official has given the highest kind of entertainment, say that in his part of Tom Wrench in the play, "Trelawny of the Wells," to be given at the Plainfield theatre, Friday and Saturday evening, May 20 and 21, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary Ward of Muhlenberg Hospital, the Judge will surpass anything he has ever attempted on the amateur stage. Judge Runyon's acting in this leading part brings out as never before his many talents. Humor, pathos and tragedy are all depicted in the portrayal of this character and the judge "puts it over right."

GAMES SHOULD BE STOPPED.

The child who feels the charm of the unknown and the new should be encouraged, and from baby games should be led on to story books, where he will quickly notice and recognize again the goblins and fairies which adore its pages.

After a time he will want to know where the goblin lives and what the fairy is doing. Then will come the stories, the child becoming, after a time, the narrator.

There are those who allow children to have no toys in order to force them to invent their own.

The majority will be found to do so and we hear of children who amuse themselves with fanciful companions or have famous games feeding imaginary birds in imaginary farmyards. Games of this kind, however, should be watched and in a measure stopped if the inventor should have a morbid tendency. A little guidance is generally wise, and a child once put in the right direction may find plenty of opportunity for the exercise of his imagination.

As to pretend is part of child nature, there is seldom a cruel awakening when first comes the consciousness that there are real and unreal things, and that some of our best treasures exist but in the imagination. The child is a poet, and when the time of disillusionment comes the pleasure of invention does not disappear.

All games in which any cruelty is shown or is given an opportunity to grow should be firmly interdicted. Games or the authorized directed play are best when the primal constructive and destructive tendencies are allowed to be under an unseen but capable direction of wise parents.

Princeton Aero Club.

Princeton, April 20.—Acting together with the aero clubs of Cornell, Pennsylvania, Harvard, Columbia and Yale to form the Intercollegiate Aeronautic Association, Princeton University has formed an aero club with about twenty men in its membership. Julian F. Thompson, 1911, of New York, has been elected president; P. C. Smith, 1911, of Philadelphia, vice-president, and Cyrus McCormick, 1912, of Chicago, secretary. This association is attempting to unite all college aero clubs and affiliate them with the Aero Club of America in order that the efforts of the colleges may be united in the new science and a regular series of meets and model contests arranged.

Layer Fruit Cake.

One cup sugar, half cup butter, creamed; yolk of two eggs, two cups prepared flour, one and a half cups milk, flavor with orange extract and bake in three layers, make a fruit filling of the whites of two eggs, one cup of chopped and seeded raisins, two chopped figs, half a cup of walnut meats, six chopped dates and one cup confectioners' sugar, mix and spread between the plain layers.

Cap Strings.

The careful mother always makes several pairs of strings for baby's cap. These she hems at their unfinished ends after their embroidered ends are worked. They are not sewed to the cap, but are pinned to its sides with small gold safety pins, so that they are removable after each wearing. In no other way may the baby be kept immaculate.

CURRENT VERSE.

The Ballad of the Saint.

The Little Cherubs whispered,
"What strange new soul is this
Who cometh with a robe besmirched
Unto the Place of Bliss?"
Then spake the Eldest Angel,
"The robe he wears is fair—
The groping fingers of the poor
Have held and blessed him there."

The Little Cherubs whispered:
"Who comes to be our guest
With dust upon his garment's hem
And stains upon his breast?"
Then spake the Eldest Angel;
"Most lovely is the stain—
The tears of those he comforted,
Who may not weep again."

The Little Cherbus whispered:
"What strange new soul is he
Who cometh with a burden here
And bears it tenderly?"
Then spake the Eldest Angel:
"He bears his life's award—
The burdens of men's broken hearts
To place before the Lord.

"The dust upon his garment's hem—
My lips shall bow to it;
The stains upon the breast of him
Are gems thrice exquisite.
Oh, little foolish Cherubs,
What truth is this ye miss?—
There comes no saint to Paradise
Who does not come like this."
—Theodosia Garrison, in Everybody's.

An Irish Diplomat.

Whist, Barney, be dacent, I'll niver be kissed;
'Tis mesilf can prevint it, I'm strong in me fist;
(Me mither harks under the tree.)
Quit your teasin' an' coaxin', me lips are me own,
I'm too young for lovin', so lave me alone.
(Me mither harks under the tree.)

Take your arm from around me, ye saucy gossoon;
Sure, I'll meet ye no more in the light of the moon.
(Me mither waits outside the door.)
'Tis yourself must be crazy to think ye can stay
Wid your arm round me waist an' the moon bright as day.
(Me mither waits outside the door.)

Och, Barney, me Coulin, nay, look not so sad;
Ye know that I love ye, me bold Irish lad.
"(Me mither has gone up the stair.)
Taste your full of me lips, hold me fast wid your arm,
Ye're lovin' me truly, and where is the harm?
(Me mither has gone up the stair.)
—Mary B. Yates, in Saturday Evening Post.

Day by Day.

Every day has its dawn,
Its soft and silent eve,
Its noontide hours of bliss or bale—
Why should we grieve?

Why do we heap huge mounds of years
Before us and behind,
And scorn the little days that pass
Like angels in the wind?

Each turning round a small sweet face
As beautiful as near;
Because it is so small a face
We will not see it clear.

We will not clasp it as it flies,
And kiss its lips and brow;
We will not bathe our wearied souls
In its delicious Now.

And so it turns from us and goes
Away in sad disdain;
Though we would give our lives for it,
It never comes again.

Yes, every day has its dawn,
Its noontide and its eve;
Live while we live, giving God thanks—
He will not let us grieve.
—Dinah Mulock Craik.

When We Pray.

As tired children go at candle-light—
The glow in their young eyes quenched with the sun,
Almost too languid, now that play is done,
To seek their father's knee, and say: "Good-night"—
So, to our greater Father out of sight,
When the brief gamut of the day is run,
Defeats endured and petty triumphs won,
We kneel and listlessly his care invite.

Then with no sense of gain—no tender thrill,
As when we leave the presence of a friend,
No lingering content our souls to steep
But reckoning our gaines and losses still,
We turn the leaf upon the dull day's end,
And, oarless, drift out to the sea of sleep.
—May Riley Smith.

The Quitter.

It ain't the failures he may meet
That keeps a man from winnin'—
It's the discouragement complete
That blocks a new beginning.
You want to quit your habits bad,
And when the shadows fittin'
Make life seem worthlesslike an' sad,
You want to quit your quittin'!

You want to quit a-lyin' down
An' saying hope is over,
Because the fields are bare an' brown
Where once we lived in clover.
When jolted from the water cart
It's painful to be hittin'
The earth, but make another start,
Cheer up, an' quit your quittin'!

Although the game seems rather stiff,
Don't be a doleful doubter;
There's always one more innin',
You're not a down an' outer.
But fortune's pretty sure to flee
From folks content with sittin'
Around and sayin' life's n. g.—
You've got to quit your quittin'!
—Washington Star.

Fool Bee, Wise Moth.

The busy bee, as we may see,
Improves each shining hour;
And yet compared with any moth
It lacks for mental power.

From dawning light till dewy night,
It toils with restless wing,
That man may steal its store, and then
Eat every blessed thing.

The moth will let a fellow sweat
To pay the tailor's bill,
Then all the lazy summer months
On clothes will eat its fill.

On Hugging Trouble.

It is well to hug your troubles
If you only have a care
To reduce them all to bubbles
By behaving like a bear.

Take and grab 'em by the collar
With your might and with your main;
Then just squeeze 'em till they holler
With the pressure and the pain.

Don't you let up for a minute
Till they're quite devoid of breath.
Life has little worry in it
With your troubles squoze to death!

HOME NEWS.

Of Interest to Everyone in Plainfield.

In every newspaper in the country you will read statements made by people living in out-of-the-way places, who are supposed to have been cured or derived great benefit from some wonderful remedy or 'cure-all." But here in Plainfield we only publish statements made by Plainfield people—the testimony of your friends, neighbors and fellow townsmen.

Mrs. C. Rosseter, 127 Watchung avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several years ago I had severe backaches and occasional attacks of rheumatism. Being told that Doan's Kidney Pills were very effective in cases of this nature and believing that my trouble arose from disordered kidneys, I procured a box of this remedy from Randolph's Pharmacy. I soon found relief and since that time I have always kept Doan's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever I feel out of sorts, I take a few doses of this preparation and I am soon feeling good. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

WITH THE SAGES.

You cannot hurt anybody without receiving a greater hurt yourself.—Cobden.

Absence of occupation is not rest; a mind quite vacant is a mind distressed.—Cowper.

We do not know how cheap the seeds of happiness are, or we should scatter them oftener.—Lowell.

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that fatih let us dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Lincoln.

If you see a fault in others, think of two of your own, and do not add a third one by your hasty judgment.—Flamner.

It is one mark of a superior mind to understand and be influenced by the superiority of others.—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

No man is made only for himself and his own private affairs, but to serve, profit and benefit others.—Benjamin Colman.

To know what you prefer, instead of humbly saying "Amen" to what the world tells you you ought to prefer, is to have kept your soul alive.—R. L. Sevenson.

A man is only happy when he believes himself to be so, in whatever way the proposition is turned, and no man believes himself so happy but what he might be happier.—F. Marion Crawford.

Choose ever the pleasant road. It always answers best. For the same reason choose ever to do and try what is the most just and the most direct. This conduct will save a thousand blushes and a thousand struggles, and will deliver you from secret torments which are never failing attendants of dissimulation.—Molton.

WHO EVER—

Heard a welkin ring?

Or sat on his hostess' right hand?

Or joined a young lady in a cup of tea?

Or saw a rafter split with laughter?

Or caught a cow with a cow-catcher?

Or fairly raised the roof with his shouts?

Or dropped his eyes to the ground?

Or withered his enemy with a glance?

Or was frozen by one?

Or stabbed by the same?

Or had his heart run away with his head?

Or hitched his wagon to a star?

Or ran a joke into the ground?

Or saw a little pitcher with big ears?

Or a cat that would give seven cents to look at a king?—R. S. V. P., Harper's Weekly.

TURNING ON THE HO'S.

Should every girl have a rain-bean?

Is the dove of peace ever pigeon-toed?

Is it pleasant for a cow to belong to a grass-widow?

In Utah you can have plural wives without being singular.

It is the unforgotten in man's life that deprives him of a future.

Ain't it funny a man will go to a blind pig to get an eye-opener?

Orthodoxy is a flame—heterodoxy a fire extinguisher—so each has its place.

A fellow who goes to meet trouble half way is in no danger of taking the wrong road.

Saddest thing about old maids is that they won't have the fun of being grandmothers.

GLOBE SIGHTS

An excuse is the easiest thing to find.

Beware of the man who professes to love his enemies.

Let the heathen go to hell; help your neighbor.

Everyone is patient to a sick man, if assured he will die soon.

Hope is believing that some stranger will saw your wood while you sit in the shade.

Whoever decided that people should wear clothes knew his business. We all look mighty tough without clothes.

The larger a son grows the more the father appears to shrink. It seems that there must be just so much material in the family.—Atchison Globe.

WHY SHE WAS TIMID.

They stood upon the crest of the mountain and gazed off through the purple distances.

"Honey-plum," he whispered, bending closer, "give me a kiss—just one?"

"No, Clarence," she answered, timidly, "some one will hear us. There may be other ears around."

"Other ears? Why should you think so, fairest flower?"

"Oh, because I have so often heard of mountaineers, I thought perhaps there might be some around and—"

But just then there was a mighty crash. A mountain goat had heard the awful pun and jumped over the cliff.

Blow They Missed.

"Pardon me," said the waiter in the ultra-swell restaurant, "but this is a first-class place and we have orders to stop guests from blowing their hot coffee."

"That so?" drawled Uncle Hiram, as he looked at the list of prices. "Wall, by heck, it don't look like yeou have any orders to stop them from blowing their money."

The Exception.

"Then you don't believe in married women running for office?" said the suffragette stiffly.

"Oh, there are exceptions to the rule," said the suburban man with a smile. "Now, there is one office I don't object to my wife running for."

"And what is that, sir?"

"The employment office when we haven't a cook."

A Suitable Job.

Proud Papa—That boy of mine is a wonder! Very smart child for his age.

Disgruntled Neighbor—Haven't a doubt of it. If we were living in old times, I am sure he would be holding an office for which he seems eminently qualified.

Proud Papa (suspiciously)—What office do you mean?

Disgruntled Neighbor—Town crier.

TAME.

"Did you have any thrilling adventures while you were mountain-climbing in Switzerland?"

"No, it wasn't half as difficult or exciting as crossing one of Chicago's torn-up streets."

During the Oleo.

"My hair's like golden butter,'
Said the heroine fair, serene;
Said the villain: 'Dey calls her Margy—
But I believe it's Margarine.'"

Exaggerated Ego.

"The trouble with most representative citizens is—"

"Well, what is the trouble with most representative citizens?"

"They think they represent more than they reallly do."

The Natural Kind.

"I wonder if there are any trees in the Arctic regions."

"Of course not, silly. What kind of trees do you suppose would grow there?"

"I thought there might be fir trees."

Different.

"That's right, rail and carry on because I spend an evening at the club. I don't expect to be able to make you see what attracts a man to a club."

"No, you don't make me see it, but you make me smell it, all right."

The Color of Things.

"Some of the pessimists are inclined to look upon practical politics in municipal office-holding with green and yellow melancholy, aren't they?"

"I rather think the subject is more of a Brown study."

A Dubious Exchange.

"Don't you be lending Hardup money."

"Why not?"

"Because you'll be borrowing trouble."

Not His Sociable Day.

"Misery likes company."

"Yes, but I don't. So just tell Misery to keep on his way, and shut the door, and tune up the fiddle!"

Drawing the Line.

"I'm quite willing to wear a smile."

"Now, that's the way to talk."

"But I'll be darned if I want the laugh on me."

No Need.

"Bobbs writes a great deal of fugitive poetry, doesn't he?"

"Yes, and I wonder why, for nobody seems running after it."

Natural Refuge.

Nell—Rats are going out of style.

Belle—Yes, the new fashions have them in a hole.

BOYNTON

"Square-Pot"

are heat producers and money savers. They fill a home with comfort and cut down excessive fuel bills.

The long-sought improvement —a square fire pot with circular radiating surface — has been brought to final perfection in the BOYNTON. It means perfect combustion and the least possible ash accumulation. We haven't space at command to mention all the good points of BOYNTON "Square-pot" furnaces —ask the BOYNTON dealer in your town to demonstrate them to you. If he shows you half there are, you'll become a thoroughgoing BOYNTON enthusiast.

BOYNTONS don't make dust in the house—they deliver abundant heat upstairs — they hold fire longest—fire door, ash door and draft are just right for speedy and easy manipulation—everything is right about the BOYNTON —look into it!

ORATORS PAST AND PRESENT.

A style of flowered richness
That never seemed to lag,
A loud appeal to freedom,
A mention of the flag—
That was the stuff that flourished
And got them, all and each.
The old-time campaign standby,
The good old cart-tail speech.

This year the method differs;
The words come in a flood.
Profane ejaculations
And quantities of mud.
And therefore we are certain
A modern stage we reach,
And on our ears is falling
The underauto speech.
—McLandburgh Wilson, in New York Sun.

A FAIR PROPOSITION.

"Look here, uncle," said the impecunious young man, "you've promised to give me all your money when you die, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, why wait? Give me a little of it now, and I'll pray every night that you may live long and be happy.

"I'll tell you what I'll do. You pray every night for six months that you may develop a liking for work and if at the end and of that time it appears that your prayers are worth bargaining for, I'll take your proposition under consideration."

Pie—Before and After.

When he was a boy he ate his pie,
And liked the same, you bet!
Now he's a man, in politics,
But pie he still likes yet!

Force of Habit.

Mistress—And Dennis doesn't send you as many kisses in his love letters as he used to, Nora?

Nora—No, mum; he sends short weight.

Mistress—That's strange.

Nora—But thin Oi can't blame him so much, mum. Yez see, he's been on th' back av an oice cyart all summer.

A Paradox.

"It's a downright nuisance, that's what it is," growled the pessimistic man.

"What's a downright nuisance?" queried his better half—or perhaps two-thirds.

"That upright piano in the adjoining flat," answered the p. m.

No Lack of Courage.

"I was thinking how the army airship would revolutionize things in one respect."

"What is that?"

"When the military air corps is an established fact it will no longer be a disgrace for a soldier to fly."

Need Hooking Up.

Old Bachelor—When a young man thinks about getting married these days it is time to get the hook.

Benedict—I should say so. Especially if he marries one of these girls with 50 buttons on the back of their gown."

NO HOPE FOR HIM.

"That young clerk of yours will never grow up to be much of a druggist."

"Why not?"

"I came in here yesterday and asked for 25 cents worth of goose grease, and he didn't try to get me to buy something else that was just as good."

In Our Boarding House.

The hallroom boarder we abhor;
To our regret
He traded off his bull pup for
A clarionet.

There Are Many.

Gunner—Yes, those Van Gilts boast of their family tree and yet they are always prying into other people's affairs.

Guyer—H'm! Their family tree must have been a rubber tree."

Not What She Meant.

"That's a ripping gown you have on," said her English friend.

"You don't say!" cried the wearer, turning pale. "I'll make the dressmaker take it back to-morrow!"

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

John C. Schramm, of Vineland, found a black pearl while eating raw oysters and will have it set in a scarfpin.

Upsetting a pan of hot lard, Paul Chank, nine years old, of 1171 Sycamore street, Camden, badly burned his right hand.

Senator Bloomfield H. Minch has been elected a director of the Bridgeton Gas Light Company to succeed the late George H. Whipple.

Frank J. Lore, of Bridgeton, will this week form county organizations of the Justices of the Peace and Constables' Association in Burlington and Atlantic counties.

William Jones, said to be a navy sailor, is held by the Gloucester City authorities to await the result of injuries he is alleged to have inflicted on Policeman William Lyons Saturday night.

Attacked by a pet fox terrier belonging to Mrs. Charles Dewald, her aunt, at 32 North Second street, Camden, Monday afternoon, Annie Stiles, five years old, was bitten on the upper lip and nose.

Jersey City's Water Department Monday announced that already $50,000 of the $300,000 temporary loan recently contracted to tide over the deficiency in the Water Department has been paid back with receipts of the water department.

A jury in the Hudson County Circuit Court Monday afternoon directed Robert B. Haddow, of Linwood, to pay $500 to the parents of May Dennis, six years old, of 404 West Fifteenth street, Manhattan. Mr Haddow and his family were automobiling on July 11 last. At the Hudson boulevard and Bergenline avenue the automobile was turning around a corner and, it is alleged, knocked down and injured the Dennis child. James Quill, a Jersey City lawyer, brought suit against Mr. Haddow for $5,000. Mr. Haddow was represented by Assemblyman Mark A. Sullivan.

The general committee of the music department of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs met at the State House, Trenton, Monday, for the purpose of discussing musical topics and especially the importance of developing musical tastes among the women of the State. Musical instruction in the public schools was also discussed informally.

Final steps in the purchase of the 5,000 acres of land included in the Absecon watershed, which furnishes Atlantic City with water, were completed Monday. Acting under orders of the water commissioner, City Solicitor Wootton contracted to pay $16,500 for the final 350 acres needed to give the city control of the land, which will be cleared of brush and made into a natural filter. More than $150,000 has been expended in securing the watershed, which will guarantee the resort pure water for the next century.

WHEN YOU TAKE MOTOR TRIPS.

When you motor, and everyone does who can, you will probably pay for your pleasure with bad skin unless you guard against it.

Do not think it enough to have your hat well secured with an automobile veil and your face left exposed to cutting blasts. For all automobiling it is wiser to wear the chiffon over your face if your skin is to be saved.

At this season rub cold cream into your face each time before starting on a long ride, and on your return wipe it off with equal parts of rosewater and gycerine.

To counteract the frowning wrinkle or tense lines that come from constant riding learn to relax in a car. Each time you feel the face contracting or the brow drawn loosen the facial muscles. This can be done by opening wide the mouth and eyes several times in succession.

Excellent for these tense lines is daily bathing of the face with sour milk. When a wrinkle has been marked try small adhesive plaster carefully placed across the wrinkle to smooth it out.

In motoring notice whether your eyes have a drawn, tired feeling. If so, goggles should be used. They not only keep out dust and glare, but protect the eyes from colds which fast riding causes.

The motorist cannot keep the skin in condition by ordinary washing. A complexion brush is essential to cleanliness. A good brush of this kind should cost about $1. The bristles are just stiff enough to start up circulation without irritating the skin. Some women make the mistake of using nail brushes to scrub their faces.

For a long ride carry a vanity box or a powder box and a small bottle of rosewater and alcohol. With these and silk handkerchiefs travel stains can be quickly removed.

SPORTS
News and Notes

By George E. Firstbrook

PROFESSIONAL AND COLLEGE BASEBALL

Alan Storke, the Cincinnati player, who died recently, explained the difference between professional baseball and college ball from his own experiences.

"Should a fellow give up college baseball to enter the professional ranks?" Storke was asked.

"Well, that's a poser for me," he answered. "I didn't give up the college game for big league baseball. When I got through at Amherst, where I played short and third base, I was given a flattering offer by the Providence club. I had played my four years of college ball. I needed money to push my law studies, for I had a hankering to work through the Harvard law school then, and I signed. I played with Providence the first year and had the luck to do well enough to be drafted by Pittsburg.

"I don't think that a young fellow who has his heart set on a profession should quit college to play baseball for a living. In many instances this has been done.

"Somehow or other, no matter what thrilling games a fellow is in as a professional, he always looks back to his college games and remembers them the longer. When a fellow's playing a college game of ball he is usually playing the game as he wants to play it himself. There is hardly a college player that can be called a steady player. At that stage of the game the boys, many of them, are brilliant players, but they have their bad days.

"At college the trainer or coach says: 'Come on, old man, get out there and win today. We want the game. Take a chance on everything. You're our one biggest bet, you know.'

"The professional manager says: 'Here, you cub, you're going out there to play ball today, d'you mind. It isn't going to be football. You are to get your hands on the ball and know what to do with it when you've got it. There's no "rah, rah fellows" in this game you are going to play. If you cannot get out there and show something we've got plenty who can.'

"Oh, there's a great difference between the college and the professional game, but the calm, practical way of doing things in the professional ranks makes a player calm and steady himself and makes him a far better player than he could ever be in college."

Claude Rossman, the offending first sacker of last year's Detroit American League club, is this year playing in the American Association, and according to reports, is going finely. Rossman was one of the best sluggers in the Johnsonian organization for the past three seasons, but he possessed the unhappy faculty of falling down in his fielding at the most critical stages of the championship contests. His baseball sins became so pronounced that Manager Hughie Jennings was forced to cut him loose, much as he regretted to lose Rossman, because of his wonderful batting streaks. Rossman had a poor throwing arm, but it was not discovered for two seasons by even such an able leader as Jennings.

Hal Chase's new son is batting strong in the bottle league. Nothing on Tyrus Cobb, Jr., when it comes to class.

Here's a tip for Clarke Griffith. Purdue university ball players must sign a pledge to keep away from joy water while on the team. What's the matter with a course there for Larry McLean?

Eddie Willetts, the big Detroit pitcher, got ninety dollars for his first season's work. That would be enough for the "makings" now.

Cy Young says he'd rather go out and swing a pick than pitch a couple of hours every day. All right, Cyrus, come to Williamsport and get your hand measured for one.

P. H. S. GIRLS LAND A HARD VICTORY.

The P. H. S. girls' basketball team defeated the "Has Beens" in a fast game in the P. H. S. gym yesterday afternoon. At the end of the second half the "Has Beens" led with a score of 11 to 8, but in the second half the High School picked up and finished the game with a score of 19 to 15 in their favor. Miss Fleming and Louise Andrews played the star game for "Has Beens," while Ruth Wean was right there with the goods for P. H. S. Miss Andrews made a fine shot from center field, which was something out of the ordinary.

The lineup:

P. H. S.—Fowards, Jessie Stuart, Frances Newell; centre, Ruth Wean; guards, Helen Woolley, Madeline Strader.

"Has Beens"—Forwards, Barbara Fleming, Madeline Durar; center, Louise Andrews; guards, Mary Radford, Bessie Alpaugh.

Referee— Miss Day.

Newark Cycle Races.

The program of cycle events which were carded for the Newark Velodrome track on last Sunday and which were prevented by rain, will be run off on next Sunday afternoon. Every event, except the novice race which has been eliminated from the card will take place. Six events in all are down on the program, including a sprint match race between Paddy O'Sullivan Hehir and John Bedell, which is expected to be the stellar event of the afternoon's sport. Besides the match there will be a one-mile handicap, two-mile invitation and a five-mile open for the money chasers, while the simonpures will compete in an Australian pursuit race and a two-third mile handicap event.

COUNCIL WANTS SUBWAY.

Opposes Central's Plan to Erect a Foot Bridge.

Garwood, April 20.—A subway or nothing was the ultimatum of the Garwood Council to Chief Engineer Osgood, of the Central Railroad, Monday night. Mr. Osgood, who attended the meeting, said that the company is anxious to erect a signal bridge over its tracks at Centre street, and that if the Council would grant permission it would make it a foot bridge.

At present the crossing is at grade and closed to wagon traffic by a high board fence.

Waves Sweep Houses at Asbury.

Two summer homes on the sea front at Asbury Park, one owned by Dr. John Taylor, are in danger of being undermined and destroyed by the onrush of the water. The sea bulkhead broke yesterday and in spite of the efforts of L. D. Van Note, the New Jersey Road Commissioner, and a force of men, assisted by a number of citizens, a section of it 150 feet long was carried away last night. Bags of sand were used in an attempt to patch up the break, but the next high tide swept them out to sea. The verandas of the two houses were undermined and carried away yesterday, and unless the stiff northwesterly gale subsides it is feared that the buildings proper will go.

PERSONAL.

Miss Madeline Miner, daughter of Mrs. Mary Miner, of Prescott place, has been removed to the contagious disease ward at Muhlenberg Hospital suffering from an attack of scarlet fever.

Y. W. C. A. TO CONDUCT MOTHER GOOSE PARTY

The Young Women's Christian Association invites its members and their friends to a Mother Goose party tomorrow evening at the Association rooms. Arrangements have been been made by a very efficient committee, with Mrs. T. T. Barrows as chairman, to give all of the Mother Goose family and visitors a jolly good time. The Junior members are not invited this time—it is a party for girls over 16 years of age and we hope many will come in costume and let the others guess whom they represent from Little Bo Peep to Old King Cole. There will be Mother Goose games and jingles and fun for all.

The outing on Saturday will be a walk to Washington Rock, if the weather is clear. This outing is for Juniors and Seniors, and any young woman who wishes to join us for a jaunt to the mountain.

Members of gymnasium classes will close the class work with an indoor track meet in about two weeks, when they hope to break the record in running high and broad jumping.

Surprised Mr. and Mrs. Pope.

A surprise party was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Pope at their home on Summit avenue last night, the occasion being the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Pope. Euchre was the feature of the evening. There were five tables in play. Mrs. John Snyder received the honors for the women and Charles B. Pope the honors for the men. Refreshments and a social time was enjoyed afterward.

Miss Kirch Surprised.

Miss Elizabeth Kirch was the guest of honor at a surprise party tendered to her at the home of Dr. P. J. Zeglio on Somerset street last night, which was attended by about twenty-five young people. During the evening the Misses Gretchen Giebler and Alma Haynes rendered piano selections. Games and dancing also afforded amusement for the guests.

Sesame Club to Meet.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the residence of Miss Cook, 144 Crescent avenue.

WOMAN MAKES PROTEST.

Objects to Assessment, Saying Land Was Damaged.

Westfield, April 20.—Miss Lucy P. Worth, trustee, through her attorney, Frederick S. Taggart, filed a lengthy objection with the Town Council Monday night against the confirmation of the report of the commissioners of assessment for sidewalk laid in front of the Worth property in South avenue.

Miss Worth sets forth that handsome shade trees were cut down in changing the grade, that soil was carted away from the property, and that the sidewalk was not properly laid.

Miss Worth claims that the land was damaged rather than improved. The Council deferred action upon the assessment until next Monday night.

"Linen Fakers" Fined.

Two "Irish Linen Fakirs," Francesco Frucie and Vincenzo Fivirica, both Italians, were picked up yesterday morning by Detective Sergeant John Flynn and this morning the two men were fined $10 each by City Judge Runyon. The fine was paid and the swindlers got out of town. They are swindlers of the kind who prey upon the credulity of women. Selling a mercerized cotton as linen and making abnormal profits on the stuff. Sergeant Flynn is to be congratulated in having prevented further depredations upon the pocketsbooks of the women of the city.

Dr. W. L. Russell Honored.

Dr. William L. Russell, son-in-law of the late Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Lewis, of this city, who was formerly assistant physician at Willard State Hospital, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and for nearly seven years medical inspector of the New York State Commission, has been appointed superintendent of Long Island State Hospital at Brooklyn to succeed the late Dr. Oliver M. Dewing. Dr. Russell will assume his new duties about May 15. Both Dr. and Mrs. Russell are well-known here.

Foreman of Federal Grand Jury.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman who was selected as a member of the Federal Grand Jury yesterday, has been further honored by being chosen as foreman of that distinguished body. The first session of the jury will be held at Trenton today.

John O'Sullivan, of East Second street, left today for San Francisco, where he will visit his uncle, Anthony Ford.

THE RETURN VISIT

"I understand that you have some visitors from the country at your house," said Mrs. Wilson, cheerily, when she met Mrs. Warburton waiting for the car on the corner. "That makes a pleasant change."

Mrs. Warburton coughed—one of those noncommittal coughs that may mean almost anything.

"Yes," she said, "they are relatives of my husband from down in the country, where we stayed part of last summer. They came up to do some fall shopping and, of course, camped down on us."

"Of course," chirruped Mrs. Wilson. "It's a case of turn about. Now you have a chance to repay them for your delightful stay on the farm. I think it's so nice to have a big house and—"

"You just try having a big house some time and see how you like it," suggested Mrs. Warburton, grimly. "Not that these aren't the nicest people in the world," she said, hastily, recalling Mrs. Wilson's predilection for retailing gossip, "but it was rather unexpected, if the truth must be told. When I invited them last summer in a general sort of way I certainly never expected five of them to come piling in on me after telephoning from downtown."

"Five?" said Mrs. Wilson, elevating here eyebrows.

"Five," repeated Mrs. Warburton. "My husband's brother and his wife and the three girls. What do you think of that? And me just breaking in an immigrant maid that never saw a gas range until last week!

"You can talk all you like," went on Mrs. Warburton, "about paying up for visiting on the farm by entertaining your country relatives in town, but let me tell you they get the best of it."

"Why, I don't see—" began Mrs. Wilson.

"Of course you don't," retorted Mrs. Warburton, decisively, "because you've never been through it. When James and I were in the country in June with little Bobbie these people never had to do a hand's turn for us. At least they didn't seem to feel called upon to do anything to entertain us and we were satisfied to be let alone to wander around in the woods or sit in the shade while they went on with their work as though we weren't on earth. The only time they put themselves out was when they got up a picnic and it would have been a lot better if they had never thought of it. We went trailing off to some creek in a wagon without springs and sat down to a cold lunch in the damp woods, eating stuff overrun with ants and fighting mosquitoes, and little Bobbie fell into the creek and was dried out behind a blackberry bush."

"The idea!" said Mrs. Wilson, peering anxiously up the street for the missing trolley car.

"Yes, but when they come up here and pile in on top of us we have to turn everything upside down to entertain them," went on Mrs. Warburton, bitterly. "Oh, yes, bless you! Like most women from the country, the girls want to go trailing about gaping in at the windows of the big stores. So I have to pilot them around. You know I detest shopping—I don't go downtown once a month. Honestly, I've been in some of those stores so often in the last few days that I believe the house detectives are keeping an eye on me, expecting to see me pick up a waist or a pair of shoes."

"Why, you poor thing!" said Mrs. Wilson, sympathetically.

"But that isn't the worst," continued the indignant hostess. "Oh, dear, no! James has to come in for his share of it. After dragging me all over town every day until I'm tired out, they have to haul us both out to a theater nearly every night. Why, I need a rest cure."

"You can hardly blame them, though," argued Mrs. Wilson. "They don't have big stores or theaters at home, you know."

"That's not my fault," snapped Mrs. Warburton. "Why should I be made to suffer for the shortcomings of the rural districts? Country people think that city people live in a whirl of excitement and have nothing on their minds except racing downtown to shop in the daytime, tearing home on crowded elevated trains to eat a picked-up dinner and dashing back downtown again to the theater. I declare, as James says, I'm all in!"

"Why, you poor dear!" exclaimed Mrs. Wilson. "You must be really fagged out!"

"Well, I am," admitted Mrs. Warburton, "but don't mention a word to anybody, because they're James' relatives and really they're the nicest people in the world."

"When they are at home," suggested Mrs. Wilson, motioning to the motorman.

"Exactly," said Mrs. Warburton.

Won by Diplomacy.

In 1747 Mr. John Brown was invited to become the pastor of a church at Hingham. There was but one opponent to his settlement, a man whom Mr. Brown won over by a stroke of good humor. He asked for the grounds of his opposition. "I like your person and your manner," was the reply, "but your preaching, sir, I disapprove." "Then," said Mr. Brown, "we are agreed. I do not like my preaching very well myself, but how great a folly it is for you and me to set up our opinion against that of the whole parish." The force of this reasoning appealed to the man, and he at once withdrew his objections.

THE DAWN OF GENIUS.

He struck a pose, as if to say:
"Good people, please observe
How great I am." 'A fraud," cried they,
"But we admire your nerve!"

"Oh, well," he answered, posing still,
For that you have my thanks;
The men whose fame the world doth fill
Were first looked on as cranks."

And thereupon humanity
He started in to score
And cursed the world's inanity,
Till he could curse no more.

And in the rancor of his heart
He dipped his pen and wrote.
Forthwith the world woke with a start
And hailed him man of note.

Beating Mrs. Lot.

"It was not so very wonderful that when Lot's wife looked back she turned into a pillar of salt."

"Not a very wonderful thing to have happened in the age of miracles perhaps, but nothing so wonderful happens in these prosaic days."

"Oh, I don't know; we were going out Main street last evening and when my chauffeur looked back he turned into a telegraph pole."

CHRISTMAS EVE.

The Burglar—Gimme all your money.
The Married Man—Sorry, old chap, but my wife beat you to it by about a week.

Another Change.

The juicy watermelon's fled,
The summer vegetable has sped;
In their place the sausage looms,
And the dyspeptic mince pie booms.

How It Struck Him.

"Behold the wondrous beauties of yon sunset sky," exclaimed the poet. "How prodigal nature is with its resplendent glories."

"Yes," answered the busy publisher, in an absent-minded tone, "it is going some to throw in a colored supplement every day."

The History Class.

Prof. Curt—Now, young ladies, attention. Miss Frivol, what did Caesar say to Brutus when the latter struck him?

Miss Frivol (with a giggle)—I suppose he said it was real rude in him to cut an old friend.

Her Revenge.

"She doesn't appear to be very happy."

"No, she married her husband for revenge."

"Hated him, eh?"

"No, hated the girl he was engaged to."

His Chance for Comfort.

"Can you be comfortable in bed while your brother walks the streets?" asked the social reformer.

"Yes," was the reply, "for my brother always hogs the covers."

WELL! WELL!

Miss Kidder—Ssh! Carrie has dyed her hair black. Don't tell anybody.

Miss Askitt—Is it a secret?

Miss Kidder—Yes; she wants to keep it dark.

Queer Language.

Bargains aren't found at a bar
Nor do barnacles grow on a barn;
Carbuncles don't grow on a car,
Nor do pharmacists work on a farm.

The Brute.

His Wife—And did you think of me during your absence?

Her Husband—You bet I did. That's why I stayed away so long.

Not So Big.

"I see by the papers that Taft is alarmed about his size."

"He will feel better when he stacks his size up against the size of Texas."

She Has To.

"Is your wife a woman to mince matters?"

"She has to when she makes the pies."

One of the chief beauties of a college education is the fact that it comes at the time when a boy would otherwise be getting a street and pool hall education.—Sunday Magazine of the Cleveland Leader.

HAPPINESS.

To the convict it means getting out.

To the social climber it means getting in.

To the hypochondriac it means getting well.

To the ambitious man it means getting there.

To the religious it means getting to heaven.

To the unhappily married it means getting loose.

To the young man in love it means getting "solid."

Happiness means different things to different people.

To the selfish man it means getting what he wants.

To the young woman in love it means getting kissed.

To the philanthropist it means getting other people what they want.

In any case you will notice that "happiness" and "getting" are pretty closely related.—Sunday Magazine of the Pittsburg Dispatch.

CHAPTER XX.

The Notes and a Bargain.

I went back slowly to where the woman sat alone. She smiled rather oddly as I drew near, and pointed to the chair Bronson had vacated.

"Sit down, Mr. Blakeley," she said, "I am going to take a few minutes of your valuable time."

"Certainly." I sat down opposite her and glanced at a cuckoo clock on the wall. "I am sorry, but I have only a few minutes. If you—" She laughed a little, not very pleasantly, and opening a small black fan covered with spangles, waved it slowly.

"The fact is," she said, "I think we are about to make a bargain."

"A bargain?" I asked incredulously. "You have a second advantage of me. You know my name"—I paused suggestively and she took the cue.

"I am Mrs. Conway," she said, and flicked a crumb off the table with an overmanicured finger.

The name was scarcely a surprise. I had already surmised that this might be the woman whom rumor credited as being Bronson's common-law wife. Rumor, I remembered, had said other things even less pleasant, things which had been brought out at Bronson's arrest for forgery.

"We met last under less fortunate circumstances," she was saying. "I have been fit for nothing since that terrible day. And you—you had a broken arm, I think."

"I still have it," I said, with a lame attempt at jocularity; "but to have escaped at all was a miracle. We have much, indeed, to be thankful for."

"I suppose we have," she said carelessly, "although sometimes I doubt it." She was looking somberly toward the door through which her late companion had made his exit.

"You sent for me—" I said.

"Yes, I sent for you." She roused herself and sat erect. "Now, Mr. Blakeley, have you found those papers?"

"The papers? What papers?" I parried. I needed time to think.

"Mr. Blakeley," she said quietly, "I think we can lay aside all subterfuge. In the first place let me refresh your mind about a few things. The Pittsburg police are looking for the survivors of the car Ontario; there are three that I know of—yourself, the young woman with whom you left the scene of the wreck, and myself. The wreck, you will admit, was a fortunate one for you."

I nodded without speaking.

"At the time of the collision you were in rather a hole," she went on, looking at me with a disagreeable smile. "You were, if I remember, accused of a rather atrocious crime. There was a lot of corroborative evidence, was there not? I seem to remember a dirk and the murdered man's pocket-book in your possession, and a few other things that were—well, rather unpleasant."

I was thrown a bit off my guard.

"You remember, also," I said quickly, "that a man disappeared from the car, taking my clothes, papers and everything."

"I remember that you said so." Her tone was quietly insulting, and I bit my lip at having been caught. It was no time to make a defense.

"You have missed one calculation," I said coldly, "and that is the discovery of the man who left the train."

"You have found him?" She bent forward, and again I regretted my hasty speech. "I knew it; I said so."

"We are going to find him," I asserted, with a confidence I did not feel. "We can produce at any time proof that a man left the Flier a few miles beyond the wreck. And we can find him, I am positive."

"But you have not found him yet?" She was clearly disappointed. "Well, so be it. Now for our bargain. You will admit that I am no fool."

I made no such admission, and she smiled mockingly.

"How flattering you are!" she said. "Very well. Now for the premises. You take to Pittsburg four notes held by the Mechanics' national bank, to have Mr. Gilmore, who is ill, declare his indorsement of them forged.

"On the journey back to Pittsburg two things happen to you: You lose your clothing, your valise and your papers, including the notes, and you are accused of murder. In fact, Mr. Blakeley, the circumstances were most singular, and the evidence—well, almost conclusive."

I was completely at her mercy, but I gnawed my lip with irritation.

"Now for the bargain." She leaned over and lowered her voice. "A fair exchange, you know. The minute you put those four notes in my hand—that minute the blow to my head has caused complete forgetfulness as to the events of that awful morning. I am the only witness, and I will be silent. Do you understand? They will call off their dogs."

My head was buzzing with the strangeness of the idea.

"But," I said, striving to gain time, "I haven't the notes. I can't give you what I haven't got."

"You have had the case continued," she said sharply. "You expect to find them. Another thing," she added slowly, watching my face, "if you don't get them soon, Bronson will have them. They have been offered to him already, but at a prohibitive price."

"But," I said, bewildered, "what is your object in coming to me? If Bronson will get them anyhow—"

She shut her fan with a click and her face was not particularly pleasant to look at.

"You are dense," she said insolently. "I want those papers—for myself, not for Andy Bronson."

"Then the idea is," I said, ignoring her tone, "that you think you have me in a hole, and that if I find those papers and give them to you you will let me out. As I understand it, our friend Bronson, under those circumstances, will also be in a hole."

She nodded.

"The notes would be of no use to you for a limited length of time," I went on, watching her narrowly. "If they are not turned over to the state's attorney within a reasonable time there will have to be a nolle pros—that is, the case will simply be dropped for lack of evidence."

"A week would answer, I think," she said slowly. "You will do it, then."

I laughed, although I was not especially cheerful.

"No, I'll not do it. I expect to come across the notes any time now, and I expect just as certainly to turn them over to the state's attorney when I get them."

She got up suddenly, pushing her chair back with a noisy grating sound that turned many eyes toward us.

"You're more of a fool than I thought you," she sneered, and left me at the table.

CHAPTER XXI.

McKnight's Theory.

I confess I was staggered. The people at the surrounding tables, after glancing curiously in my direction, looked away again.

I got my hat and went out in a very uncomfortable frame of mind. That she would inform the police at once of what she knew I never doubted, unless possibly she would give a day or two's grace in the hope that I would change my mind.

I reviewed the situation as I waited for a car. Two passed me going in the opposite direction and on the first one I saw Bronson, his hat over his eyes, his arms folded, looking moodily ahead. Was it imagination? or was the small man huddled in the corner of the rear seat Hotchkiss?

As the car rolled on I found myself smiling. The alert little man was for all the world like a terrier, ever on the scent, and scouring about in every direction.

I found McKnight at the Incubator, with his coat off, working with enthusiasm and a manicure file over the horn of his auto.

"It's the worst horn I ever ran across," he groaned, without looking up, as I came in. "The blankety-blank thing won't blow."

He punched it savagely, finally eliciting a faint throaty croak.

"Sounds like croup," I suggested. "My sister-in-law uses camphor and goose grease for it; or how about a spice poultice?"

But McKnight never sees any jokes but his own. He flung the horn clattering into a corner and collapsed sulkily into a chair.

"Now," I said, "if you're through manicuring that horn, I'll tell you about my talk with the lady in black."

"What's wrong?" asked McKnight, languidly. "Police watching her, too?"

"Not exactly. The fact is, Rich, there's the mischief to pay."

Stogie came in, bringing a few additions to our comfort. When he went out I told my story.

"You must remember," I said, "that I had seen this woman before the morning of the wreck. She was buying her Pullman ticket when I did. Then the next morning, when the murder was discovered, she grew hysterical and I gave her some whisky. The third and last time I saw her, until to-night, was when she crouched beside the road, after the wreck."

McKnight slid down in his chair until his weight rested on the small of his back and put his feet on the big reading table.

"It's rather a facer," he said. "It's really too good a situation for a commonplace lawyer. It ought to be dramatized. You can't agree, of course; and by refusing you run the chance of jail, at least, and of having Alison brought into publicity, which is out of the question. You say she was at the Pullman window when you were?"

"Yes; I bought her ticket for her. Gave her lower eleven."

"And you took ten?"

"Lower ten."

McKnight straightened up and looked at me.

"Then she thought you were in lower ten."

"I suppose she did, if she thought at all."

"But listen, man." McKnight was growing excited. "What do you figure out of this? The Conway woman knows you have taken the notes to Pittsburg. The probabilities are that she follows you there, on the chance of an opportunity to get them, either for Bronson or herself.

"Nothing doing during the trip over or during the day in Pittsburg; but she learns the number of your berth as you buy it at the Pullman ticket office in Pittsburg and she thinks she sees her chance. No one could have foreseen that that drunken fellow would have crawled into your berth.

"Now, I figure it out this way: She wanted those notes desperately—does still—not for Bronson, but to hold over his head for some purpose. In the night, when everything is quiet, she slips behind the curtains of lower ten, where the man's breathing shows he is asleep. Didn't you say he snored?"

"He did," I affirmed. "But I tell you—"

"Now keep still and listen. She gropes cautiously around in the darkness, finally discovering the wallet under the pillow. Can't you see it yourself?"

He was leaning forward, excitedly, and I could almost see the grewsome tragedy he was depicting.

"She draws out the wallet. Then, perhaps she remembers the alligator bag and on the possibility that the notes are there, instead of in the pocketbook, she gropes around for it. Suddenly, the man awakes and clutches at the nearest object, perhaps her neck chain, which breaks.

"It is all in silence; the man is still stupidly drunk. But he holds her in a tight grip. Then the tragedy. She must get away; in a minute the car will be aroused. Such a woman, on such an errand, does not go without some sort of a weapon, in this case a dagger, which, unlike a revolver, is noiseless.

"With a quick thrust—she's a big woman and a bold one—she strikes. Possibly Hotchkiss is right about the left-hand blow. Harrington may have held her right hand, or perhaps she held the dirk in her left hand as she groped with her right. Then, as the man falls back and his grasp relaxes, she straightens and attempts to get away. The swaying of the car throws her almost into your berth, and, trembling with terror, she crouches behind the curtains of lower ten until everything is still. Then she goes noiselessly back to her berth."

I nodded.

"It seems to fit partly, at least," I said. "In the morning when she found that the crime had been not only fruitless, but that she had searched the wrong berth and killed the wrong man; when she saw me emerge, unhurt, just as she was bracing herself for the discovery of my dead body, then she went into hysterics. You remember, I gave her some whisky.

"It really seems a tenable theory. But, like the Sullivan theory, there are one or two things that don't agree with the rest. For one thing, how did the remainder of that chain get into Alison West's possession?"

"She may have picked it up on the floor."

"We'll admit that," I said; "and I'm sure I hope so. Then how did the murdered man's pocketbook get into the sealskin bag? And the dirk, how account for that, and the blood stains?"

"Now what's the use," asked McKnight aggrievedly, "of my building up beautiful theories for you to pull down? We'll take it to Hotchkiss. Maybe he can tell from the blood stains if the murderer's finger nails were square or pointed."

"Hotchkiss is no fool," I said warmly. "Under all his theories there's a good, hard layer of common sense. And we must remember, Rich, that neither of our theories includes the woman at Doctor Van Kirk's hospital, that the charming picture you have just drawn does not account for Alison West's connection with the case, or for the bits of telegram in the Sullivan fellow's pajamas pocket. You are like the man who put the clock together; you've got half of the works left over."

"Oh, go home," said McKnight, disgustedly. "I'm no Edgar Allan Poe. What's the use of coming here and asking me things if you're so particular?"

With one of his quick changes of mood he picked up his guitar.

"Listen to this," he said. "It is a Hawaiian song about a fat lady, oh, ignorant one! and how she fell off her mule."

But for all the lightness of the words, the voice that followed me down the stairs was anything but cheery.

There was a Kanaka in Balu did dwell,
Who had for his daughter a monstrous fat girl—

he sang in a clear tenor. I paused on the lower floor and listened. He had stopped singing as abruptly as he had begun.

CHAPTER XXII.

At the Boarding House.

I had not been home for 36 hours, since the morning of the preceding day. Johnson was not in sight and I let myself in quietly with my latchkey. It was almost midnight and I had hardly settled myself in the library when the bell rang and I was surprised to find Hotchkiss, much out of breath, in the vestibule.

"Why, come in, Mr. Hotchkiss," I said. "I thought you were going home to go to bed."

"So I was, so I was." He dropped into a chair beside my reading lamp and mopped his face. "And here it is almost midnight and I'm wider awake than ever. I've seen Sullivan, Mr. Blakeley."

"You have!"

"I have," he said, impressively.

"You were following Bronson at eight o'clock. Was that when it happened?"

"Something of the sort. When I left you at the door of the restaurant I turned and almost ran into a plain-clothes man from the central office. I know him pretty well; once or twice he has taken me with him on interesting bits of work. He knows my hobby.

"You know him, too, probably. It was the man Arnold, the detective whom the state's attorney has had watching Bronson."

Johnson being otherwise occupied, I had asked for Arnold myself.

I nodded.

"Well, he stopped me at once; said he'd been on the fellow's tracks since early morning and had had no time for luncheon. Bronson, it seems, isn't eating much these days. I at once jotted down the fact, because it argued that he was being bothered by the man with the notes."

"It might point to other things," I suggested. "Indigestion, you know."

Hotchkiss ignored me. "Well, Arnold had some reason for thinking that Bronson would try to give him the slip that night, so he asked me to stay around the private entrance there while he ran across the street and get something to eat. It seemed a fair presumption that, as he had gone there with a lady they would dine leisurely and Arnold would have plenty of time to get back."

"What about your own dinner?" I asked, curiously.

"Sir," he said, pompously, "I have given you a wrong estimate of Wilson Budd Hotchkiss if you think that a question of dinner would even obtrude itself on his mind at such a time as this."

He was a frail little man and tonight he looked pale with heat and over-exertion.

"Did you have any luncheon?" I asked.

He was somewhat embarrassed at that.

"I—really, Mr. Blakeley, the events of the day were so engrossing—"

"Well," I said, "I'm not going to see you drop on the floor from exhaustion. Just wait a minute."

I went back to the pantry, only to be confronted with rows of locked doors and empty dishes. Downstairs, in the basement kitchen, however, I found two unattractive looking cold chops, some dry bread and a piece of cake, wrapped in a napkin, and from its surreptitious and generally hang-dog appearance destined for the coachman in the stable at the rear. Trays there were none—everything but the chairs and tables seemed under lock and key and there was neither napkin, knife nor fork to be found.

The luncheon was not attractive in appearance, but Hotchkiss ate his cold chops and gnawed at his crusts as though he had been famished, while he told his story.

"I had been there only a few minutes," he said, with a chop in one hand and the cake in the other, "when Bronson rushed out and cut across the street. He's a tall man, Mr. Blakeley, and I had hard work keeping close. It was a relief when he jumped on a passing car, although being well behind, it was a hard run for me to catch him. He had left the lady.

"Once on the car, we simply rode from one end of the line to the other and back again. I suppose he was passing the time, for he looked at his watch now and then and when I did once get a look at his face it made me—er—uncomfortable. He could have crushed me like a fly, sir."

I had brought Mr. Hotchkiss a glass of wine and he was looking better. He stopped to finish it, declining with a wave of his hand to have it refilled, and continued:

"About nine o'clock or a little later he got off somewhere near Washington circle. He went along one of the residence streets there, turned to his left a square or two, and rang a bell. He had been admitted when I got there, but I guessed from the appearance of the place that it was a boarding house.

"I waited a few minutes and rang the bell. When a maid answered it, I asked for Mr. Sullivan. Of course there was no Mr. Sullivan there.

"I said I was sorry; that the man I was looking for was a new boarder. She was sure there was no such boarder in the house; the only new arrival was a man on the third floor—she thought his name was Stuart.

"'My friend has a cousin by that name,' I said. 'I'll go up and see.'

"She wanted to show me up, but I said it was unnecessary. So after telling me it was the bedroom and sitting-room on the third floor front, I went up.

"I met a couple of men on the stairs, but neither of them paid any attention to me. A boarding house is the easiest place in the world to enter."

"They're not always so easy to leave," I put in, to his evident irritation.

"When I got to the third story I took out a bunch of keys and posted myself by a door near the ones the girl had indicated. I could hear voices in one of the front rooms, but could not understand what they said.

"There was no violent dispute, but a steady hum. Then Bronson jerked the door open. If he had stepped into the hall he would have seen me fitting a key into the door before me. But he spoke before he came out.

TO BE CONTINUED.

"Suddenly the Man Awakes and Clutches at the Nearest Object."

COUNTRY CLUB PROGRAM

"Twelfth Night" to Be Given on June 7, by Coburn Players.

GOLF COURSE IMPROVEMENTS.

Links Will Cover 6,000 Yards—Fourth of July Celebration—Twenty New Members.

The Plainfield Country Club has fixed May 7 for the annual field day and reception. That day members may bring friends to the club, without restriction, and all members of the Watchung Hunt, Park Golf and Park Clubs will be given the free use of the links and tennis courts, as well as to order meals at the club and attend the afternoon reception and dance in the evening.

The out-of-door Shakespearian play, "Twelfth Night," will be given on the club grounds on the evening of June 7. The performance will be given by the Coburn Players.

President Leighton Calkins announced at the April meeting of the Board of Trustees Tuesday night that plans were being perfected for piping the golf course this spring. The amount received for that purpose now amounts to $1,200 and only $200 additional is required for the work. Plans and specifications have been drawn and a contract has been made whereby the work will be completed within four or five weeks after the balance of the cash is subscribed. This will be one of the greatest and most far-reaching improvements ever made to the links and will enable the club within a year or two to offer its members an entirely different grade of putting greens from anything which Plainfield has had before. With the links lengthened out to a full 6,000 yards by September, and with first-class greens composed of rich thick turf, always closely cut, rolled, and free from worms, Plainfield will soon possess one of the best courses in the entire State.

The trustees have decided to have an evening Fourth of July celebration, with an extensive display of fireworks. George S. Clay has been appointed chairman of a special committee to arrange the details, with power to appoint members of the club at large on the committee. The committee will comprise about fifteen members and will have power to issue invitations to residents of Plainfield who are not members.

The chairmen of the golf and tennis committees are arranging their schedules of events and it is expected that a number of new prizes will be offered by the members this season. The play for the golf spring handicap will begin April 30. The lower tennis courts are now in order for play. The upper courts are to be partially rebuilt and will not be in commission for a week longer. It is planned to offer golf prizes for boys to be played for Saturday mornings.

New horse-sheds are to be erected adjacent to the stable where members driving to the club can leave their rigs if they wish. The old automobile plaza will be suitably equipped. The old horse-sheds are now open to automobiles and members who leave horses there, or who use the main driveway in approaching the club with horses, do so at their own risk.

The club starts the season with twenty new active members just elected, more than twice the number usually received at the April meeting. A large number of new associate members and juniors have also been elected and the membership is again approaching the limit. Julius E. Erickson has been elected a trustee to fill the vacancy caused by Willard Wadsworth's removal from the city, and the former has been elected chairman of the golf committee, a position he is familiar with: also the handicapping.

Unity Lodge Meets Tonight.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., will hold an important meeting tonight. After conferring the second rank on two candidates, matters pertaining to the funeral benefit association will be discussed. It is important that all members over forty years of age be present and the proposed changes affect them especially.

Juniors Fourth Anniversary.

The fourth anniversary of Plainfield Council, No. 293, Jr. O. U. A. M., will be held Monday night in Jr. O. U. A. M. hall. It will be a "ladies' night" affair and it is expected that the State officers will be present. An entertainment and refreshments will be provided.

Visited Borough School.

Four members of the Rahway school board visited the borough school yesterday and inspected the manual training department.

MRS. MARY J. SPENCER DIED THIS MORNING

Mrs. Mary J. Spencer, widow of the late H. Newton Spencer, former tax collector and surrogate for eight years, died at her home 154 Somerset street, this morning after an illness of six weeks, in her seventieth year. Mrs. Spencer is survived by a son and daughter, Gibbey Spencer and Mrs. William Force, at whose home she died.

The funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock and the services will be conducted by Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church. The interment will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Mrs. Spencer was born in Rahway and came to Plainfield about forty years ago and had lived here ever since. During that time she had made many friends among the people of the borough and will be missed by a large circle there, where her kindly disposition and her beautiful character made her conspicuous among her friends.

OFFICERS OF GRACE M.E. ELECTED LAST NIGHT

The meeting of the official board of Grace M. E. church last night resulted in selecting the officers of the church for the ensuing year and the granting of a vacation to the pastor, Rev. Ora J. Shoop. The official board will consist of: President, the pastor; chairman in the absence of the pastor, E. A. Vermeule; secretary, Dr. Raymond F. Stevens; treasurer, J. L. Bennett. Advisory committee, Dr. H. K. Carroll, Andrew Lutkins, E. A. Vermeule and E. E. Winckler. Finance committee, E. A. Vermeule, Charles W. Hardin, Andrew Lutkins, E. E. Winckler and J. L. Bennett.

Other committees announced were: Pulpit supply, George W. Dalley, Stephen H. Beeching and George C. Nelson. The organist and choir director will be Miss Alice J. Carroll with Miss Mary Stevens, assistant. The ushers are J. Russell Harden, chief usher; A. M. Vanderbeek, Leroy Vanderbeek, Raymond Miller and Dr. Raymond F. Stevens. Official announcer, J. Russell Harden; assistant, Raymond Miller. Committee on benevolence, W. J. Conroy, S. H. Beeching and D. W. Winckler. The pastor's vacation was granted and he will take three weeks preferably in July.

NEWARK'S AUDITOR GONE; BELIEVED TO BE ILL

City Auditor George F. Forman, of Newark, has disappeared under somewhat mysterious circumstances and the authorities are at a loss to account for his queer actions. Mr. Forman left a note in his desk urging the appointment of Andrew K. Brady, the deputy auditor, in his place and another short letter in which he practically resigns his position without giving any reason.

Mr. Forman was last seen on Saturday morning when he bade goodby to his family, saying he was going on a business trip to Boston. It is feared that the heavy duties imposed upon him by the continual increase in his work has caused a nervous breakdown and that the missing man will be found occupying a cot in some eastern hospital. The family at first denied that there was anything strange in the departure of Mr. Forman, but after persistent questioning acknowledged that they were alarmed by his absence. So far as known there is no reason to believe that there is anything wrong with the books of Mr. Forman's department.

Bees Attack Farmer.

William Conover, who has a farm near Mount Bethel, is in a serious condition as the result of being attacked by bees as he was working on the farm in preparation for summer. Conover was working around bee hives when he upset a hive and the bees came out covering him and stinging him unmercifully. His face swollen so as to be hardly recognizable and his eyes are closed. It is feared that some of the stings struck him in the eyeball.

Properties Change Ownership.

Charles H. Hand has sold a house and lot at 645 East Sixth street to Charles Mehlenbeck; also the propty at 652 South avenue to Mrs. Sophia Hoffman; a lot on Woodland avenue to John Dahl; a lot on Evona avenue to Alexander Miller, and a lot on West Fourth street near Hunter avenue to Mrs. M. Gise-Saunders.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will speak at the West End Tabernacle tonight.

ASA D. POPE PASSES AWAY IN HIS SIXTIETH YEAR

Asa D. Pope, aged 59 years, died this morning in his apartments in the New Madison, from kidney trouble, with which he had been a sufferer for a long time. Owing to poor health in recent years he was able to work only part of the time.

Mr. Pope was probably one of the best known members of the Knights of Pythias in this State, being identified with Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, for a great many years. He was also a member of Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men, No. 118, I. O. O. F., of this city, and Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of New Market. He had worked his way through the chairs in Perseverance Lodge, and for several years had been the lodge representative to the Grand Lodge. He was also a member of the law committee of the order. He was always deeply interested in the work of the Knights of Pythias and devoted much time and effort to promoting its welfare.

Mr. Pope was born at Dunellen and removed to this city seventeen years ago, where he continued to reside ever since. He is survived by a wife, two sons, James L. Pope, who is employed at the Potter Press Company, and George W. Pope, who is employed at the Public Service Corporation; also two brothers, James C. Pope and Howard A. Pope, of this city.

The funeral services will be held from the late residence, 1 New Madison avenue, Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

CONGREGATIONAL PASTORS ATTEND CONFERENCE

With the election of officers the 150 delegates at the forty-second annual meeting of the Congregational Conference of New Jersey adjourned in the Grove Street Congregational church, East Orange, yesterday. The Rev. Dr. John L. Scudder, of Jersey City, was asked to become moderator of the conference, but declined, and the Rev. Harry E. Jackson, of Upper Montclair, was chosen.

Other officers named are the Rev. Dr. Merrill E. Gates, of Washington, D. C., vice moderator; the Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of this city, corresponding secretary; James H. Mark Twain Nearing Death.

Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) is lying at the point of death at his home in Redding, Conn., and it is not believed that the great humorist and writer can live through the day. He will be mourned by an entire country. The author of "Innocents Abroad" had more friends than any other writer of humorous fiction in this country and perhaps in the world. Mr. Clemmens recently returned from Bermuda, where he had passed the winter, but the vacation did not benefit him any.

Cantata in Westfield Church.

A sacred cantata, the "Seven Last Words From the Cross," by Thomas Du Bois, will be sung at a special service in the Congregational church at Westfield on Sunday afternoon next, at 4:30. The soloists will be Miss Dorothy E. Beaumont, of New York, soprano; Clarence M. Smock, of New York, tenor, and Alfred M. Best, of Westfield, baritone, supported by a chorus of twenty-five voices.

Miss Carroll to Assist.

The Bound Brook Choral Society, consisting of fifty voices, will give Cowen's cantata, "The Rose Maiden," under the direction of Arthur Grandine Drake at that place tomorrow night. Among the soloists is Miss Grace J. Carroll, contralto soloist in the Crescent Avenue church's choir.

A Baby Daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Giraud H. Underhill, of Watchung, are the happy parents of a young daughter who made her advent yesterday morning.

ALVIN HOAGLAND FOUND

Four-Year-Old Discovered Wet and Crying Near Scotch Plains.

TOOK RIDE WITH A STRANGER.

Hunting Parties Searched in Vain for Boy Whom Bruce Rutledge Picked Up Eating Lollypop.

Little Alvin Hoagland, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Hoagland, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, was picked up dirty tired and wet at Farragut road near East Front St. last night crying as if his heart was broken and told a tale of woe to his rescuer which would have melted the lolly-pop he had eaten. Bruce Rutledge, the rescuer, got from the youngster a story which would under all circumstances be worthy of the strictest investigation of the police.

The little fellow said that a man had come along offering him a ride in his buggy and after taking him a short distance and treating him to the aforesaid lolly-pop put him out of the vehicle and left him alone in the road away from friends and mother.

Young Hoagland was missed along in the evening about 6:30 and as it became dark and he did not appear his parents became worried and notified the police at North Plainfield. Mr. Rutledge after picking the boy up took him to Lee's hotel in Scotch Plains and from there word was telephoned to Captain Frederickson at police headquarters and his family notified. The boy was returned to his parents at 10 o'clock last night.

In the meantime people in the neighborhood had been scouring the surrounding country hunting for the lost child. Every street and road in the borough was thoroughly searched in the hope of finding the lost one and when the news came over the wire that the boy had been found there was much rejoicing in the Hoagland household.

Robert Max Breaks His Leg.

Robert Max, colored, employed by the Union Beef Company, is detained at home with a broken leg, the result of an accident a few days ago. He was unloading a box from the beef wagon for delivery at a local butcher shop, when the box slipped, struck his leg and fractured the large bone. He was assisted to his home and a physician was summoned to set the bone.

Public Meeting of Methodists.

Thomas L. Wilson, vice-president of the International Association of Machinists, and E. J. Lynch, of Newark, an officer of the Metal Polishers' Union, will address the members of the local lodge of the association at a public meeting in Eagle Hall, East Second street, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. All machinists of the city and others interested are invited.

Changes in Church Quartet.

Clifford A. Bradier, organist and choirmaster of the First Presbyterian church, announces that the quartet for the coming year, beginning May 1, will be comprised of Miss Elizabeth DeCant, of Ossining, N. Y., soprano; Miss Winifred Carroll, of this city, contralto; Aleck MacGowan, of East Orange, tenor; Charles P. Titsworth, of this city, baritone.

Percy Chapman Going to Paris.

Percy Chapman, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Chapman, of West Seventh street, and a student at Princeton University, will leave tomorrow for Paris, where he will spend sometime learning the French language. He has selected an academic course and desires to become proficient in speaking French.

Commissioners to Meet Monday.

The assessment commissioners appointed by the Court of Common Pleas to estimate and assess benefits conferred by the macadamizing of certain streets will meet at the Mayor's office Monday night at 7:30 o'clock to confer with any interested property-owners.

Jake Bergen Arrested.

Jacob Bergen, of North Plainfield, was arrested on complaint of his wife by Marshal Pope this morning for being continually drunk and failing to support her. He will be given a hearing tomorrow.

Dinner at Holy Cross.

The dinner to be given by the women of the Church of the Holy Cross in the parish house will take place rain or shine from 6:30 to 8 o'clock tonight.

STAR IN "HER SON" A PLAINFIELD WOMAN

Beatrice Irwin, who belongs in this city, has a stage record which includes many illustrious names and performances in many sections of the world. Making her debut with Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry on their great American tour, her first appearance being in "Robespierre," she played Annette in "The Bells" and ingenue in many of the plays presented on this tour. Returning to her home in London she was engaged to originate the character of the Scotch girl in Sir Charles Wyndam's production of "Mrs. Dane's Defence." Then she joined James Welch's company, presenting "The New Clown," at Terry's theatre, and succeeding Miss Boucicoult in the leading role. Then she came again to America, under contract with Charles Frohman, and played in "There's Many a Slip" at the Garrick and with Margaret Anglin in the Empire Theatre Stock Company. Her next part was Lady Mary in William Gillette's production of "The Admirable Crichton." She then retired temporarily, to visit her sister at Shanghai. While there her presence was discovered by a party of professionals and amateurs who were preparing to present "Katie," and she was prevailed upon to take a prominent part. A tour of Australia, as leading woman in J. C. Williamson's company, followed, and then she returned to this country and accepted the part of Cicely in the new play, "Her Son."

REV. DR. CHAS. A. EATON TO ADDRESS GRADUATES

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, has been secured to deliver the commencement address at the graduation exercises of the North Plainfield High School, which will be held in the Plainfield theatre on Friday night, June 24.

Members of the borough school board are highly gratified at being able to secure Dr. Eaton to deliver the address. It is likely that two of Dr. Eaton's children will be students in the borough high school next year.

COLORED MEDICAL ASSO. PLAN TO HOLD MEETING.

The North Jersey Medical Association, colored, will hold a public meeting at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Three papers will be presented, one by Dr. W. P. Urling, dentist, of Newark; Dr. A. I. Lawrence, of Elizabeth, and Dr. Peter Ghee, of Jersey City.

Dr. J. F. Lawson, of East Third street, will entertain the association at dinner at his home on June 6 and in May the annual banquet of the association will be held at Davis' parlors, Newark, when the wives of the members will be entertained.

Funeral of Horace Sherwin.

The funeral services of Horace Sherwin were held from the late home on Richmond street, at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and were largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Edwin Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, officiated. There were many beautiful floral tributes. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were L. W. Randolph, Armstrong Mulford, Morris C. Van Arsdale, Robert D. Dick, Dudley S. Miller and John H. Rowland.

Freeholders to Decorate Graves.

According to a new law, the Union County Board of Freeholders, through its special committee of which J. Hervey Doane is chairman, will be obliged to decorate the graves of all war veterans in the county; also place an American flag at each one. This will be done in connection with the annual observance of Memorial Day. There are about 1,100 soldiers' graves in the county, including 300 in this city. The expense will come out of the county treasury.

Removed to New York Hospital.

Albert Kurzhals, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Kurzhals, of this city, who has been seriously ill at Muhlenberg Hospital with painters' colic, was removed to the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, today, where he will be given special treatment in the hopes that he may recover.

G. A. R. to Be Entertained.

G. H. UNDERHILL IS HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY

G. H. Underhill, of Watchung, was held in $150 bail to await the action of the Somerset grand jury, on the charge of assault preferred by Freeman Strait, at a hearing heard before Justice Snape in the borough police court yesterday afternoon. Testimony that was offered in the case was identically the same as presented last Thursday when Strait was the defendant and Underhill the complainant. When the charge against Straight was dismissed last Thursday, the latter had Underhill arrested.

The fracas took place on Saturday night, April 9, at Watchung. In court yesterday S. S. Swackhamer represented Underhill and Josiah Stryker, of Trenton, was attorney for Strait. The hearing was enlivened by several tilts between counsel and witnesses. Underhill was the main witness in his own behalf; his two sons and daughter also appeared on the stand. Mrs. Strait, Constable Clemens, Dr. A. H. Dundon and Mr. Strait were witnesses for the complainant.

IMPROVEMENTS AT TRINITY INCLUDE NEW ORGAN

At a special meeting of the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church in the church parlors last night, the subject of building an addition to the rear of the church to accommodate the increased attendance of the Sunday school was thoroughly discussed and the needs for the building were so apparent that the wardens were empowered as a building committee to get estimates and go ahead with the improvement and Messrs. M. F. Gano and F. E. Smith were added to the building committee, making that a committee of five instead of three.

The same committee was also authorized to have the interior and exterior of the church renovated, repaired and painted. When these improvements are completed, the new organ installed, a new carpet laid in the auditorium, the church will be in first class condition and thoroughly equipped for better work.

The music committee of the Consistory, together with F. S. Cutter and A. L. Titsworth was delegated with authority to install the new organ (a gift to the church) and dispose of the old organ.

NEWARK CLASSIS WANT GOVERNOR TO INVESTIGATE

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor, and H. E. Gayle, elder, of Trinity Reformed church; Rev. J. Tucker Lansdale, of Marconnier chapel; Rev. Royal A. Stout, pastor-elect, and James Hansen, elder, of the Netherwood Reformed church, attended the spring meeting of the Classis of Newark, which was held yesterday in the Franklin Reformed church, Nutley. There was a large attendance of ministers and elders of the Classis.

Rev. W. Warren Giles, of the First Reformed church, East Orange, was elected moderator for the coming six months. Uriah McClinchie, of Irvington, was chosen temporary clerk and later Charles B. Condit, of Newark, was elected stated clerk for six months.

It was announced that the examination of Rev. Royal A. Stout, the pastor-elect of the Netherwood Reformed church, for ordination, would be held in the North Reformed church, Newark, on May 21. The date for the ordination has not been fixed as yet. It was also announced that Rev. Edwin E. Davis, who comes from the Presbytery of New Mexico, would be installed pastor of the New York Avenue Reformed church, Newark, on Thursday night, April 28.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, was appointed agent for domestic missions, Sunday-school and young people's societies in the Classis.

Joseph S. Mundy, of Newark, offered a resolution which was adopted asking Governor Fort to investigate the alleged scandal in the Legislature and if the facts were substantiated to have the guilty parties brought to justice.

Sons of Veterans to Meet.

The State officers of the Sons of Veterans will meet with the local members of the order at Reform hall tonight at 8 o'clock to discuss plans for the reorganization of the local camp, which is known as John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Higgins, of Codington avenue, returned home yesterday after a week's visit with friends in Hunterdon county.

COLD BLOODED MURDER

Mrs. Fred J. Covely, of Somerset Place, Victim of Jealous Suitor.

SHOT THROUGH THE TEMPLE.

Woman Stricken Down in Presence of Daughters—Posses in Automobiles Hunting Murderer.

Mrs. Fred Covely, twenty-four years old, of 17 Somerset place, was the victim of a cold blooded murder which was perpetrated at her home in the presence of her two small children at 10:20 o'clock this morning.

The murderer is John Grant, a lad about nineteen years of age, who boarded at the victim's home. Grant used a revolver, shooting his victim in the right temple, the bullet penetrating the young woman's head to the left temple.

The tragedy was enacted in a small pantry in the rear of the kitchen. Mrs. Covely was evidently engaged at her household duties in the room, and was attacked without warning, as there were no signs of a struggle. The victim had fallen sideways and rested in a pool of blood, which was made more ghastly by her brains being scattered about the floor. Death to all appearances was instantaneous.

Jealousy is supposed to be the motive of the crime. It was ascertained from the neighbors that for some time Grant had been forcing his attentions on Mrs. Covely and that she in turn had repulsed him. The victim and her husband, separated last November, and the present whereabouts of Covely is not known.

Mrs. Frank Story, who lives in the house next to the Covely home, was the only person to hear the fatal shot. Mrs. Story declared she heard the pistol shot and a scream and afterward heard a person leave the house. Mrs. Story, however, paid little attention to it and knew nothing of the murder until informed by the neighbors.

It was ascertained by a Daily Press reporter from some of the neighbors that Grant, during the past few weeks, had been known to shoot off a pistol on several occasions. On one day, it is said, he fired off a revolver while at the dinner table and on another occasion in an outhouse in the rear of Mrs. Covely's yard. One of the bullets imbedded itself in a barn in an adjoining yard.

Up to 2:30 o'clock the police had secured no trace of the murderer although several reports came over the wires that Grant had been captued. A suspicious person was arrested while entering the Tottenville ferry house at Perth Amboy at 1 o'clock, but the person proved an albi and was released.

News from the posse parties searching in the mountain district failed to report any clue. Mayor N. B. Smalley, who is in command of one of the automobile parties telephoned from Stirling that no traces of Grant had been discovered. Chief Weiss, who was also in the Coontown, Warrenville and Bernardsville districts, also 'phoned that nothing had been seen or heard of Grant by the residents of those places.

Detective George Totten, of Somerville, and Coroner Haberman reached the house at 1 o'clock and searched the premises without result. Detective Totten has a force of men scouring the western end of Somerset county and the New Brunswick police are equally as active. All of the trolley cars between this city, Bound Brook, Somerville, New Brunswick and Perth Amboy are being closely watched by sleuths of these places.

* It is the opinion of some of the police that Grant is not out of the borough limits and that he has possibly committed suicide. This theory appears plausible because Grant carried the revolver away with him at it has not been found around the premises.

Since the separation Mrs. Covely conducted a boarding house, her patrons being men and women. Among the boarders was James Moore, a brother of the dead woman, and an employe of the United States Express Company, of this city. Before retiring last night he requested Grant to call him at 6:30 o'clock this morning, and Grant did as requested. Moore was delivering goods in the borough when he was apprised of the crime.

After completing the dastardly crime Grant left the house and made his escape. Before going he handed a fifty cent piece to Marion, the four year old daughter of the dead woman. After leaving the house it was reported that he was seen walking up Somerset street, apparently unconcerned as to the enormity of the tragedy, carrying a bouquet of flowers.

It was only a few minutes after

DUNELLEN GIRL TO BE P. H. S. VALEDICTORIAN

Miss Meta Pennock has been selected as valedictorian of the 1910 graduating class of the Plainfield High School. This honor comes to Miss Pennock because of her high standing in scholarship during the four years she has been a student in the Plainfield institution. The salutatory honor is awarded to Miss Margaret Leggett, of Plainfield. Miss Pennock has captured several prizes for proficiency in studies and last year she distinguished herself by excelling at mathematics.

A man giving his name as Charles Smith, and residing at Baltimore, was arrested in New Brunswick yesterday by Officer Lyons, as he got off a Bound Brook car on Albany street, on suspicion of having entered and robbed the lunch room opposite the car barns between Bound Brook and Lincoln, Sunday night. The lunch room is conducted by H. C. Fogel. When he opened the place yesterday morning, he found out that the cash drawer had been robbed, and several slot machines rifled. He remembered having noticed a stranger Sunday night in the place before he had closed up and he fixed his suspicion on him. The same man was seen about the car barns at different times during the night. The exact amount taken is not known, as Mr. Fogel did not know how much was in the cash drawer and the machines. After the robbery had been discovered, Charles H. Langdon, employed at the car barns, called up the New Brunswick police station and stated the man had boarded a trolley car for New Brunswick.

The dance given in Junior O. U. A. M. hall under the auspices of Defender Fire Company was largely attended and a big success. Charles Dodwell was chairman of the committee in charge.

Walter Nelson, a favorite with local ball fans, has signed to catch for Plainfield this season. Nelson will play in the opening game on Saturday against the O. N. T.'s on Crescent Oval.

The Choral Society will hold its regular meeting tonight

SOMERVILLE.

Charles Schwed has rented his large property in East Somerville to the Bound Brook Woolen Mills, which will conduct it as a boarding-house for its employes. Special trolleys, it is said, will be run mornings and evenings for the accommodation of the boarders.

The Somerville Athletic Club has elected the following officers: President, S. Judson Galpin; vice-president, Augustus Thomas; treasurer, Oliver G. Allen; secretary, Wm. S. Woodruff; financial secretary, Andrew Slater.

The Men's Class of the First Reformed church has elected the following officers: President, Rev. Samuel Parry; vice-president, Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan; secretary, Floyd Vanetta; treasurer, Wilbur R. Veghte.

Rev. A. A. Pfansteihl was host on Monday evening at a Dutch dinner held in the chapel of the Second Reformed church.

The Misses Annie and Laura Vanderbeek, of Mercer street, have been visiting relatives in Brooklyn.

WESTFIELD.

The proceedings at the special school meeting in Clark Township for the purpose of selecting a school site and voting money to build a new school, have been approved by the State Board of Education. A petition has been presented to the Board of Education asking the board to call another special meeting for the purpose of giving the people a chance to vote on another site for the school. The matter has been submitted to the State Board of Education for directions.

Residents of Prospect street, north of Dudley avenue, have made complaint to the Council that the trolley tracks are above the grade of the street and that travel on the street is dangerous to vehicles. The Council has ordered the trolley company to lower the tracks so that they conform to the regular grade.

Councilman Wilson, chairman of the committee on lowering the Broad street grade crossing, reports that the work will cost $51,000. It is probable that the Council will have the work done and issue bonds to pay for it.

RARITAN.

Thomas Hickey, of Lehigh University, is a guest of his mother, Mrs. Michael J. Hickey, on Somerset street.

Mrs. Harry French, of Newark, has been spending this week with the Misses French in Raritan.

Mrs. Joseph Kaiser is in Somerset Hospital on account of a severe attack of indigestion.

Miss Jennie Hickey is spending this week with friends in Bayonne.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The South Plainfield Laurels defeated the Lehigh avenue team yesterday by a score of 14 to 6. The game was one sided all the way through. It was played on the Laurel's grounds.

The Field Club will have to be a great deal stronger than last year to win Sunday's game. Last year the B. B. C. opened their season with them and beat them by a score of 24 to 1.

Painting and repairs are being made upon the home of Mrs. Mary McDonough, of Lehigh avenue.

Rufus Delafield is making repairs on his property, the Sunswick Poultry Farm, here.

Daniel Soffield was in Plainfield yesterday on business.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Manager Sanderson wishes to announce the coming of Jos. M. Gaites' big musical farce, "Three Twins," on Saturday matinee and night, April 30. The book is founded on the old farce "Incog," famous for its laughs for the past twenty years. The libretto is the work of Charles L. Dickson, who was prominently identified with the presentation of "Incog" so many years. The lyrics are by Otto Hauerbach and the music by Karl Hoschna. The production is in two acts with an unusually strong cast, which includes Miss Florine Sweetman, Eveleen Dunmore, Elsie Mynne, Helen DuBois, Thomas Whiffen, Edward Wade, Russell Lennon, Neil Kelly, John Abbott, and the Dancing Sunbeams, the Fairy Fantoms and the famous Yama-Yama girls.

Manager Fred Clark, of the Pittsburg club, is still undecided as to who will cover the initial sack for his club this season. He likes both Bud Sharpe and Jack Flynn and may have to decide the question by keeping both men.

"I wish you would help me relieve the minds of the Pittsburg fans by saying that we have as yet chosen no first baseman," said Clark, in an interview yesterday. "I will use Sharpe tomorrow and possibly throughout this series. But I have told Flynn and others that I shall use him in games later on, and that I shall not make a decision until I can come to the opinion as to which is the better. Flynn has gone to Pittsburg and will be used probably before the week is over. He is a great ball player and so is Sharpe. My mind is not made up as to either of them."

John Kling, baseball catcher, will walk across a stage at a music hall in Chicago twice a day for one week, beginning Monday next, in order, he says, that he may earn the $700 fine imposed on him by the National Baseball Commission. Kling last night said that he would report to Manager Chance, of the Chicago National Baseball Club, on Sunday, and play out the season for the $4,500 offered him.

A baseball league to be composed exclusively of Japanese is being formed on the Pacific Coast, with headquarters at Seattle, Wash. A working capital of more than $300,000 has been raised and articles of incorporation are now being filed. Headed by Ito, the wrestler, who is being backed by leading Niponese merchants of Seattle, Portland and San Francisco, a six-city league is in process of formation, which, when completed and in working order, will provide three games a week. It is planned to have the teams in the various cities organized and in trim for the opening game on June 1.

'GENE' BASSFORD FACES THE GREAT UMPIRE

Eugene Bassford, former right fielder of the Plainfield Baseball Club, under the management of George Johnson in 1904, was laid away at his final resting place in Calvary cemetery, New York, this morning. "Gene," as he was affectionately known by ball players and members of the fraternity, died suddenly at his home, 1107 Forest avenue, New York, on Monday evening after a few hours' illness. Heart disease was the malady that caused the popular ball player's demise.

Attending the funeral service last night was George Johnson who was instrumental in bringing Bassford to this city. Local fans will remember "Gene" as the guardian of right field territory, as one of the fleetest fielders who ever performed on Crescent Oval, as well as being one of the surest wallopers in the semi-pro ranks. On Bassford's bier was a wreath of flowers, a token of remembrance and respect from local fans.

Bassford was one of the star players in the independent ranks. He was a gentleman on and off the field. Here is the tribute paid to "Gene" by Mr. Johnson.

"Bassford was an exceptional ball player. He was not only a great player, but he was a fellow who could always be relied on. His word was as true as steel and I can say that I never had dealings with a fairer fellow. Whatever he said could be depended on. I have had dealings with scores of players, but with none more reliable or truthful than Bassford. He was a combinational ball player and gentleman and the ball playing fraternity in New York will feel his loss keenly."

Bassford first came into prominence as a member of the famous Orange A. C. nine about fifteen years ago. He played in the Newark suburbs with the collegiate aggregation for several years, and when Roy Thomas, the Pennsylvania University star, resigned the captaincy of the team to join the Philadelphia Nationals, Bassford was elevated to Thomas' position.

After the Orange A. C. quit business Bassford affiliated himself with the Murray Hills. He also played on all of the leading independent teams in the Metropolitan district. In 1904 with "Pete" Cregan and "Pop" Deitrick, he composed the outfield for Plainfield. In recent years he also acted as coach for Fordham College, N. Y. U., and other ball nines. Bassford also played under the management of Manager Phil Daab for Hoboken. He was a strong favorite with fans in all the cities that he played.

P. H. S. NINE BLANKS ROSELLE SCHOOLBOYS.

The P. H. S. baseball team defeated the Roselle High School in a game of ball at Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon with the score of 2 to 0. The two runs were made by Riffert and Doane in the first inning and all through the rest of the game no one got any further than third base. Clarke knocked a hit which fet in Doane and Riffert, getting only to first himself. E. Woodhull pitched for P. H. S. and struck out seven men to the opposing pitchers eight. Roselle only got one hit on him while the local fellows got four hits on Mulford. All the fellows played good but nothing remarkable was done. The Roselle team were good clean players and worked hard to keep the High School down to the two runs.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD TO OPEN SEASON SUNDAY.

Although President Taft won't be there to toss the first ball on the field Sunday at the opening of the baseball season in South Plainfield, there's going to be a fine game anyhow. Slocum and Mullin will be on the points for the South Plainfield B. B. C., while Soffield will deliver and Smith receive the goods for the Field Club.

The South Plainfield Field Club want to hear from some good Plainfield teams. Communications addressed to A. L. McDonough, South Plainfield.

WALTER NELSON WILL CATCH FOR PLAINFIELD.

Walter Nelson, the New Market boy, has signed to catch for Plainfield this season, succeeding Seery, who will play behind the bat for New Brunswick. Nelson is a player of experience and should be a tower of strength to the local combination. When a student at Rutgers he caught for the 'Varsity nine. Four years ago he had a tryout with Bridgeport in the Connecticut League. He also played on the local Y. M. C. A. team and for Bound Brook.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The Woman's Club of Vineland has petitioned the Mayor for a sane Fourth of July.

The spring conference of Sunday school workers of Cumberland county will be held in Vineland on Tuesday, May 10.

The annual convention of the New Jersey Epworth League will be held in Trinity M. E. church, Bridgeton, May 4 and 5.

Falling from a box car at Island Heights, Tuesday, Frank Viola, forty-six years old, sustained a fracture of the right leg. He is in Cooper Hospital, Camden.

The West Jersey Presbytery opened its quarterly session in Woodbury Tuesday evening, when the retiring moderator, Rev. Samuel Potter, of Camden, preached the sermon.

Struck by a trolley car at Twenty-first and Federal streets, Camden, Tuesday afternoon, Aaron Mathis, eight years old, of 1526 Federal street, was injured about the body.

The old Friends meeting house at Mt. Holly, which figured prominently as a barracks for British soldiers during the Revolutionary War, is to undergo extensive improvements.

Leading farmers near Mays Landing, after years of experiment, have concluded that the soil and climate are not suitable for fruit growing, and are confining their work to growing grapes, berries and vegetables.

For using an objectionable form of compost as a fertilizer on his truck patch adjoining the Rancocas Creek, at Mt. Holly, John Costill has been fined under a charge of polluting the stream, which is the source of the town's water supply.

Miss Edith Cowell, who was bitten by a dog recently, has resumed her duties as teacher in the Spruce Run public school. It is thought that the dog was suffering with hydrophobia, and Miss Cowell underwent Pasteur treatment in New York.

Owing to the illness of former Judge Macpherson and other members of the committee, the annual meeting and banquet of the Mercer County Bar Association, scheduled for the evening of April 21, at the Trenton House, Trenton, has been postponed until May 5.

Fofty-four pearls, varying in size from that of a pinhead to that of a small pea, were found in one oyster by J. Bensel, an Atlantic avenue restaurant owner, Atlantic City, Tuesday. He plans to have them set in one scarfpin.

Residents of Columbus, and farmers, who are dissatisfied with the decision of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company not to establish earlier train service on its Kinkora branch, have in contemplation the construction of a trolley line from Bordentown through Columbus to Mt. Holly, in order to insure a satisfactory passenger and freight service, the latter of which would include the shipping of milk.

Atlantic City policemen are forbidden to enter bar-rooms in uniform under a new order from Mayor Stoy, who suspended Patrolman Lewis Senft for the offense. The order even bans securing of drinks through back doors or bar windows and Mayor Stoy insists that he intends to break up all drinking while the policemen are on duty.

Sentence was deferred when Erastus Cannon, colored, pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy in the Camden Criminal Court Tuesday. Eleanor Cannon, of Philadelphia, told Judge oline that she was married to the defendant on October 1, 1896, and that he married another woman in April, 1908. The defendant declared that a short time after he became separated from his first wife he received a letter from a Mrs. Smith stating that Mrs. Cannon was dead. After he married another he said he was surprised to learn that she was living. He then made a proposition to wife No. 1 to pay half the expenses of a suit for divorce, but she became angry and caused the arrest. The defendant is said to be a preacher.

Five Paterson physicians are on the sick list and have been compelled to appoint substitutes to look after their practice during their illness. Dr. Richard S. Mallon is a patient at the General Hospital and is seriously ill. Dr. Orville R. Hagen is convalescing after having undergone an operation for appendicitis. Dr. Jacob E. Hempstead is suffering from an attack of pneumonia. Dr. C. R. Mitchell is suffering from an attack of diphtheria. Dr. Leo V. Becker is confined to St. Michael's Hospital, in Newark, as a result of the accident which he met at Newark two weeks ago.

CARDS AND CARD PLAYING

The earliest direct mention of playing cards was discovered so far is in the "History of the City of Viterbo," says the New York Telegraph. The authur quotes Covelluzzo, who wrote about the end of the fifteenth century: "In the year 1379 was brought into Viterbo the game of cards, which comes from the country of Saracens and is with them called "naib." It is worthy of remark that Covelluzzo did not write at that date he mentioned, but a century later, in 1840, and it is quite possible that he may have been mistaken in attributing the cards to Saracenic origin or may have simply been quoting a popular tradition.

The Saracens were familiar with naibis, the predecessors of cards, but they did not invent the game of cards, of which naibis were only a part. The earliest date about which there can be no dispute at which playing cards are directly mentioned by a writer as a matter of his personal experience is that discovered in the register of the court treasurer of France, in the reign of Charles VI. The entry is under the date of February 1, 1392, as follows:

"Given to Jacquemin Gringonneur, painter, for three packs of playing cards, in gold and various colors and ornamented with the several devices, to carry before the Lord our King, for his amusement, fifty-six sols of Paris." This is the foundation upon which is based the popular notion that playing cards were invented for the amusement of a crazy French king. Critics have pointed out that the amount paid is simply for the hand painting and decoration of the cards. There is nothing in the entry that gives grounds for supposing that the cards themselves were new.

There are on exhibition today at the National Library in Paris what are supposed to be seventeen of these cards that were painted for Charles VI., and this has strengthened the impression that they are the original model from which all playing cards have been copied. Unfortunately for the fame of the exhibit it has been proved that the cards shown in Paris are really very fine Venetian tarok cards and are part of an edition made at least as late as 1425.

During the twenty years that follow this date of the royal treasurer's (1392) literature is full of reference to playing cards. Almost every authur that mentions games of gambling paraphernalia particularizes one or more games of cards. But before that date no allusion has been found to a game that could be construed as a card game, although there are several writers who might reasonably be expected to mention cards if they were acquainted with them. Hugh von Tymberg, who wrote in the second half of the fourteenth dentury; Petrarch, who wrote in the first half of the fourteenth century; Chaucer, who wrote in the second half of the fourteenth century, made no mention of cards, although in the writings of all of them are references to gambling games and implements.

In the Escurial library there is a manuscript composed by order of Don Alphonos the Wise, dated 1321, which gives the rules for a number of games, especially chess and dice, but does not contain a word about cards. But one naturally asks if the earliest mention of cards is to be found in the register of a royal treasurer of France, where did cards come from if they were not a new thing to him?

To go back a little it is well known that there existed long before the date of any mention of playing cards a series of emblematic pictures called naibis, which were used by gipsies and others for the purpose of fortune-telling and sorcery. It is probably these naibis that were brought to Europe by the Saracens, and perhaps they were supposed to be of Saracenic origin.

Authorities seem to be pretty well agreed that toward the end of the fourteenth century some inventive genius, probably a Venetian, selected a number of these naibis or pictures, and added to them a series of numeral cards, so as to convert them into implements by which the excitement of chance and the interest of gambling might be added to the amusement afforded by the original naibis.

The principal reason for assuming that cards originated in Italy and not in France is that the names of the cards themselves and the names of the earliest known games played with them are all Italian, and that these Italian terms were carried all over Europe. If they were of French origin the nomenclature might be expected to be French. There is an abundant evidence that the playing cards which rapidly found their way all over Europe were made in Venice. As each country got to making its own cards, the emblems of the suits were changed to please the national fancy, until there is nothing left today of the original faith, charity, justice and fortitude which were represented on the first Italian pack.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

GRAND LODGE F. & A. M. IN SESSION AT TRENTON

With an attendance of more than 800 representatives of subordinate lodges from all parts of the State, the 123d annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of New Jersey opened yesterday morning in Masonic Temple, Trenton.

The session was opened with Grand Master J. Clarence Conover presiding. Presentation of reports and organization matters occupied the attention of the delegates at the morning session. Grand Master Conover presented a lengthy report, which showed the total membership to be 31,400, a gain of 1,400 the past year. Two new lodges were instituted during the past year, one at Mattawan and one at Newark.

Last evening Grand Instructor Henry S. Haines, of Burlington, and the 20 district deputies exemplified the work of the order in Masonic Temple hall.

Deputy Grand Master W. L. Andrews, of Virginia, was a visitor at the session during the day. He was presented to the grand master by Judge Congdon, of the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals. Grand Master Conover introduced Mr. Andrews to the Grand Lodge. Mr. Andrews paid a high compliment to New Jersey.

At the conclusion of the afternoon session the Grand Lodge officers were tendered a dinner by the past masters in the Trenton House. Covers were laid for 125. Addresses were made by Grand Master Conover, Grand Secretary Benjamin F. Wakefield and by District Deputy W. A. Andrews, of Virginia.

The following members of Jerusalem Lodge, of this city, were present at the communication this morning:

Dr. George D. Herring, George Zimmer, Henry G. Kline and William G. Hutchcroft.

The Grand Lodge will conclude its labors this afternoon. Officers will be elected this morning and reports received.

Roosevelt in Africa.

Colonel Roosevelt's hunting expedition through Africa will be shown in motion pictures at Proctor's theatre today, tomorrow and Saturday. These are the genuine pictures and are said to be especially good ones, showing the wild animals on their native heath; herds of zebras, chameleons crawling lazily over branches, and other interesting scenes. The pictures were obtained under great difficulties and are well worth seeing.

Proctor's New Show.

Pauline Fletcher & Co., in a sketch, "The Girl with the Taking Way," will be the headliner at Proctor's theatre today. The Valdos, in "The Masked Mystery," a spiritualist demonstration, is sure to attract and the "Three Dancing Demons" are clever. Harry Bloom, a character impersonator, is exceptionally good. The Roosevelt picture will be shown today, tomorrow and Saturday.

A Novel Salad.

If a housewife does not know what to serve after the meat at her next luncheon or dinner party, she should try a palatable salad made of large white cherries and broken nuts. This is arranged on small lettuce leaves and covered with mayonnaise dressing. Another good salad is made of peeled pineapple with the centre removed. Around each slice are thin slices of banana and Maraschino cherries. This is mixed with French dressing, or one that has wiue fn it. The latter is made by mixing six tablespoons of sherry, three of Madeira and a half cup of sugar.

Ash Cart Horse Inspection.

The parade and inspection of the ash cart rigs of the city will take place on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, starting from police headquarters. A prize will be given to the driver of the horse found in the best condition.

Grant left the house that Gladys, the three-year-old daughter and Marion emerged from the scene of the tragedy and rushed across the street to the home of Albert Fritts and exclaimed in tears: "John has shot Mamma." A neighbor entered the house, went to the pantry and saw Mrs. Covely lying on the floor.

Chief Weiss was notified of the murder and the borough official immediately notified Chief Kiely. Thirty minutes after the murder was committed a posse of about fifty men in three automobiles and carriages started out in different directions toward the mountain in search of the murderer. Chief Kiely notified all police centers at Bernardsville, Somerville, New Brunswick, Bound Brook and other towns to be on the lookout for Grant.

It was at first believed that Grant had secreted himself in the house, but Chief Weiss, Dr. A. H. Dundon and H. J. DeMott made a thorough but fruitless search. A report was also in circulation that Grant had made his escape by jumping over the rear fence, but no footsteps could be discovered. Then a report was given to the police that Grant had been seen walking up Somerset street. This appeared to be the most plausible clue to the sleuths and the different posses decided to scour the mountains.

It is the theory of the police that Grant selected this morning to perpetrate the deed in the belief that Mrs. Covely would be alone in the house, but in that he was thwarted. For some reason or other she had failed to send her children to school and Gladys and Marion were in the house, and Mildred in a neighbor's house.

Accoring to four-year-old Marion, she and Gladys were in the kitchen when the deed was committed. It is possible, however, that Gladys may have been in the pantry when her mother was shot as her little blue gingham garment was bespattered with blood. While Marion told a Daily Press reporter that she was in the kitchen when Grant fired the shot she sobbed convulsively and clutched tightly in her hands the fifty-cent piece the murderer had given her as he left the house.

To all appearances Grant attacked his victim from behind while she was standing engaged in her work. No traces of the revolver could be found after the shooting. That Grant had pressed the shooting iron close to Mrs. Covely's face is evident as the right side of her countenance is burned with powder. Henry D. DeMott notified County Physician W. H. Long of the crime by telephone.

Grant came here from Taunton, Mass., several months ago. He was known as a shiftless fellow. He had several positions but held none for a great length of time. At various times he was employed by the Public Service Corporation and the United States Express Company and Dr. L. S. Pocock. At the present time he was being tried out for the position of conductor on the P. S. C. line, but he had not reported for work during the last three days.

In the descriptions furnished the police authorities of nearby towns by Chief Kiely Grant is described as being about 19 years of age, 5 feet 7 inches in height and about 140 pounds in weight. He had long white hair and was attired in a dark suit of clothes.

The victim was formerly Miss Edna Moore, of this city. Her mother is now residing in New York, and a sister, Mrs. George Reynolds, who lives at 538 West 135th street in that city. A sister, Mrs. Lewis Benedict, also resides on State street, Newark.

Richard Baldwin, of the borough, informed John Y. Barrett, the borough street commissioner, early this afternoon that he was sure he saw Grant cross the Watchung avenue bridge at 11:50 o'clock this morning on a bicycle, but this report could not be verified.

PUBLIC LIBRARY LECTURES AT ASBURY PARK IN MAY

The New Jersey Public Library Commission has announced that the fourth session of the summer school for library training will be held at the Asbury Park Free Public Library from May 23 to June 25. No entrance examination will be given and as in the past the course will be free to anyone holding a position or who is under appointment to a position in a New Jersey library. This is the fourth annual session of the summer school.

The purpose is to give enough training to librarians in charge of small libraries to enable them to reorganize their own libraries and make all of their material accessible, to economize the expenditure of time and money, to enable them, after the library is reorganized, to carry the work on as it should be; to give enough training to subordinates to enable them to carry on intelligently their part of the work.

Among the lecturers will be: J. W. Wyer, Jr., State Librarian of New York; Miss Mary W. Plummer, director of the Pratt Institue Library School; Miss Theresa Hitchler, head of the cataloguing department of the Brooklyn Public Library; Miss Annie C. Moore, head of the Children's Department (New York) Public Library; Miss Clara W. Hunt, head of the Children's Department Brooklyn Public Library; Miss Sarah B. Askew, reference librarian of New Jersey; Cedric Chivers, of the Chivers Book Binding Company.

VARIATIONS OF WHITE.

Already a fashionable cauturier is making fascinating soft white silk dresses, with draperies or over-dresses of colored chiffon. The new models have taken the fancy of women, and it is safe to predict a vogue for these light-colored silks.

Much depends upon the shade of white, for you must remember that there are many variations of this, ranging from oyster white through the pearl shades to the warm ivory tints. There must be no crude contrast between the colored chiffon and the white foundation.

The ivory whites look well with any tints that harmonize with pale yellow, while the gray whites can be beautifully allied with the shell pink and lavender of the seashell.

Many complexions cannot stand the trying contrast of color against the skin; therefore, the cnemisette of soft white tulle or net is most frequently used to give the softening effect.

One silk foundation might serve for more than one chiffon tunic or draped over-dress. Of course, the wisdom must be seen in purchasing silk of durable quality for the playing of this double role. But do not forget the kind of white when selecting the soft materials to be used with it.

TWO NEW JABOTS.

In the spring neckwear are two jabots that can be made of bits of embroidery and lace.

One is made from nine inches of batiste embroidery, finished with Irish lace edged two inches deep and worked in eyelets above it. The embroidery is sloped at top so the left side of tie is seven inches long and the right side six inches. These sides are rolled and finished with narrow val lace put on without fulling.

Plait in five side plaits and finish top in a narrow hemmed band.

The other tie is made of two pieces of ecru Brussels lace of heavy mesh. Each piece is four inches deep and fourteen long, with the ends overcast on wrong side to make a tubular section.

The two ends are joined in centre with an overlapping of gilt gauze ribbon wound so tightly that the two sides fall in a festoon, one over the other.

ARRANGING A SCARF.

A picturesque result is obtained on many gowns by a masterly arrangement of scarfs. These may be of crepe de chine bordered with a deep fringe, or they may vary from heavy silk to the lightest tulle or net.

But in the draping of the scarf lies the making of a gown, and the main point to be observed is the individual requirement of the wearer.

Experiment until every good point is accentuated and every defect of line concealed. When it is intended to drape a slender figure a result can be arrived at by securing the scarf in a point at the back and passing it over each shoulder through jeweled clasps. The draperies can then be crossed in front and held by a buckle on each side. From the girdle the ends should fall in straight lines to the hem of the skirt.

Secure a comparatively plain frock and a long, well-arranged scarf, and the resut is in your hands.

Endless Joy.

"My wife wants to take a Chinese magazine."

"What put that notion into her head?"

"She learned of a Chinese magazine that has been running one serial story for over 200 years."

What Did She Mean?

Mrs. Myles—I see platform tickets are issued by some German railroads for the use of non-travelers who wish to say goodby to departing friends.

Mrs. Styles—Well, I'm sure I'd pay gladly to say goodby to some friends.—Exchange.

Really Awful.

Mrs. Hubb—Isn't it outrageous, the high price of living?

Mrs. Gotham—It certainly is. Why do you know, Fido will eat nothing but the most expensive cuts of meat!

THE OTHER WAY ABOUT

As Pilkins had persistently and rather tiresomely prided himself on the splendid condition of his teeth and the fact that he had never passed a minute in a dentist's chair except upon occasions when his molars were professionally cleaned and polished, it was with an air of bored toleration that he accompanied his wife to the dentist's office for one of the frequent examinations of her teeth.

"I suppose he'll find something new the matter with them," suggested Pilkins, with a grin, as they entered the elevator in the big office building. "That's his business, you know. You've cost me a small fortune in gold and bridge work and amalgam and one thing and another in the last few years, and it's a cinch this doctor of yours isn't going to let go of a good thing."

"Don't be absurd!" said Mrs. Pilkins. "Everything he has done for me has been absolutely necessary. If you begrudge the few dollars it has cost to keep your wife's teeth in good condition you ought to be ashamed of yourself."

Pilkins, properly squelched, followed his indignant better half into the waiting room of the dentist's office, and examined last year's magazines with idle interest during the few minutes the dentist consumed in scrutinizing Mrs. Pilkins' teeth and declaring them safe and sound. When she rejoined him the dentist was at her elbow.

"You'd better get into the chair and let the doctor look over your teeth, Tom," she suggested. "One never can tell when one's teeth require attention.

Pilkins laughed the suggestion to scorn. "Ah, my teeth are all right!" he insisted. "I never had a toothache in my life. There's no need of my taking up the doctor's time."

"It won't do any harm," advised the dentist. "As Mrs. Pilkins says, one never can tell."

"Go ahead, Tom!" commanded his wife. "Don't be silly. That's one reason I wanted you to come with me today. I intended all along that you should have your teeth examined. You're always boasting about your good teeth—maybe they're not as good as you think."

The sporting instinct in Pilkins was aroused by his wife's covert challenge. He arose and strode to the chair.

"All right, doctor!" he exclaimed. "Go ahead and have a look. I'm betting on the teeth, though."

The dentist jabbed his little mirror into Pilkins' mouth and made a careful survey. Then he shook his head dismally.

"I'm afraid we can't do anything for you," he announced. "You ought to be ashamed to go around with such a good set of teeth. How do you expect us dentists to make a living?"

Pilkins rose up and bestowed a superior smile upon his wife while the dentist was walking around the chair to attack the grinders on the other side.

"What did I tell you?" he asked with a note of triumph. "I guess you'll have to keep on piling up the dentist's bills in our family!"

Then he laid his head back in the cushion to give the dentist another treat, winking covertly at Mrs. Pilkins in his self-satisfied glee.

"No, they're just as good as new," announced the dentist, peering into the mirror. "I don't see how we can do any business — hold on! Aha! a little cavity in an upper tooth—yes, sir, sure as you're alive!"

"A cavity!" yelled Pilkins, rising up in wrath. "What are you talking about?"

"Come here, Mrs. Pilkins, and take a look," urged the dentist. "See? Right there—see it?"

"Oh, yes, there is, Tom!" exclaimed his wife. "You'll have to have that attended to at once! Isn't it lucky we discovered it?"

The dentist pulled his little mirror away and whipped out his engagement book while Pilkins left the chair in dense gloom.

"When shall I put you down for?" asked the dentist. "Tuesday morning at ten? All right, sir. It won't hurt," he added, after a glance at Pilkins' lowering face.

"What if it does?" demanded the victim. "It's got to be done, anyhow, hasn't it?"

When they were alone in the hallway Pilkins turned to his wife indignantly.

"Well, I suppose you're tickled to death with your day's work!" he snapped. "I knew that fellow would find something out of whack before he got through!"

A Rose-Colored Statement.

Miss Jane Addams, the head of the Hull house, said at a luncheon at the Chicago Civic club:

"We women have still much to fight for. Our battle will be long and difficult. Well, let us frankly admit it. There is nothing to be gained by such rose-colored phrases as William White employed.

"William White's brother had killed a man in cold blood.

"'Well, William, how about your brother?' a visitor to the town asked him one day after the trial.

"'Well,' said William, 'they've put him in jail for a month.'

"'That's a rather light sentence for a cold-blooded murder,' said the gentleman.

"'Yes, sir,' William admitted, 'but at the month's end they're going to hang him.'"

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 24, 1910.

Topic.—Christ winning the world.—John xii, 20-32. Comment by Rev. Sherman H Doyle, D. D.

The mission of Jesus Christ was to win the world! "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son." He came first to the Jews and for the salvation of the Jews, and yet before He had begun His worldwide mission the fact that this was to be its character was clearly set forth in the Old Testament prophecies and suggested by words and actions of His own in His life upon earth. In response to the faith of the Syrophenician woman He healed her daughter. At Jacob's well He spoke of Himself as the Messiah to the Samaritan woman and called forth the faith of the inhabitants of Sychar. In the lesson for our study He received certain Greeks who desired to see Him and declared upon their coming, "The hour is come that the Son of Man should be glorified." No doubt the request of the Greeks, who represented the gentiles, to see Him inspired this utterance, for in the Jew and the gentile the people of the world were represented. Then at the close of the discourse, beginning with the words just quoted, He makes the deliberate declaration that His mission was worldwide. "I, if I be lifted up from the earth (crucified), will draw all (or all men) unto Me." And why "all" if His mission had been limited to any one nation or race of people? It was not so limited. This is the only explanation of Christ's reception of the Greeks and His use of the word "all" in referring to the result that should follow His crucifixion upon the cross. Our "hearts should burn within us" as we read these words of the Saviour, for we, being a part of the world's "all," are thus assured of His willingness and power to save us.

The method by which Christ wins the world is indicated in the words before us. To do so He was compelled to take man's sins upon Him and die in his stead, thus atoning for him and making his salvation possible. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." This He said, John adds, "signifying what death He should die." By His death on the cross, therefore, He would pay the penalty of man's sin and at the same time "draw all" unto Him. The attractive power of the cross is wonderful. He wins men, He draws them by His love, manifested by His death, and thus they put their trust in Him, accept Him as their substitute and are saved.

The cross is able to draw "all men," but unfortunately all men will not be drawn. Some have given up the atoning character of Christ's death and look upon it simply as an example to men to reach moral transformation through the effect of Christ's death. Others prefer to give their lives up to sin, and the cross has no power to attract them. It often repels, for it speaks of the death of one who was sinless, and they love sin. A third class are indifferent to the cross. They are so occupied with the things of time and sense that even the glory of the cross is lost sight of by them. But there is no fault in the cross. If one is attracted and another is repelled the difference is in the persons themselves. The cross is ever and always the same. If it does not draw you it is your heart and your life that are wrong, and they need to be changed, for you as well as all, being a sinner, need to be saved and can be saved through Christ alone.

Christ's part is done. He has been lifted up, and He is winning the world. How large the world once seemed, but how small it is today! Moreover, the advances of mankind are ever making it smaller. The opportunity of Christ's winning the world is thus daily growing greater and brighter. But men to be won must see the cross. They must know the story of Jesus and His love. "How shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent?" Sent of God, so far as their selection is concerned, but sent of man, so far as the opening up of their opportunity is concerned. Go or send. One of these two duties rests upon every one of us. Not having gone, are we sending? Are we giving and praying that soul winners may be sent out the world over and win all men for Christ? If not we are failing in our mission as Christians and in the duty of the saved toward the unsaved. Can we afford to reject or to disregard such plain duties divinely placed upon us?

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. lii, 1-7; liii; Ps. lxxii; Mal. xii, 3; Dan. xii, 1-3; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; John i, 35-42; iii, 16; iv, 25-29; Rom. x, 12-15; Rev. xxii, 17.

A Candle Meeting.

One of the brightest plans for a Christian Endeavor prayer meeting is that of a candle meeting. All the lights will be put out except that on the piano, which will be only a candle. After the leader has taken part he will light a candle that is on the table. Each Endeavorer will have a candle and a match, and after he has taken part he will light his candle (sometimes from a neighboring candle or, if there is none near, then with the match). Gradually, as one after another speaks, the whole room will be flooded with light. Try it. It makes a beautiful and true illustration of the subject, and the little ceremony will in itself give rise to many thoughts that will be expressed.—Amos R. Wells.

The Man in Lower Ten

"'You're acting like a maniac,' he said. 'You know I can get those things some way; I'm not going to threaten you. It isn't necessary. You know me.'

"'It would be no use,' the other man said. 'I tell you I haven't seen the notes for ten days.'

"'But you will,' Bronson said, savagely. 'You're standing in your own way, that's all. If you're holding out expecting me to raise my figure you're making a mistake. It's my last offer.'

"'I couldn't take it if it was for a million,' said the man inside the room. 'I'd do it, I expect, if I could. The best of us have our price.'

"Bronson slammed the door then and flung past me down the hall.

"After a couple of minutes I knocked at the door and a tall man about your size, Mr. Blakeley, opened it. He was very blond, with a smooth face and blue eyes—what I think you would call a handsome man.

"'I beg your pardon for disturbing you,' I said. 'Can you tell me which is Mr. Johnson's room? Mr. Francis Johnson?'

"'I cannot say,' he answered, civilly. 'I've only been here a few days.'

"I thanked him and left, but I had had a good look at him and I think I'd know him readily any place."

I sat for a few minutes thinking it over. "But what did he mean by saying he hadn't seen the notes for ten days? And why is Bronson making the overtures?"

"I think he was lying," Hotchkiss reflected. "Bronson hasn't reached his figure."

"It's a big advance, Mr. Hotchkiss and I appreciate what you have done more than I can tell you," I said. "And now, if you can locate any of my property in this fellow's room we'll send him up for larceny and at least have him where we can get at him. I'm going to Cresson to-morrow, to try to trace him a little from there. But I'll be back in a couple of days and we'll begin to gather in these scattered threads."

Hotchkiss rubbed his hands together delightedly.

"That's it," he said. "That's what we want to do, Mr. Blakeley. We'll gather up the threads ourselves; if we let the police in too soon they'll tangle it up again. I'm not vindictive by nature, but when a fellow like Sullivan not only commits a murder, but goes to all sorts of trouble to put the burden of guilt on an innocent man—I say hunt him down, sir!"

"You are convinced, of course, that Sullivan did it?"

"Who else?" He looked over his glasses at me with the air of a man whose mental attitude is unassailable.

"Well, listen to this," I said.

Then I told him at length of my encounter with Bronson in the restaurant, of the bargain proposed by Mrs.

"I Beg Your Pardon for Disturbing You."

Conway and finally of McKnight's new theory. But, although he was impressed he was far from convinced.

"It's a very vivid piece of imagination," he said, drily; "but while it fits the evidence as far as it goes, it doesn't go far enough. How about the stains in lower seven, the dirk and the wallet? Haven't we even got motive in that telegram from Bronson?"

"Yes," I admitted, "but that bit of chain—"

"Pooh," he said, shortly. "Perhaps, like yourself, Sullivan wore glasses with a chain. Our not finding them does not prove they did not exist."

And there I made an error; half confidences are always mistakes. I could not tell of the broken chain in Alison West's gold purse.

It was one o'clock when Hotchkiss finally left. We had by that time arranged a definite course of action—Hotchkiss to search Sullivan's rooms and if possible find evidence to have him held for larceny, while I went to Cresson.

Strangely enough, however, when I entered the train the following morning, Hotchkiss was already there. He had bought a new notebook and was sharpening a fresh pencil.

"I changed my plans, you see," he said, bustling his newspaper aside for me. "It's no discredit to your intelligence, Mr. Blakeley, but you lack the professional eye, the analytical mind. You legal gentlemen call a spade a spade, although it may be a shovel."

A primrose by the river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And nothing more!

I quoted as the train pulled out.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Night at the Laurels.

I slept most of the way to Cresson, to the disgust of the little detective. Finally he struck up an acquaintance with a kindly faced old priest on his way home to his convent school, armed with a roll of dance music and surreptitious bundles that looked like boxes of candy. From scraps of conversation I gleaned that there had been mysterious occurrences at the convent—ending in the theft of what the reverend father called vaguely "a quantity of undermuslins." I dropped asleep at that point and when I roused a few moments later, the conversation had progressed. Hotchkiss had a diagram on an envelope.

"With this window bolted and that one inaccessible and if, as you say, the —er—garments were in a tub here at X, then, as you hold the key to the other door—I think you said the convent dog did not raise any disturbance? Pardon a personal question, but do you ever walk in your sleep?"

The priest looked bewildered.

"I'll tell you what to do," Hotchkiss said, cheerfully, leaning forward, "look around a little yourself before you call in the police. Somnambulism is a queer thing. It's a question whether we are most ourselves sleeping or waking. Ever think of that? Live a saintly life all day, prayers and matins and all that, and the subconscious mind hikes you out of bed at night to steal undermuslins! Subliminal theft, so to speak. Better examine the roof."

I dozed again. When I wakened Hotchkiss sat alone and the priest, from a corner, was staring at him dazedly over his breviary.

It was raining when we reached Cresson, a wind-driven rain that had forced the agent at the news stand to close himself in and that beat back from the rails in parallel lines of white spray. As he went up the main street Hotchkiss was cheerfully oblivious of the weather, of the threatening dusk, of our generally draggled condition. My draggied condition, I should say, for he improved every moment—his eyes brighter, his ruddy face ruddier, his collar newer and glossier. Sometime, when it does not encircle the little man's neck, I shall test that collar with a match.

I was growing steadily more depressed: I loathed my errand and its necessity. I had always held that a man who played the spy on a woman was beneath contempt. Then, I admit I was afraid of what I might learn. For a time, however, this promised to be a negligible quantity. The streets of the straggling little mountain town had been clean washed of humanity by the downpour. Windows and doors were inhospitably shut and from around an occasional drawn shade came narrow strips of light that merely emphasized our gloom. When Hotchkiss' umbrella turned inside out, I stopped.

"I don't know where you are going," I snarled, "and I don't care. But I'm going to get under cover inside of ten seconds. I'm not amphibious."

I ducked into the next shelter, which happened to be the yawning entrance to a livery stable, and shook myself, dog fashion. Hotchkiss wiped his collar with his handkerchief. It emerged gleaming and unwilted.

"This will do as well as any place," he said, raising his voice above the rattle of the rain. "Got to make a beginning."

I sat down on the usual chair without a back, just inside the door, and stared out at the darkening street. The whole affair had an air of unreality. Now that I was there I doubted the necessity or the value of the journey. I was wet and uncomfortable. Around me, with Cresson as a center, stretched an irregular circumference of mountain, with possibly a ten-mile radius, and in it I was to find the residence of a woman whose first name I did not know and a man who, so far, had been a purely chimerical person.

Hotchkiss had penetrated the steaming interior of the cave and now his voice, punctuated by the occasional thud of horses' hoofs, came to me.

"Something light will do," he was saying. "A runabout, perhaps." He came forward rubbing his hands, followed by a thin man in overalls. "Mr. Peck says," he began—"this is Mr. Peck of Peck & Peck—says that the place we are looking for is about seven miles from the town. It's clearing, isn't it?"

"It is not," I returned, savagely. "And we don't want a runabout, Mr. Peck. What we require is an hermetically sealed diving suit. I suppose there isn't a machine to be had?" Mr. Peck gazed at me in silence: machine to him meant other things than motors. "Automobile," I supplemented. His face cleared.

"None but private affairs. I can give you a good buggy with a rubber apron. Mike, is the doctor's horse in?"

I am still uncertain as to whether the rawboned roan we took out that night over the mountains was the doctor's horse or not. If it was, the doctor may be a good doctor, but he doesn't know anything about a horse. And furthermore, I hope he didn't need the beast that miserable evening.

Only $2.25 Per Week

Is all you need pay, to use and own this splendid player-piano, if you join our special limited club now:

We are selling a limited number of these player-pianos, on the club plan, for only

$495

Which is a saving of $155.00 over the regular price of $650.00. The offer is made solely to introduce these instruments in Plainfield and vicinity.

We take your old piano in exchange, if you wish. $2.25 per week is certainly a very small sum to pay, when you consider what great enjoyment is constantly afforded the entire family—and the player-piano is yours to keep. It is a wise investment in every way.

It is an investment that will yield the biggest dividend in real pleasure to yourself, your family and your friends, of any you could possibly make. If after 30 days' use you are not satisfied, your money will be refunded.

We supply you with a free library of music, with privilege of exchange as often as you like, during the life of the contract, without extra charge.

This is the most easily operated player-piano on the market—no strenuous exertion needed, because its pneumatic action is perfect.

There is an extra reservoir, by which an especially full tone or sustained swell may be brought out without retarding the action or tempo—an exclusive advantage.

Another patented device prevents the paper from running out of line.

Still another feature controlled only by us, is the ability to play pianissimo effects as they should be played—properly rendering trills and arpeggios in even the softest measures.

Remember, you needn't know the first thing about music to be able to use and enjoy this player-piano.

Stop in and play it yourself—let us show you how easy it is to play, and how easy to own this player-piano at once, under our liberal club plan.

More than five hundred names appear on the new Metropolitan Golf Association handicap list for the coming season. The committee, consisting of J. E. Erickson, chairman; F. J. Phillips, James R. Turner, A. H. Pogson and Leighton Calkins, had to work overtime in order to get the list out prior to the season's first open tournament, which will begin at Lakewood today.

As in the past, Walter J. Travis, the metropolitan champion, heads the list. He is the only man on scratch this time, while a year ago the Garden City expert shared the honor with his youthful rival, Jerome D. Travers. Now the last named is rated at 1 in the same bracket with Fred Herreshoff. Last year there was no No. 1, Herreshoff and Douglas being Travis' closest companions at No. 2. This year Douglas remains at 2, accompanied by Albert Seckel, of Princeton, the intercollegiate champion. W. Lester Glenney and J. Whitney Baker are given a handicap of 7, while D. H. Barrows has 5.

Eleven well known amteurs have been rated at 3 this year, as against eight last season. Marshall Whitlatch, who was included in the 1909 octet, has been dropped entirely, while John M. Ward, at 4 last year, has moved up a notch. Others in the 3 bracket are Charles H. Seely, twice metropolitan title holder; Gilman P. Tiffany, five times winner of the Hudson River championship; Archie Graham, of Paterson, who has held the New Jersey State title on two occasions; Max Behr, the present New Jersey champion; the far driving Robert Abbett, George T. Brokaw, Archie Reid, F. R. Upton, Jr., W. Fellowes Morgan, Jr., and Robert C. Watson, who recently won the Aiken tournament for the second year in succession.

The new list contains all those rated up to 9, inclusive, and in the event of a player desiring a rating in an open handicap who is not included, all that will be necessary will be for the secretary of his club to show how he stands, or, rather, how many strokes he receives from some fellow member whose name appears on the list. As more than a hundred entries have been received for the Lakewood tournament this week, an early opportunity will be afforded to see how the new handicaps work out.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The notice was sent around among the schools this morning that Arbor Day will come on May 2. On this day the schools will set out trees and carry out ceremonies appropriate to the day.

Herbert Terry will pitch for P. H. S. against Poly Prep. of Brooklyn, at Crescent Oval an Saturday morning. Terry has showed up finely in the games in which he has pitched and ought to do well.

Woodhull pitched a fine game yesterday and P. H. S. will get some fine work out of him yet.

So far this year P. H. S. has not made a good showing in baseball. The teams which they have beaten have been very easy and they will have to brace up considerably to win the hard games that are coming.

Not so Sure This Time.

"CONNIE" MACK'S ADVICE TO YOUNG PLAYERS

Connie Mack—than whom there is no wiser club owner, manager or observer in baseball—said recently:

"The best advice I can give a young man who aspires to make for himself a great name on the diamond is: 'Practive and study catching. Become a second "Buck" Ewing. There is practically no limit to the salary that a man the equal of Lou Criger or of Roger Bresnahan, when these two catchers were at their best, could command today.'"

Every ball player, every fan and every club owner knows that Connie—who was once a first class catcher himself—is right. The demand for backstops of the Kling-Bresnahan-Gibson - Criger - Carrigan - Sullivan stamp is vastly greater than it is for great pitchers, hard hitters or fast fielders; infinitely greater, in fact, than is the supply.

Singularly enough it is only by cycles or by decades, one might almost say, that star catchers are developed. In truth, so seldom does it occur that when a Clarke, an Easterley or a Gibson appears in the baseball sky the whole country sits up and gives attention.

Major league scouts unite in saying that only a small percentage of young men aspiring to places on the major league clubs today are trying to get jobs as catchers. This is hard to explain, inasmuch as the great catchers of the past occupy fully as important a place in baseball history as do the Radbournes, the Clarksons and the McCormicks.

Indeed, no names in all the annals of baseball are more familiar than are those of "Buck Ewing," "Charley" Bennett, "Jim" McGuire, "Duke" Farrell, "Jack" Boyle "Charley" Ganzel, "Lou" Criger, "Charley" Zimmer, "Jack" O'Connor, "Tom" Daly, "Doc" Bushong, Wilbert Robinson, "Dick" Buckley, "Charley" Snyder, "Calliope" Miller, John Clement, Emil Gross, "Mike" Kelly, "Silver" Flint, Vincent Nava, "Jim" White and "Cal" McVey.

They were among the most famous backstops that have ever stood behind the plate. Those who saw them in action cling tenaciously to the belief that no better catchers will ever be seen on the diamond.

"If," the major league club owners are asking, "these old backstops, many of them bare handed, could afford to take the risk in the days when the pitchers came at them on the hop, skip and jump and let the ball go at top speed at a distance of only forty-five feet, why shouldn't the ambitious young players of today, protected by gloves as broad as a palmleaf fan, try for reputations when the pitchers are fifteen feet farther away and are forced to keep one foot on the slab when letting the ball go."

The question may never be answered, but it is fair, perhaps, to assume that the reason may be found in the fact that the old catchers were proverbially modest, and when the bell rang for their retirement quietly slipped out of the spotlight and kept still. There is none to sing their praises today but the fans who saw them in action.

"Charley" Bennett was on the crest of the highest wave of popularity when he met with the terrible accident that forced him to retire. In his day he handled such pitchers as Staley, Nichols, Stivetts, Clarkson, Shaw, Conway, Getzein, and Baldwin, and in 1881, 1883, 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888, 1889, 1890 and 1893 he led the old league.

"Barney" Gilligan and Vincent Nava were small men but how grandly and gamely they faced the hurricane pitching of "Old Hoss" Radbourne!

"Silver" Flint kept on catching until he had no more unbroken fingers. He caught Larry Corcoran, Fred Goldsmith, Jim McCormick and John Clarkson when they were at their best. He was Anson's mainstay when the old White Sox won the pennant in 1880, 1881, 1882, 1885 and 1886. Mike Kelly gave him great assistance in the last two seasons.

Ewing's best work was done behind such superb pitchers as "Tim" Keefe, "Hank" O'Day, "Mickey" Welch, Amos Rusie, "Cannon Ball" Crane and men of that stamp.

"Chief" Zimmer caught 88 games for Cleveland in 1894, with the wonderful fielding average of .935, and came back again in 1901 with Pittsburg with an average of .952 for 67 games.

"Dick" Buckley was known in the '90s as the "man who made Rusie."

Charley Snyder's work in Boston, when he virtually brought out "Tommy" Bond, will never be forgotten. Years afterward in Cleveland he was still one of the grandest men behind the bat.

"Duke" Farrell caught the pitching of such whirlwinds of speed as Rusie and Meekin with as much grace as is shown by a Lajoie in handling an ugly bounder.

With such heroes to inspire them, it is, indeed, a wonder that more of the ambitious young men today do not put on the mask and protector and go out for the records they might never be able to obtain in other departments of the game, overrun as they are by thousands of recruits.

G. ORTLEB AND MILLER WIN FIVE GAMES.

In the two man tourney at Campbell's alleys last night G. Ortleb and Miller came out on the long end, winning five out of six games, while Clarkson and Conover captured four games and lost two.

Owing to the non-appearance of Doc Herbert the Herbert-Campbell team forfeited all six games, Campbell rolling for average. The score:

"DAVE" DRISCOLL DEPOSED AS BRUNSWICK MANAGER.

"Dave" Driscoll, who successfully managed the New Brunswick baseball club last summer, and incidentally put that burg on the baseball map, has been "canned" by the Board of Directors of that club. Jack Doescher, the former Brooklyn and Cincinnati National League pitching star, has been appointed to succeed Driscoll.

An entirely new team will be secured according to reports. All of the old players with the exception of Jack Martin, of this city, have been dropped. It is the general impression that the action of the club in ousting Driscoll is due to the strike of five players for higher salaries about two weeks ago.

PRACTICAL BEADWORK.

By the intermingling of silver and gold thread embroidery in the delicate tracery of an allover design upon yoke and sleeves of finest net, the seed pearl, which is now so fashionable, may be appliqued to perfection.

By this new method—the interweaving of embroidery and bead—the thread is carried from bead to bead in ornamental designs which enriches while it fastens.

Tubular bead fringe, too, has been applied by a more sensible process—that of the uncut fringe. In other words, after drawing needle and heavy silk through the edge of the material, two, four, six or eight tubular beads are threaded upon it, and the next stitch is taken right beside the last, which leaves a loop of fringe. This, carried on indefinitely, will produce a row of uncut fringe of whatever depth you desire, but the beads should be strung in even numbers.

Blue jewelry is much in evidence, and the dog collar of sapphire-blue velvet ribbon an inch wide may be successfully made by the application of tubular beads of a gun-metal blue, with sapphire-like jewels introduced into the design.

These are as easy as possible to make, and they may be developed in colors to match any evening or afternoon gown with a low or Dutch neck.

The dog collar of coral-colored velvet for the dark beauty shows a large oblong cabochon-cut jewel here and there of a coral-like substance so closely resembling the real coral as to delude all except the expert.

Imitation is not to be upneld, except in such accessories as contribute to the color scheme of a gown. When cleverly and artistically selected and arranged for this purpose, the skill displayed should recommend them to even the fastidious.

GREAT WAS THE CAPTAIN.

The ship upon clearing the harbor ran into a half-pitching, half-rolling sea, that became particularly noticeable about the time the twenty-five passengers at the captain's table sat down to dinner.

"I hope that all twenty-five of you will have a pleasant trip," the captain told them as the soup appeared, "and that this little assembly of twenty-four will reach port more benefited by the voyage. I look upon these twenty-two smiling faces much as a father does upon his family, for I am responsible for the safety of this group of seventeen. I hope that all fourteen of you will join me later in drinking to a merry trip. I believe that we eight fellow passengers are most congenial, and I applaud the judgement which chose from the passenger list these three persons for my table. You and I, my dear sir, are—Here, steward! Bring on the fish and clear away these dishes."—From Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

DR. W. J. CALLAN'S LECTURE

"Silas Marner" Subject of Address at Mount St. Mary's Yesterday.

"SCIENCE IS TOO NARROW."

Lecturer Deplored Over-Emphasis of the Purely Physical in Literature—Psychological Exposition.

Dr. W. J. Callan gave the fourth lecture in his series of lectures at Mt. St. Mary's College, yesterday afternoon. A large and appreciative audience was present. The subject was George Eliot's "Silas Marner." The previous lectures were "The Merchant of Venice," "Educational Psychology," and "Hamlet."

The lecturer began by defining the word "novel" as a prose narrative of a more or less fictitious nature, aiming to picture human life and human character. He called it "a drama in detail." All classic literature deals with the human, especially the emotional side of the human. It mirrors humanity in all its infinite variety of thinking, of willing, of feeling. If "the proper study of mankind is man" in order that one may attain to self-knowledge, the most important of all knowledge, then the study of classic literature is the most important of all studies.

Dr. Callan regretted that today in many of the colleges, science, which should include every department of knowledge is narrowed down to the world of matter, which is supposed to furnish the only substantial basis of truth.

Literature itself is marked by an over-emphasis of the importance of physical science. Even George Eliot, the author of "Silas Marner," fails to rise into the empyrean where the pure imagination should find itself most at home, among the ideal conceptions best fitted to meet its infinite longings. If this tendency to materialism is allowed to go on without recognizing the light which comes to ones higher facilities from the higher facts of the universe, it can end only in atheism and spiritual death. The youth of our land should be imbued with the fact that all causes are not physical, that there are laws higher than those of matter and objects of more transcendent interest and of infinitely greater worth than can be dealt with from a purely materialistic view-point.

Then followed the story of "Silas Marner." The time, early nineteenth century, place, Raveloe, England; hero, "Silas Marner;" heroine, "Eppie;" villian, "Godfrey Cass; the minor characters, William Daw Larele, Squire Cass, Robert Dunstan, Dolly Winthrop, Aaron Nancy Lammeter, Molly Cass, et. al. were brought in right relationship to the principal characters.

A psychological exposition was given of "Silas," "Godfrey," "Eppie" and the others. The climax of the play is reached when Nancy Lammeter asks Godfrey Cass, as she points to Eppie in the arms of Silas standing on the threshold of the ballroom, "Whose child is that?" The catastrophe is reached when Dunstan's body is found, and Eppie refuses to recognize Godfrey Cass as her father-remaining loyal to her foster-father, Silas. The story shows the great influence of child love on the human heart—"A little child shall lead them."

Rev. Dr. Slicer in Debate.

At the Twentieth Century Club in Orange on next Thursday evening a debate on the question, "Resolved, That Socialism is just, necessary and desirable," will be held, in which the affirmative side will be taken by Wilson B. Killingbeck and the negative by Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, who made an address on Socialism at All Souls' church last Sunday evening.

Mrs. Robert Olyphant.

Mrs. Robert Olyphant, wife of Robert Olyphant, formerly a member of the Board of Trustees of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and mother of Mrs. W. deLa R. Anderson, of this city, died yesterday of apoplexy at her home, 16 East Fifty-second St., New York city. She was fifty years old and was stricken on Tuesday. She is survived by a husband and four children.

Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES ARE TENDERED A BANQUET

Y. M. C. A. athletes were tendered a banquet last night in honor of their many glorious performances on the gymnasium floor during the winter season. The affair was enjoyed by all present and was a fitting finale to the season.

An appetizing supper was prepared and served by the Ladies' Auxiliary which consisted of Mrs. H. C. Parker, Mrs. N. Y. Hull, Mrs. George Rittenhouse, Mrs. Steiner and Miss Swayne. Following the dinner the speechsmiths held the attention of the guests during the remainder of the evening.

G. C. M. Smith acted as toastmaster and remarks were made by Walter Cahoone, C. Stryker Hoagland, F. O. Dunning, J. H. Doane, Charles H. Line and C. William Bingamen. The guests were:

Walter Cahoone, Arthur Aalholm, Vincent B. Miner, Paul Collier, Theodore Gavett, Paul Whitford, George Linke, Francis Foster, C. S. Hoagland, Alfred Manley, Edward M. Templin, Bergen Naylor and John Fritts, of the two basketball teams; Clifford B. Vail, Russell Miller, Chauncey Murphy and Franklin B. Newell, of the athletic team; G. L. Listman, Charles H. Line, F. O. Dunning, John H. Doane, George Willie, C. William Bingeman and George Simon.

BISHOP GAINS ARRESTED BUT STILL PRESIDES

Bishop Wesley J. Gaines, presiding at the thirty-eighth annual session of the New Jersey African Methodist Episcopal conference in Camden, was arrested at the end of yesterday morning's session, charged with embezzling funds of the convention.

Bishop Gaines, who is a colored man, was taken before Justice of the Peace Colding, where the charges were preferred against him. He denied his guilt, but was held under $1,000 bail for a further hearing next Monday. Bail was furnished by the Rev. A. H. Newton, and the bishop returned and presided at the conference in the afternoon.

The warrant charges that the bishop appropriated funds amounting to $150 belonging to the body. He denied that he spent any moneys without the consent and approval of the finance committee.

The warrant was sworn out by the Rev. J. M. Morgan, of Jersey City, before Justice of the Peace Miller, in that city.

Bishop Gaines is to assign the ministers to their new charges at the end of the session next Monday. The further hearing was set for Monday to enable the bishop to complete his work at the conference before answering the charges.

REV. B. J. NEWMAN TO SPEAK ON "THE HOUSING PROBLEM."

The last address in this course now being given Sunday evenings at All Souls' church, will be given Sunday night on "The Housing Problem," by Rev. Bernard J. Newman, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Newman has made a thorough study of his subject, both in England and this country and will have with him pictures taken by himself to illustrate his facts.

Students of congestion near us today declare the need of attention to this matter almost as great in some of the metropolitan suburbs as in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx and certainly one of the clearest Christian duties now pressing is to better the ways in which "the other half" live. Jacob Riis says: "You can kill a man with a tenement as well as with a gun." When Mr. Newman gave his address in New York before an association of ministers there, his words aroused a very great interest. The address will be given aat 7:45 o'clock Sunday evening and the public is invited. The address will be illustrated with the stereopticon.

Bergen Given a Lecture.

Jacob Bergen, colored, who appeared in the borough police court, charged with drunkenness and failure to support his wife, was given to understand, by Recorder Dolliver, that he must assist in bearing expenses of his household by regular weekly contributions. Bergen promised to do so and he was released on this condition. Mrs. Bergen was the complainant in the case.

—O. B. James, of Colliers, "The Man Who Knows," has returned from a Southern trip and as usual presents something valuable. Dr. Elliott's "Five foot book shelf" known as the Harvard Classics will keep Mr. James busy here for the next fortnight. Mr. James is staying at the Kensington. •••

'TRELAWNEY OF THE WELLS' TICKET SALE BEGINS

The sale of tickets for the presentation of "Trelawney of the Wells," which will be given in the Plainfield Theatre on the evenings of May 20 and 21, will begin tomorrow afternoon at 6 o'clock at the box office, and as the demand for seats is likely to be heavy those who contemplate getting good ones ought to be on hand early. It must be remembered that no more than fourteen seats will be sold to any one person at one time for this performance.

"Trelawney of the Wells," one of Sir Arthur Pinero's best plays, will be interpreted by a cast to which there is no way to add improvement. Judge William N. Runyon, who plays the part of Tow Wrench has fallen into a happy place where his talents will show to the greatest advantage. Another actor who has made his mark on the stage both in the amateur and professional ranks, Effingham Pinto, has been secured for the part of Arthur Gower, and judging by past performances it could not be in better hands. Mrs. A. M. Abbott, as Avonia Bunn, Mrs. Henry C. White, as Mrs. Telfer, and Miss Louise Saunders as Rose Trelawney is bound to be appreciated.

The cast in its entirety is one well qualified to give a splendid account of itself and as the object of the play is to benefit the hospital it ought to be well patronized. The program including an announcement of the cast and other information will be found on page five of this edition. The seats are at popular prices and the house ought to be filled.

On the lips of everyone in the cast of the play "Trelawney of the 'Wells,'" are the words "Trelawney," "Rose Trelawney," "Trelawney of the 'Wells.'"

It is said by those who are close to the progress of rehearsals of the play that on the lips of the audience on the night of the performance will be the words "Miss Saunders," "Miss Louise Saunders," for it is Miss Saunders who takes the leading name rôle of the play and she is "Trelawney," "Rose Trelawney," "Trelawney of the 'Wells.'"

That Miss Saunders will again carry her audience by storm is confidently spoken of by her many friends and also that she will nearly if not altogether equal the dramatic characterization of this part as done by Mary Mannering, who played the original role when the play was first put on the stage.

PASTOR SHAW WILL SPEAK ON ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS.

"And they were all Baptized," will be the topic of the prayer meeting at the Seventh-Day Baptist church this evening. Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor, will preach at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, on the subject, "That the plague may be stayed from the people," which will be pertinent to the anti-tuberculosis movement. The Sabbath school will follow the morning service, with O. S. Rogers, superintendent, in charge. At the meeting of the Junior Endeavor Society at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, N. O. Moore will speak, reading and telling Bible stories. Beatrice Cottrell will be the leader.

The topic for the Christian Endeavor Society meeting at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon will be "Winning the World," and Mrs. Lena Langworthy will be the elader. The regular quartely church meeting will be held Sunday night, at which time delegates will be appointed to the annual meeting of the Eastern Association to be held the last of May in Rockville, R. I., and the committee on church playgrounds will report a week later. Other maters of interest will be considered.

Proctor's Great Show.

Spiritualistic demonstrations amused a capacity audience at Proctor's theatre last night, and the Valdos mystified all with their clever work; also with a large clock which stops at a given number. Mr. Valdos is tied in a black cloth bag, fastened about his neck and placed in a cabinet, after which flowers and candy appear at will. The Three Dancing Demons are clever dancers and Harry Bloom is good in character songs. The Roosevelt pictures are fine. They will be shown today and tomorrow.

Many Changes in Property.

Charles H. Hand has sold two lots on Netherwood avenue to Mrs. James Caulfield, one lot on Midway avenue to Albert Hankinson, one lot on Midway avenue to George Weigand and one lot on Midway avenue to Henry Johnson. At yesterday's sale five out of nine lots were sold.

IMPORTANCE OF TAXATION

A. C. Pleydell, Secretary of N. Y. Tax Reform Association Explains It.

AT BEREAN CLASS DINNER.

"Functions of a National Bank" Told by Frederick Coriell—Fifty Diners at Table.

A. C. Pleydell, secretary of the New York Tax Reform Association, delivered an address at a dinner of the Berean Bible Study Class, of Warren chapel, last night, the affair being given by the teacher, Emerson E. Parvin. Mr. Pleydell spoke on "The General Importance of Taxation." He prefaced his remarks by reviewing the various methods of taxation in the early centuries up to the present time.

The hardships the old methods wrought were thoroughly explained and the modern system of taxation was made clear by the speaker. He condemned the personal tax. Taxes effective with absolute precision, and by which no evasion was possible, were good taxes, the speaker declared.

The "benefit theory" that taxes should be based on the priviledged and not upon property was advocated by Mr. Pleydell, as the ideal system of taxation. The inheritance tax also met his approval. He urged upon his hearers the fact that this government is a government of cooperation and that all should take an active interest in it. The peculiar fact that the people generally speaking, instead of being keenly interested in these matters, allow a few men to dominate legislation, and consequently vicious legislation was too often true.

The amendment to the constitution permitting an income tax to be levied by the Federal government was, to Mr. Pleydell's mind, entirely constitutional and should be adopted by various State legislatures. Mr. Pleydell readily answered any and all the questions put to him at the conclusion of his talk, which proved interesting and instructive.

"The Functions of a National Bank," was the subject of a talk by Frederic Coriell, cashier of the Borough National Bank, and his remarks showed that he was thoroughly conversant with the subject.

The dinner was given in the large dining-room of the chapel. Covers were laid for fifty. The color scheme was yellow and white, daffodils and daises were effectively used. Numerous candelabra threw a soft glow of light, harmonizing with the other colors.

At the speakers' table with Mr. Parvin were Frederic Coriell, A. C. Pleydell, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor, Joseph W. Gavett, D. O. Evans, president of the class; Charles F. Windham, Alexander Galloway and Charles Everitt, of the executive committee.

Following the serving of an excellent dinner and before adjournment to the chapel parlor, D. O. Evans, president, presented to Mrs. Parvin, with the compliments of the class, a beautiful bouquet of American Beauty roses. Mrs. Parvin made a happy response to the unexpected thoughtfulness of the class.

A short business session was then held. Charles Everitt, treasurer, reported a balance on hand. Charles Windham reported these names for election to the class: H. E. Bunker, James Foster, Walter Scribner, and Theodore Mason. They were unanimously elected on motion of Mr. Parvin. After the addresses of the evening, a flashlight picture was taken of the gathering by P. Frank Stone. Mr. and Mrs. Parvin were warmly congratulated upon the success of the affair and the pleasant evening.

Powerful Play Tonight.

"Her Son," a play by Charles Bradley, staged by E. F. Bostwick, will be presented at the Plainfield Theatre tonight. It is a play of today, and deals with present-day problems of New York life. It is marked by moments of keenest suspense and scenes of thrilling intensity. The title gives some inkling of the nature of the story, for every parent understands the lengths to which a mother will go, the sacrifices she will make, for the sake of her son. Interwoven with this idea is a story of business and social life in New York that makes a play of remarkable power. There is of course a love interest, and this provides many charming moments during the three acts.

Y. W. C. A. MEMBERS IN MOTHER GOOSE PARTY

One of the most successful social occasions ever held at the Young Women's Christian Association was the Mother Goose Party given last evening. About eighty young women were present and fully one-half of this number were dressed to represent the characters we loved in childhood when e we wore our Mother Goose books ragged poring over them.

Jack and Jill seemed very popular and were represented admirably by three pairs. In falling down hill one Jack really broke his crown and a tooth, and spent the evening with his head bandaged with paper. This couple received the most votes for best representing the characters from old Mother Goose's family. Simple Simon was there, too, and every one was surprised at the simplicity of this very bright young woman. There were the three men in a tub, the butcher, the banker and the candlestick maker, all wearing big aprons and stove-pipe hats.

The witch with her broomstick and high pointed hat was one of the most representative characters and she looked as if she had just arrived from Mother Goose land. Little Jack Horner had a fine big pie and pulled out many a plum with that famous story-told thumb. The most dignified personages present were the King and Queen of Hearts, who filled their parts admirably. Among the other characters represented were Mistress Mary, Little Tommy Tucker, Old Mother Hubbard, Little Bo Peep, Little Red Riding Hood and the ghost of Mother Goose.

Those who were not in costume had good fun guessing who the others were and all joined in the children's games and singing which followed. There were young women of many nationalities and varied occupations present, but all entered into the spirit of the evening and made it one of the jolliest occasions of the year.

Late in the evening, the eighty girls participated in a grand march and passed through the dining-room where was a most wonderful Jack Horner pie made with grass, in which sat a great white goose with a little o'd woman, broom-stick and all, on his back. Each one drew a ribbon which led to the inside of the pie and was attached to a dainty little favor. Refreshments were served and the children departed, declaring it to have been a most enjoyable evening.

The success of the affair is largely due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. E. T. Barrows and her faithful helpers—Mrs. F. G. Andrews, Miss Ray Hooley, Mrs. Williams and Miss Marion Brown. These women made the pie, and made the house look attractive with yellow jonquils, and they well deserved the "three cheers" given them at the close of the evening.

MARK TWAIN DIES AT HIS HOME NEAR REDDING.

Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) died at Stormfield, his country home near Redding, Conn., last evening at 6:22. He had been asleep apparently since early morning and he gradually sank into the slumber which knows no awakening. During the forenoon the great humorist appeared to regain somewhat of his strength, but later began to sink and at 3 o'clock passed into unconsciousness. Just before noon Mr. Clemens asked for his favorite copy of the "French Revolution" and attempted to read, but he was too weak.

Mr. Clemens was born in Florida, Mo., November 30, 1835, and on and about the little rixer which swept by his home he learned to love the nature which he so wonderfully portrayed subsequently in his stories. At twelve years he began to learn the printer's trade in the composing room of the Weekly Journal, of Hannibal, Mo., and here he made his first essay at writing verse, surreptiously setting up his own compositions and getting them by the editor. His fame was world wide and his literary monuments many.

MISS DORIS VANWINKLE BRIDE OF F. C. BARTLE

Miss Doris VanWinkle, daughter of Mrs. L. M. VanWinkle, of Martinsville and Frederick C. Bartle, also of Martinsville, were married at noon yesterday at the home of the bride's mother in the present of a large number of relatives and friends. Rev. Mr. Okeson, formerly pastor of the Methodist church, at Mt. Horeb, and now of Raritan, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Jessie Bartle, niece of the groom, as bridesmaid, and Dorothy Bartle, also niece of the groom, as flower girl. The best man was Newton Goltra, of Martinsville.

After the ceremony a reception was held during which the couple received congratulations and a wedding repast was served. Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Bartle left on a short wedding trip. They will return home Sunday and occupy the newly-furnished home at Martinsville, provided by the groom. The couple is well-known at Martinsville and vicinity and have many friends. The bride received a large collection of gifts.

Evelyn Way, a niece of the bride, was to have been flower girl, but Wednesday night she fell over a wagon and broke her arm in two places, necessitating a change in the plans.

MASONS ELECT GRAND OFFICERS AT TRENTON

Allen S. Sherman, of Orange, was yesterday elected grand master of the New Jersey Grand lodge of Free and Accepted Masons. He succeeds J. Clarence Conover, of Freehold, who declined a re-election. There was but one contest in the election of officers, and that was for the office of grand junior warden, and for which position there are always a number of candidates. The contest was of a very friendly nature, however. Fred E. Tilden, of Jersey City, was the successful candidate for the office. He was chosen on the first ballot. He was a district deputy of the grand lodge for three years, and one of the best known Masons in the State. His father now deceased, served the Grand lodge as grand master.

Other officers elected included: Lester S. Burritt, Bayonne, deputy grand master; Richard C. Woodward, Bordentown, senior grand warden; William F. Burk, of Trenton, grand treasurer; Benjamin F. Warfield, of Trenton, grand secretary; William Rutan, Newark, deputy grand secretary. The grand treasurer, gand secretary and deputy gand secretary are re-elections.

The grand chaplains include: Rev. Henry R. Rose, Newark; Rev. Wilbur W. C. Walker, Jersey City; Rev. Charles Bowden, Camden; Rev. Thomas G. Spencer, Jersey City; Rev. Eugene A. Robinson, Pitman; Rev. Robert MacKeller ,Red Bank. Other elections included: Henry S. Haines, Burlington, G. I.; R. D. Argue, Newark, S. G. D.; William M. Thompson, Orange, J. G. D.; Robert H. McAdams, Elizabeth, grand marshal; J. E. Blackmore, Newark, J. G. S.; H. Berg, Orange, S. G. S.; H. B. Le Massena, Newark, G. S. B.; W F. Marsh, Newark, G. P.; Thomas B. Hood, Newark, G O.; Luther S. Skillman, of Trenton, G. T.

The officers were installed by Past Grand Master Conover, assisted by Chaplain Walker, of Newark.

MR. AND MRS. HARTLEY GIVE THEIR SON A BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hartley, of West Front street, gave a party last night in honor of the twenty-fourth anniversary of the birthday of their son, Wilson E. Steininger. The evening was given up to vocal and instrumental music, games and refreshments. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Randall, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lowry, M. and Mrs. John Kliner, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hartley, the Misses Laura and Augusta Rilling, Ethel and Ruth Morris, and Charles Bauman, Athur Lowry, Geo. Randall, John and Harry Kliner and Wilson E. Steininger.

THE WEATHER.

GRANT'S PURSUERS FOILED

Murderer Covers Tracks Effectually—False Clues Followed.

POLICE ENTIRELY BAFFLED.

All Night Vigil and Search Fail to Reveal Fugitive—Girl Says She Saw Him.

John Grant, the youthful murderer of Mrs. Frederick Covely, is still at large and all efforts of the police and posses to obtain clues as to the avenues whereby he made his escape up to time of going to press have been futile. According to Chiefs Weiss and Kiely and Detective George Totten all territory in which it was believed that the murderer was likely to touch while fleeing has been covered. The police are more at sea today over the disappearance of Grant than yesterday when they inaugurated the search.

The consensus of opinion is that Grant has committed suicide in an isolated spot in the mountains in the vicinity of Watchung. There have been scores of rumors of clues in circulation but none possessed sufficient tangibility to be of any benefit to the police. If Grant is living he has covered up his tracks thoroughly.

Several reports of Grant's capture were also in circulation in the city and borough today. One was the result of the arrest of a park sleeper in Newark this morning by the police of that city, but after an investigation it turned out that the suspicious character bore no resemblance to Grant.

Another report had it that Grant was captured on a Lackawanna train at Berkeley Heights at 7:30 o'clock this morning. This report gained circulation because a posse searched a train that passed through Berkeley Heights at the time named. The information came to borouga police headquarters from a Newark source.

After searching the swamps near Stirling this morning Chief Weiss and his posse continued in an automobile to Summit, Springfield, Rahway and other places. Detective Totten and Chief Kiely visited Westfield, Summit, Berkeley Heights and other places yesterday afternoon in an auto but their trip was in vain.

Arrangements for the funeral of Mrs. Covely were made this morning. A service will be held at her late home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and will be strictly private. Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church, will be in charge. Interment will be made at the convenience of the family.

The mother and two sisters of the murdered woman arrived at the grief stricken home late last night. The mother was brought to this city from New York by the son, James Moore. She was in ignorance of the object of her trip until her arrival at the home and she is prostrated by the shock of the crime.

Despite the wide publicity the murder has attracted the husband of the dead woman has not been heard from. Frineds of Covely volunteered information to the police that a few weeks ago he was employed at Morristown, but so far as is known, the police have made no efforts to locate him.

The autopsy over the body of the victim which was conducted by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and County Physician W. H. Long, of Somerville, this morning, developed the fact that Mrs. Covely had been shot twice. The wounds give evidence that the first bullet speeded through the right temple to the left side of the head, and when the woman had fallen to the floor, the murderer levelled the revolver against her left temple, the bullet coming out on the right side of the head.

Grant used a 38-caliber revolver and one of the bullets was found yesterday afternoon by Undertaker H. J. DeMott while laying out the body. The bullet was found in the floor and it is believed that it was the last one fired. The bullet from the first shot which was fired while the victim was standing was found in her head at the autopsy.

Chief Weiss' party returned to the borough early this morning, but soon re-started its search. Rubber boots were secured at the borough fire headquarters and a search made this morning in the swamps in the vicinity of Stirling, but there were no traces of Grant having visited that section.

Failure of the police to secure any tangible trace of Grant has established a theory among the police and members of the differt posses who searched the mountains all day yesterday and last night that the murderer instead of fleeing any great distance took his own life somewhere

WESTFIELD.

Alfred E. Pearsall, of Mountainside, was offered the office of councilman, to fill a vacancy on the board, caused by a resignation. He refused to accept the office as an appointee, his claim being that he was defeated at the polls a year ago when he ran for the office, and if the people did not want him as a councilman then and defeated him, he would not take the office on appointment.

At an informal meeting of Garwood Council, held to discuss the project of a county tuberculosis hospital, it was the opinion of the members that it would not be advisable for the county to go into the matter.

William Armstrong, of Bayonne, has purchased a lot on Mountain avenue and expects to start a house at once, which he will occupy himself.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Spalding's Official Lawn Tennis Annual for 1910, edited by H. P. Burchell, has just been issued in the Spalding Athletic Library series. This annual publication is eagerly sought by all tennis enthusiasts as it contains the laws of lawn tennis, directory of players, by-laws of the National Lawn Tennis Association, decisions on doubtful points, regulations for the management of tournaments, how to build and keep a court and much other valuable information useful to tennis players in competition and in connection with their courts.

Other contents of the book of a statistical nature are the Davis Cup Matches, International preliminaries, National Doubles, National Championships Preliminaries, Sectional Championships in all parts of the United States, State Championships, miscellaneous, intercollegiate championships, interscholastic tennis, Middle West tennis, Metropolitan League championships, indoor championships, tournament notes, offices, etc., etc.

The book is larger and better than ever, and the illustrations finest yet found in the Annual. Among them we find half dozen or more of the Davis Cup matches at Sydney; the national championships at Newport; scores of fine half tones of the more prominent players of the country, etc.

The Lawn Tennis Guide will be sent to any part of the United States or Canada on receipt of ten cents by the American Sports Publishing Co., 21 Warren St., New York city.

MEETS IN NEW HALL.

Trade Board Discusses Union County Roads.

Westfield, April 22.—One hundred and fifty citizens attended the meeting of the Westfield Board of Trade in the new Town Hall last night, when the subject of "Roads" was discussed by Deputy State Road Inspector Robert A. Meeker, of Plainfield, who told about the building of State roads. Freeholder Charles A. Smith spoke on county roads.

Following the speaking refreshments were served by the board.

FIRST GAME TOMORROW

Plainfield Ball Tossers to Meet O. N. T.'s, of Newark, in First Contest.

M'LAUGHLIN TO BE IN THE BOX.

Manager Dorflinger Announces Personnel of Team—Newark O. N. T.'s Will Present a Strong Front.

Local ball fans will have their innings tomorrow afternoon on Crescent Oval when Manager Ernest Dorflinger's Plainfields will usher in the 1910 season in a game with the famous O. N. T. nine of Newark. If the weather man is kind there should be a big crowd on hand to witness the initial skirmish. The game will begin promptly at 3:30 o'clock.

Warry McLaughlin will twirl for the locals. Warry has been getting himself in trim for the past two weeks and the southpaw reports his flinging arm to be in fine fettle. Walter Nelson will be behind the bat. The infield will be made up of Barnes, on first base; Brit Martin, second base, and Albert Benbrown, on third sack.

Jimmy Emery's successor is touted as a crackerjack and a player of experience, havingp layed with Hartford in the Connecicut League in 1908. Benbrown recently came to this city from "down east" and is employed at the Pond Tool Works.

Manager Dorflinger has not yet decided on his outfield as he has five players on his hands for this territory, Shott, O'Loughlin, Boyd, Snyder and Lidgate.

Sam Lunn, manager of the O. N. T.'s, has notified the local manager that he will bring his strongest team and that the lineup will be as follows: Sassman, shortstop; Spidmore, left field; Decker, first base; Gunderman, center field; Tighe, catcher; Swiss, third base; Fitzpatrick, right field; Miller, second base; Clark, pitcher.

Manager Dorflinger is busily engaged in completing his schedule. Up to date games have been booked with Bound Brook, Elizabeth, Rahway, High Bridge, Flemington and the McNulty's.

on the southern side of the mountains.

All last night Chief Weiss, former Police Chief William Campbell, William Gaub, Howard Woolston and Edward Terry camped in the vicinity of William Mernaugh's farm, which is situated near Smalleytown. Grant at one time was employed by Mernaugh and on other farms in that locality and he frequently visited the Mernaughs.

Chief Weiss' posse decided to remain at the Mernaugh place all night as a result of a tale told by a twelve-year-old girl who resides in the vicinity, who claims to be well acquainted with Grant. Her story was to the effect that he passed through Smalleytown in the direction of Stirling on a bicycle about 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The girl told the police that Grant alighted from his bicycle and talked to her for a while. In the belief that Grant would return to the Mernaugh place last night the posse remained there all night, but without getting the faintest clue.

What is considered the most tangible clue, and which the police believe is correct as to the last seen of Grant in the borough by persons who know him is told by Emil Thompson, a bicycle dealer on Somerset street and Joseph Englund, a driver in the employ of Nischwitz and Bellis.

Thompson, who has known Grant for two years declares that he passed the murderer as he was coming from the scene of the crime. Thompson was crossing from the easterly side of Somerset street and Harmony street at the time, when Grant crossed over from the westerly side of Somerset street and continued into Harmony street toward Watchung avenue.

Englund's story is that while he was driving toward the mountain on Watchung avenue, Grant boarded his delivery wagon at the corner of Manning avenue, and iquired of Englund if he was going up to the mountains. When Englund informed Grant that he wasn't going all the way, the latter appeared disappointed and jumped off the wagon corner Jackson and Watchung avenues. It is seen that the stories of Thompson and Englund tally with each other, and the police have come to the conclusion that this is the only authentic clue.

Little credence is placed in the story told by the twelve-year-old girl who declared that she recognized Grant near the Mernaugh place going in the direction of Stirling on a bicycle as other persons who were traveling in the road and who were questioned by the police informed them that they had not seen any person resembling the description given by the police.

It was ascertained yesterday that Grant was considered an excellent revolver and rifle shot and that it was a hobby of his to collect old guns and repair them. Only recently it is said that he gave a number of small boys some of these weapons.

Somerset street, in the vicinity of police headquarters, had a record crowd all day yesterday. Soon as the news of the crime got in circulation hundreds of pedestrians thronged the sidewalks while hundreds of automobiles, carriages and bicycles filled the street. The house at which the crime was committed was also an object for the curious.

Pathos was added to the situation by the three motherless children when they appeared on the street in charge of a neighbor attired in smart little gowns. They spent the day in the houses and yards of the neighbors and mingling with their playmates to all appearances totally unconscious of their great loss.

Headquarters for

Gibson's

RYE.

E. C. Westcott, Agent.

115 East Front Street.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

Miss Josephine Hughes, superintendent of Muhlenberg Hospital, will give a talk on the "Hygiene of the Sick-room" at the Young Woman's Christian Association next Thursday night. All young women are invited to be present.

Non-members, as well as members of the Young Woman's Christian Association are invited to meet at the rooms of the association at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to participate in a jaunt to Washington Rock. Each girl is requested to bring her lunch and supper will be served at the Rock.

Possible Big Defalcation.

According to the latest despatches from Newark disclosures made yesterday would seem to indicate that the missing Auditor, George Forman, has left because he was in financial trouble and some securities which had been entrusted to him amounting to some $12,000 are also missing. The discoveries point to a large defalcation. David M. Wickham was the owner of bonds in the amount named and no trace of these securities can now be found. They were held for Mr. Wickham by Forman. Expert accountants have been engaged to examine the missing man's books. The shock to Forman's friends and to official Newark is greater and more severe than any happening since the Palmer-Hall exposures of 1882.

Unity Lodge, K. of P.

Unity Lodge, Knights of Pythias, exemplified the work of the second degree on two candidates at their meeting last night and the work was beautifully done. One application was received. Resolutions of condolence were passed to J. H. Shephard whose wife recently died and a resolution of sympathy to Perseverance council on the loss of their brother, Asa D. Pope.

"FAKE" ENUMERATOR SAID TO BE WORKING IN PLAINFIELD.

The local census enumerators report having had considerable trouble in following their work here. Yesterday it was learned by some of them that a person, representing himself to be a government official had been about the city obtaining information such as the enumerators are expected to get.

The unknown man keeps just ahead of the regular enumerators and as yet they have been unable to catch him or even get a glimpse of the stranger. Plainfielders are cautioned not to give information except to such enumerators as display the official authority.

Passover Begins Tomorrow.

Great preparations are being made all over the city among the Jews for the observance of the Passover, which begins tomorrow, a month later than usual owing to the fact that this is the Jewish leap year. Special services will be held in the synagogue in New street near Front and will begin at 6 o'clock in the evening. The fast will be observed for the entire week and the strictly orthodox will not eat any bread but the unleaven matzoh. There will be services on Sunday evening as well as to night when the regular Friday night services are held. The stores of the orthodox Jews will be closed during the fast.

Gives Banquet for Friends.

Miss Dora Victorson tendered a banquet to a number of her friends at the Waldorf last night. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Victorson, Miss Blanche Skinner, Miss Clara E. King, Miss Florence M. King, Miss Nellie M. Gage, Miss Frances Weitzman, Miss Irma Yahrman, Charles E. Eilar, A. Victorson and William Cubberly, all of this city; Messrs. Simeon Smith and Jesse Brown, of Cranford; Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Hockel, of Somerville; Mr. and Mrs. J. De Young, Miss Helen Hemple and M. Hemple, of Detroit, Mich, and William Victorson.

Piscataway School Matters.

Miss N. B. Moore, of Englewood, has been appointed to succeed Miss Margaret Wallace, who recently resigned as teacher in the New Market school. Chairman Ten Eyck, of the school board, has appointed the following committees to serve for one year: teachers—A. Nelson, Gerry and Liebe; text books and supplies—Giles, Piddington and Marshall; finance—Liebe, Marshall and A. Nelson; buildings and repairs—Piddington, Giles and Ramsey; transportation—Gerry, Ramsey and F. O. Nelson.

North Plainfield Association.

The North Plainfield Association will hold an important meeting in Debele's auditorium tonight. Final plans will be announced for the banquet which will be held next Thursday night.

W. C. T. U. CONDEMN ALLEGED "ORGIES" OF LEGISLATURE.

Resolutions condemning the recent alleged "orgies" at Trenton were adopted by the W. C. T. U. at the spring institute held at Westfield yesterday. Several members spoke concerning the matter and it was the unanimous opinion that such resolutions should be passed. Last night Mrs. Robert Curry, of Westfield, won the silver medal prize speaking contest. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, county president, presided at the sessions, which were held morning, afternoon and night, and there was a large attendance of members.

Funeral of Mrs. J. F. Sheppard.

The funeral services of Mrs. Joseph F. Sheppard were held from the late home on West Fifth street, yesterday afternoon, and were largely attended by relatives and friends, including representatives from several lodges of which Mrs. Sheppard was a member. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, conducted the services. He referred to the exemplary Christian life of the departed. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pallbearers were Elias H. Bird, James Clarkson, B. Frank Coriell, Charles Heaton, Charles Western and John Becker.

Threw Garbage Into Cars.

Marie Mochelo and Rose Cortesso, two Italian women living at 355 and 329 Cottage place, respectively, were fined three dollars each this morning by City Judge William N. Runyon for throwing garbage into empty box cars of the Central Railroad standing on a siding near their homes. They were ordered to clean up their cellars and yards by the Board of Health and took what they thought would be the shortest and cheapest way of doing it.

Song Recital Tonight.

An historical song recital will be given in the High School auditorium tonight by Miss Mona Downs, assisted by Frederick S. Rodney, baritone, and Miss Lenore Smith, violinist. Mrs. Albert Vaughan will be the accompanist. The program consists of gems from Bach, Mendelssohn, Wagner, Brahms and MacDowell. Tickets are on sale at Miller's drug store.

Former Dunellenite Married.

William Welsh, a former resident of Dunellen, was married on Monday afternoon, to Miss Mamie McCormack, of Hampton. The couple on the completion of a wedding trip to Washington will reside at Hampton.

Music in City Market.

Keeping up the practice inaugurated with the opening of the city market there will be music by Pierre's orchestra in the music room of the market tomorrow evening from 7 to 10 o'clock.

"I've only got one seat left for tonight," said the man in the theatre ticket office.

"How much?" asked the prospective buyer.

"Two dollars."

"Is it a good seat?"

"Well, it's behind a post."

"What's the matter? Isn't the show worth seeing?"—Exchange.

Making Money.

"How would you like to be America's poet laureate?"

"I couldn't afford the honor. I am already poet laureate of a prosperous bean packery."

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

LIQUOR DEALERS PROTEST AGAINST CLUB BARS

Hoboken, April 22.—Counselor Agnew appeared before the West Hoboken Board of Council last evening on behalf of the Liquor Dealers' Association of the town to protest against a number of excise violations on the part of clubs or so-called corporations. The counselor said that 99 per cent. of the liquor dealers are members of the association and they desire that every one selling liquor should pay the required license. No club, said he, has any right to sell liquor unless they have a regular license.

Mayor Mohn asked if the names of violators could be had. Agnew said that the names of several could be given, but to make them public might mean a miscarriage of justice. Councilman Kronmeyer said that he thought some of the violators were before the recorder and fined recently.

Police Chief McAuley was called and informed the Council that the only ones he knew who sold without a license were some co-operative stores. People buy groceries and get liquor at the same time.

The only way to secure evidence in cases of this sort was to have somebody buy liquor said he. "They won't sell to me nor to any of the regular men. I cannot get the evidence personally nor can any of you," said the chief, addressing the Council.

On being asked if he knew anybody in the business selling without a license, he said:

"There is a man, Sylvester, at West and Lake streets, selling without a license. He was caught once and fined, so that he is extra cautious now. Should we get him again he could be fined $100, but at that he would not mind, as it would be cheaper than paying a license. Albertalli is another man in the same business. He gets about 400 barrels of cheap wines at a time."

The matter of running down these places was left to the chief with power.

DOCTORS CRITICIZE GOVERNOR.

New Brunswick, April 22.—Governor Fort was criticized at the annual meeting of the Middlesex County Medical Society, held here Wednesday afternoon, for his veto of the Ramsay osteopathy bill. The doctors went on record as declaring the Governor's action a blow to the medical profession of the State. Dr. Ramsay told the society every effort was made by him to have the bill signed. Dr. Benjamin Guttman, of this city, was elected president of the society.

The vetoed bill was House 156, and provided for a tenth member of the State Board of Medical Examiners, who was to be an osteopath. The measure was supported by the State Medical Board, but was opposed by the osteopaths, who want a State medical board of their own.

Escapes from Asylum.

Trenton, April 22.—By prying apart the bars over the window of his room, Holmes Riddle, a patient at the State Hospital for the Insane in this city, escaped from that institution some time Wednesday night. He had not been heard from up to noon today. Riddle, after squeezing between the bars, jumped from the second story to the front lawn. He is twenty-four years old and was sent to the hospital from Long Branch last January.

Subtle Flattery.

"I'll bet that cook will remain with us indefinitely."

"Why so?"

"We've had an oil painting made of her."

SENATE PRESIDENT ENTERTAINS MEMBERS

Governor Fort and the members of the Senate were guests of President Frelinghuysen, of the Senate, yesterday and last night at his home in Raritan. The affair was purely social, and no politics were discussed. The Senators who reside close to the President's home did not remain over night, but those from a distance were unable to return to their homes until today.

Many of the Senators arrived early in the afternoon, and were given an automobile ride through that section of the State. There were a number of cars for the lawmakers, and the trip was highly enjoyed. Later in the evening dinner was served, and there were a number of jokes passed across the table.

Governor Fort and Senator Frelinghuysen have long been close personal friends, but the Executive's recent speech at the Hotel Astor, in New York, in the course of which he made some sharp criticisms of the New Jersey Legislature, jarred this intimacy. The speech in question was made the subject of a bitter executive session discussion during the closing days of the Senate, and Mr. Frelinghuysen and others were emphatic in their denunciation of the Governor's talk. In fact, one or two of the Senators were of the opinion the executive should be "called down," and there were some who felt he should be called upon to prove his allegations, or retract. Resolutions to this effect were offered, but were allowed to die in committee.

The whole matter, however, has brought about a spirit of coldness on Mr. Frelinguhysen's part, and where he previously had been seen almost daily in the Governor's office, his visits afterwards were few and of an official character. In inviting his Senate colleagues to be his guests over night, however, Mr. Frelinghuysen forgot his personal feelings. The Governor, who has always contended that his New York remarks were not to be taken personally, and who still has, as he always has had, the warmest regard for Mr. Frelinghuysen, was quick to accept the invitation.

MADE FELLOW TRAVELER PAY.

English Actor Saved His Money and Enjoyed the Joke.

At the close of that season in which Shuter, the Arthur Roberts of 50 years ago, first became so universally and deservedly celebrated, he was engaged for a few nights in a principal city in the north of England. It was in the coaching days, and it happened that the stage in which he went down (and in which there was only an old gentleman and himself) was stopped by a single highwayman.

The old gentleman pretended to be asleep, but Shuter resolved to be even with him. Accordingly, when the highwayman presented his pistol and commanded Shuter to deliver his money instantly, or he was a dead man:

"Money!" returned he, with an idiotic shrug and a countenance inexpressibly vacant; "oh, lor', sir! they never trust me with any; for uncle here always pays for me, turnpikes and all, your honor!"

Upon which the highwayman gave him a few curses for his stupidity, complimented the old gentleman with a sharp slap on the face to awaken him, and robbed him of every shilling he had in his pocket; while Shuter, who did not lose a single farthing, with great satisfaction and merriment pursued his journey, laughing heartily at his fellow-traveler.

Its Proper Sweep.

Dressmaker—How does the train of this dress suit you?

Customer (enthusiastically) — It suits me down to the ground.—Baltimore American.

HIS CAUSE FOR GRIEF.

"What," we ask the despondent looking man, "is troubling you?"

"I've met with a severe injury."

"But, there is no trace of it physically."

"Nevertheless," he replies, "I am all broken up."

"Tell us about it."

"There isn't much to tell. My father's will was contested and where I expected to get $10,000 I don't get a penny."

"That is hard luck all right, but surely that can't be classed as a physical injury," we remark.

"Yes it can," he moaned, "and if you were me you'd know how much it hurts to fall out of an heirship."

Domestic Weather.

"What's the weather forecast for today?"

"Violent atmospheric disturbances, followed by heavy rainfall."

"Why, there's not a cloud in the sky."

"Oh, yes there is. I'm going home now to try to square myself with my wife. She's so mad she could hardly talk over the telephone."

The Modern Way.

Author—I have a play here, sir, which I wish you would read.

Manager—Is it a modern play?

Author—Oh, yes, sir. It is a play which no young man or woman would care a carefully-brought parent to see.

Manager—Does it end happily?

Author—Sure. The hero and heroine are divorced in the last act and live happy ever after.

Little Too Strong.

Mrs. Stubb (soothingly)—But, John, if a husband loves his wife he will make allowances for her weakness for pretty hats.

Mr. Stubb—Yes, Maria, but when those allowances come out of his pockets two or three times each season it is going a little too strong.

His Way to Reduce Expenses.

"Jagsby had a grand cook who commanded the highest salary. Now, I understand, the poor woman has a place where she works harder than ever and barely earns her keep."

"Why doesn't she change it for a better?"

"She can't Jagsby married her."

NO HOPE.

Kind Lady—Do you know who I am, little man?

Kid—Gee! Don't yer know who yer are?

A New Invention.

A germ-proof shield has been brought out,
So folks can kiss through that;
'Tis sanitary, but I fear
The taste is rather flat.

Restraining Influence.

"Why did you advise that literary aspirant to the use of a fountain pen?"

"Because," answered the cold hearted publisher, "he will be kept so busy filling it and washing his hands that he won't have time to write much."

In Emergencies.

Miss Giddington; Oh, did you ever experience the sensation of drowning, Commodore?

Commodore Julep—Ee-hum, my dear young lady, I have very frequently clutched at straws.

From Bad to Worse.

Biggs—None of my correspondents could read my writing, so I bought a typewriter.

Diggs—And now they are unable to read your spelling, eh?

His Retort.

His Wife (during the spat)—Oh, I wish I were a man!

Her Husband—I don't. If you were I'd feel duty bound to mop the floor with you.

Lucky Sailor.

Sindbad the sailor had just found the valley of diamonds.

"Ha!" he exclaimed. "This is indeed lucky! Now I will not have to go around begging for a ship subsidy."

Consolation.

Young Father (proudly)—The baby is the image of me.

Cynical Old Uncle—Don't worry, my boy. The poor little creature may outgrow it.

A Necessity of the Case.

"All of these sporting contests are spoken of as plucky affairs."

"Of course. Necesarily, they are game contests."

Very Much Bent.

"We are both on mischief bent," said the inclined pin as the bad boy put it in the favorite family lounging chair.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

More than 12,000 acres of woodland has been burned over near Williamstown within the last month.

With the rank of captain, Dr. Carroll Francis has been appointed surgeon of the Third Regiment, N. G. N. J., to succeed Dr. W. S. Bray.

A basket-making plant at Chesapeake, Md., owned by Benjamin E. Harris, James Butcher and J. K. Waddington, of Salem, was destroyed by fire Wednesday.

Several months a fugitive on a charge of larceny, William Owens was yesterday found by Gloucester policemen hiding in a cabin at Westville. He was committed to the county jail.

When the forks of his bicycle broke Wednesday, Henry Goodheart, fourteen years old, of 750 Fairview street, Camden, sustained severe lacerations to the face, and rolled out of the way of an approaching trolley in time to escape it.

Although yet under the care of a physician, Policeman Lyons, of Gloucester City, Wednesday refused to press a charge of battery against William Jones, a United States sailor, and the prisoner was released.

Mrs. Edward L. Durand, of Mt. Holly, is suffering from a fractured wrist and bruises. She went to Lawrenceville to witness the marriage of her son, Clifford L. Durand, and Miss Mabel E. Golding, and while at the bride's home she fell down a stairway.

Accepting a suggestion of reconciliation, made by Judge Joline, in Camden, during the progress or argument over the custody of their three-year-old son, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Pederson Wednesday started life anew, and the little fellow will now be in the charge of both father and mother.

HERE AND THERE.

Peter Swackhamer, of Whitehouse, who has been spending a few days here with relatives, had a pleasant experience yesterday when he met his old school-mates, Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver and his brother, David S. Weaver. It was the first time since 1862, that he had seen the former and when they met he did not know him. He had seen David Weaver once since 1862 and that was in 1908. The trio renewed old acquaintance and talked over their boyhood days. This is the first time that Mr. Swackhamer has been away from home for any length of time. For the past three weeks he has been visiting in Trenton, this city and Scotch Plains. He lives on the old homestead farm at Whitehouse and has always been a successful farmer.

FIREBUG'S TORCH BRINGS ON FITS.

New Brunswick, April 22.—Another attempt was made to destroy the property of George Likowski, a butcher of Sayreville, yesterday. This time his assailants attempted to burn down his home while Likowski, an invalid, his wife and three children were in bed.

Likowski awakened to find one side of his home in flames. He called for help and the other members of his family were aroused. They made a speedy escape from the burning building and neighbors assisted in extinguishing the flames. Kerosene was found on the burned side of the building, just as it was found on the side of Likowski's barn when that was set on fire a week ago.

Likowski went into convulsions soon after discovery of the fire and medical services were summoned. He is in a serious condition as the result of his experience. He believes somebody has a grudge against him and is taking this method of seeking revenge.

The Sayreville Township authorities have taken the matter in hand and have placed detectives on the case. The building is located on the Amboy road.

CARMEN BACK AT WORK.

Philadelphia Trolley Strike Is Finally Ended.

Philadelphia, April 22.—The strike on the Philadelphia street car lines became merely an unpleasant memory yesterday, when, with all misunderstanding regarding the terms of settlement removed, the strikers returned to work in obedience to an order issued last night by the executive committee of the carmen's local union.

Reports from the various barns of the company show that more than 2,000 men reported for duty early in the day.

Under the terms of settlement all of the strikers will receive regular runs as soon as possible and all not receiving employment will get $2 a day until they are put on regular cars.

FIRE ENINE MISSING.

Bridgeton, April 22.—The Council is wondering what has become of the city's best fire engine and threatens legal action unless it is speedily returned.

The engine was sent away more than six months ago to be repaired, with an agreement that it was to be returned in sixty days. Nothing has been seen of it since.

THEM.

After the striving and straining,
After the many defeats;
After much useless complaining,
After heart-breaking retreats;
After the hoping and sighing,
Cheated and hated of men,
After the hard self-denying,
The smile of Success—and what then?

After the planning and scheming,
After the strife and the strain;
After the fretting and dreaming,
After the ache and the pain;
After the doubting and daring,
Pitied or hated of men,
After too often despairing,
The joy of success—and what then?

After the profitless groping,
Down where the deep shadows lie;
After the praiseworthy hoping,
After the sob and the sigh;
After all this, the great glory
Of joining the prominent men,
And the struggle—to finish the story—
With New York society then.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

BORN WITH THE GIFT.

A girl never has to learn how to flirt.

Not Too Gentle.

The gentle reader may be so,
But none the less
He gladly reads of warlike deeds,
We must confess.

No Place For a Doctor.

"You say this is a healthy place," remarked the would-be investor; "yet the man next door looks as if he wouldn't live a week. How do you explain that?"

"Oh, replied the real-estate dealer, "that chap isn't sick—he is starving to death. He's the only doctor in town."

Better Still.

Said She—I was reading today of a peach raised in Michigan that weighed almost five pounds. What do you think of that?

Said He—Oh, that wasn't much of a peach. Why, you weigh at least twenty-five times that much.

The Fitting Qualities.

"My boy has a wonderful amount of perservance and persistency and an optimism that nothing can daunt. What occupation would you put him to if you were in my ulace?"

"I should think he would make an ideal book agent."

About the Size of It.

First Bunko Man—Do you believe there is any turth in the old adage that a sucker is born every minute?

Second Bunko Man—Well, I don't know as to that, but they are born often enough to keep us wise guys from becoming honest!

The Object.

"What is the object of an automobile endurance run?"

"The object is to see which one of the wives of the contestants can soonest endure the sight of the burned and blistered face of her hubby."

THE CENTER OF HER INTEREST.

"What do you find so interesting in that magazine?"

"There are a lot of advertisements about awfully nice underwear."

Sure to Please.

If you want to please a woman
There'll be no vain regret
If her birthdays you remember
And her age you will forget.

Honest Jack.

Pearl—Jack is such a conservative chap. He vows he wouldn't think of stealing a kiss unless—

Ruby—Unless what?

Pearl—Unless he had the chance.

The Probabilities.

"Doesn't your son go with a fast set?"

"I suppose he does. He belongs to an automobile club."

Not So Much.

"What did Mr. Skinflint send to the donation party for the minister?"

"His regrets."

5,000 Yards 1.35 Beautiful Mirage Silks at - - - - - - 57c

A Sale Embracing No Less Than Fifty-four Colors of These Celebrated Silken Fabrics.

On over enthusiastic maker of dresses, fascinated by the charm of the exquisite mirage silks, plunged deeply—and got too much of this one class of silk for the dresses he got orders for.

Through the intercession and influence of our ready-to-wear department, we induced this manufacturer to part with a lot of about 5,000 yards of these Mirage Silks, knowing full well that it would be an easy matter to dispose of them quickly if we quoted a low price to our patrons.

A little while ago we were selling these silks for $1.35 a yard—so was every other store. About a month ago we secured a lot and sold them at the heretofore unheard-of price of 85c and they went like the wind.

Now we come to you with this big lot including no less than 54 colors, yarn dyed, beautiful, brilliant silks, and quite a little of white, and instead of $1.35 a yard, the price at which it was manufactured to sell, instead of 85c a yard, our former remarkably special price, we are going to permit you to buy as much of this as you like—one dress or ten dresses, any of the colors or white, at only..... 57c

The colors include the following—Gold, Ivy, Cornflower, Peach, Light Blue, Pink, Tan, Old Rose, Golden Tan, Plum, Apricot, Olive, Walnut, Maize, White, Lilac, Oyster, Pearl, Wine, Sea Green, Turquoise, Natural, Old Blue, Copenhagen, Wistaria, Brown, Navy, Jasper, Myrtle, Sapphire, Grisele, Peacock, Smoke, Reseda, Golden Brown, Marine, 10 New Chameleon Effects.

There are variations of many of the colors, but of some there is only enough for, perhaps, two or three dresses. Those who attend the sale at its inception will naturally have fullest choice.

Truly this is one of the most important silk events Hahne & Co. has ever created—one that will stir the silk trade of this section—one that cannot be matched because mirage silks cannot be found in any quantity in any other Newark store.

Plainfield in .... The Olden Days.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

May 9, 1872.

Runaway—A serious runaway accident occurred in this city on Monday afternoon last, the particulars of which are as follows: As Mr. Geo. Angleman and family were driving past the residence of Mr. Hyde, on Front street, the horses suddenly took fright at the fountain in the front yard and started on a run. Mr. Angleman did all in his power to stop the frightened team and finally ran them into the fence along the road. The wagon was wrecked, and the occupants thrown out, one of them, a daughter, being seriously cut about the head.

A young child of T. O. Doane, of this city, was seriously scalded by falling into a kettle of hot water, which the servant girl had carelessly lef in its way, on Monday afternoon last.

The new Board of Freeholders of Union county met together at Elizabeth today (Wednesday). John C. Rose, of Linden, was appointed director; Elias R. Pope, of Plainfield, collector, and J. B. English, county attorney.

May 16, 1872.

Look out for Thieves.—On Sunday evening last, about 10 o'clock a couple of individuals entered the dwelling of Rev. J. H. Vincent, but were frightened away before securing anything of value.

The same night some one gained access to the cellar of the dwelling of Mr. Turner, in North Plainfield, and after helping themselves to all they wanted in the way of eatables destroyed the remainder and started for parts unknown. Mr. Turner's family were up all night attending a sick person, which probably prevented the thieves from ransacking the house.

Ground is being broken on Front street next to the residence of Samuel Varian, for the purpose of erecting a residence for Rev. Lewis Bond.

We learn with regret, of the serious illness of Hon. Joseph W. Yates. We trust soon we may hear of his convalescence.

May 23, 1872.

Accident—We learn with regret of a painful accident which happened on Saturday last to our brother contemporary, Mr. J. C. Runyon, of the Times. While feeding cards in a Gordon press, his hand was caught in a portion of the machinery, and three fingers badly hurt.

(Evona).

Mr. Geo. Angleman, with a large force of workmen, is engaged in the work of depressing Clinton avenue sufficient to allow the means of travel to be under the railroad track instead of over it. This will, we presume, be pointed out to our citizens as a practical illustration of railroad elevation through Plainfield by those interested in that scheme.

May 30, 1872.

W. L. Force of the Plainfield Conbrown man of 38; a smooth sensible writer, and has good business tact; bound to make his mark in the world; can't say how much he is worth.

The above we clip from among "All our New Jersey Editors," in the Jersey City Herald. Much obliged for the compliment, "nut brown" and "handsome" are good words. We knew our looks were passable, but was not aware that the Herald man had heard of it.

A Berry, Esq., has removed from his former place of residence on Front street, to North Plainfield. We are sorry to hear of it, as Mr. Berry has done much in assisting to build up our young city. Nevertheless, he may be found during the day at the old stand, corner of Front and Cherry, ready to sell anything in the hardware line, from a mowing machine to a grindstone.

We received a visit this (Wednesday) morning from Mr. J. W. Eagleton, son-in-law of Mr. James Frazer, formerly of Plainfield, and former proprietor of the "Rock House." Mr. Frazer is at present residing at Columbus, Ohio, and is engaged in a profitable business there. Mr. Eagleton visits the North for the purpose of attending the Philadelphia Convention.

PLANS TO OBSERVE HIS ANNIVERSARY.

Elizabeth, April 22.—The Rev. and Mrs. John V. Ellson will celebrate their fifteenth wedding anniversary Monday evening in the parsonage of the East Baptist church, of which Mr. Ellson is pastor.

There will be a reception for members of the congregation and friends from 8 to 11 o'clock. About 300 guests, it is expected, will be entertained. The parsonage, at 255 Marshall street, will be decorated in pink and white.

George Bennett will be master of ceremonies. He is president of the Baraca Class. Mrs. Caude Peters will assist in receiving.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellson were married in the Greene Avenue Baptist church, Brooklyn, by the Rev. Dr. A. H. Burlingham, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin. Mr. Ellson is a graduate of Colgate College, New York. He recently declined a call to a large church in Buffalo.

NAKED EYE SEES COMET.

Terrestrial Traveler Gives Exhibition at Cambridge.

Cambridge, Mass., April 22.—Halley's comet was watched with interest by members of the force of the Harvard Observatory early yesterday. It was visible to the naked eye. The comet appeared in plain view at 3:48 a. m., and disappeared from sight at 4:12 a. m. From observations taken by Lee F. Campbell, of the observator staff, the comet was 15 degrees east of Venus, had a tail one and one-half degrees long and was as large as a star of the fourth magnitude.

From a popular point of view, the comet is disappointing at this time, and for two weeks there will be very little to repay the early riser. In fact, astronomers do not look for any spectacular display while the comet is in the eastern sky. Next month, however, after it passes between the earth and the sun and reappears in the west, it will be an object of much interest.

Lost Man in Creek.

Elizabeth, April 22.—Chanceman Feehan was called to the home of Richard Rabig, at 1068 Elizabeth avenue, yesterday, where he found Thomas Kelly crying for help, having lost his way. Kelly, it seems, had mistaken the road to his home and wandered down Sayre Lane, where he had fallen into the creek. Officer Feehan took him to his room at 1000 Elizabeth avenue.

IN ALL-NIGHT MEETING COUNCIL DOWNS MAYOR.

Bayonne, April 22.—The bitter fight here between Mayor John J. Cain and the "Big Eight" combine in the Council, composed of four Democrats and four Republicans, was continued at a session of the Council that terminated shortly before daylight Wednesday. During the prolonged meeting, the combine ignored recommendations from the Mayor that the special counsel in the case of Contractor William T. S. Crichfield be empowered to appeal to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

The combine not only turned down the Mayor's request, but voted to dispense with the further services of the special counsel, Messrs. Hudspeth & Lane, of Jersey City, and introduced an ordinance providing for the sale of bonds with which to raise the money to pay Crichfield. He was awarded the contract for the repaving of Broadway and his price was $166,975. When he had completed the work he put in a bill for $237,832.08. He claimed the extra expense was due to extra concrete and curbing which he was obliged to use.

Mayor Cain objected to paying more than the contract price and Crichfield sued and recovered judgment for the full amount and interest.

WARS ON BEER ARKS.

Asbury Park Churchmen Plan to Stop Sales.

Asbury Park, April 22.—The Men's Federation of Church Clubs has taken its first step in its war on "beer ark" deliveries within a mile of Ocean Grove.

This first step is the circulation of petitions among the churches of the city for the signatures of the church people. The petitions are addressed to "the Mayor and Common Council of the City of Asbury Park," and ask that all possible be done to prohibit such illegal sales and that infringers of the law be prosecuted.

It is the intention of the Federation to get as large a number of signers as possible, in order to show the Council where the people stand in the matter.

Dad's Idea.

"Say pa."

"Well, what is it?"

"Pa, what is alfalfa?"

"It's a slang term for whiskers, son," replied the city man as he resumed his novel.

Y.M.C.A. NINE TO PLAY STRONG MONTCLAIRS

The Y. M. C. A. baseball nine will journey to Montclair tomorrow afternoon and assist in opening the season in that town in a game with the crack Montclair A. C. The Essex county aggregation is composed mainly of former college stars and it is pretty certain that the locals will have their hands full. Manager Listman is confident, however, that his warriors will make a creditable showing, particularly if Jack Peacock can leave Princeton to fill the pitcher's box.

In the recent practice sessions the association boys have displayed lots of speed and the outlook is rosy for a strong nine, one that will be able to cope with any of the leading teams in the State. Mr. Listman stated this morning that the positions in the opening contest would be something like this:

Cathers, Linke and Hand; pitchers, Slocum and Peacock; first base, Stover; second base, Evans; shortstop, Gilmore; third base, Coyle; outfield, John Fritts, captain; Daniel and Whitford.

FAIRVIEW CYCLE CLUB HAS HARD SCHEDULE

The Fairview Cycle Club, one of the crack little teams of the city, is on deck with a strong schedule of games. Edmund J. Kenney is captain and Francis McDonough, of 36 Fairview avenue, is the manager of the teams. Managers of fourteen year old clubs desiring games with the Fairviews should address Mr. McDonough. The card of games already booked is as follows:

April 23, Grace at Hyde Field; 30, Highlander at Hyde Field; May 5, Y. M. C. A. at Crescent Oval; 7, Grace at Crescent Oval; 14, Warren Chapel at Hyde Field; 21, New Market at New Market; 28, Y. M. C. A. at Hyde Field; 30, Grace at Hyde Field; June 4, Hope Chapel at Hyde Field; 11, Warren Chapel at Hyde Field; 18, Warren Chapel at Hyde Field; 28, Hope Chapel at Hyde Field.

SHAMROCK BOWLERS TAKE TWO OUT OF THREE.

The Shamrocks won the odd game in a match with the Rushmore tenpin aggregation on Campbell's alleys last night. The Shamrocks after winning the initial encounter dropped the second game to the Rushmores, but in the final brush they had the situation in their hands and won by a margin of 105 pins. The score:

Garwood Has Fine Team.

The Garwood A. C., under the management of Dick Watt, expects to make things hum for all Jersey nines during the season. The Garwood aggregation is out for the Union county championship and Manager Watt is confident that his aggregation will land the honor. Games have been booked with all of the first class nines in the State and a successful season is anticipated. Last season Garwood defeated Irvington, Red Bank, New Brunswick, Somerville and other star combinations. Manager Watt has several dates open in May and June for first-class teams offering suitable inducements, Sundays, Saturdays and holidays.

JUVENILE WIRE THIEF.

Elizabeth, April 22.—A theft of telephone wire was made Wednesday night by Philip Simminsky, a ten-year-old Polish boy, who lives on Franklin street, Elizabethport. Linemen were making repairs at First and Livingston streets, and left on the top of a sixty-foot pole a coil of wire weighing about fifty pounds.

The juvenile thief climbed the pole, threw the wire to the ground and then lugged it off to his home, three blocks away.

Some persons who saw the lad carrying away the wire notified Policeman Hankins, who followed him to his home and arrested him. The stolen wire was taken to the Second Precinct Station. The lad was placed in charge of the probation officer.

The Man in Lower Ten

By Mary Roberts Rinehart
Author of The Circular Staircase

Illustrations by M. J. KETTNER

(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

While they harnessed the horse Hotchkiss told me what he had learned.

"Six Curtises in the town and vicinity," he said. "Sort of family name around here. One of them is telegraph operator at the station. Person we are looking for is—was—a wealthy widow with a brother—named Sullivan! Both supposed to have been killed on the Flier."

"Her brother," I repeated, stupidly.

"You see," Hotchkiss went on, "three people, in one party, took the train here that night, Miss West, Mrs. Curtis and Sullivan. The two women had the drawing room, Sullivan had lower seven. What we want to find out is just who these people were, where they came from, if Bronson knew them, and how Miss West became entangled with them. She may have married Sullivan, for one thing."

I fell into gloom after that. The roan was led unwillingly into the weather, Hotchkiss and I eclipsed behind the blanket. The liveryman stood in the doorway and called directions to us. "You can't miss it," he finished. "Got the name over the gate anyhow, 'The Laurels.' The servants are still there: leastways, we didn't bring them down." He even took a step into the rain as Hotchkiss picked up the lines. "If you're going to settle the estate," he bawled, "don't forget us, Peck & Peck. A half-bushel of name and a bushel of service."

Hotchkiss could not drive. Born a clerk, he guided the roan much as he would drive a bad pen. And the roan spattered through puddles and splashed ink—mud, that is—until I was in a frenzy of irritation.

"What are we going to say when we get there?" I asked after I had finally taken the reins in my one useful hand. "Get out there at midnight and tell the servants we have come to ask a few questions about the family? It's an idiotic trip anyhow; I wish I had stayed at home."

The roan fell just then and we had to crawl out and help him up. By the time we had partly unharnessed him our matches were gone and the small bicycle lamp on the buggy was wavering only too certainly. We were covered with mud, panting with exertion and even Hotchkiss showed a disposition to be surly. The rain, which had lessened for a time, came on again, the lightning flashes doing more than anything else to reveal our isolated position.

Another mile saw us, if possible, more despondent. The water in our clothes had had time to penetrate; the roan had sprained his shoulder, and drew us along in a series of convulsive jerks. And then through the rain-spattered window of the blanket, I saw a light. It was a small light, rather yellow, and it lasted perhaps 30 seconds. Hotchkiss missed it, and was inclined to doubt me. But in a couple of minutes the roan hobbled to the side of the road and stopped, and I made out a break in the pines and an arched gate.

It was a small gate, too narrow for the buggy. I pulled the horse into as much shelter as possible under the trees, and we got out. Hotchkiss tied the beast and we left him there, head down against the driving rain, drooping and dejected. Then we went toward the house.

It was a long walk. The path bent and twisted, and now and then we lost it. We were climbing as we went. Oddly there were no lights ahead, although it was only ten o'clock—not later. Hotchkiss kept a little ahead of me, knocking into trees now and then, but finding the path in half the time I should have taken. Once, as I felt my way around a tree in the blackness, I put my hand unexpectedly on his shoulder and felt a shudder go down my back.

"What do you expect me to do?" he protested, when I remonstrated. "Hang out a red lantern? What was that? Listen."

We both stood peering into the gloom. The sharp patter of the rain on leaves had ceased and from just ahead there came back to us the stealthy padding of feet in wet soil. My hand closed on Hotchkiss' shoulder and we listened together, warily. The steps were close by, unmistakable. The next flash of lightning showed nothing moving: the house was in full view now, dark and uninviting, looming huge above a terrace, with an Italian garden at the side. Then the blackness again. Somebody's teeth were chattering: I accused Hotchkiss but he denied it.

"Although I'm not very comfortable, I'll admit," he confessed; "there was something breathing right at my elbow here a moment ago."

"Nonsense!" I took his elbow and steered him in what I made out to be the direction of the steps of the Italian garden. "I saw a deer just ahead by the last flash; that's what you heard. By Jove, I hear wheels."

We paused to listen and Hotchkiss put his hand on something close to us. "Here's your deer," he said. "Bronze."

As we neared the house the sense of surveillance we had in the park gradually left us. Stumbling over flower beds, running afoul of a sundial, groping our way savagely along hedges and thorny banks, we reached the steps finally and climbed the terrace.

It was then that Hotchkiss fell over one of the two stone urns which, with tall boxwood trees in them, mounted guard at each side of the door. He didn't make any attempt to get up. He sat in a puddle on the brick floor of the terrace and clutched his leg and swore softly in government English.

The occasional relief of the lightning was gone. I could not see an outline of the house before me. We had no matches and an instant's investigation showed that the windows were boarded and the house closed. Hotchkiss, still recumbent, was ascertaining the damage, tenderly peeling down his stocking.

"Upon my soul," he said finally, "I don't know whether this moisture is blood or rain. I think I've broken a bone."

"Blood is thicker than water," I suggested. "Is it sticky? See if you can move your toes."

Queer Behavior by "The Captain"

"So you come after all," observed Tabitha in a tone of reproof.

"I come right away, soon's I got your message," returned Lavinia.

The visiting spinster laid aside her shawl and straightened her bonnet. She was the dried apricot kind, and sucked in her lips so hard that she spoke with a lisp. It was a wonder that her quick, nervous movements never made her bones rattle.

Miss Tabitha was just the other way, like a pin cushion. There was a double chin under her face and a rat over it, and the latter was the more apparent because it was reddish in color, whereas the three wisps of hair that held it on were brown.

"Certainly I come right away," Lavinia reaffirmed, "and I'd just like to know why you're sending for me at this hour of the morning. I've hardly ate breakfast. What's happened?"

"Wait till you hear."

"The captain ain't had a spell has he?"

"Somethin' pretty like it. I should say, and if he hasn't, why then, I have."

"Do tell!"

"Yes, it's just as I say. I'm that nervous I can't make a cup of tea, and the captain's in disgrace."

"Ain't taken to drinkin', has he?"

The visiting spinster went off in a titter.

"Lavinia Merkle! Well, no. But he would if he could, right enough. He's the worst parrot in Greenwich village."

"That why you've got the cage covered?"

"That's it. Didn't you hear nothin' in the night?"

"How would I, across the street?"

"Well, it's a mercy you didn't. I thought all the neighbors would hear."

"What's he done?"

"Just listen to this. Come nine o'clock last night when I was thinkin' of bed, I noticed the captain was eyin' me pretty sharp.

"O ho, Mr. captain, I won't stand for none of your nonsense," I says. "If you're up to mischief, you can take the mornin' for it!' And he cocked his head on one side and kept his eye on me. I said 'Good night,' but he never answered a word, so I turned out the light and got into bed."

"That all?"

"I should say not! I lay there and I lay there, wonderin' what he was goin' to do. At last, after midnight, I hadn't no more than got to sleep when I was waked up by a terrible screech."

"Tabitha Mowscrips!"

"Yes I was 'Mr. Captain,' I says, 'you'll get yours, some mornin,' I says. And with that he let out a screech worse than other. That time I just passed it over so's he'd think I wasn't panyin' any attention to him. It worked good, too. There wasn't a sound out of him for a long time, but just as I was dozin' off again he let out another yell that made me sit right up in bed. And what do you s'spose he said?"

"What?"

"Whisky?"

"Tabitha Mowscripts!"

"'Fetch the whisky,' he hollers. Wasn't it scandalous? 'Fetch the whisky—whisky, whisky, whisky!'"

"You wicked old bird!' I says, 'you shut your trap. The neighbors'll hear you.' Then he changes his tune and calls for the peppermint."

"Peppermint?"

"Yes and hot water and smellin' salts and anisette and Jamaica ginger, and everythin' you could think of."

"My goodness! What ailed him!"

"Cussedness. That's all. He remembered the spell I had last Thanksgiving, and he was just mocking me."

"Ain't he full of the mischief!"

"Is he! Then he started in again, 'Fetch the whisky—peppermint, hot water, smelling salts, Jamaica ginger, ainsette—' When he'd kept it up half an hour I got up and threw a skirt over the cage. That shut him up and I finally got a little sleep."

"Going to keep him covered over all day?"

"It would serve him good and right."

"Might be sometin' the matter with him."

"'Course there isn't!"

Nevertheless Miss Tabitha stooped down and peeped under the skirt.

"My land!" gasped Miss Tabitha, straightening up suddenly with staring eyes.

Miss Lavinia shot one glance at her friend, and with a frenzied clutch whisked the skirt of the cage. At the bottom of the cage lay a pale green egg.

The captain cocked his head on one side and leered ironically at the two old maids.

"Well, I don't wonder he was s'prised," remarked Lavinia.

"S'prised!"

"Yes, s'prised. Ain't it rather out of the ordinary for captains?"

Straight Advice.

Millionaire (to attorney)—It is my desire to leave all of my property to the United States government. How can I do so and be sure a lot of relatives won't get it after I'm gone?

Attorney—Turn your holdings into United States bonds and notes and burn them on your deathbed.—Judge.

Needed Another Femur.

Excited Naturalist—Are you aware, my dear sir, that this gate post of yours is the femur of an ornithoscelida?

Farmer (apologetically)—I always thought it was somethin' odd like. It don't match the other post nohow!—Punch.

A Kitchen Necessity—

BOYNTON'S
Single Oven
Newport Range

Undoubtedly, Mrs. Housewife, you know the disadvantages of the ordinary kitchen range, but do you know the advantages of the famous Boynton Single Oven NEWPORT Range?

We haven't space for the whole story, but will tell you part; and first—as a cooker, the "NEWPORT" is the "best yet." Its design is classical (see cut) with smooth, perfect castings and highly finished nickel parts. This means a clean stove and less kitchen work.

Some cooks like the fire box on the right side of the oven, some on the left—"NEWPORTS" are fitted both ways. "NEWPORT" dampers are convenient—the "NEWPORT" water back is large and effective. Every good feature of other ranges is incorporated in the "NEWPORT" and some that are exclusive. Don't buy a range until you see the Boynton man in your town and learn about "NEWPORT" Ranges.

TOMATOES.

MANY PEOPLE DO NOT GROW TOMATOES FROM SEEDS, BECAUSE THE FEW PLANTS REQUIRED CAN BE PURCHASED CHEAPLY.

TO THESE WE OFFER OUR BEST VARIETIES IN STRONG PLANTS READY FOR SETTING OUT. IT IS SIMPLY A QUESTION OF PUTTING THEM IN THE GROUND. PRACTICALLY NO ATTENTION IS NEEDED AFTER PLANTING.

PLANTS OF SELECT VARIETIES 30 CENTS PER DOZEN; THREE SPECIALLY GOOD KINDS, PONDEROSA, TENDERLOIN AND CRIMSON CUSHION ARE 40 CENTS PER DOZEN. WE BELIEVE THEY ARE WORTH MUCH MORE THAN THE DIFFERENCE.

Our catalogue, "EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN," 200 pages, 700 cuts, 8 colored duotone plates, the finest we have ever issued, mailed on receipt of ten cents in stamps. In addition to the catalogue we will send our famous "HENDERSON" 50 cent collection of six vegetable and flower seeds, enclosed in a coupon envelope which emptied and returned will be accepted as a 25 cent cash payment on any order of $1.00 or upward.

TUCERCULOSIS SUBJECT

Of Ministers in Thousands of Pulpits Tomorrow Morning,

SEVERAL TO SPEAK IN THIS CITY

Prevention of the Disease the Theme and Hospitals to Be Recommended in All Communities.

The pastors of Plainfield and North Plainfield have been asked to talk to their congregations tomorrow on the subject of tuberculosis, the nature and moving cause of the disease, the danger of infection from intercourse with an affected subject, how the danger may be avoided, and how the disease, if taken in time may be cured. This is pursuant to the national movement inaugurated by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis some time ago to procure the help of all the pastors in the United States by asking them to preach from every pulpit on the same day.

Some of our local ministers have responded to the call for aid, and have primsed to present the subject in their respective churches.

Nothing is of greater importance to everyone than the prevention of avoidable disease. And tuberculosis is avoidable. But in this combined action of the community is necessary. It is not possible, by the treatment of individual cases in an individual manner to accomplish any public good. The individual may, under favorable conditions, recover, but too often the conditions are not favorable, and the individual not only does not recover, but spreads the germs of the disease, others are infected and in time die, passing on the infectious germs to others, thus forming an endless deadly chain. Experience has demonstrated that treatment in specially devised institutions affords the best promise of cure in incipient cases, and the greatest protection against infection, by the systematic destruction of the expelled germs.

The work of associations such as the National, and in its more limited field the local league, is to bring home to all the facts concerning the disease and the best means of combatting its spread. Few are wealthy enough to maintain institutions large enough to accomplish much in the way of cure, and suh institutions do not attempt to do anything for advanced cases, and thus cannot work aggressively against the communication by such cases of the disease to others.

By the terms of the Smalley bill passed at the last session of the Legislature, county freeholders are authorized to erect and maintain hospitals, not only for the purpose of attempting the cure of cases not to far advanced, but also to care for hopeless cases, affording them comforts too often not attainable at home, and also affording a sure guarantee against infection from them.

The citizens of Plainfield can help along the good work by encouraging the freeholders of Union county to exercise their newly acquired authority and by advising them of their desire that such a hospital shall be speedily erected.

Everyone who walks the streets, rides in public vehicles, or in his own carriage or automibile, or sits at his open window is liable to be attacked by the germ of tuberculosis which has been conclusively shown to lurk in the dust of the highway, and which rides the wind until it finds its victim. Seven per cent of the sweepings of a considerable town were found to consist of these germs. The healthiest and strongest person has his moments of weakness, and if in one of these moments the deadly bacillus enters through nostrils or throat he finds his field ready for him and commences his destructive career. Hence every one should be interested in this movement.

One man, interested in the league says: "Let the citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield show their interest by attending their respective places of worship tomorrow and give careful attention to what is said. Thus they will encourage the pastors to speak and the local league to continue its work in its place on the firing line."

BANKS SENT ON ERRANDS; TAKES LONG JOY RIDE

William Banks, colored, a chauffeur for Herbert W. Stover, of East Ninth street, was remanded this morning until Monday by City Judge William N. Runyon for a hearing on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. He was arrested by Patolman Saffron in the Netherwood district in company with William Zeller. Zeller was released on his own recognizance to appear at the hearing on Monday.

Banks ran the automobile into a tree at Scotch Plains breaking the radiator and otherwise damaging the machine. He was sent into town yesterday morning by Mrs. Stover to make some purchases, but instead of getting what he was sent for it is alleged that Banks used the money buying liquor and when the stuff had got him in ripe condition for devilry he started out to enjoy himself at his employer's expense with the result above noted. It is said that Banks took half a dozen others for rides at different times during the day and only ended his sport when apprehened by Patrolman Saffron.

G.A.R. VETERANS RESENT INVASION OF FREEHOLDERS

The members of the Women's Relief Corps provided an entertainment and social time for the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., at Reform hall, last night, there being about forty veterans and their wives present. The program consisted of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, followed by refreshments.

During the evening the comrades made short remarks in which attention was called to the recent announcement that the Union County Board of Freeholders is to decorate the graves of the soldiers of veterans in the county. Some of the veterans were inclined to resent this seeming invasion of their rights, adding that at the present rate it would not be long before Memorial Day would be abolished entirely so far as the real purpose was concerned. The veterans had the idea that the work of the freeholders is intended to supercede that usually performed by the former on Memorial Day. The matter will be investigated further.

It was announced that the memorial detail will meet tonight, with a committee from the Women's Relief Corps, for the purpose of perfecting details for the observance of Memorial Day and carrying out the usual program. Mrs. Hattie Gibbons was the chairman of the committee in charge of last night's affair.

PLAINFIELD A. F. C. CELEBRATE AND MAKE TWO PRESENTATIONS

The Plainfield Association Football Club held a social session last night in honor of John Mitchell, who was presented with a clock and Bernard Eglinton, who received a gold chain, for achievements on the football field during the past season. Thomas S. Douglas, president of the club, was in charge of the program, and made the presentations.

Vocal numbers were contributed by Messrs. Roxburg, Wilson, McKay, Donaldson, Stevenson, Spalding, Sutton, Henderson, Strachan, Panton, Jamieson, Mitchell and Lessen, accompanied by Samuel Sutton on the piano. An orchestra consisting of Messrs. Lesson, Mitchell, Emery and Bushast rendered a number of instrumental selections to the delight of the company.

A report of the football season just closed was given by J. D. Brown, after which E. C. Westcott made a few remarks. Then followed the presentations and the recipients made happy responses. Refreshments were served during the evening.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION GAVE A BANQUET.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk and County Registrar F. H. Smith were among the guests at a banquet given at Union, last night, by the Connecticut Farms' Improvement Association, the membership of which is composed chiefly of well-to-do residents of that place. There were many outside guests from all parts of Union county.

Among the speakers were John B. Dengler, John K. English, Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Frank H. Smith, Edward Nugent, Hamilton Kean and George T. Parrot. There were about one hundred guests.

Big Demand for Tickets for Borough Civic Society's First Banquet.

MR. M'CUTCHEN TOASTMASTER.

Event to Be Held in Debele's Auditorium Next Thursday Night —Array of Brilliant Oratorical Talent.

The first banquet of the newly organized North Plainfield Association which is carded to take place at Debele's auditorium on Thursday night, April 28, is going to be a hummer if the plans of the committee don't go astray. At the meeting of the association in the Borough Council chamber last night David J. Carney, chairman of the committee, reported that tickets are selling at a merry clip which make it appear that fully 150 boroughites will assemble around the festive board on that occasion.

An attractive list of speakers will also be secured to make addresses on timely topics. Professor Benjamin Phelps, chairman of the speaker's committee, reported that Samuel St. John McCutchen has been secured to act as toastmaster and that invitations have been extended to the following men to appear as orators: Robert Clark, Jr., Superintendent of Schools H. C. Krebs, Mayor N. B. Smalley, Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey and William J. Buttfield. The occasion will be enlivened by vocal and instrumental music under the direction of Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and Horace J. Martin.

The most important business transacted at the session was the adoption of a constitution and by-laws. The constitution stipulates that regular meetings shall be held on the third Friday in every month. The annual dues was fixed at one dollar.

Meredith Dryden was unanimously elected vice-president of the association and Dr. Frank French was added to the membership of the banquet committee. An executive committee, composed of the following members was also elected: N. B. Smalley, Edward T. Wilson, M. C. Van Arsdale, Allan B. Laing and James E. Church.

The membership of the association was boosted by the election of the following honorary members: Mayor N. B. Smalley, former Mayors Chas. E. Place John H. Van Winkle, Samuel Townsend, B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Dr. J. H. Cooley and William L. Saunders; William J. Buttfield, Charles W. McCutchen, S. St. John McCutchen, Edwin S. Hooley, Robert Clark, Jr., George F. Brown, William A. Clark, Frank OeL. Hyde, Henry A. McGee, L. K. Hyde, the Revs. Joseph O. McKelvey, Ora J. Shoop, George A. Warner Dr. Charles A. Eaton and William H. Miller; Dr. H. K. Carroll, T. F. Harrington, A. G. Hooley, Walter McGee, Reuben Knox, Nelson A. Miller, Dr. Richard Moldenke, Dr. M. P. Groszmann, Judge Isaac P. Runyon and S. S. Swackhamer.

PRESIDENT DEMAREST WILL PREACH AT NETHERWOOD.

Rev. Dr. W. H. S. Demarest, president of Rutgers College, and well-known as a man of great ability, and a powerful speaker, will preach at the Netherwood Reformed church, tomorrow morning and night. In the morning he will preach on the theme, "The Way of Life Eternal," and in the evening, his subject will be "Life's Staying Power." The number of talented preachers who have been preaching at this church during the month has attracted large congregations and doubtless many will hear Dr. Demarest tomorrow.

Under the direction of Miss Grace P. Karr, organist and choirmaster, the music for the morning will be as follows: Prelude, "Processional March," Parker; hymns, "The King of Love My Shepherd Is," Dykes; "He Leadeth Me," Bradbury; "The Sun of God Goes Forth to War," Cutler; offertory, "The Lord is My Shepherd," Coe, quartet; postlude, "Capriccio," Lemaigre. This will be the evening program: Prelude, "Pilgrim's Chorus," from "Tannhauser," Wagner; hymns, "Rock of Ages," Hastings; "Oft in Danger," Gauntless; "Seymour," Weber; offertory solo, "In His Steps," Manfried, Mrs. Guinn, contralto. The church is located on Leland avenue near East Second street.

Friend of Sailors to Speak.

Rev. O. Linden, known as a friend of the sailors, will speak in the Swedish church, on West Sixth street, tonight at 8 o'clock, on the subject, "Dangers for Sailors on Land." He will speak in the Swedish language. All Swedish people are invited. An offering for Mr. Linden's work in Boston will be received.

PLAINFIELD BABY IN DUNELLEN WILL CASE

Willie, a baby born six months ago to Mrs. Margaret Hurley, of this city, was an exhibit in a case before Judge Lyons at New Brunswick yesterday over the will of his grandfather, Martin Brennan, of Dunellen. The will is dated May 9, 1909, and has in it a bequest for Willie of $25.

It was declared that this was the only case on record where a testator had shown in his will that he knew he was to be a grandfather, that his prospective heir was to be a boy and that he would be named Willie. Undue influence was charged by the contestants and that the will could not have been made on the day it was dated. The court thought an error had been made as to the date. Decision was reserved as to the other charge. Mrs. Brennan is making the contest.

FUNERAL OF A. D. POPE ATTENDED BY LODGEMEN.

The funeral services of Asa D. Pope were held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from the late home in the New Madison, and were largely attended by relatives and friends, including members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P.; Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, and Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of New Market, with which Mr. Pope was identified.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, officiated. Mr. Pope was for many years a prominent member of Perseverance Lodge, it being said that he had not missed a meeting or social session of any kind since he joined the organization. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the officers of Perseverance Lodge had charge of the committal service at the grave.

CITY AND BOROUGH OFFICIALS PLAN A SEWAGE CONFERENCE

The special sewage commission, Councilmen F. E. Mygatt, Duncan W. Taylor and C. C. Randolph, will meet the North Plainfield sewage commission, Tuesday night for the purpose of taking up details looking toward the establishment of a large sewage disposal plant in the western end of North Plainfield township.

A measure recently passed by the State Legislature now makes it possible for the city and borough to build such a sewage plant and the borough authorities having decided to provide a disposal plant in the township are anxious that Plainfield should join with them in the improvement.

MACHINISTS IN SESSION

Hear Seeches from Leaders on Union Topics and Business.

SHORTER HOURS; MORE PAY.

John H. McLean and Hugh V. Reilly Talk to Members—Closed Session Is Held.

John H. McLean, of Newark, former president of the Essex Trade Council, and Hugh V. Reilly, also of Newark, business agent of district No. 47, International Association of Machinists, addressed a large gathering of machinists at Eagle Hall last night, the keynote being a more effective organization and higher wages.

It was expected that Fourth Vice-President Wilson of the machinists' association, and E. J. Lynch, of the Metal Polishers' Union, Newark, would speak, but both were detained, the latter by the illness of his father.

Mr. Reilly first addressed the men, telling them at greater length of what other machinists are doing in all parts of the country, and urging the local men to band themselves together for a stronger organization for in this way only can they hope to get a readjustment of wages which means more money. The speaker's remarks were pertinent and he said that instead of some of the machinists remaining outside of the organization finding fault it was their duty to co-operate with the union men.

"Some of the machinists have swelled heads," said Mr. Reilly. "They are good mechanics. I know they are, but that is no reason why they should not join us in getting what we deserve. There is always a chance for friction. Things don't always go right in an organization, and it is same way in the shop. It is up to you men to organize and then you will be in a position to better your condition."

Mr. McLean, although a carpenter, is well acquainted with all branches of trade unionism and for nearly an hour he interested the men with a review of trade conditions. He told what had been accomplished by the carpenters, how today they are receiving $5 a day, eight hours a day, and four hours on Saturday, and he could not understand why the local machinists were willing to work long hours for a small wage, small as compared with what is being paid machinists in other parts of the country.

Mr. McLean told of conditions in Newark, stating that yesterday he was ordered on strike for the first time, although when he was a business agent he frequently had to call other men out. He said that the government drafts a man in times of war and when a man is wanted for jury duty he must obey the summons. In view of this he could see no reason why men in all trades should not respond to the invitation to join together in an organization to better their condition.

After the open meeting a closed session was held to obligate men who applied for membership in the association.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE LEAGUE TO ELECT OFFICERS.

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield will hold their annual meeting on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of its president, Mrs. tSephen Haff, 954 West Seventh street. The interesting events of this meeting will be the bi-ennial election of officers and a discussion of the new program.

Mrs. Haff and the secretary, Mrs. Champlain Riley, who have just returned from Washington, D. C., where the forty-second annual convention was held April 14 to 19, will report on the business of that meeting which has now become famous from President Taft's connection with it. Some interesting data is expected.

Last Recital Until Fall.

The thirtieth of the series of Sunday afternoon organ recitals will be given at Grace P. E. church on Sunday afternoon next at 4 o'clock by S. Frederick Smith, the organist of the church. This recital will be the last until fall when the series will be resumed. The program will include: Fantasia in C minor, Hoyte; Minuett in E flat, Mozart; march in E flat, Hoyte; intermezzo, Hollins.

VIOLATED ORDINANCE; GLAZIER FINED $40

The case of John Mair against Theodore Glazer, both of Alton, which has been postponed several times, was tried in Justice Clark's court yesterday afternoon. The usual array of witnesses were on hand with the old familiar story regading the unbearable stench which they claim arises from Glaser's works, making life miserable for the residents. Glazer had about the same array of witnesses as has appeared in court for the last eight years, all declaring that there was no stench arising from the works and that the place was not a menace to the public health.

The stories told were as familiar to the court and spectators as Dr Cook's trip to the North Pole. Both sides were represented by counsel. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., appearing for Mair, while Glazer was looked after by Judge William Newcorn. After the mass of testimony was all in and counsel on both sides had summed up, the court decided that Glazer had broken the health ordinance and imposed a fine of $40 and cost of court.

BENEFIT ASSOCIATION HONORS PLAINFIELDER

District Court Clerk Horace G. Adams was honored at the annual convention of the Essex Funeral Benefit Association in Newark yesterday by being re-elected to membership in the board of directors for a term of five years. Other Plainfielders in attendance at the convention were Harry C. Runyon and Arthur G. Adams, representing Benevolent Council, Junior O. U. A. M. The session was held in the rooms of Loughlin Council, on West Park street, that city.

A Plan and Scope Committee was appointed in view of increasing the membership of the association. Reports showed that the membership of the association is 8,101, representing a net gain of 127. During 1909, it was reported that $15,170 was paid out in benefits.

Following the business session a banquet was held at Achelstetters. H. C. Runyon was one of the speechsmiths. He lauded the objects of the association and predicted continued growth.

P. J. Rudersill, the delegate from Washington, D. C., extended an invitation to the local delegates to be his guests at the National Capitol at a near future date.

FINE PROGRAM OF MUSIC AT EDUCATIONAL RECITAL.

A small audience gathered in the auditorium of the High School last night to listen to an exceptionally fine program of songs and violin selections given by Miss Mona Downs, assisted by Miss Lenore Smith, violinist, and Frederick S. Rodney, baritone. Mrs. Albert Vaughan was a very capable accompanist.

The recital was an educational one and elicited much favorable comment for its exceptionally fine quality. Miss Downs and Mr. Rodney sang with sympathetic taste and Miss Smith's splendid rendition of difficult compositions were greatly appreciated. Meyerbeer, Mendelssohn, Scarlatti, Brahms, MacDowell and other masters were represented on the diversified program.

HARRY G. BOWERS DIES SUDDENLY AT CRANFORD.

Harry G. Bowers, aged about 38 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Bowers, of Franklin place, died suddenly this morning at his place of business in Cranford. He was engaged in the hay and grain business and was engaged in unloading some grain, when it is believed, over-exerted himself causing heart failure.

Mr. Bowers had been a resident of Cranford for several years and was chief of the fire department there. He was well-known here, where he spent his boyhood days. County Pysician Westcott was summoned and after an investigation gave permission to remove the body; also burial permit.

Johnson-Devine.

Mrs. Margaret A. Johnson, aged 30, a widow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Langely, of Trenton, and George Washintgon Devine, of Brooklyn, aged 28 years, called at the parsonage of Grace M. MURDERER BEHIND BARS

John Grant, Mrs. Covely's Slayer, Captured in a Sterling Farmhouse.

CONFESSES TO THE POLICE.

Admitted Love for Dead Woman and That Jealously Prompted Crime —John V. Buckley Real Name.

John Grant, the nineteen year old slayer of Mrs. Frederick Coveley, was captured at the Mernagh farm, at Stirling, yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock by Chief of Police George Weiss, of the borough, and County Detective George Totten, of Somerville. Grant was made a captive while eating a meal at the farmhouse of his former employer. He made no resistance to arrest, he submitted calmly, and made a full confession of the crime to his captors. Grant is now in the county jail at Somerville where he was taken at 7 o'clock last evening by Detective Totten and Sheriff Frank Ross from the borough lockup in an automobile.

In the confession he made to the police Grant said that his real name is John Vincent Buckley and that his former home was at Taunton, Mass. Grant said he ran away from home about three years ago after stealing $23, and since that time he had lived and worked at various jobs in Plainfield and vicinity.

Grant told the police that he loved Mrs. Coveley, that he was jealous of her, because she "turned him down." In the confession he placed the blame on Lizzie and Margaret Novatte, two boarders at the Coveley home, for Mrs. Coveley's coolness toward him.

When Chief Weiss grabbed Grant as he was eating his meal the murderer said calmly, "All right, Chief, I'll go with you." Grant handed the borough chief the .38 calibre revolver which was loaded with cartridges. In the murderer's overcoat pocket was found about fifty cartridges and two suicide letters.

The letters were dated April 19, the date before he committed the crime. They were written by a lead pencil and addressed "To whom it may concern."

One was a short missive in which he bade good-bye to all of his friends, saying it was a foolish act, but that he could not help it.

The other letter stated that he was in love with Mrs. Coveley and placing the blame on Lizzie Novatte, whom he said was responsible for the dead woman's coolness toward him. Both letters are in possession of Chief Weiss.

Grant admitted to Weiss and Totten that he did not intend to kill Mrs. Coveley, but to kill himself. Why he killed her, he could not explain. He also informed the police that it was his intentions to blow his brains out after he had committed the tragedy, but he was unable to explain why he failed to carry out his program.

In a statement made to a Daily Press reporter while manacled in his cell at the borough lockup before being taken to Somerville Grant talked freely. In response to a question put to him by the reporter as to why he killed Mrs. Coveley the youthful slayer declared:

"I loved the woman, but her friends made her turn me down. I was in the house for two hours before the shooting took place, we had a quarrel, and then I shot her."

"Are you sorry?" queried the reporter.

"Yes," replied Grant; "but I've done it, and it can't be helped now. I know I was foolish, and nothing can be done now."

Grant presented a piitiable sight while in the cell, the target of an array of police officers, reporters and a squad of the curious who had gained admittance. He is boyish in appearance and hardly appeared to realize the enormity of the crime in which he played the leading role. In some respects his attitude and talk resemble the actions of George Wood, the murderer of George Williams, the Watchung grocer, about six years ago. Grant appears to possess a weak mind and it was reported last night that he is a sufferer from melancholia.

Grant's avenues of escape after committing the murder was identically the same the clue outlined in the Daily Press yesterday. According to the information he gave the police he made his way from Mrs. Coveley's house on Somerset place to Somerset street, thence to Harmony street to Watchung avenue, where he boarded one of Nischwitz and Bellis' delivery wagons and rode one block.

After getting out of the wagon Grant said he made his way to Mountain avenue, cut across the Park Club's golf links, thence to Johnson's Drive, passed the cottage of Borough Clerk Frederick Martin and Freeman Stralt's farm, escaping into

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Hans P. Freece, a Mormon convert, will address the congregation of the Presbyterian church tomorrow morning; in the evening the pastor, Rev. Ernest O. Brown, will suggest a remedy to check the spread of tuberculosis.

The young people who are to take part in the Old Folk's Concert in the Presbyterian church on the evening of May 17 held a rehearsal at the home of Clarence Voorhees last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Schance observed their tenth wedding anniversary on Tuesday evening by entertaining a party of friends.

Miss Eliabzeth Knox has about recovered from the effects of a dog bite sustained about two weeks ago.

The Epworth League of the Methodist church will conduct a "Seven Cent Social" next Friday night.

John Tinsman and family have taken possession of the Smalley house on Prospect avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Mayhood have returned from a sojourn at Sheepshead Bay.

Alfred Osmun is visiting relatives in the southern part of the State.

Mrs. Herbert L. Pierce has returned from a visit to New York.

Miss Florence Smalley is recovering from a recent illness.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Platt are at Mt. Pocono.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The baseball team had an ideal night for its dance which was held last night in Becker's auditorium, Garwood. The affair was ane of the largest attended dances of the winter, baseball fans from all the nearby towns turning out to help swell the receipts, and enjoy the music which was furnished by Dow's full orchestra. The local fans were out in force and stayed until the last trolley car. Everyone had a good time and the team realized enough to help them materially towards defraying the expenses of starting the season.

The township officials are enforcing the township ordinance relating to peddling by out-of-town hucksters and peddlers. Several of the regulars have been warned that they must take out a license or drop the town from their route. The ordinance calling for a $10 license fee was passed several years ago but was never enforced. However the town is being runover with wagon and pack peddlers, who do a thriving business, especially on Sunday, when they make the rounds of the Italian colonies.

The local ball season opens one week from Sunday, May 1, with a game with the strong Sterling team, of Brooklyn. The Sterlings hung it on the locals twice last season by a small margin and were only able to get away with the game after 12 and 13 innings. The home team is stronger this year and should be able to hold its own with the best of them.

Township Clerk Edward L. Hand has been mentioned as the successor of the late John Robison in the Board of Chosen Freeholders. Mr. Hand is ably fitted for the office and would make a strong representative on the board if he would accept the office.

The Ladies' Circle gave a pleasing entertainment consisting of Mother Goose tableaux last night in the parlors of the Baptist church. The affair was well attended and the program was enjoyed by all.

C. W. Ball, who was injured in the automobile accident Sunday week, is recovering very nicely, being able to leave the hospital several days ago and return to his home at Mountainside.

Services tomorrow at the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours. Morning preaching 10:45, Bible study 3:45, B. Y. P. U. meeting 7:15 in the evening.

James Hunter has resigned his position with the Hall Signal Co. at Garwood and has joined the ranks of workers at the Rushmore Co. works, Plainfield.

Mrs. Hamilton, of Trenton, who has been spending several days with Miss Susie L. Parse, has gone to Rahway where she will visit her son for a time.

The Bachelors Club has completed arrangements for the club's shirt waist dance which will be held Tuesday night in Excelsior Hall.

John Sullivan, of Forest avenue, has left for San Francisco, Cal., where he will make his home in the future.

Rev. Mr. Hollingshead will lead the weekly prayer and praise meeting tonight at the Methodist church.

Nicholas Alberts and family, of Montague avenue, have removed to the Hetfield property on Front street.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The South Plainfield B. B. C. have to play ball to hand it to the F. C. tomorrow. When they beat this line-up they are going some: Soffield, p.; Smith, c.; Connors, 1b.; John Miller, 2b.; A. McDonough, ss.; Randolph, 3b.; J. McDonough, rf.; Joe Miller, cf.; and Daniel Soffield, lf. The new uniforms of the B. B. C. arrived today and will be used in tomorrow's game.

South Plainfield baseball fans will be glad to hear that Sunday games have been booked with the Fords A. C. This is a semi pro team and gave the local boys the worst dubbing they received all last season.

At 9 o'clock this morning Frank Philip and Mrs. Nellie Gottsip were married in the Sacred Heart church here. The wedding reception will be held tonight in Washington hall.

The dance held last night in the Oak Tree school-house for the benefit of the piano fund of the school was a complete success. It is expected that the proceeds will pass $125.

NO CIVIL SERVICE FOR STATE EXPERTS.

Trenton, April 23.—The application of the new civil service law to the experts to be employed in the work of revaluing the railroad property of the State under the supervision of the State Board of Assessors, with Charles Hansel, the expert appointed by the Governor, in direct charge of the work, was the subject of a conference yesterday between State Assessor George R. Halsey, Expert Hansel and Secretary Gardner Colby, of the Civil Service Commission.

It was pointed out to Secretary Colby that it would be almost impossible to obtain experts to do some of the work if selecting by competitive examination was required, and it is likely that this matter will be adjusted so as to take some of the experts out of the competitive class.

Such positions as engineers, rodmen, chainmen, clerks and stenographers will be filled by the competitive method.

WHAT IS ELIZABETH?

Trade Board Will Give $25 for Best Suggestion.

Elizabeth, April 23.—The Board of Trade of this city yesterday offered a prize of $25 for the best slogan for Elizabeth. The contest will remain open until May 7.

Following are the conditions governing the contest:

First—Send your slogan or motto to the secretary of the Board of Trade, Elizabeth.

Second—The contest ends Saturday, May 7.

Third—The motto or slogan must not contains more than ten words, the shorter the better.

Fourth—The slogan or motto must not be used by any other city.

Fifth—The award will be made by the publicity committee of the Board of Trade.

Sixth—Every individual has the privilege of sending as many different mottos or slogans as he or she desires.

Captain Rogers to Retire.

Trenton, April 23.—Although Captain John M. Rogers, adjutant of the Second Regiment, National Guard, has tendered his resignation as adjutant, which means his resignation from the guards entirely, Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan has declined to accept it until July 17 of the present year, when Captain Rogers will have completed twenty-five years in the militia of the State.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The next communion service at the Seventh-Day Baptist church will be held Sabbath morning, May 7.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church met at the church yesterday and enjoyed a special program.

The Brotherhood of the First M. E. church will meet Friday night, April 29, when the committee will report on plans for holding a "Brotherhood Night" affair.

Miss Louella C. Harris, soprano, and Miss Josie Bracker, contralto, conclude their services at the First Baptist church tomorrow and on May 1 their places will be taken by new singers.

Miss Jessamine Burd, contralto; Otto Knauer, tenor; Miss Grant, soprano, will sing at the First Presbyterian church tomorrow for the last time and on May 1 a new quartet will begin duty.

Mrs. Harry Wade Hicks, who accompanied her husband on a tour around the world to visit missions, will be the speaker at the foreign missionary tea to be held with Mrs. Frank A. Weeks, of West Seventh street, Tuesday afternoon, under the auspices of the women of the Congregational church.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Those who have not already witnessed the big show at the New York Hippodrome will do well to take in the great spectacular performance at an early date, as the season at New York's largest playhouse is quickly drawing to a close. "A Trip to Japan," "The Ballet of Jewels" and "Inside the Earth" and in combination with the Midget Circus, the Tribe of Fighting Maoris and the many other special features provided in this year's show, have resulted in the largest attendance ever registered at the New York Hippodrome. Business still continues at top notch, now that the wane of the season has begun. The 50 "Little People," who give an entire circus, have proven an excellent drawing feature. The Maoris still attract comment with their weird native dances, while that always striking finale, the March of the Diving Army into the Water, excites as much curiosity as at the beginning of the year.

CHILD DEAD IN HOLE.

Passaic, April 23.—The body of three-year-old Elvira Benera, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Benera, of Thomas avenue, Lyndhurst, was found yesterday in a four-foot excavation which had been dug for the purpose of planting an arbor post. The child had been missing since Wednesday.

When found the little one lay, head down, with its neck broken.

Mrs. Alice Freeman.

Cranford, April 23.—Mrs. Alice Freeman, wife of Harry Freeman, of Tuxedo place, died in the Newark City Hospital yesterday. She was 44 years old and is survived by her husband and a brother, Harvey Harris, of this town.

AN ORDINANCE

To amend an Ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance providing for the licensing and regulating of peddlers, hawkers, cartmen, and the owners and drivers of vehicles used for hire; and concerning street traffic regulations," approved February 18th, 1910.

The Inhabittants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Sec. 10 of the ordinance to which this is an amendment be and is hereby amended as follows: By striking out of subdivision (a) of said section the following words, "from any point within to any point without the aforesaid limits the further sum of twenty-five cents for one, two or three passengers, in addition to the sum above provided," and inserting in place thereof the following words: "from any point within to any point without the aforesaid limits the sum of fifty cents for one passenger, and twenty-five cents for each additional passenger."

Also that said section of said ordinance be and is hereby further amended by striking out the word "twelve" where it occurs in the proviso of subsection (a), and inserting in place thereof the word "eleven."

Adopted by the Common Council, April 11, 1910, approved by the Mayor, April 12, 1910.

CHAS. J. FISK, Mayor.

Attest: J. T. MacMurray, City Clerk.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

GOLF.

One of the most brilliant flashes of golf seen in the North this spring was credited to Tom Anderson, Jr., who recently started in as a professional at the Inwood Country Club on Long Island. In a round the other day with H. J. Curtis, one of the Inwood members, Anderson reeled off a 71, going out in 37 and home in 34. This was five strokes better than the previous record of 76, made last fall by Gilbert Nichols, the far driving Wilmington professional.

A great long game, supplemented by deadly approaching, gave Anderson chances for 3s on many of the greens, and, had it not been for the fact that three wee puts of less than a yard failed to drop, he would have had a 68. Par golf for the round would be 74. Anderson had a 2 at the 160-yard fifteenth, thanks to a tee shot which left the ball close to the pin. It is the club's intention to open the new eighteen-hole course this week, and then Anderson will have an opportunity to establish another record.

Three new holes are being added to the links of the Haworth Golf Club, and it is expected that the work will be sufficiently advanced to allow the holes to be placed in commission by June 1. Haworth nestles among the hills of Northern New Jersey, and the little nine-hole course has been regarded as one of the most difficult for its size to be found anywhere in the State. It is the intention eventualy to increase the circuit to eighteen holes.

Charles Boyle has been engaged as professional. He was at Wee Burn last season. The clubhouse has also been renovated, and Will Soper, who at one time was engaged at the Country Club of Atlantic City, will be in charge as steward. A third tennis court is being added to the two courts already in commission. They are of clay and are in the best of condition at present.

BIG "PAWS" ESSENTIAL FOR STAR PLAYERS.

Volumes have been written about "baseball brains," while "baseball hands" have been neglected. Fair pairs of hands are common, but the real perfect type is scarce. It is generally admitted that Lee Tannehill, of the White Sox, has the ideal hands for a player. Lee is on the down grade as a top-liner these days, but in his prime he could pick up a grounder better than any of his rivals in the infield.

A close study of Tannehill's hands show them large, strong and sinewy. When he places the tips of his fingers together, and also the base of his palm, a baseball fits there as snugly as a glove on the hand. On scooping up a grounder around third base the ball appears to be almost crushed before he lets it go to first base. It is this that started the expressing of "devouring the ball" or "eating it up." A man who has delicate hands can never play an infield position as easily as one of Tannehill's kind.

Another infielder who "eats up" the ball is Hans Wagner. Without stretching the point any his hands look tremendous when he swoops up a grounder. They are almost the biggest hands a man ever looked on. It takes a fearful drive to get away from his clutches. Once he gets his hands on a grounder it means certain death for the batter. His hands are more necessary to the infielder, for it is much harder to scoop up a ball when it is coming fast than to catch a fly. Many a fielder who is sure death on a fly ball or a line drive will let a grounder out in his territory get away from him.

SONGS OF THE "ALLEY LEAGUE."

There's gloom over Hooligan's Alley
today,
They're sorer than Hamid, the Turk;
There's a crimp in the Ragged Stars'
rally today,
As they gather to warm up for work;
For Mickey O'Brien, the star of them
all,
Who furnished the brains and intrigue,
From the line-up has passed, signed and drafted at last
By his Dad for the Grocery
League.

In Hooligan's Alley they're weeping
today,
For Mickey, the king of them all,
Is wielding a broom where he's sweeping today
And fanning the dust from the wall;
And the keen batting eye that was all to the Cobb,
With never a trace of fatigue,
Helps no more to win since the draft has come in
From his Dad in the Grocery
League.

Oh, Hooligan's Alley is howling today
And muttering curses galore,
For Mickey O'Brien, the "clean-'em-up Kid,"
Is cleaning 'em up in the store;
And the keen batting eye and the "salary whip,"
And the aehward
And the headwork and cunning intrigue
Are wasting away pushing barrels today
For his Dad in the Grocery
League.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear if the Advice of This Plainfield Citizen is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains.

Most times 'tis the kidneys' fault.

Backache is really kidney ache;

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it.

Many Plainfield women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. Margaret Reville, 732 W. Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I was troubled by a weak and lame back and I was unable to find anything that would give me relief. My back pained me so badly that I could hardly stoop and when I caught cold or overexerted myself, my suffering was doubled. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Randolph's Pharmacy helped me at once and I continued taking them until I was cured. I have had no need of a kidney remedy in the past two years, but value Doan's Kidney Pills today as highly as ever."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

LOCAL PIN KNIGHTS ON TO BALTIMORE

Headed by Johnny Campbell, the prince of local pin swatters, the Plainfield bowlers who will compete in the N. B. A. tourney at Baltimore on Monday will depart for the Oriole City tomorrow afternoon. There will be two five-man teams and the local pinners will also compete in the two-man and individual competitions. Arrangements for the trip will be announced at Campbell's alleys tonight.

Among the local tenpin artists who will roll in the competition are Campbell, Nash, Causbrook, Kiely, Stout, Laing, Schaub, Matthews and Blatz.

A majority of the party will remain in Baltimore over Tuesday for the purpose of a sightseeing tour. Some will spend the day in Washington, D. C., which is forty miles distant.

HIGH SCORES POSTED IN THE TWO-MAN TOURNEY

Competition was keen in Campbell's two-man tourney last night and there was also some rolling executed. Koons in his series with Willett, with 224 to his credit, made the highest score of the night. Matthews was also there with marks of 216 and 200. Others to pass the double century mark were W. Meyer and C. Ortleb with scores of 203. The scores follow:

W. Meyer	177	156	203
Matthews	139	184	216
	316	340	419
Willett	155	126	190
Koons	168	180	224
	323	306	414
C. Ortleb	185	157	166
Mullin	148	187	191
	333	344	357
W. Meyer	178	188	145
Matthews	186	157	200
	364	345	345
Willett	167	171	170
Koons	158	142	174
	325	313	344
C. Ortleb	158	147	203
Mullin	180	192	155
	338	339	358

Jack Martin reports to Worcester on Monday. Good luck Jack. The local boy winds up his Jersey career for the season playing with New Brunswick today and tomorrow.

Jimmy Emery is still batting 'em out in fancy style for Reading; and he is also doing some brilliant stunts around third sack, according to reports from the Pennsylvania burg.

It will look like old times to see Warry McLaughlin in a Plainfield uniform again today. Warry is sure to have a delegation of rooters on hand to see him in his initial workout of the season.

The members of the Junior O. U. A. M. are getting the baseball fever. Franklin and Somerset Councils are organizing teams and will have them on the field in May. The two councils are also arranging a series.

With Bugs Raymond, Rube Waddel and Larry McLean on one team the manager should experience no trouble in winning the Bughouse championship.

They say booze and baseball are no longer pals. But up in Buffalo every player who bats out a home run receives fifty bottles of beer.

Our Y. M. C. A. athletes are sure to have their hands full bucking up against the classy Montclair A. C. aggregation this afternoon.

According to Editor Lardner, of the Chicago "Tribune," outfielder Frank Schulte, of the Chicago Cubs, is writing a poem on "How to Play the Outfield." Here is the first verse:

The outfield is not hard to play,
If one just plays it the right way.
I know just how, that's why I say
The outfield is not hard to play.
There's three outfielders on each nine
While others they just stand in line
To replace one of the three
Whenever something injures he.

Mr. Schulte announces that he will take the three outfield positions separately and tell just how to play each.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Now and then, at rare intervals, rich men who are gentlemen are kind enough to their class to let it be known that not all are snobs. Here is Mr. Anthony J. Drexel, (father of the young man whose marriage to Mr. George Gould's daughter the other day reminded the amused public that feminine snobbery as unbidden wedding guests is still rampant in New York), protesting like a poor chap at the dearness of living nowadays. He stayed at one of its smart hotels. He speaks out like a sensible man of business against sheer extortion.

"It cost me $1.75 to have two eggs, a cup of tea, and some bread only yesterday at one of the hotels. Just think of that! I understand there are other hotels where one has to pay even more for the same things. Just think—$1.75 is very near a man's wages for a day's work!

"It doesn't matter how much money one may have, such a charge appeals to one. The average man must have a chance. He cannot go on working for only the cost of eggs. Things cannot continue the way they are now."

If Mr. Drexel's plucky example should make a clearage between the lambs and the wolves the high cost of plain food will drop with a crash.

* * * *

No sympathy need be wasted over any ambitious picture buyer whose main aim is to shine as a patron of Art. Recent law court revelations have only echoed the public verdicts in similar cases in other lands. That there are tricks in all trades and professions is a truism, but we do not often learn the trickery of the back artists in discovering old masters' names on new copyists' damp canvasses. The lover of Art for its own sake buys a picture because it gives him special pleasure. Others buy because it sets off an expensive frame, and others have a way of booming a mediocre name until weak dabblers in the profit-raising art are glad to join in the pretty little game of making a gooseberry pass for a melon. A well known French journalist who knows what he is talking about, kindly tells us that of the 2,500 Rembrandt's in the United States, only the 500 are genuine. Of the genuine Old Masters in our public galleries only a small proportion represent the painters in their maturity. But we now have the very highest authority for doubting every old painting as we doubt the gush of those who live by selling them. Two members of a world-famed picture dealing firm have been calling each other frauds. One brought a suit for immense damages last week against his dear relation and partner. The jury heard each show up the other as "an unscrupulous scoundrel," etc. Their verdict awarded the aggrieved one just half a cent.

* * * *

The ever benevolent Carnegie has a fine opportunity to do good by stealth, as a change that will save him blushing at fame. The Mayor of Pittsburg, in a fit of parsimony as penance for the sins of councilmen now languishing in enforced retirement, reduced the library committees' appropriatio of $290,000 to $225,000, in the face of the opening of a new quarter-million branch building given by Carnegie at the request of Council. Whatever may be the meaning of this, it is said that many of the employes will have to lose their jobs. When a Carnegie library building, with name big on its shingle, is "given" to a town on condition that it shall tax its people to find the books and the maintenance, and the staff forever, it will be well to find the "donor" of the perpetual drain to contribute a Pension Fund for sufferers from a lop-sided benefaction.

* * * *

A blusterous New York attorney defended his client against the charge of fraud the other day by representing him as the dupe of others. Not content with stating this with decency and proving it discreetly, he pointed to his paying patron in court and asked the jury's sympathy for "this pigmy, this boy, this youngster, this picayune creature without a dollar to his name, this consummate ass whom I am defending." Whether the patient ass kicked his offender is not stated, nor that the judge interfered. We shall never read the name of McIntire without thinking of an ass.

* * * *

President Taft, good easy man that he is, appears to have fallen into the line of public officials whose acts, if not their aims, are to smooth the pillows of those who mix their honesty with fraud. He has just commuted the sentences of fourteen Federal convicts, one being a Pittsburg bank clerk who helped himself to $50,000 for personal speculation. The commuter uses his position to override the persons injured, the witnesses of truth, the learned advocates, and the judge himself, who measures the sentence more justly than even an ex-judge can, far away in time and interest. We read of the Governor of a southern State who has perpetrated some 900 pardons during his term, the trump case being as cowardly a political assassination as the records can show.

If law is ever intended to command public respect, if equal justice is to be restored to real and amateur tribunals, surely it is time to begin the reformation, and surely the great officers of State and Nation are the public servants to perform this their public duty. They accept liberal wages and lavish honors. Leaks in a cask can be caulked, but leakage at the bunghole is——?

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Dear Sir—Apropos of the recent runaway accident in which my sister was the unfortunate character, several thoughts remain uppermost in my mind. Some of these I now make mention of, hoping that this expression may exert a corrective influence upon any who need it.

Primarily, I would state, that a big Scotch Collie, evidently owned by someone on Netherwood avenue near East Front street, has an iniquitous habit of jumping at and barking at horsse passing by, much to the annoyance, not only of the horses, but more especially to the annoyance (to put it mildly) of the occupants of the carriages. This dog, may or may not have frightened the horse last Friday, and hastened his hurried trip toward town. At any rate, dogs like many other pests, serve their purpose best, when kept within proper spheres of activity.

Secondly, the manner in which drivers of horsedrawn vehicles as well as others, blockade traffic in the heart of town, is not only far from beautiful but also far from safe. When a horse is tied to a hitching post, there seems to me to be no good reason why the vehicle should stand at an angle of 45 degrees to the curb, with the rear of the wagon projected well out toward the middle of the street.

Thirdly, the rule of keeping to the right has manw adversaries in our town! This rule is almost unanimously violated by those drawing close to the curb for the purpose of making a stop.

Fourthly, it is rather unpleasant for me to hear at this time that the policeman supopsedly on duty at Park avenue might have stopped the runaway had he been on post. Not having been an eye witness to the accident, I assume that the policeman was on post, and so I take this means of defending him against vituperative criticism.

The injured one sounds loud the praises of the policeman, the druggist, the physicians, and the gentlemanly citizens who rendered prompt, efficient and kind hearted service.

Respectfully yours,
G. F. MURPHY.

A Wise Physician.

"I told the doctor I was tired of waiting, so he asked me to put out my tongue and close my eyes. Kept me that way for ten minutes."

"And meanwhile?"

"He attended to four other patients."

Proclamation.

Pursuant to the authority of Section 8 of the Ordinance of the City of Plainfield, entitled "An Ordinance Concerning Dogs," approved May 3d, 1909, I, Charles J. Fisk, Mayor of the City of Plainfield, do hereby proclaim and give notice that in my judgment the public safety demands at this time, and I do hereby order and direct by this public notice that no dog shall be allowed to leave the premises in the City of Plainfield of the person owning or entitled to the custody of such dog, unless securely confined upon a leash and accompanied by a person over the age of twelve years.

This order shall remain in force until the first day of October next.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Farms all around are being bought and cut up into building lots, and old residents say such a boom has never been known. This is due to the tunnel connections with New York, which makes it possible to reach there, in one half hour.

Rev. J. J. Allen will deliver his third stereopticon lecture on "Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress tomorrow night at 7:45. All welcome; seats free.

Phil Smith will don a uniform and pitch for the Crescent Club, of Bay Ridge, against Lale at 3::30 on the club's grounds.

Judge Smith was able this week to attend to business in New York, although confined to the house all winter.

The ice of last night did much damage to the crops above ground, also to the fruit trees in blossom.

There is a scarcity of houses to rent in the village, the demand being greater than the supply.

D. M. Kellogg with his family have taken possession of their summer home at Oak Tree.

Judge Steele and his family will soon take possession of their summer home here.

J. F. Williams has rented a house on Brookside avenue and will move here next week.

Miss Emma Manning is suffering from the effects of a severe cold.

A play will shortly be given by the young folks in the village.

Fed, Then Stole $10.

He was an ungrateful fellow who after enjoying the hospitality of Mrs. Hugh J. Harris, of 750 West Front street, yesterday afternoon stole ten dollars from Mrs. Harris' pocketbook during her temporary absence from the room. The tramp claimed to be hungry and Mrs. Harris fed him a good meal and while the fellow was eating she went into another room only to return and find the man gone and her pocketbook open on the table minus two five dollar bills. Police headquarters was notified but the thief had made good his escape.

Got Suspended Sentence.

George Zeisz, of 136 North avenue, promised Judge Runyon in the city court this morning that he would abstain from drinking beer and other intoxicants for a period of three months if the judge would let him go this time. He was given a suspended sentence for his indiscretion of yesterday.

Peerless A. C. Forfeited.

The Boston A. C. claimed a 9 to 0 victory over the Peerless A. C. this morning as the latter nine failed to put in an appearance for a game as scheduled.

Victory for Stillmans.

The Stillman School nine defeated the sophomores of the High School yesterday afternoon by the score of 9 to 0.

Mrs. J. H. Greene, of West Seventh street, has returned home after an extended visit with relatives in New York city.

The offering at the Crescent Avenue Presbtyerian church tomorrow morning will be for the Board of Church Erection.

A cottage prayer meeting will be held Tuesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Blair on South Ninth street. Those attending will meet at 321 Lyman place at 7:15 o'clock.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will preach tomorrow morning on the theme, "If ye then be risen in Christ, seek those things which are above."

Wisely Reasoned.

From the diary of Samuel Pepys: "The generality of mankind please themselves in the easy delights of the world, as eating, dancing, drinking, hunting, which we see the meanest men do best. A gentleman never dances so well as the dancing master; and an ordinary fiddler makes better music for a shilling than a gentleman will after spending 40. And so in all the delights of the world almost."

The Mule's Intelligence.

"Dat ol' mule knows dat plowin' time has come," said Brother Dickey. "W'en I gone ter der barn ter feed him dis mawnin' he had done kicked de do' loose, jumped two wire fences an' swimmed de mill pon' ter de big woods. W'en you stops ter consider de few adwantages de mule hez had de intelligence er mere man can't hol' half a candle ter him."—Atlanta Constitution.

Parsons and Farmers.

The participation of the clergy in agriculture has given the industry a dignity in this country that it has enjoyed hardly anywhere else in the world, and the country parson who even now joins hands with his farming congregation will find his influence, his health and his interest in life greatly strengthened.—Boston Transcript.

Danish Elections.

In Denmark the electors assemble in public meeting; the candidates address them and are questioned. The president then pronounces the closure, and puts the name of the candidates one by one to the meeting. The electors vote by raising the right hand. A poll can be demanded on behalf of an unsuccessful candidate.

Voting in France and Germany.

In France the voter carries the voting paper with him into the polling station; it is already filled in. He hands it folded to the presiding officer, who deposits it in the ballot box. A similar system is in force in Austria, and in the elections for the German imperial parliament.

European System of Voting.

Open voting still lingers in a few countries; it is very like the English system of 40 years since. In Hungary, for instance, the elector declares aloud for whom he wishes to vote, and in the elections of the Prussian landtag he either gives his vote orally or writes it down.

Two of the World's Natures.

There are in this world two kinds of natures—those that have wings, and those that have feet—the winged and the walking spirits. The walking are the logicians; the winged are the instinctive and poetic.—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Such a Waste.

Sculptor (to his friend)—"Well, what do you think of my bust? Fine piece of marble, isn't it!" Friend—"Magnificent! What a pity to make a bust of it! It would have made a lovely washstand."—Tit-Bits.

Insuring Secrecy for Voters.

In Chile and in many of the Swiss cantons the voting paper, for greater secrecy, is inclosed in an envelope before it is deposited in the ballot box, while in Italy and Spain the urn, or box, is transparent.

A Reflection on Her.

"Did the minister say anything comforting?" asked the neighbor of the widow recently bereaved. "Indeed, he didn't," was the quick reply. "He said my husband was better off."—Tit-Bits.

Depressing Sights.

If there is anything more depressing than rain falling on an overturned tombstone or the sight of a dining-room table covered with dirty dishes, what is it?—Atchison Globe.

The Philosopher of Folly.

"When a really resourceful man finds that he hasn't enough money to buy coal," says the Philosopher of Folly, "he pawns the stove."

Lost.

Husband—I am ruined, and my son's musical career cannot continue. Go to the barber's, Karl, and get your hair cut."—Fliegende Blatter.

A Little History.

"There is a motion before the house," quoth Herod as Salome unfurled the filmy draperies.—Williams College Purple Cow.

Puzzling to Him.

"Dey talkin' er a man who owns ter havin' five wives, w'en it's de task er a lifetime fer a man ter fool one!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Scottish Celebration.

Up-halie day—January 7—as the end of the holy season, is still celebrated in Shetland with many antique ceremonies.

Lesson Well Taught.

One thorn of experience is worth a whole wilderness of warning.—Lowell.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Mr. Thomas Whiffen, than whom there are no more clever comedians, returns to the field of musical entertainment from which he has been absent, in the new and original comic opera in two acts, "Three Twins," and it will be Mr. Jos. M. Gaites' offering at the Plainfield Theatre on Saturday matinee and night, April 30, surrounded by a cast of unusual excellence, and unquestionably the event will be one of the most interesting of the season. The book of this new vehicle is by Charles L. Dickson, while the lyrics are from the very facile pen of Otto Hauerbach and Karl Hoschna has provided a score of originality and merit.

ON SPRING THOUGHTS

By WILL BRADSHAW

Long before this you will have, no doubt, met some one in your travels who worked into his conversation on the beauties of this season of the year that lovely old saying about a young man's thoughts lightly taking a few turns in the direction of love. We cannot get away from it. It is a quotation that will live as long as man is imbued with the same ideas he has to-day. It blossoms on the tip of our tongues in the springtime with the regularity of the pussey-willow and the lilac bush. Who would ever think the staid old world would show so much interest in a young man's thoughts, anyway? And especially putting so much stress each spring on a little quotation that is in itself most misleading in its meaning.

We all know, or at least most of us have learned from actual experience, that "In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love." The statement is as true as truth can make it. But why state that it is in spring a young man's fancy turns in that direction? So far as we know, a young man's fancy is turning in that general direction in summer; in the lovely autumn; and if an investigation was made around about the time the snow begins to fly in December, it would be found that the young man's fancy was revolving with astonishing rapidity in a loveward direction. So, as far as a young man is concerned, it may be truthfully said that the open season for his fancies in this line extends from January 1 to January 1.

Another mistake may be shown to prove that the author of this beautiful gem in the purest English was "in wrong" on the subject when told about the young man's fancy.

If a young man's fancy, after a long, cold winter, turns, as he states, lightly to thoughts of love, and these thoughts of love sent out upon the world are not reciprocated, of what value or purpose are they? It cannot be that they were meant to wander in the broad expanse and like the handle of the pump, neither touch heaven or earth. Oh, no! The statement is very misleading. In spring, also, a young lady's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love. If you are acquainted with a young lady and can rely on her for an answer to your query (some are very reticent on the subject), you will find that a young lady's fancy does the same fancy turns as the young man's when love is the point of destination.

It has never been known just why spring was chosen by this poet as the particular season for a young person's fancy to somersault in the direction of love. While all four seasons are well adapted to the playing of the game, one would think the beautiful summer had the most to offer in this line. One would think a moonlight night in July, or August, or September would be far more conductive to these thoughts.

Pleasant as summer seems, the autumn can hold its own in furnishing the setting for many a pretty little scene. What is there any more melodramatic than when walking through the woods you pick up a withered leaf and, much to the young lady's embarrassment, apparently, you start a discourse on a love that will ne'er wither or die. Then the young lady, recovering from the shock and wishing to repay the compliment, tells you that e'en when you are antiquated as yon oak you can still feel assured that she is yours sincerely.

The fall, for stunts of this kind, is, in the estimation of some, almost as pleasant as the winter time. The winter advocates champion their season until one is almost won over. A sleigh ride is a fine thing. Then skating offers great possibilities for the work in mind. It always gives the young man, when putting on her skates, the opportunity of suggesting that they slide through life over the glassy surface of love together. There are others who prefer, of all the opportunities winter offers, the occasion when, as the music ceases and you drape the opera cloak over those lovely white shoulders and lead her to the taxicab, you make known the fact that you are listed in the "Situations Wanted" as a protector of beautiful femininity.

We can now see that the poet made an awful mistake when he told about the fancy of the young man and completely ignored the young lady, who has similar thoughts and fancies, and claimed spring as the time of year for these fancies, when they are the same in all seasons.

As a contemporary of the poet, a village crony with a broader knowledge of the ways of the young folks than the esteemed poet, put it:

"The spring is the time for the lovin' ones,
Likewise the summer and fall;
But if these have all passed
And you're still in that class,
Then the winter's the best of all."

$3.50 Recipe Cures Weak Kidneys, Free

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eye; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps, unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K1239 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering powers.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home

YOUR DULL Headaches

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY,
City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., April 11, 1910.

AN ORDINANCE

For the Assessment of Taxes for the Year 1910.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That pursuant to the statutes and ordinances and resolutions in such cases made and provided and certifications thereunder there shall be assessed and raised by tax for the year nineteen hundred and ten for the general purposes of said city, exclusive of school, library, poor, fire and State and County taxes, the sum of seventy-eight thousand dollars .....($78,000) (this sum includes the sum of Forty Thousand Dollars .....($40,000) to be raised by general tax for street improvements, and the sum of One Thousand Three Hundred and Ninety-five Dollars .....($1,395) for interest to fall due during said year on street improvement bonds dated September 1st, 1907, and the sum of One Thousand One Hundred and Twenty-five Dollars .....($1,125) for interest to fall due during said year on Police Station House Bonds dated July 1st, 1908, and the sum of One Thousand Dollars .....($1,000) for principal of said Police Station Bonds maturing during said year; for the expense of said year for lighting the public streets and places in said city, as ascertained and determined by resolution of the Common Council and certified to the Assessors of said City the sum of Sixteen Thousand Dollars .....($16,000) for the principal of such Sewer Bonds (except obligations payable out of the assessments and temporary obligations) as may mature during the ensuing fiscal year, under and by virtue of the act of the Legislature entitled "An act to provide for drainage and sewerage in cities of this State," approved April 7, 1890, and the several amendments thereof and supplements thereto, and proceedings had and taken thereunder in said City, the sum of Six Thousand Dollars..($6,000); for interest on the obligations of the City issued under the said last mentioned Acts, the sum of Nine Thousand Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars....($9,250); for the support of the City poor, the sum of Eight Thousand Five Hundred Dollars .....($8,500). Included in the last named sum is the sum of Fifteen Hundred Dollars ($1,500) for the purposes of supporting and maintaining such indigent patients as may be sent to Muhlenberg Hospital by order of the City Physician, Overseer of the Poor, or other proper authority of the City, pursuant to Chapter LXXVI. P. L. 1886, payable December 31, 1910, pursuant to contract between the Muhlenberg Hospital and the City; for the maintenance of the Public Library and Reading Room, the sum of Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars .....($7,500); for the maintenance of a Fire Department, to be under the control and government of said City, the sum of Thirty-seven Thousand Dollars.....($37,000); for interest for said year on $15,000 Fire House Bonds, the sum of Six Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars.....($675); and for sinking fund to retire the principal of said $15,000 Fire House Bonds at maturity, the sum of One Thousand Three Hundred Dollars .....($1,300); for interest on School Bonds authorized under City ordinances or resolutions of the Common Council, to fall due during said year, the sum of Eleven Thousand Eight Hundred and Thirty-five Dollars .....($11,825); and for principal of said School Bonds to mature during said year, the sum of One Thousand Dollars.....($1,000); for sinking funds for the retirement at maturity of school bonds aggregating $145,000 authorized by resolutions of the Common Council adopted June 1st, 1908, and November 1st, 1909, nineteen hundred and twenty-five dollars....($1,925); for the amount needed for the current year for the purposes specified in Section 5 of the Act of the Legislature entitled "An Act to provide for the planting of shade trees on the highways of the municipalities of this State," approved April 28, 1893, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, as certified by the Shade Tree Commissioners of the City of Plainfield to the Assessors of said City, the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Dollars.....($2,500); for the care, custody, policing and maintenance of Play Grounds and recreation places and for the expenses of the Board of Play Ground Commissioners pursuant to Chapter 117 of the Laws of 1907 and amendments thereof and supplements thereto, the sum of One Thousand Dollars .....($1,000).

Staten Island's Buried Stumps.

Every once in awhile, after storms tear off sections of the Staten Island meadows, great stumps and roots of ancient trees are uncovered. These roots are five or six feet underneath the meadows, and root out into the post-glacial clay and silt, so may be a matter of thousands of years old, or may hark back to the time when Staten Island was a bank of the Hudson, for the valley of the Hudson extends out to sea 80 miles, where it drops sheer into the Atlantic basin.—New York Press.

A Husband's Pledge.

A wealthy middle-aged divorcee who married a good looking and companionable young fellow, penniless himself, is said to have exacted from him, as part of the marriage contract, the pledge that he would spend every evening of his life with her. They were inveterate theater-goers until his death, which seems to corroborate the curious story. Many women would like to have the same power of keeping their husbands at home.—New York Press.

Sex Inequality.

It doesn't cost much to get a man ready to be married. He buys a new suit of clothes, two suits of underwear, three extra pairs of socks, has his hair cut, and is ready. But think of the stuff a girl thinks she must buy when she gets married! Are girls so superior to men that they cannot get married without fifteen or twenty times more clothes?—Atchison Globe.

Easy Method of Killing Felon.

For a felon take common rock salt, as used for salting down pork or beef, dry in an oven, then pound it fine and mix with spirits of turpentine in equal parts, put it in a rag and wrap it around the parts affected. As it gets dry put on more, and in 24 hours you are cured, says a writer. The felon will be dead.

Curious Libel.

It was only the other day that a lady of royal degree sued a billboard company for publishing a libel on her beauty. The libel consisted of a statement that the lady was growing extremely stout and that her face was rapidly losing its beauty of contour.—New York Press.

Grecian System of Voting.

The Man in Lower Ten

By Mary Roberts Rinehart
Author of The Circular Staircase

Illustrations by M. J. KETTNER

(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

There was a pause. Hotchkiss moved his toes. By that time I had found a knocker and was making the night hideous. But there was no response save the wind that blew sodden leaves derisively in our faces. Once Hotchkiss declared he heard a window sash lifted, but renewed violence with the knocker produced no effect.

Another Mile Saw Us, if Possible, More Despondent.

"There's only one thing to do," I said, finally. "I'll go back and try to bring the buggy up for you. You can't walk, can you?"

Hotchkiss sat back in his puddle and said he didn't think he could stir, but for me to go back to town and leave him, that he didn't have any family dependent on him and that if he was going to have pneumonia he had probably got it already. I left him there and started back to get a horse.

If possible, it was worse than before. There was no lightning and only by a miracle did I find the little gate again. I drew a long breath of relief, followed by another, equally long, of dismay. For I had found the hitching strap and there was nothing at the end of it! In a lull of the wind I seemed to hear, far off, the eager thud of stable-bound feet. So for the second time I climbed the slope to the Laurels and on the way I thought of many things to say.

I struck the house at a new angle, for I found a veranda, destitute of chairs and furnishings, but dry and evidently roofed. It was better than the terrace, and so, by groping along the wall, I tried to make my way to Hotchkiss. That was how I found the open window. I had passed perhaps six, all closed, and to have my hand grope for the next one and to find instead the soft drapery of an inner curtain was startling, to say the least.

I found Hotchkiss at last around an angle of the stone wall, and told him that the horse was gone. He was disconcerted, but not abased; maintaining that it was a new kind of knot that couldn't slip and that the horse must have chewed the halter through! He was less enthusiastic than I had expected about the window.

"It looks uncommonly like a trap," he said. "I tell you there was some one in the park below when we were coming up. Man has a sixth sense that scientists ignore—a sense of the nearness of things. And all the time you have been gone, some one has been watching me."

"Couldn't see you," I maintained; "I can't see you now. And your sense of contiguity didn't tell you about that flower crock."

In the end, of course, he consented to go with me. He was very lame, and I helped him around to the open window. He was full of moral courage, the little man; it was only the physical in him that quailed. And as we groped along, he insisted on going through the window first.

"If it is a trap," he whispered, "I have two arms to your one, and, besides, as I said before, life holds much for you. As for me, the government would merely lose an indifferent employe."

When he found I was going first he was rather hurt, but I did not wait for his protests. I swung my feet over the sill and dropped. I made a clutch at the window frame with my good hand when I found no floor under my feet, but I was too late. I dropped probably ten feet and landed with a crash that seemed to split my eardrums. I was thoroughly shaken, but in some miraculous way the bandaged arm had escaped injury.

"For heaven's sake," Hotchkiss was calling from above, "have you broken your back?"

"No," I returned, as steadily as I could, "merely driven it up through my skull. This is a staircase, I'm coming up to open another window."

It was eerie work, but I accomplished it finally, discovering, not without mishap, a room filled with more tables than I had ever dreamed of, tables that seemed to waylay and strike at me. When I had got a window open, Hotchkiss crawled through, and we were at last under shelter.

Our first thought was for a light. The same laborious investigation that had landed us where we were, revealed that the house was lighted by electricity, and that the plant was not in operation. By accident I stumbled across a tabouret with smoking materials, and found a half dozen matches. The first one showed us the magnitude of the room we stood in, and revealed also a brass candle-stick by the open fireplace, a candle-stick almost four feet high, supporting a candle of similar colossal proportions. It was Hotchkiss who discovered that it had been recently lighted. He held the match to it and peered at it over his glasses.

"Within ten minutes," he announced impressively, "this candle has been burning. Look at the wax! And the wick! Both soft!"

"Perhaps it's the damp weather," I ventured, moving a little nearer to the circle of light. A gust of wind came in just then, and the flame turned over on its side and threatened demise. There was something almost ridiculous in the haste with which we put down the window and nursed the flicker to life.

The peculiarly ghost-like appearance of the room added to the uncanniness of the situation. The furniture was swathed in white covers for the winter; even the pictures wore shrouds. And in a niche between two windows a bust on a pedestal, similarly wrapped, one arm extended under its winding sheet, made a most life-like ghost, if any ghost can be life-like.

In the light of the candle we surveyed each other, and we were objects for mirth. Hotchkiss was taking off his sodden shoes and preparing to make himself comfortable, while I hung my muddy raincoat over the ghost in the corner. Thus habited, he presented a rakish but distinctly more comfortable appearance.

"When these people built," Hotchkiss said, surveying the huge dimensions of the room, "they must have bought a mountain and built all over it. What a room!"

It seemed to be a living room, although Hotchkiss remarked that it was much more like a dead one. It was probably 50 feet long and 25 feet wide. It was very high, too, with a domed ceiling, and a gallery ran around the entire room, about 15 feet above the floor. The candle light did not penetrate beyond the dim outlines of the gallery rail, but I fancied the wall there hung with smaller pictures.

Hotchkiss had discovered a fire laid in the enormous fireplace, and in a few minutes we were steaming before a cheerful blaze. Within the radius of its light and heat, we were comfortable again. But the brightness merely emphasized the gloom of the ghostly corners. We talked in subdued tones, and I smoked a box of Russian cigarettes which I found in a table drawer. We had decided to stay all night, there being nothing else to do. I suggested a game of double-dummy bridge, but did not urge it when my companion asked if it resembled euchre. Gradually, as the ecclesiastical candle paled in the firelight, we grew drowsy. I drew a divan into the cheerful area and stretched myself out for sleep. Hotchkiss, who said the pain in his leg made him wakeful, sat wide-eyed by the fire, smoking a pipe.

I have no idea how much time had passed when something threw itself violently on my chest. I roused with a start and leaped on my feet, and a large Angora cat fell with a thump to the floor. The fire was still bright, and there was an odor of scorched leather through the room, from Hotchkiss' shoes. The little detective was sound asleep, his dead pipe in his fingers. The cat sat back on its haunches and wailed.

The curtain at the door into the hallway bellied slowly out into the room and fell again. The cat looked toward it and opened its mouth for another howl. I thrust at it with my foot, but it refused to move. Hotchkiss stirred uneasily, and his pipe clattered to the floor.

The cat was standing at my feet, staring behind me. Apparently it was following with its eyes an object unseen to me, that moved behind me. The tip of its tail waved threateningly, but when I wheeled I saw nothing.

I took the candle and made a circuit of the room. Behind the curtain that had moved the door was securely closed. The windows were shut and locked, and everywhere the silence was absolute. The cat followed me majestically. I stooped and stroked its head, but it persisted in its uncanny watching of the corners of the room.

When I went back to my divan, after putting a fresh log on the fire, I was reassured. I took the precaution, and smiled at myself for doing it, to put the fire tongs within reach of my hand. But the cat would not let me sleep. After a time I decided that it wanted water, and I started out in search of some, carrying the candle without the stand. I wandered through several rooms, all closed and dismantled, before I found a small lavatory opening off a billiard room. The cat lapped steadily, and I filled a glass to take back with me. The candle flickered in a sickly fashion that threatened to leave me there lost in the wanderings of the many hallways, and from somewhere there came an occasional violent puff of wind. The cat stuck by my feet, with the hair on its back raised menacingly. I don't like cats: there is something psychic about them.

Hotchkiss was still asleep when I got back to the big room. I moved his boots back from the fire and trimmed the candle. Then, with sleep gone from me, I lay back on my divan and reflected on many things; on my idiocy in coming; on Alison West, and the fact that only a week before she had been a guest in this very house; on Richey and the constraint that had come between us. From that I drifted back to Alison, and to the barrier my comparative poverty would be.

The emptiness, the stillness were oppressive. Once I heard footsteps coming, rhythmical steps that neither hurried nor dragged, and seemed to mount endless staircases without coming any closer. I realized finally that I had not quite turned off the tap, and that the lavatory, which I had circled to reach, must be quite close.

The cat lay by the fire, its nose on its folded paws, content in the warmth and companionship. I watched it idly. Now and then the green wood hissed in the fire, but the cat never batted an eye. Through an unshuttered window the lightning flashed. Suddenly the cat looked up. It lifted its head and stared directly at the gallery above. Then it blinked, and stared again. I was amused. Not until it had got up on its feet, eyes still riveted on the balcony, tail waving at the tip, the hair on its back a bristling brush, did I glance casually over my head.

From Among the Shadows a Face Gazed Down at Me.

From among the shadows a face gazed down at me, a face that seemed a fitting tenant of the ghostly room below. I saw it as plainly as I might see my own face in a mirror. While I stared at it with horrified eyes, the apparition faded. The rail was there, the Bokhara rug still swung from it, but the gallery was empty.

The cat threw back its head and wailed.

CHAPTER XXIV.

His Wife's Father.

I jumped up and seized the fire tongs. The cat's wail had roused Hotchkiss, who was wide-awake at once. He took in my offensive attitude, the tongs, the direction of my gaze, and needed nothing more. As he picked up the candle and darted out into the hall, I followed him. He made directly for the staircase, and part way up he turned off to the right through a small door. We were on the gallery itself; below us the fire gleamed cheerfully, the cat was not in sight. There was no sign of my ghostly visitant, but as we stood there the Bokhara rug, without warning, slid over the railing and fell to the floor below.

"Man or woman?" Hotchkiss inquired in his most professional tone.

"Neither—that is, I don't know. I didn't notice anything but the eyes," I muttered. "They were looking a hole in me. If you'd seen that cat you would realize my state of mind. That was a traditional graveyard yowl."

"I don't think you saw anything at all," he lied cheerfully. "You dozed off, and the rest is the natural result of a meal on a buffet car."

Nevertheless, he examined the Bokhara carefully when we went down, and when I finally went to sleep he was reading the only book in sight—"Elwell on Bridge." The first rays of daylight were coming mistily into the room when he roused me. He had his finger on his lips, and he whispered sibilantly while I tried to draw on my distorted boots.

"I think we have him," he said triumphantly. "I've been looking around some, and I can tell you this much. Just before we came in through the window last night, another man came. Only—he did not drop, as you did. He swung over to the stair railing, and then down. The rail is scratched. He was long enough ahead of us to go into the dining room and get a decanter out of the sideboard. He poured out the liquor into a glass, left the decanter there, and took the whisky into the library across the hall. Then—he broke into a desk, using a paper knife for a jimmy."

"Good Lord, Hotchkiss," I exclaimed; "why, it may have been Sullivan himself! Confound your theories—he's getting farther away every minute."

"It was Sullivan," Hotchkiss returned imperturbably. "And he has not gone. His boots are by the library fire."

"He probably had a dozen pairs where he could get them," I scoffed. "And while you and I sat and slept, the very man we want to get our hands on leered at us over that railing."

"Softly, softly, my friend," Hotchkiss said, as I stamped into my other shoe. "I did not say he was gone. Don't jump at conclusions. It is fatal to reasoning. As a matter of fact, he didn't relish a night on the mountains any more than we did. After he had unintentionally frightened you almost into paralysis, what would my gentleman naturally do? Go out in the storm again? Not if I know the Alice-sit-by-the-fire type. He went upstairs, well up near the roof, locked himself in and went to bed."

"And he is there now?"

"He is there now."

We had no weapons. I am aware that the traditional hero is always armed, and that Hotchkiss as the low comedian should have had a revolver that missed fire. As a fact, we had nothing of the sort. Hotchkiss carried the fire tongs, but my sense of humor was too strong for me; I declined the poker.

"All we want is a little peaceable conversation with him," I demurred. "We can't brain him first and converse with him afterward. And anyhow, while I can't put my finger on the place, I think your theory is weak. If he wouldn't run 100 miles through fire and water to get away from us, then he is not the man we want."

Hotchkiss, however, was certain. He had found the room and listened outside the door to the sleeper's heavy breathing, and so we climbed past luxurious suites, revealed in the deepening daylight, past long vistas of hall and boudoir. And we were both badly winded when we got there. It was a tower room, reached by narrow stairs, and well above the roof level. Hotchkiss was glowing.

"It is partly good luck, but not all," he panted in a whisper. "If we had persisted in the search last night, he would have taken alarm and fled. Now—we have him. Are you ready?"

He gave a mighty rap at the door with the fire tongs, and stood expectant. Certainly he was right; some one moved within.

"Hello! Hello there!" Hotchkiss bawled. "You might as well come out. We won't hurt you, if you'll come peaceably."

"Tell him we represent the law," I prompted. "That's the customary thing, you know."

But at that moment a bullet came squarely through the door and flattened itself with a sharp pst against the wall of the tower staircase. We ducked unanimously, dropped back out of range, and Hotchkiss retaliated with a spirited bang bang at the door with the tongs. This brought another bullet. It was a ridiculous situation. Under the circumstances, no doubt, we should have retired, at least until we had armed ourselves, but Hotchkiss had no end of fighting spirit, and as for me, my blood was up.

"Break the lock," I suggested, and Hotchkiss, standing at the side, out of range, retaliated for every bullet by a smashing blow with the tongs. The shots ceased after a half dozen, and the door was giving, slowly. One of us on each side of the door, we were ready for almost any kind of desperate resistance. As it swung open Hotchkiss poised the tongs; I stood, bent forward, my arm drawn back for a blow.

Nothing happened.

There was not a sound. Finally, at the risk of losing an eye which I justly value, I peered around and into the room. There was no desperado there: Only a fresh-faced, trembling-lipped servant, sitting on the edge of her bed, with a quilt around her shoulders and the empty revolver at her feet.

We were victorious, but conquered army never beat such a retreat as ours down the tower stairs and into the refuge of the living room. There, with the door closed, sprawled on the divan, I went from one spasm of mirth into another, becoming sane at intervals, and suffering relapse again every time I saw Hotchkiss' disgruntled countenance. He was pacing the room, the tongs still in his hand, his mouth pursed with irritation. Finally he stopped in front of me and compelled my attention.

"When you have finished cackling," he said with dignity, "I wish to justify my position. Do you think the—er—young woman upstairs put a pair of number eight boots to dry in the library last night? Do you think she poured the whisky out of that decanter?"

"They have been known to do it," I put in, but his eye silenced me.

"Moreover, if she had been the person who peered at you over the gallery railing last night, don't you suppose, with her—er—belligerent disposition, she could have filled you as full of lead as a window weight?"

"I do," I assented. "It wasn't Alice-sit-by-the-fire. I grant you that. Then who was it?"

Hotchkiss felt certain that it had been Sullivan, but I was not so sure. Why would he have crawled like a thief into his own house? If he had crossed the park, as seemed probable, when we did, he had not made any attempt to use the knocker. I gave it up finally, and made an effort to conciliate the young woman in the tower.

"I Was Afraid I Had Killed Somebody," She Said.

TERRY'S PLAYING WON FOR P. H. S.

The P. H. S. baseball team defeated the Poly Prep School, of Brooklyn, this morning by the score of 6 to 5. It was one of the hardest fought games this year and P. H. S. deserves great credit for the victory. Terry pitched and was the star for the High School.

The victory was largely due to his splendid pitching and batting. The game was practically won in the fourth inning when Terry knocked a fly in the center field bringing two men in. The opposing captain, Sykes, struck out four men while Terry struck out 10. Runyon was a star at running and Zeraga made a good showing at short. The shortstop for Poly Prep, Cendoya, was the big feature of their team.

Our old friend Red Waller got his bumps yesterday. Pitching for Jersey City against Montreal "Red" allowed the Canucks to scamper off with a 3 to 1 victory. "Red" allowed eleven hits to Wiggs' four.

CRACK FAIRVIEWS BEAT GRACE CHORISTERS.

Fairview Cycle Club deefated the Grace Choir Club this morning at the Orchard avenue field by a score of 12 to 5. Birch and Beckman starred throughout the game for the Fairviews, while A. Martin played the best game for the Choir team. The line-ups:

MURDERER BEHIND BARS

the woods which protected him from his pursuers.

Grant remained in the woods until night and then made his way toward Stirling where he secreted himself in a patch of thick woodland close to the Mernaugh farm. Overcome by hunger he made his way to the Mernagh farm early in the afternoon. He told Mrs. Marnagh of the crime and asked for something to eat.

On the previous day in their hunt, the police arranged with the Mernaghs to detain Grant should he appear in the vicinity. When Grant made his appearance Mrs. Mernagh suggested to the murderer that she lock the doors so nobody would enter the house while she was preparing his meal. To this proposition Grant readily consented. While Mrs. Mernagh was preparing the meal Mr. Mernagh slipped away to South Stirling and telephoned borough police headquarters.

Chief Weiss and Detective Totten, who were expecting the call, started immediately in an automobile. In order not to alarm Grant the sleuths left their auto half a mile from the Mernagh farm and approached the house on foot. Chief Weiss entered the kitchen, handcuffed Grant, and the capture was over.

When Chief Weiss and Detective Totten returned to the borough lockup with the prisoner the place was deserted but the news of Grant's capture spread like wildfire and within half an hour fully 5,000 people jammed the thoroughfare in the vicinity of the lockup in the hope of getting a glimpse of the murderer.

Grant was locked in a cell while the police officers gathered in the corridor and listened to his story of the crime and confession. It was not necessary for the police to apply the "third degree" system to Grant, as the prisoner answered all questions put to him freely and it was evident that he did not care to cover up any of the facts in connection with the crime.

In his confession he did not hesitate to admit to the police that he loved Mrs. Coveley and that the crime was the result of his jealousy over the woman over her refusal to reciprocate his attentions. He also related with apparent unconcern to the police all of his movements since the crime and made no attempt to conceal any of the details.

While the questioning of Grant was being carried on James Moore, a brother of the murdered woman, entered the corridor, and approached the slayer of his sister. Grant met his gaze with a dejected look and it was the only time he gave any signs of nervousness. Moore was also in a highly nervous state but he made no attempt to denounce the prisoner for killing his sister. When Grant recognized him by a faint "Hello," Moore asked him in a tremorous voice:

"John, what did you do it for?" Grant murmured a reply which was unintelligible, and then Chief Weiss escorted Moore to the court room.

While the police were interrogating the prisoner the crowd on the outside increased to mammoth proportions and it was estimated that there was fully 10,000 people in the throng when all was ready to take Grant from the lockup to the automobile ont the outside which was in readiness to convey him to the county jail.

So closely packed were the people that it was with difficulty that the police beat a path through which to carry the prisoner. When this was accomplished the murderer, who was still handcuffed was placed on the shoulders of Detective Totten and Mayor N. B. Smalley and ushered into the automobile.

Several pauses were made in the journey to the automobile and the crowd was appeased when the prisoner was held high in the air, turned and flopped about in all directions of the compass, so that the curious was able to get a glimpse at the unfortunate lad.

One of the first of the prisoner's acquaintances to geet him as he was lodged in the borough lockup was Marshal Frank Culver. To Culver Grant did not appear to worry over his predicament.

"Well, I've got a chance yet, Frank," declared Grant, "I've only 40 cents in my pocket but the State will have to hire a lawyer for me."

From the confession made by Grant as to his former life and habits before coming to this city it is gleaned that the murderer was a "bad boy" before leaving home and that he has encountered many hard bumps since that time. In addition to stealing $23 he figured in other minor troubles which made it necessary for him to decamp from Taunton. Grant informed the police that he had a brother and a sister living in Taunton when he left there, but that he had heard nothing from them since he left home.

Whether Grant will have a speedy trial or await the September term of court will depend on the attitude of Judge Parker. Prosecutor Frederick Pope stated this morning that he will have a consultation wit the pudge on the matter and it may be that the present grand jury will be called back to indict the murderer, and if that is so, Grant will be tried next month.

Unstinted credit must be bestowed on Chief Weiss and his lieutenants for the part they played in the capture of the murderer. One of Weiss' first moves after the crime had been committed, was to picket the Mernagh farm in the belief that Grant would flee to the place for safety. Grant told the police last night that although he saw very little of his pursuers, he admitted they were close on his trail on Thursday night.

After secreting himself in the woods near the Mernagh place on Friday evening, the murderer unobserved, made his way to the barn, and crawled underneath the barn-floor where he remained all night and up to 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. This was at 7:30 o'clock. While he was making his way under the barn, Grant said, he recognized John Barrett, Ed Terry and Detective Totten, near the woods about 300 feet distant from the barn.

About one hour later he was secure under the barn floor when Chief Weiss, Marshal Keller and William Gaub searched the building. Grant informed Chief Weiss, after the capture, that he recognized their voices, as they walked over him, and ransacked the barn.

Fred Coveley, husband of the dead woman, reached Plainfield at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon. When questioned as to where he had been since he left Plainfield, he declined to answer. Prior to meeting a friend from this city he had not heard of the capture of Buckley. Judging by his conversation his chief object in coming here was to learn something about his children and ascertain what is to be done with them. He will doubtless try to get possession of them and place them in a home where they will be cared for and brought up under the best of conditions.

Mr. Coveley further hinted in his conversation that in the tragedy could be found a solution as to why he separated from his wife. When he left the railroad station he walked through Watchung avenue toward North Plainfield.

Mrs. Coveley's Funeral.

The funeral service was conducted privately this afternoon by the Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church. There was a profusion of floral tributes from friends of the murdered woman on the bier. She rested in a steel gray plush casket. Interment will be made at the convenience of the family.

GOVERNOR FORT ASSAILED BY MORRIS CO. DOCTORS

In a resolution adopted by the Morris County Medical Society in Morristown Thursday afternoon, Governor Fort's attack on Dr. Luther M. Halsey in connection with the hearing on the osteopathy bill was warmly resented. The resolution condemned as "being undignified, unbecoming and unwarranted, the insult given to Dr. Halsey and the medical men of New Jersey by the Governor at a recent hearing at the State house, Trenton." The Governor had declared that Dr. Halsey told lies about him.

It was the first special meeting the society had held since its organization in 1816, and was attended by more medical men than in any meeting in the last quarter of a New Jersey, and expressing confi-century. A resolution was passed praising the work of Dr. Halsey for his interest in the public health of dence in his integrity and reliability, then followed the attack on the Governor. A copy of the resolutions was ordered sent to the Governor.

Besides the regular members at the meeting there were present Dr. David C. English, of New Brunswick, one of the editors of the journal of the State Medical Society; Dr. William E. Ramsay, of Perth Amboy, introducer of Assembly bill 156, known as the osteopathy measure; Dr. Robert H. Hammil, Dr. W. H. Lawrence, Jr., and Dr. W. G. Lamson, of Summit.

Dr. Ramsay reviewed the history of the bill from the time of its introduction to its veto by Governor Fort. He declared "the Governor was insincere and antagonistic to the bill from the start." He spoke of the attorney-general's reason, "which the Governor offered as a cause for veto," and said they were "flimsy and more like the productions of a king's jester than the opinion of an attorney-general." The physician further stated that the Governor had "acted in a cowardly manner and endeavored to hide behind the attorney-general."

Dr. English said the Governor had not beaten the physicians fairly, and Dr. Lawrence, who was present at the hearing before the Governor, declared he could verify everything Dr. Ramsay had said. Dr. Halsey's conduct, he added, was dignified. It was stated that "the Governor had given the osteopaths more than an hour and a half hearing, and when it came time for the physicians to present the notice of their side of the case he broke the hearing up abruptly, using undignified language. He rushed from the room in which the hearing was given into the Executive chamber as if he feared a reply much in the order of his explosive outburst."

Regrets were expressed by some members that the Governor had used the language he did, and they insisted that if the Executive had any personal grievance against Dr. Halsey he should not have aired it at a public hearing. Reference was made to the Governor's son acting as counsel for the osteopaths.

BIG RUSH FOR TICKETS

Receipts for First Two Hours of "Trelawny of Wells" Sale Over $2,000.

STARS TO SEE THE SHOW.

Both Sheldon and Pinto Invite Noted Broadway Actors and Actresses to Witness Their Performances.

Exactly two hours after the box office opened at the Plainfield theatre on Saturday night, for the sale of seats for "Trelawny of the Wells," the receipts aggregated more than $2,000. This establishes a record unequalled even by any of the great Broadway productions booked here. Although the sale of tickets did not begin until 6 o'clock, the line started to form at the noon hour and when the sale started there were nearly 200 people in the line. At 8 o'clock the orchestra was fairly well sold out for Saturday night and there had been a big business for the opening performance.

The fact that Edward Sheldon, the author of Salvation Nell and other notable plays, who has a part in this production, has invited those who have starred in his plays to witness this performance will no doubt prove a big drawing card for the opening night. When Effingham Pinto, who has invited some of the Lambs to see the show Saturday night, asked Sheldon why he wanted to steal his thunder, the playright laughingly explained that he thought those whom he has invited to sit in the boxes and watch him act would rather enjoy having their position changed for once. "I wouldn't want them to write their criticisms, however, at least I wouldn't want them published," he added.

It has been suggested that inasmuch as the performances will be given for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital, the nurses of that institution act as program girls following out the custom in vogue in London, where young women sell the programs and act as ushers at all theatres and music halls. The programs will be sold for ten cents each and are well worth the price if only as souvenirs.

GOLF IS INTERRUPTED BY CADDIES' STRIKE.

That the strike fever is contagious was evident on the links of the Cranford Golf Club yesterday when the caddies of that institution went out on strike. New caddies were secured but the pickets of the strikers were active and after work awhile they decided to quit. The matter is expected to be settled next Saturday when an "arbitration committee" to consist of striking caddies and members of the club will hold a conference.

The cause of the strike was due to the introduction of a new time card system which permits the caddies to earn an average of 20 cents per hour and tips. Under the old scale the caddies were paid by the round system.

COLORED LAD CARVED BY FRISKY NEIGHBOR

If Frank Brown didn't stab Willis Turner intentionally on Saturday night Judge William N. Runyon would like to know just how little Willis came by a severe gash in his right arm, which required several stitches to prevent his bleeding to death. According to testimony produced in the city court this morning Master Turner, who like Brown, is a colored boy, got a circular cut in his right arm which bled so profusely that the attending physician had to take several stitches in the bleeding member. Conflicting stories were told by the Brown boy to several of his friends and to Patrolman McCarthy who arrested Brown.

Young Turner told a simple story in court saying that when he was about to leave the premises after trying to sell some tickets for an entertainment the Brown boy caught him up in his arms and hugged him and at the same time he felt a stinging sensation in his arm. Immediately afterwards he saw blood falling from his finger ends and became badly frightened and ran to his home, where the "blood covered half the kitchen floor."

Brown denied stabbing Turner, but could not account for the knife which Patrolman McCarthy found after much persuasion with Brown. Judge Runyon believed the Turner boy had been stabbed and held Brown for apeparance before the juvenile court on Saturday morning when Probation Office Hamilton will take the case up. During the hearing this morning the respective mothers of the two boys indulged in a wordy war each extolling the virtues of her son. Turner is a frail little body and his story impressed the court with its very simplicity. The absence of motive for the stabbing is its most peculiar feature.

SIX YEAR OLD GIRL RUN OVER BY AN AUTO

As a result of injuries received by being run over by an automobile on Friday afternoon while on her way home from school, Irene, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clement Dixon, of Dunellen, is in a critical condition. In addition the girl is also suffering from pneumonia.

When Irene was returning from school riding on the rear part of a hay wagon on Friday, at the Dunellen trolley car barn she alighted and stepped into the path of an automobile. The occupants were unable to change their course and the machine passed over the girl.

The autoists of the car stopped their machine, picked the little girl up and hurried the victim to the office of Dr. Thomas H. Platt in Dunellen. An investigation showed that in passing over her body the auto had caused severe injuries to her right side, the right shoulder and the abdomen.

When taken to the physician's office the girl was unconscious and after treatment was given she was taken to the home of her parents. Yesterday the case was made more complicated by the appearance of symptoms of pneumonia and another physician was called in the case for a consultation with Dr. Platt.

It is the belief of the physicians that the girl contracted pneumonia while being carried to Dr. Platt's office in the automobile after the accident. The occupants of the car furnished their names and address to the parents of the injured girl.

In Honor of Bride.

Invitations have been sent out by Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. Gifford Webster Cooley and Mrs. Mason Matthews Pattrick for a reception to be given Wednesday, May 4, from 4 to 7 o'clock at their home, "Glenoran."

Mrs. Gifford Webster Cooley was Miss Mary Mauldin Chambliss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Chamblis, of Brownsville, Tenn., whose marriage took place at the home of her parents, April 6. She is also a grand daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, of Central avenue.

Twenty-eight Years Organist.

Arthur L. Titsworth, the efficient organist of Trinity Reformed church, completed the twenty-eighth year of active service in that capacity yesterday. This is a remarkable record for faithfulnes and efficiency. The current church calendar says: "We consider him a part of our church and we cannot get along without him. When the new organ arrives, we hope he will stay with us for another twenty-eight years at least. Congratulations and many thanks for your faithful and untiring services."

NEW JERSEY COLORED PYHSICIANS MEET HERE

Several addresses on "Preventitive Medicine," and subjects of hygiene were the features of the second educational meeting of the North Jersey Medical Association, colored, held at the Mt. Olive Baptist church yesterday afternoon. A majority of the twenty-four members of the association were present and the edifice was filled to its capacity with interested spectators.

Dr. J. C. Anderson, of this city, opened the meeting, and introduced Dr. James F. Lawson, of this city, as chairman. These papers were presented: "Consumption, Its Prophylaxis," Dr. Peter F. Ghee, of Jersey City; "The Care of the Teeth," W. P. G. Uurling, D. D. S., of Newark; "Infectious Diseases," Dr. W. A. Alexander, of Orange.

Following the papers, short addresses were made by Dr. William Burnett, of Montclair; Dr. W. H. Sutherland, of Orange, and Dr. W. H. Washington, of Newark. After this A. G. Lambert sang a solo, and the meeting closed with a prayer by Rev. Dr. Vaughn, pastor of the church.

CHURCH CHOIR HONORS THEIR RETIRING SOLOIST

Miss Louella C. Harris, of Elizabeth, who for fourteen years has been the soprano soloist at the First Baptist church, sang yesterday in that capacity for the last time. Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto, who entered upon her position at the church the same time Miss Harris did, but who resigned two years ago, returned yesterday for the day to sing with the old quartet for the last time. She sang a solo at the morning service.

Saturday evening the regular rehearsal was held at the home of Charles W. McCutchen, upon his invitation, instead of at the church, and followed a repast. After the rehearsal Mr. McCutchen presented Miss Harris, on behalf of the choir, with a beautiful pearl and diamond pin, in appreciation of her long and faithful services. The gift was highly appreciated.

Several members of the choir have notable records. William Holmes, the baritone soloist has completed seventeen years in that capacity, and George Smith, tenor soloist, has served sixteen years. Howard Case has been organist for fourteen years, while E. J. Fitzhugh, who has had charge of the choir, coming here every Saturday night for the rehearsal, as on enviable record of twenty-two years. Owing to other duties announcement of his retirement was made Saturday night. In the presentation speech to Miss Harris Saturday evening, Mr. McCutchen referred to the complete harmony that has always existed among the members of the choir, a fact that gave him unusual pleasure, and he spoke feelingly of the faithful service rendered by Miss Harris and how much she would be missed.

Commencing next Sunday, new soprano and contralto soloists will be heard, and a strange co-incident is that the new soprano bears the same name as the retiring one, although no relation. Her name is Miss Ruth Harris, of New York. The contralto is Miss Hazel Hattfield, also of New York. They are both said to have voices of unusual sweetness and are sure to be worthy successors of those who retire. There will be no other changes in the choir.

In the course of his remarks, Mr. McCutchen said that he personally had had charge of the music at the church for forty-two years, adding humorously that he was a year and half old when he began. He also announced that Howard Case, organist would succeed Mr. Fitzhugh, and hereafter would be the choirmaster, in recognition of his faithful services.

Funeral of Henry G. Bowers.

The funeral services of Henry Glenn Bowers, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Mr. Bowers is survived by his parents, a sister, Mrs. O'Donnell, wife of Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, of Newark, and a brother, Benjamin Bowers.

SCOTLAND SHOWS THE WAY

How the "Housing Problem" is Solved in Great Britain,

PORT SUNLIGHT A MODEL.

Congestion of People in Cities Under Investigation Throughout the World May Lead to Improvement Here.

The Housing Problem was the subject of an address by Rev. Bernard J. Newman, of Willow Place chapel, Brooklyn, in All Souls' church last night, which was illustrated with some splendid stereopticon views taken from past and present conditions among the working classes in Scotland and England. Threatening weather kept many away, but as it was a fairly good audience enjoyed the lecture.

Home environment was given as the great moulder of character among the working classes and the movement which was started in 1842 has in view the bettering of the surroundings of the people who must perforce live cheaply. This movement is being taken up in the United States and bids fair to remove the congestion which now obtains among the population of Greater New York. The speaker declared that if crowding into quarters as thickly as in some parts of the city were to be practiced everywhere there the population of the entire country, the Philippine Islands, Hawaii, Mexico and Central America could all be housed and have some room left over.

Mr. Newman pointed out the dangers of this overcrowding showing how disease is propagated by the huddling together of twelve and thirteen people in a single room ten by twelve feet and even worse conditions than this are known to exist in New York. Many places in Great Britain were in a considerable worse condition than New York is in today, but the reform movement is gradually taking hold and some day we will see ideal conditions through the occupancy of the suburban towns with houses properly built to admit of plenty of fresh air and sunlight and reasonable enough in price to suit the pocketbooks of the poor.

The speaker called attention to a statement by Governor Charles E. Hughes, of New York, in which he is quoted as saying that it is usless to appropriate money for hospitals and other institutions when the homes are producing more cases than the money thus appropriated can care for. In New York alone there are 100,000 dark interior rooms and the tenement house law of 1901 does not meet the situation. The death rate is as high as 18.6 while in the newly built town of Port Sunlight in England has a rate of slightly over 3 in 1,000.

Laws have been passed in Great Britain which allows a municipality to condemn huddled quarters and build other houses in their places. Such a system in this country would change the working man's condition so much that a veritable heaven on earth could be established.

Some of the maps and pictures showed the designs of the new style of houses which are building in various parts of the mpire and the inside rooms thoroughly well lighted and ventilated show a pleasant contrast from the previous crowded conditions. Manchester and other large cities are taking advantage of the new system and are building up garden cities for the poor who may rent houses and apartments all the way from $2 a week up.

The objects which the investigators of the situation in this country hope to attain will be similar in scope to those accomplished in England and Scotland, and Mr. Newman prayed that the people of the United States would do their share toward helping to better the conditions here.

MINSTRELS READY FOR OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT

The minstrel entertainment to be given by the William N. Runyon Association in Hope chapel promises to be one of the big events of the spring season. Some of the talent engaged in the performance have records for efficiency and humor which ought to fill the house on the opening night tomorrow and as well as Wednesday and Friday nights.

This is the second annual show given by the association and under the careful training of Judge Runyon himself the affair ought to rank among the best efforts of the year. The "big six" will repeat their other successes. The soloists will be Tom Muir, George Rittenhouse, Russell Randolph, Frederick and B. F. Taliamy, Frank Clark, William Anderson, Harry Hartsher, B. C. Firstbrook and William Firstbrook.

The whole chorus will deliver the goods in the final medley and "Hard Times" will be the curtain raiser. Tickets are being sold by the boys of the association or they may be purchased at the door on the nights of the show.

ASH CARTERS NAGS WON BLUE RIBBONS

The inspection of the ash-cart drivers' outfits took place Saturday afternoon in front of police headquarters while Mayor Fisk, Chief of Police Kiely and Mrs. S. G. Van Hoesen, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr., and Mrs. Edward Harding, of Fanwood, a committee of the S. P. C. A. judged the outfits and awarded the prizes which had been promised for the best conditioned rigs.

Prizes were awarded to W. H. Terry, Fred Keiderling and Ole Olesson for the condition of their animals and harness. A trick was played by one of the exhibitors for which he will have to answer to Judge William Runyon on Wednesday morning. This fellow borrowed a horse and had his harness in spic and span shape while his own animal was safely hidden away in his stable.

The condition of the horse belonging to Spencer Conway was so pitiable that it was ordered shot and Conway will also have to face charges of cruelty to animals. Taken as a whole the exhibition did credit to the men who cart the ashes in the city.

VOTED WHERE MISSION MONEY SHOULD BE SENT.

The Sunday school of Hope chapel had a vote yesterday on the question of giving money for foreign missionary purposes. The teachers selected three schools which are in need of money for advancement in their work, the school at Peking, China, the school in China of which Gilbert Lovell, of this city is in charge and the third a school in India.

Twenty-seven classes voted. Twenty decided in favor of the Gilbert Lovell school, five for the school in India and two for the Peking object. G. Herbert Condict, who originated the plan, was highly pleased with the results obtained. He said a similar vote will be taken in disbursing money for home missions.

LOCAL GUNNERS SHINE AT CRANFORD TRAPS.

A delegation of trapshooting experts of the Log Cabin Gun Club, of this city, were guests at the opening of the Cranford Gun Club on Saturday afternoon. All of the local marksmen participated in the different events at the traps.

George Schoonmaker was the winner of the first prize, a cut glass and silver mounted decanter, and Harvey Fisk, president of the Cranford Club, was the winner of the second guerdon, a cut glass silver mounted ash tray.

The Plainfielders who were present were George Schoonmaker, Thomas Van Boskirk, J. H. Green, Jr., Percy H. Stewart, Samuel Huntington, George S. Ring and Howard Hunting.

Home Department Social.

The semi-annual social of the Home Department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday school will be held May 19. The work of this department is bringing most favorable comment among the churches of the State and in the denomination as well. It has an enrollment of 380 members, the second largest Home department in the State, and has contributed $315.69. The officers and visitors have made 1,614 calls and deserve much credit for the efficient and enthusiastic way they are carrying on the work.

TRACKWALKER KILLED ON JERSEY CENTRAL

A westbound train struck and instantly killed John Barone, a trackwalker, on the Jersey Central tracks about 100 feet east of the pumping station at Netherwood last night, about 9 o'clock. The body of the victim was found by Engineer John Dineen about half an hour later. The latter stopped his train, took the body aboard, and notified the police. The remains were afterward taken to the undertaking establishment of George Cole.

Baron's body was hurled a distance of fifty feet and was picked up on the eastbound tracks. The victim was completely disembowelled. His head was badly crushed, one leg was off and the other almost severed from the body. An arm was also broken.

Barone was twenty-six years old and resided at 320 Richmond street. He is survived by a wife and child. He had been in the employ of the Jersey Central about six years. The funeral service will be conducted at St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at nine o'clock, when there will be a celebration of a requeim mass.

When Barone's body was put on the train his lantern dangled from his right arm. A revolver which he had in his possession was smashed in two pieces and the night club he carried was found about fifty yards from where the body had been found.

The section boss of the gang, in which Barone was employed, called at the morgue this morning and paid this tribute to the dead man:

"John was a steady workman and always attended strictly to his duties. He was known as one of the most reliable trackwalkers in the employ of the company." Barone was well known in local Italian circles.

BOY RUN OVER BY A WAGON, IN HOSPITAL

Everett Giles, the nine year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson B. Giles, of Dunellen, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital on Saturday evening as a result of a broken thigh and an injured scalp. The boy sustained his injuries by being run over by a wagon while delivering milk in company with his father at Dunellen on Saturday afternoon.

The boy's condition was considered critical yesterday afternoon, but this morning it was reported that unless complications set in the lad stands an excellent chance of surviving the injuries.

Young Giles sustained his injuries while jumping on the delivery wagon while it was being driven slowly by his father. In making the leap he missed the step of the wagon and fell to the ground the rear wheel passing over his body. He was brought to the hospital by his father.

FORMER SHOWMAN TAKES THE PLEDGE IN COURT.

Kate Stevens, colored, and Ravian Bendigo, white, were arrainged this morning before City Judge William N. Runyon on charges of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The Stevens woman said she had been drinking and claimed that she met Bendigo quite by accident. She declared that Bendigo threw his arms around her to steady himself while he asked the way to Watchung avenue. Bendigo remembered nothing of these details and said that while he would admit that he also had overindulged he did not think it possible that he had so far forgotten himself as to try to hug a woman in public.

Bendigo said he was an ex-showman and had traveled all over the United States and had never been arrested before and as a matter of fact was ready to quit drinking for a year so as to prevent further appearances in the local court. Judge Runyon was sympathetic and let both go, at the time telling the colored woman to quit the habitual use of liquor and snuff to which she acknowledged being a slave.

Here's a Fish Story.

Patrolman Thomas Flatley is a devotee of Izaak Walton and in pursuing his favorite pastime Saturday night it is reported that he made one of the greatest catches of the season. It was said this morning that the angler caught enough flat and cat fish to give the whole police department a good feed and have enough left to sun-dry and that later in the season he will endeavor to repeat his feat.

Present Your Bills.

GUARDING THE MURDERER

Fearing Violence Being Done Him, No One is Allowed to See Grant.

DEMAND FOR SPEEDY TRIAL.

Date to Be Announced by Prosecutor Pope Tomorrow—Coveley's Children Are Placed In a Home.

Fearful that visitors to the county jail at Somerville may attempt violence on John V. Buckley, alias John Grant, the self-confessed murderer of Mrs. Frederick Coveley, the jail officials have decided not to permit anyone excepting the county authorities to see the prisoner.

First Phitograph Published of John Buckley, Alias John Grant.

Sheriff Ross took this step at the suggestion of Mayor N. B. Smalley today. A bitter feeling it is reported exists in the borough against the murderer and several open threats have been made to do him bodily harm. Hearing of this, the Mayor telephoned twice to Prosecutor Pope this morning of the situation and the prosecutor notified the Sheriff to protect Grant at all hazards.

As a precaution against any trouble and as a protection to the prisoner, the sheriff had Grant removed to an obscure part of the jail and separated from the other prisoners. Grant is now practically in solitary confinement.

Somerset County officials are anxiosu to have the trial set for as early a date as possible. Prosecutor Frederick Pope informed a Daily Press reporter today that he has taken the matter up already with Judge Parker and that he expected to be able to announce definitely tomorrow when Grant will be tried.

If a speedy trial is decided on Prosecutor Pope will have the grand jury reconvened to indict the prisoner, which will make it possible to place him on trial for his life next month. If this course is not decided on Grant will linger in jail until the September term of court.

Sentiment in the borough favors a quick trial. One of the advocates of speedy justice is Mayor Newton B. Smalley and that official is urging Prosecutor Pope to agree to such a plan if possible. "The case should not be permitted to lag," said the mayor today, "and the quicker it is disposed of the better it will be for the public and all concerned. Grant should be tried and sent to the electric chair before hot weather."

Scores of curious visited the Somerset county jail yesterday to get a glimpse of the prisoner, but they were foiled by Sheriff Ross, who issued an order that no outsiders be permitted to see the murderer. Since his incarceration Grant has had little to say concerning the crime. He has a good appetite and according to the jail officials he appears in good spirits despite the fact that he is facing the electric chair.

Fred Covely, the husband of the murdered woman, reached town at Saturday noon as exclusively told in Saturday's Daily Press. He attended the funeral service and accompanied the body to Somerville where it was interred.

Arrangements are now being made to place the three children in the Children's Home. Mayor Smalley took the matter up with the officilas of that institution today and it is probable that they will be admitted to the home tomorrow. At the Mayor's request Covely signed an agreement to bear the expense in

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Tomorrow night the Bachelors' Club will give another of the series of dances, which have been enjoyed by the young people during the past winter. The hall has been prettily trimmed and in order that everyone will be comfortable, in case of the weather being warm shirt waists will be in order.

The Netherwood Field Club defeated the Fanwood F. C. team Saturday afternoon on the local diamond by the score of 4 to 0.

The young people of St. Mary's parish, Stony Hill, are arranging to hold a dance during the first week in May.

The members of the Epworth League held a well-attended weekly meeting last night in the Method'st church.

George H. Lyons, a former resident here, but now of New York, has been visiting friends in town.

The weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. was held last night in the parlors of the church.

Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Jr., entertained friends from out of town over Sunday.

Edward Heath has taken a position with John Albert, the liveryman.

FIRE CO. MAY MOVE.

Plan is to Centrally Locate Chemical Engine.

Rahway, April 25.—The fire and water committee, it is understood, is about to move Washington Chemical Engine Company to a more central location. The location being considered is in Irving street. This, it is understood, is sanctioned by Mayor Howard and Chief H. L. Lamphear.

If the change is made the house now occupied by the company in East Milton avenue will be turned over to Lincoln Hook and Ladder Company No. 2, for whose headquarters the city is now paying rent.

TREMENDOUS SALE OF BAMBOO PORCH SCREENS.

About a year ago we placed an unusually large import order for porch screens, and as per agreement they reached us on the first of this month.

It was very fortunate that we bought them when we did, for scarcely ninety days had elapsed when the trade was notified of an advance.

Our good fortune we always share with you, and there is only this to think about—if you don't get them now they will certainly cost you considerable more when stock on hand is gone and warmer weather rolls around.

We handle only the very best grade outside bark screens; they are in natural color and have all attachments ready for hanging. All mail or telephone promptly filled in the following sizes at the low prices quoted:

4x8 ft., 64c; 5x8 ft., 80c; 6x8 ft., 96c; 7x8 ft., $1.12; 8x8 ft., $1.28; 10x8 ft., $1.60.

A PRETTY OUTFIT

FOR THE BEDROOM

Here is a Bedroom Suite that will appeal to people of mature judgment, for it is one of those suites that are built to last and are, in the long run, the most economical.

The most skilled cabinet makers devote their best efforts to the building of these splendid pieces.

All the case work is made with solid veneered backs and dust-proof panels between each drawer. They have the patent toilet fastener for easily adjusting all mirrors. The mirrors are of the very best quality imported French plate glass.

The Dresser is made of finely figured mahogany, maple nicely birdseye marked, quartered oak polished golden color, and natural mahogany; size of base is 45 inches long and 23 inches deep; shaped legs and front; large and 2 small drawers; size of mirror is 24x30; standards are neatly designed, and glass can be adjusted to different positions. Regular price in any of the four finishes $42.50

The Chiffonier may be had in all four woods, viz., quartered oak, golden finish; nicely marked birdseye maple, and mahogany, either standard or natural finish. It is designed to exactly match the above dresser; contains 4 large and 2 small drawers with wood knobs; size of mirror is 18x22. Regular price in any of the four finishes $41.50

The Bedstead, full size or 4 ft. 6 in.; may also be had in 3 ft. width; height of headboard is 5 ft. 6 in.; head and foot are neatly paneled; has just one piece of neat carving on the top; made in mahogany, either natural or standard finish; elegantly marked birdseye maple and best selected quartered oak, golden finish. Regular price $36

Toilet Dresser, shaped legs; is 20x35 and contains 2 small drawers; size of mirror is 20x22, adjusted to different angles for convenience of the ladies. Regular price $26.50

A Man of Affairs

Come in and talk it over with the Trust Officer in New York, who has been married three times, died recently leaving a large estate to be divided among seven children.

Three of the seven were appointed executors, each representing one set of heirs resulting from each marriage.

One of these executors has opened up legal operations against the other two—result: confusion, expense, worry and endless difficulty for the executors and loss for the estate.

How much better to have named a Trust Company as Executor and Trustee, avoiding all such complications. The heirs would have been happier—the estate would have been benefitted.

VICTORY IN FIRST GAME

Plainfield Opens Season by Defeating Crack O.N.T.'s in 10 Inning Struggle.

THE SCORE WAS TEN TO NINE.

Barnes' Timely Wallop Brings Boyd Home With Winning Tally—McLaughlin Pitches Fine Article of Ball.

A ten spasm thriller, topped off with a Plainfield victory, marked the opening of the home baseball season on Crescent Oval on Saturday afternoon. Score—Plainfield, 10; O. N. T., 9. The 9,999 fans who stayed at home missed a splendid contest and the 299 odd bugs who braved the iceberg germs witnessed the local warriors win a grand uphill battle. More power to the Dorflingerites.

When the Newark aggregation completed its tenth portion the score was 9 to 9. Charley Boyd opened Plainfield's tenth by journeying to the first corner on a free pass. That paved the way for a victorious finish and the "faithful" murmured "Amen."

Our Norman Barnes, of giraffe reaching fame on first sack, followed by pasting the ball square on the snoot, lifting it clear over Fitzpatrick's noodle in center field, and Boyd scampered home with the winning tally. It was a pretty and timely welt and a volley of hurrahs shot out from the regiment of bleacherites when Barnes' club negotiated the wallop which terminated the contest.

The visitors started off like young cyclones in the opening rounds and at the end of the third they had a total of eight runs to their credit, while there were only three on the Plainfield side of the ledger, but it all goes to show that the old saying, "The game isn't over until the last man is out," will apply to diamond battles in the 1910 season.

Warry McLaughlin was on the slab for the locals and although his delivery was rifled for ten swats, the southpaw veteran twirled a fine game. After the third round, he was particularly effective. In the remaining seven innings he fanned four Newarkers and held them to two hits.

O. N. T. marked up a pair of runs in the opener. Sasserman got to first base on Benbrown's error and scooted home a few minutes later on Miller's double to left. Miller was dispatched across the plate on Jameson's single to right field.

Noble Brit Martin inaugurated Plainfield's initial inning by banging out a double to left and Boyd immediately biffed the horsehide for a two-sacker to left scoring Brit. Clarke punctured Barnes' ribs with a flighty inshoot. Clarke fanned Nelson, but he insisted on filling the bases by passing Benbrown; then Warry McLaughlin toed the scratch, bingled to center, and scoring Boyd and Barnes. Warry purloined second, but Schott and O'Loughlin were extinguished on weak infield pops.

The visitors added another pair to their total in the second. Dodge placed a neat Texas Leaguer over Benbrown and Tighe walked for a starter. Clarke succumbed to McLaughlin's curve and Gunderman was chased to the bench after his foul fly was safely squeezed by Nelson. Then came two singles in a row that made trouble, Sasserman's swat to center scoring Dodge and Fitzpatrick's wallop to right sending Tighe home.

"Old Ned" was raised by the thread makers in the third when they fattened their tally by adding four more runs. Matters looked dark for the locals after the completion of that run-fest. Miller opened the inning by singling to left and Jameson walked to first. When Swiss flied out to Barnes, Dodge grounded to Benbrown. The latter was slow in handling the ball and the sacks were filled. Tighe hammered the ball to center scoring Miller and Jameson and Clarke's bang to the same territory, scored Dodge and Tighe.

There was an awakening for Plainfield in the fourth when McLaughlin doubled to center. Boyd who was put in to run for Warry advanced to third on Schott's strikeout and scored on O'Loughlin's infield out.

In the seventh both teams scored but Plainfield gained some loss ground by tallying three to the Newarker's one. With one down Brit made himself a hero by pasting the globule to left for a triple. Boyd was retired on an infield tap. At this point Clarke began to weaken. He pased Barnes who later stole second and Nelson banged a hot grounder which was too hot for Swiss to handle and Martin scored. Benbrown's crack to center bore the fancy label for it brought Barnes and Nelson home.

For the visitors Miller was passed but he was forced out at second by Jameson. Swiss advanced the latter along to third on a nifty tap to right and "Jamey" romped home on Dodge's infield out. That ended the scoring for the visitors.

The locals coralled three more tallies one each in the eighth, ninth and tenth. Plainfield had the sacks all occupied in the ninth but the locals were only able to negotiate a single tally. This was due to over-anxiety on the part of the our hitsmiths to annihilate the leatherette.

Finale—Barnes pushed Boyd home with the bacon in the tenth on his two-base biff to center. The score:

Plainfield.

O. N. T.....2 2 4 0 0 0 1 0 0 0— 9.

Three-base hit—Martin; two-base hits, Martin, Boyd, McLaughlin, Nelson, Barnes. Stolen bases—Martin, Boyd, Barnes, McLaughlin, Sasserman, Dodge. Sacrifice hits—O'Loughlin, Miller. Hit by pitcher—Barnes, Gunderman. Struck out—by McLaughlin, 7; by Clarke, 6. Base on balls—Off McLaughlin, 3; off Clarke, 3. Double plays—Tighe to Sasserman, Martin to Barnes. Left on bases—Plainfield, 8; O. N. T., 5. Time of game 2 hours. Umpire—Richard Scott.

Brit Martin with his trio of bingles, a triple, double and a single, stamped himself O. K. With his trusty club he is still the idol of local fans.

Billy O'Loughlin covered himself with glory in center field. Billy made a quartet of classy nabs in the struggle. If he continues this fancy work he will be a fixture in the central garden.

Benbrown, although he had two errors, handles himself well and looks good. The former New England leaguer's timely smash to center in the seventh brought home two tallies.

The O. N. T.'s arrived here minus one player and Dodge, a local boy, filled in with credit at right field station for the visitors.

There are no flies on Warry McLaughlin. Manager Dorflinger displayed good judgment in placing him in sixth position in the batting order, as Warry was always strong with the stick. On Saturday Warry's record showed a double and a single.

Lew Miller, who covered second base for the Newarkers, is a brother of the famous "Dots" Miller, Pittsburg's star player. He performed in classy style and appears to be a comer.

Fans bear in mind that Brit Martin made the first hit and scored the first run of the season for Plainfield.

Three members of the "Old Brigade" were in the bleachers—Former Councilmen L. B. Woolston, George Hallock and A. J. Leader.

The locals extended splendid support to McLaughlin in the last three innings when the visitors were froze out in one-two-three order.

Walter Nelson, the New Market boy, made a good impression behind the bat, although he fanned the first three times he came to the bat.

George Seery, last season's backstop, viewed the game from the player's bench.

Some class to Johnny Madden, the ex-St. Mary's second baseman. He journeyed to and from the game in an automobile.

Dunellen will be the destination of the Plainfields next Saturday.

Richard Scott blossomed out as an umpire and he made good. All of his decisions were fair and impartial and gave satisfaction to the fans.

Manager Sam Lunn was unable to accompany his aggregation here owing to the serious illness of a young son.

SOME PASTORS PREACH ON GREAT WHITE PLAGUE

"The Gospel of Health," was the subject of a discourse by Rev. J. W. Musson at the Temple Baptist church, yesterday morning, being appropriate to the general topic of tuberculosis which was world-wide in all churches. Mr. Musson took his text from the second verse of the third Epistle of John: "Beloved I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth."

Mr. Musson said that Christianity is a universal religion, it meets the needs of all men everywhere and it meets all the needs of man, it provides for the soul, mind and body. While the soul is paramount, the body must be nourished and cared for, at all times.

Mr. Musson then spoke on three sub-topics of the disease—Its extent, nature and prevention. Under the first topic he said that there were more deaths from tuberculosis than all other diseases, being 200,000 annually. By way of comparison he said that during the four years of the Civil War there were killed and wounded on both the Union and Confederate sides 205,070, while in the same period there were nearly 700,000 deaths from the disease.

The preacher then spoke of the nature of the disease, explaining that it is a germ disease, contagious, and great care must be exercised not to throw out these germs carelessly In speaking of the prevention, Mr. Musson said it was necessary to make a minute study of the disease to find a prevention. He referred to environment and conditions under which the disease thrives and urged all to exercise the greatest care of the body and thus make it possible to serve God better.

In conclusion Mr. Muson told what is being done here by the Anti-Tuberculosis Society and urged everyone to lend their help in the work of preventing the spread of the disease.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, did not preach a sermon on tuberculosis, yesterday morning, but incidentally made reference to the subject prior to his sermon. He said that he was not competent to deliver a discourse on the topic, but he felt sure his people were acquainted with the nature of the disease and means of prevention and doubtless would do all that is possible to spread the plan of education.

Rev. Mr. Bailey, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, spoke on the subject of tuberculosis at his church, last night. His subject was "David's Petition to Stay the Plague."

Something which was mentioned once before but which has evidently been forgotten is that the children who are being treated at the local pavilion are intensely interested in a flower garden and they would like it if they had more plants to care for. To be sure they have planted seeds and are cultivating what they have, but a few more potted plants are needed by them and anyone who feels interested enough would gain a whole lot of appreciation if they would send some flowers to the children to care for.

ONE WAY TO SHAMPOO.

A specialist who has had success with treating falling hair has novel ideas on shampoos that are easily adopted by the girl who washes her own hair.

Make a strong lather of soap suds by putting a cake of pure white soap in a pitcher that holds a couple of quarts. Pour a pint of boiling water over the soap and shake until a thick lather is formed, when the soap is removed.

Let the mixture cool to blood heat, or so that it will not scald the skin, and pour a little at a time over the scalp, rubbing it in with the tips of the fingers.

When scalp is well cleansed, pour the rest of hot mixture over the long hair, washing it gently down from the roots toward the ends.

Rinse with warm water, using a bath spray, and keep it up until no soapsuds remain either on scalp or long hair. Part hair and spray scalp, especially at sides of head and at nape of neck.

Have several smooth towels made very hot and dry the hair with them. When nearly finished separate hair into strands, thread with fingers or comb to remove tangles, then draw fingers from scalp to ends of hair until it is dry, soft and fluffy.

This specialist does not believe in cold water rinsing, which most hairdressers feel will prevent cold. The hot water gives more of a gloss and prevents harshness. She also avoids combing the hair when wet or pulling it when dry.

For a Black Hat.

When deciding on the trimming for that black velvet hat hearken to that little voice from Paris. The very latest idea is to trim the shape, which, by the way, is turned up at the back, with a huge bow of cream-colored silk. This white silk is brocaded or embroidered with old gold and rose silk, and as a last touch a narrow band of fur is placed on each edge.

Beaded Flowered Nets

Among the artistic new fabrics for handsome indoor gowns there is a white net that glistens with crystal or silver dewdrops and is lavishly sprinkled with vividly colored flowers. This is an attractive addition to the materials for lovely new gowns and no doubt will prove very popular.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

With a record of ten months in New York and five months in Chicago the most successful comic opera of the season will seen at the Plainfield theatre on Saturday afternoon and evening. This is the new Jos. M. Gaites' production "Three Twins," in which that inimitable star of all comedians, Thomas Whiffen, is starring. Critics and play goers have given without exception only the greatest praise for this tuneful play, and Mr. Whiffen, always legitimately funny, is even funnier than ever in his new vehicle.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Rev. W. T. Steuchle, pastor of the Second Presbtyerian church, Rahway, will be the speaker at a special meeting for men to be held in the Presbyterian church next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mr. Stuechle will also occupy the pulpit at the evening service.

Owing to pressure of business Councilman Lewis Churchill has decided to turn over the management of the Dunellen A. C. ball club to Borough Clerk Abner S. Coriell. The first game will be played with the Plainfields on Saturday afternoon next.

Rev. Ernest O. Brown delivered an instructive address in the Presbyterian church last night giving pointers on how to check the spread of tuberculosis.

Ogden Meeker and family, of Plainfield, will soon take possession of the Churchill property on Front street.

Miss Kittie Muller and Fred Vliet visited friends in Brooklyn on Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Ella Kennedy has disposed of her property on Front street to Silas Neilor.

Dr. T. C. Platt has returned from Atlantic City.

WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION TO HOLD ANNUAL FOREIGN MISSION TEA.

The annual foreign missionary tea of the Women's Association of the Congregational church, will be held with Mrs. F. A. Weeks, of 825 West Seventh street, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The guests of the afternoon will be Mrs. Henry Wade Hicks and Mrs. Bridges, president of the Philadelphia branch.

Mrs. Hicks has been around the world visiting mission stations and she will take the company and a visit to "Our Missionaries." "Natives" in costume from many foreign lands will be present and give a truly foreign atmosphere to the tea. The ingathering of the self-denial envelopes will be a feature.

YOUNG WOMEN LUNCH AT WASHINGTON ROCK.

Twenty-seven members of the Young Women's Christian Association participated in a walk to Washington Rock on Saturday afternoon. The young women journeyed to Dunellen on a trolley car and returned on foot via the Grant avenue road.

When the Rock was reached a campfire was built, coffee made and a lunch provided. While the eatables were being prepared many of the young women walked along the mountain side and gathered dogwood and violets which they found in plentiful quantities.

CO. K'S RIFLE TEAM MEETS WITH DEFEAT.

Under the direction of Major W. B. Martin, of Elizabeth, a Second Battalion rifle team shot a match with Co. K's team at the armory. The battalion team won by a total score of 718 to 703. On the standing position, the battalion team scored 338 against 333 for Co. K, and prone the former scored 380 to 370 for the home team.

These composed Co. K's team: Sergeant Hort, Corporal Conklin, Private Pearsall, Corporals Niles, Dow, Winder; Privates Winder and Pearsall.

Dr. Grace R. Powell Returns.

After an absence of several months from the city, Dr. Grace R. Powell, of Duer street, has returned home and resumed practice. Shortly after the death of her father, T. Wilfred Powell, she was called from the city in consultation on the illness of a life-long friend. The case was of a serious nature and Dr. Powell remained constantly with the patient until Monday of last week, when she was able to return home and bring her patient here for treatment.

Bound Brook Wins Again.

Bound Brook won its second game of the season on Saturday afternoon by defeating the Garwood A. C., by the score of 6 to 2 in a well played game. It was the first game that Garwood figured in this season. Harney's pitching for Bound Brook was first class.

GUARDING THE MURDERER

keeping the children in the institution.

Covely informed Mayor Smalley that he intended to secure a position here and remain in town in the future. During his absence he told the mayor that he had been residing in Hartford, New Haven and Newark. Covely had little to say on the crime.

Before being taken to the county jail on Friday night, after his arrest, Grant informed Mayor Smalley, that the latter was the first person he asked for a job following his arrival here about four years ago.

None of Grant's relatives, a brother and a sister, in Taunton, Mass., have been heard from by the authorities since the murder was committed.

The photograph of Grant presented in The Daily Press is the only picture of the murderer which has appeared in the newspapers since the crime. It was obtained by Chief Weiss from the Mernagh family on the day that the crime was committed and is an excellent likeness of the youth. The photograph from which thes cut is made was taken while the murderer was employed on the Mernagh farm.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Dear Sir—In your issue of Saturday appeared a letter from G. F. Murphy calling attention to existing evils which are responsible in runaway accidents such as occurred last week when Miss Murphy was seriously injured. This no doubt was done as he expresses it to exert a corrective influence upon those who need it.

But as an eye witness at close range of this unfortunate accident, I would like to ask him to banish from his mind any unpleasant thoughts that might linger there as to the action of the policeman on duty at Park avenue and Front street on that morning. The policeman was on duty and was one of the first, if not the first with myself and two other gentlemen, whose names I do not know, that picked Miss Murphy up, carried her to the drug store, and did everything possible—at least—did the best we could to alleviate her sufferings until the doctor arrived. Several attempts had been made along the line to stop the onrush of the runaway horse but to no avail, and I fail to see why a policeman is supposed to possess supernuman power in a case of this kind, in fact I do not believe that a line of policemen from curb to curb could check that maddened animal's wild onrush until it collided with a wagon standing near the curb.

And so far as vituperative criticism is concerned I have heard none, nor did I think there should be even the remotest hint at such. But you know—the man that knows it all—is always with us ready to knock at every opportunity.

I write this in defence of the officer, that justice may be done, because I know he did his duty nobly and the man who would fail to give him credit or disparage his work is lacking in true appreciation, and I am glad to know that Mr. Murphy is not one of these.

J. J. VARLEY,
927 West Front Street.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Men's Missionary Movement of the Reformed church in America will hold a big business rally to face the facts of the present situation of the denominational boards tomorrow night at the Marble Collegiate church, Twenty-ninth street and Fifth avenue, New York.

Miss Winifred Carroll concluded her work as contralto soloist at Trinity Reformed church yesterday, and commencing next Sunday she will sing at the First Presbtyerian church. Her work has been most efficient and eminently satisfactory and Trinity church regrets her departure.

The mother of Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will celebrate her seventieth birthday anniversary tomorrow. A post card shower is being arranged and the members of the church have been invited to participate. The address is Mrs. D. Broek, 446 South Lafayette street, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

The Junior Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church will meet at the church Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Lawrence French will conduct the devotional exercises and Miss Adelaide Cole the president will have charge of the business meeting. An important meeting of the executive committee will be followed by the serving of refreshments.

The Consistory of Trinity Reformed church has appointed these committees: Building and improvement, H. E. Gayle, A. L. Force, A. K. Willett, F. E. Smith, M. F. Gano. Organ, H. J. Martin, C. M. Dolliver, Robert J. Clark, F. S. Cutter, A. L. Titsworth. Finance, Rev. John Y. Broek, F. E. Smith, A. L. Force, B Frank Coriell.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Baker, of Elizabeth, were visitors yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Van Emburgh, of East Second street. Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Van Emburgh are sisters.

BRIDGE RINGS.

With the prevalence of card games and parties, a new finger ornament is seized with avidity by the woman who would keep pace with things up to date, and who has the wherewithal to indulge.

The new bridge rings, as they are called, are an evolution from the older but equally stunning banquet or dinner rings. Artificial light is not now demanded to make them good form.

They are designed for the small finger of the left hand, and the separate beauty of each ring has as much to do with its attractiveness as the value of the stones with which it is incrusted.

In the design an irregularity of outline is one of its most interesting peculiarities, and the settings are often an inch in length and sometimes longer, while their width depends upon the design chosen or the size of the finger they are to adorn.

There is usually a large centre stone—or three of varying sizes are used, and around these the smaller stones are set.

The old-fashioned brilliants and rosecut diamonds used in brooches and rings of bygone days and hoarded among family treasures may be used in fashioning one of these bridge rings, and when thus congregated will give sensational value to what is really a most striking and individual ornament.

THE CHIFFON BURNOOSE.

A gauze cape, made on the loose, flowing lines of a peignoir, but worn as a wrap for the drawing room costume, is in high favor.

It is truly graceful and becoming to the soft feminine type of wearer, and it offers a happy enveloping wrap for the woman who is angular.

The latest style is arranged at the back of a burnoose drapery of the supple material. The large, loose sleeves are reminiscent of the kimono. The sleeve effect is curved and pointed up at the back; an edge of embroidery outlines the sleeves, collar and skirt.

A jeweled ornament buttons the pointed front edges, almost in the effect of a Louis coat.

The dress underneath need not be elaborate when embellished by the chiffon or silk coatlike drapery. Grace and beauty are in every line of this idea.

THE COCKADE.

The new French cockade is taller than the cabochon, and although it is called a rosette, this is a misnomer.

"Simply a cockade," says the Parisian letter which tells us all the latest news; but the cockade is not so very simple unless we know its construction.

The present one in Paris is tall, upstanding and not the pleated bit of gilt of the tricorne winter hat.

While the cockade may be of leather, braid, velvet, ribbon, gilt or lace, it is now upstanding, in fact, wired to give it absolute certainty of position.

Lace or maline is the cockade par excellence of the present movement.

Finely pleated black lace is wired into a tall fan and fastened with a jet cabochon to a gold-colored straw turban for wear with a pongee frock.

Raised $410 for St. Stephen's.

At the concert given at Hartridge auditorium on April 7 for the benefit of St. Stephen's church, $410 net was realized. At the last meeting of the vestry a vote of thanks was extended to the following artists who contributed their services on this occasion: Edith Chapman Goold, soprano; Sarah More, soprano; Mildred Potter, contralto; John Young, tenor; Raymond Loder, baritone; Frederick Wheeler, basso; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McIntyre, piano. The concert and programe were under the direction of Lewis J. Geary.

Not Mr. McChanic.

Scotch highlanders, who still speak the Gaelic at times, settled much of the country north of Toronto. One day Dr. Rutherford, locally famous, was looking for some men to do some work for him. He went to a village blacksmith shop and found several of these Scotchmen standing about.

"Are you a mechanic?" he asked one of them.

"Nap," he replied. "I'm a McCuig."

Pictures of the Thespians.

The pictures of the complete cast for "Trelawny of the Wells" will be published exclusively in The Daily Press tomorrow.

Mrs. John Hull, of New York, formerly of Mercer avenue, was the guest yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. Ward, of the borough.

—A horse belonging to the Central Bottling Works ran away this morning from the corner of East Third and Washington streets and was galloping down Watchung avenue when Conductor Harry Montross, of the Fourth street trolley line, jumped from his car and stopped the animal. The horse was frightened by a passing train. No damage resulted from the runaway.

Harry Brown, of Brooklyn, but formerly of Plainfield, visited his sister, Mrs. J. H. Greene, Jr., of West Seventh street, on Saturday.

THEY WENT ROWING

"Us wants to go rowing, Tommy!" called one pretty young woman of the group of three.

Tom Hurd looked up from the camp fire with a comical expression of deprecation. "But, Marjorie, I can't take you now," he said. "I've got to 'tend to this cooking. Wouldn't after supper do?"

"Didn't say we wanted you to take us rowing, Tommy. Much as we enjoy your society, it isn't required this time. All we want is to have you get that heavy old boat into the water, and then we'll row. We know how."

"Sure you do, Marjorie?"

"Of course. I've rowed just millions of times."

Marjorie gathered her dainty skirts about her and looked down on Tom with the pretty pout that had won her checkered way through life so successfully.

Tom rose to his feet. In a moment the idler was out of the boathouse and run down to the water. The girls gathered around him, expectant.

"Me—me—me for the front end!" squealed Gladys, with a flash of bronze shoes and pink petticoats, as she skipped nimbly across the seats, assisted by Tom's long arm.

"I'll go in the back," said Marjorie, hesitating on the string piece.

"I thought you were going to row," commented Tom.

"Oh, yes! You row, Margie," protested Gladys. "I can't and Sybil doesn't know how. You used to row up at the lakes."

"Well, all right. Oo, how it wiggles! I shall fall, I know I shall! Tommy! Be careful! Oo!"

"And I'll steer," said Sybil, languorously descending into the cushioned stern seat and picking up the tiller lines with an air.

"What do I do now, Tommy?" asked Marjorie.

"Put your oars into the rowlocks and pull while I push off," he explained as a small wave broke over his tan shoes.

"Rowlocks? Oh, these things like parentheses! All right. You do it like this, don't you?" and Marjorie nearly capsized the boat with a vigorous sweep.

"That's fine—but wait till you're off. Now—sit tight!"

An incoming wave broke as Tom pushed them off, and the three girls shrieked in unison. Marjorie made a mad gesture with the oars and caught two crabs. Another wave, evidently the wash of a distant steamer, rolled in and slewed the idler sidewise.

"Oh, girls! Look where we're going! Oh, that horrid wave! Oh, Tommy!"

"Why don't you go ahead, Marjorie?" asked Gladys.

"I am—but the boat won't. I wonder if I'm doing it right?"

"Pull on your right oaar, Marjorie!" protested Tom from the shore. "No, the right one—right, right! You're pulling on the left one, Marge. For goodness' sake get her around!"

"Well, I've been pulling on it for hours and it didn't make us move a speck," retorted Marjorie.

"You're pulling on the left oar. Pull on the right and you'll go ahead."

"Oh, how silly! So I have. There!"

"Correct. Now keep straight ahead and use both oars.

Marjorie pulled on both oars, but made the little mistake of backing water, and the idler serenely proceeded back to the beach, stern first, while all the youngsters on the beach hooted and Tom danced helplessly on the sand. With a soft bump the idler grounded on the sandbar and stuck fast.

"Oh, Tommy. What'll I do? I can't get us off," wailed Marjorie, making feeble prods with her oar.

"Come and rescue us!" cried Gladys.

"Oh, do! That would be exciting," drawled Sybil, looking around with a smile.

"I can't get it off!" wailed Marjorie again.

There was nothing else to be done. Tom waded out 15 feet, sacrificing his immaculately creased trousers and tan oxfords, and shoved while Marjorie pulled, incidentally hitting him on the shin with an oar blade.

"Now pull straight ahead," he said curtly, sending them into deeper water with a final jab.

The idler began to progress in 18-inch jerks. Disgustedly Tom waded back to the beach, poured the water out of his shoes and discovered that his batch of biscuits were burned to a crisp. Muttering something under his breath, he got out the flour sack and proceeded to stir up another panful.

Out at the end of the pier Marjorie laid down her oars. "Don't let's go any farther," she said. "All I wanted was to get where I could powder my nose without all the boys looking at me. Put up that sunshade, Sybil, and don't let anybody look around it, or I shall die."

And the House Adjourned.

"Of all the perfectly silly things I ever heard of, it's this idiotic agitation for postal savings banks," said Mrs. Pynnhedd, with much spirit.

"And women should have votes!" groaned Mr. Pynnhedd. "What's your pet aversion to the scheme, Mrs. Morganfeller?"

"Why, you lowbrow," warmly retorted Mrs. Pynnhedd, "what would be the sense in putting postals in savings banks? Aren't albums the proper place for them?"

Philosophy.

There are some people—and I am one of them—who think that the most practical and important thing about a man is still his view of the universe. We think that for a landlady considering a lodger, it is important to know his income, but still more important to know his philosophy. We think that for a general about to fight an enemy, it is important to know the enemy's number, but still more important to know the enemy's philosophy. —Gilbert K. Chesterton.

To a Chemist.

"I want you to prepare for me a formula for making the best pumpkin pie that can be made," said the pie manufacturer to the chemist. "I've used turnips and ochre and potato flour and all the things my rivals use, and have beaten them a little bit at their own game, but now I want to put out a pumpkin pie that will simply outclass all other brands. I will pay you whatever fee is right for the work."—Life.

Fair But Stormy.

A gentleman boarded the Karori car at Kelburne avenue. Recognizing a friend on one of the seats, he nodded pleasantly, and then said: "Well, what do you think of the weather?" "Oh, horrible!" was the reply. "And how is your wife to-day?" "She's just about the same, thank you!"—New Zealand Free Lance.

Asking Too Much.

"Nobody should be allowed to purchase anything from a pharmacist without a physician's prescription," said the cautious citizen. "Nonsense," replied the druggist. "You couldn't expect even a doctor to knew the correct Latin for soda water and chewing gum."

To Take Ink Stains From Ivory.

A piece of priceless old ivory became badly stained with ink. I tried vainly to remove this until with fear and trembling I used my cream silver polish. This proved precisely the right thing and improved the luster of the ivory.—Good Housekeeping.

Foolish Principle.

There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance; this principle is contempt, prior to examination.—Herbert Spencer.

Value of Friendship.

True friendship is one of the greatest blessings upon earth. It makes the cares and anxieties of life sit easily; provides us with a partner in our afflictions, and is a sure resort against every accident and difficulty that can happen to us.

The Limit.

A bridal pair recently had a street fight because the wife insisted that the husband carry her pet poodle. Notwithstanding the unusual excellence of this excuse for a squabble, street fighting is bad form.

Courted Responsibility.

Labor Exchange Clerk—"What are you?" Seedy Aplicant—"I used to be a steam roller flagger, but am open to take up any post that promises an equal amount of responsibility and danger."

A Hopeless Case.

"He will never make a society reporter." "Did he fall down on the assignment?" "Fall down? He states that among those present were a duke, a count, and a few other titles."

Nothing Left for Him.

"Wake up, Henry! There's a burglar in the room after your money." "Poor fellow! Why, I saw you searching my pockets just before you came to bed."

Scientific Rations.

Prison rations of England give 51.4 ounces of food daily to the prisoner doing hard labor, but only 46.8 ounces in the case of a prisoner doing light labor.

A Lesson.

Possibly when one finds a brick with strange characters on it a wise plan is to let it alone, unless it may be of use to throw at a yellow dog.

Valuable Possession.

There is nothing so great as to be capable of happiness; to pluck it out of every moment and whatever happens.—Anne Gilchrist.

Good Breeding.

Good breeding is a sincere, kindly consideration for others, put in its pleasantest and most delicate form.—Annie Payson Call.

The Chinese Way.

In China children are brought up almost as if they were deaf and dumb. A Chinese boy or girl will sit in the presence of father or mother for hours and never say a word unless spoken to. The Chinese boy who would speak to a caller at the house unless he had permission would be considered a most impudent rascal. Here in America the children do most of the talking, and the old folks have to keep quiet.

The Modern Child.

A young girl, incorrigibly given to slang, went with her mother to the funeral of an aunt. The dead woman had been strikingly handsome in life, and her features retained all their attractiveness. "How do you think Aunt Blanche looked?" asked the mother when they had viewed the corpse. Enthusiastically the child replied: "Dead swell, didn't she, mother?"

Your Violets May Have Dyspepsia.

With all its fascinations, violet raising is often attended with many disappointments. Perhaps one reason for amateurs having trouble with unhealthy plants is an over-richness of the soil that is given them, for, unlike some other flowers, violets are apt to have a sort of dyspepsia all their own from over-nourishment.

Prevents Blood Poisoning.

If any one cuts, scratches, or gets a splinter into his hand go to the druggist and get what is called old-fashioned sticking plaster, writes a carpenter. Heat the plaster and put it on a piece of cloth and put it on and it will take the soreness all out and will prevent bloodpoisoning.

Up-to-Date Method of Voting.

Secret voting is universal in Australia, Canada and the United States. In some districts of this country, however, ballot papers have been supplanted by voting machines which show the number of votes cast at any moment while the election is still proceeding.

An Omission.

Nervous and inexperienced Host (rising hurriedly at the conclusion of a song)—"Ladies and er—gentlemen, before he started to—er—sing, Mr. Bawnall asked me to apologize for his—er—voice, but I—er—omitted to do so—er—so I—er—apologize now!"

A Hard-Luck Story.

"Politeness always pays." "I don't know about that," replied Mr. Hunting Work. "I had a pretty good position as a bill collector. But I made myself so agreeable that people held out on payments for fear I'd stop calling on them."

Fond of Mosquitoes.

The nighthawk is said to have a great appetite for mosquitoes. It has a huge mouth, and when it wants a meal it just opens it wide and sails into a cloud of mosquitoes. Its favorite morsel is the malaria mosquito.

Help on the Way.

"I hear that Chose, the great savant, is in dire poverty. Isn't it possible to do something for him?" "Oh, yes, they have been collecting funds for three months to put up a monument to him."—Bon Vivant.

In the Game.

"I am in the hands of my friends," said the political sidestepper. "Yes," replied the harsh critic, "and every time your friends look over their hands they seem impatient for a new deal."

He Heard It.

"Has your neighbor an ear for music?" "You'd think so if you could hear the coal and clods of dirt rattle against our house when my daughter starts her early morning practice."

The Man in Lower Ten

By Mary Roberts Rinehart
Author of The Circular Staircase

Illustrations by M. J. KETTNER

(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

We had heard no sound since our spectacular entrance into her room. I was distinctly uncomfortable, as alone this time, I climbed to the tower staircase. Reasoning from before, she would probably throw a chair at me. I stopped at the foot of the staircase and called.

"Hello up there," I said, in as debonnair a manner as I could summon. "Good morning. Wie geht es bei ihnen?"

No reply.

"Bon jour, mademoiselle," I tried again. This time there was a movement of some sort from above, but nothing fell on me.

"I—we want to apologize for rousing you so—er—unexpectedly this morning," I went on. "The fact is, we wanted to talk to you, and you—you were hard to waken. We are travelers, lost in your mountains, and we crave a breakfast and an audience."

She came to the door then. I could feel that she was investigating the top of my head from above. "Is Mr. Sullivan with you?" she asked. It was the first word from her, and she was not sure of her voice.

"No. We are alone. If you will come down and look at us you will find us two perfectly harmless people, whose horse—curses on him—departed without leave last night and left us at your gate."

She relaxed somewhat then and came down a step or two. "I was afraid I had killed somebody," she said. "The housekeeper left yesterday, and the other maids went with her."

When she saw that I was comparatively young and lacked the earmarks of the highwayman, she was greatly relieved. She was inclined to fight shy of Hotchkiss, however, for some reason. She gave us a breakfast of a sort, for there was little in the house, and afterward we telephoned to the town for a vehicle. While Hotchkiss examined scratches and replaced the Bokhara rug, I engaged Jennie in conversation.

"Can you tell me," I asked, "who is managing the estate since Mrs. Curtis was killed?"

"No one," she returned shortly.

"Has—any member of the family been here since the accident?"

"No, sir. There was only the two, and some think Mr. Sullivan was killed as well as his sister."

"You don't?"

"No," with conviction.

"Why?"

She wheeled on me with quick suspicion.

"Are you a detective?" she demanded.

"No."

"You told him to say you represented the law."

"I am a lawyer. Some of them misrepresent the law, but I—"

She broke in impatiently.

"A sheriff's officer?"

"No. Look here, Jennie; I am all that I should be. You'll have to believe that. And I'm in a bad position through no fault of my own. I want you to answer some questions. If you will help me, I will do what I can for you. Do you live near here?"

Her chin quivered. It was the first sign of weakness she had shown.

"My home is in Pittsburg," she said, "and I haven't enough money to get there. They hadn't paid my wages for two months. They don't pay anybody."

"Very well," I returned. "I'll send you back to Pittsburg, Pullman included, if you will tell me some things I want to know."

She agreed eagerly. Outside the window Hotchkiss was bending over, examining footprints in the drive.

"Now," I began, "there has been a Miss West staying here?"

"Yes."

"Mr. Sullivan was attentive to her?"

"Yes. She was the granddaughter of a wealthy man in Pittsburg. My aunt has been in his family for 20 years. Mrs. Curtis wanted her brother to marry Miss West."

"Do you think he did marry her?" I could not keep the excitement out of my voice.

"No. There were reasons"—she stopped abruptly.

"Do you know anything of the family? Are they—were they New Yorkers?"

"They came from somewhere in the south. I have heard Mrs. Curtis say her mother was a Cuban. I don't know much about them, but Mr. Sullivan had a wicked temper, though he didn't look it. Folks say big, light-haired people are easy going, but I don't believe it, sir."

"How long was Miss West here?"

"Two weeks."

I hesitated about further questioning. Critical as my position was, I could not pry deeper into Alison West's affairs. If she had got into the hands of adventurers, as Sullivan and his sister appeared to have been, she was safely away from them again. But something of the situation in the car Ontario was forming itself in my mind: the incident at the farmhouse lacked only motive to be complete. Was Sullivan, after all, a rascal or a criminal? Was the murderer Sullivan or Mrs. Conway? The lady or the tiger again.

Jennie was speaking.

"I hope Miss West was not hurt?" she asked. "We liked her, all of us. She was not like Mrs. Curtis."

I wanted to say that she was not like anybody in the world. Instead—"She escaped with some bruises," I said.

She glanced at my arm. "You were on the train?"

"Yes."

She waited for more questions, but none coming, she went to the door. Then she closed it softly and came back.

"Mrs. Curtis is dead? You are sure of it?" she asked.

"She was killed instantly, I believe. The body was not recovered. But I have reasons for believing that Mr. Sullivan is living."

"I knew it," she said. "—I— think he was here the night before last. That is why I went to the tower room. I believe he would kill me if he could." As nearly as her round and comely face could express it, Jennie's expression was tragic at that moment. I made a quick resolution, and acted on it at once.

"You are not entirely frank with me, Jennie," I protested. "And I am going to tell you more than I have. We are talking at cross purposes.

"I was on the wrecked train, in the same car with Mrs. Curtis, Miss West and Mr. Sullivan. During the night there was a crime committed in that car and Mr. Sullivan disappeared. But he left behind a chain of circumstantial evidence that involved me completely, so that I may, at any time, be arrested."

Apparently she did not comprehend for a moment. Then, as if the meaning of my words had just dawned on her, she looked up and gasped:

"You mean—Mr. Sullivan committed the crime himself?"

"I think he did."

"What was it?"

"It was murder," I said deliberately.

Her hands clenched involuntarily, and she shrank back. "A woman?" She could scarcely form her words.

"No, a man; a Mr. Simon Harrington of Pittsburg."

Her effort to retain her self-control was pitiful. Then she broke down and cried, her head on the back of a tall chair.

"It was my fault," she said wretchedly, "my fault. I should not have sent them the word."

After a few minutes she grew quiet. She seemed to hesitate over something, and finally determined to say it.

"You will understand better, sir, when I say that I was raised in the Harrington family. Mr. Harrington was Mr. Sullivan's wife's father!"

CHAPTER XXV.

At the Station.

So it had been the tiger, not the lady! Well, I had held to that theory all through. Jennie suddenly became a valuable person; if necessary she could prove the connection between Sullivan and the murdered man, and show a motive for the crime. I was triumphant when Hotchkiss came in. When the girl had produced a photograph of Mrs. Sullivan, and I had recognized the bronze-haired girl of the train, we were both well satisfied—which goes to prove the ephemeral nature of most human contentments.

Jennie either had nothing more to say, or feared she had said too much. She was evidently uneasy before Hotchkiss. I told her that Mrs. Sullivan was recovering in a Baltimore hospital, but she already knew it from some source, and merely nodded. She made a few preparations for leaving, while Hotchkiss and I compared notes, and then, with the cat in her arms, she climbed into the trap from the town. I sat with her, and on the way down she told me a little, not much.

"If you see Mrs. Sullivan," she advised, "and she is conscious, she probably thinks that both her husband and her father were killed in the wreck. She will be in a bad way, sir."

"You mean that she—still cares about her husband?"

The cat crawled over on my knee, and rubbed its head against my hand invitingly. Jennie stared at the undulating line of the mountain crests, a colossal surf against a blue ocean of sky. "Yes, she cares," she said softly. "Women are made like that. They say they are cats, but Peter there in your lap wouldn't come back and lick your hand if you kicked him. If—if you have to tell her the truth, be as gentle as you can sir. She has been good to me—that's why I have played the spy here all summer. It's a thankless thing, spying on people."

"It is that," I agreed soberly.

Hotchkiss and I arrived in Washington late that evening, and, rather than arouse the household, I went to the club. I was at the office early the next morning and admitted myself. McKnight rarely appeared before half after ten, and our modest office force some time after nine. I looked over my previous day's mail and waited, with such patience as I possessed, for McKnight. In the interval I called up Mrs. Klopton and announced that I would dine at home that night. What my household subsists on during my numerous absences I have never discovered. Tea, probably, and crackers. Dilligent search when I have made a midnight arrival, never reveals anything more substantial. Possibly I imagine it, but the announcement that I am about to make a journey always seems to create a general atmosphere of depression throughout the house, as though Euphemia and Eliza, and Thomas, the stableman, were already subsisting, in imagination, on Mrs. Klopton's meager fare.

So I called her up and announced my arrival. There was something unusual in her tone, as though her throat was tense with indignation. Always shrill, her elderly voice rasped my ear painfully through the receiver.

"I have changed the butcher, Mr. Lawrence," she announced portentously. "The last roast was a pound short, and his mutton-chops—any self-respecting sheep would refuse to acknowledge them."

As I said before, I can always tell from the voice in which Mrs. Klopton conveys the most indifferent matters, if something of real significance has occurred. Also, through long habit, I have learned how quickest to bring her to the point.

"You are pessimistic this morning," I returned. "What's the matter, Mrs. Klopton? You haven't used that tone since Euphemia baked a pie for the iceman. What is it now? Somebody poison the dog?"

She cleared her throat.

"The house has been broken into, Mr. Lawrence," she said. "I have lived in the best families, and never have I stood by and seen what I saw yesterday—every bureau drawer opened, and my—my most sacred belongings—" she choked.

"Did you notify the police?" I asked sharply.

"Police!" she sniffed. "Police! It was the police that did it—two detectives with a search warrant. I—I wouldn't dare tell you over the telephone what one of them said when he found the whisky and rock candy for my cough."

"Did they take anything?" I demanded, every nerve on edge.

"They took the cough medicine," she returned indignantly, "and they said—"

"Confound the cough medicine!" I was frantic. "Did they take anything else? Were they in my dressing-room?"

"Yes. I threatened to sue them, and I told them what you would do when you came back. But they wouldn't listen. They took away that black sealskin bag you brought home from Pittsburg with you!"

I knew then that my hours of freedom were numbered. To have found Sullivan and then, in support of my case against him, to have produced the bag, minus the bit of chain, had been my intention. But the police the bag, and, beyond knowing something of Sullivan's history, I was practically no nearer his discovery than before. Hotchkiss hoped he had his man in the house off Washington Circle, but on the very night he had seen him Jennie claimed that Sullivan had tried to enter the Laurels. Then—suppose we found Sullivan and proved the satchel and its contents his? Since the police had the bit of chain it might mean involving Alison in the story. I sat down and buried my face in my hands. There was no escape. I figured it out despondingly.

"The House Has Been Broken Into, Mr. Lawrence."

Against me was the evidence of the survivors of the Ontario that I had been accused of the murder at the time. There had been blood-stains on my pillow and a hidden dagger. Into the bargain, in my possession had been found a traveling bag containing the dead man's pocketbook.

In my favor was McKnight's theory against Mrs. Conway. She had a motive for wishing to secure the notes, she believed I was in lower ten, and she had collapsed at the discovery of the crime in the morning.

Against both of these theories, I accuse a purely chimerical person named Sullivan, who was not seen by any of the survivors—save one, Alison, whom I could not bring into the case. I could find a motive for his murdering his father-in-law, whom he hated, but again—I would have to drag in the girl.

And not one of the theories explained the telegram and the broken necklace.

Outside the office force was arriving. They were comfortably ignorant of my presence, and over the transom floated scraps of dialogue and the stenographer's gurgling laugh. McKnight had a relative, who was reading law with him, in the intervals between calling up the young women of his acquaintance. He came in singing, and the office boy joined in with the uncertainty of voice of 15. I smiled grimly. I was too busy with my own troubles to find any joy in opening the door and startling them into silence. I even heard, without resentment, Blobs of the uncertain voice inquire when "Blake" would be back.

I hoped McKnight would arrive before the arrest occurred. There were many things to arrange. But when at last, impatient of his delay, I telephoned, I found he had been gone for more than an hour. Clearly he was not coming directly to the office, and with such resignation as I could muster I paced the floor and waited.

I felt more alone than I have ever felt in my life. "Born an orphan," as Richey said, I had made my own way, carved out myself such success as had been mine. I had built up my house of life on the props of law and order, and now some unknown hand had withdrawn the supports, and I stood among ruins.

I suppose it is the maternal in a woman that makes a man turn to her when everything else fails. The eternal boy in him goes to have his wounded pride bandaged, his tattered self-respect repaired. If he loves the woman, he wants her to kiss the hurt.

The longing to see Alison, always with me, was stronger than I was that morning. It might be that I would not see her again. I had nothing to say to her save one thing, and that, under the cloud that hung over me, I did not dare to say. But I wanted to see her, to touch her hand—as only a lonely man can crave it, I wanted the comfort of her, the peace that lay in her presence. And so, with every step outside the door a threat, I telephoned to her.

She was gone! The disappointment was great, for my need was great. In a fury of revolt against the scheme of things, I heard that she had started home to Richmond—but that she might still be caught at the station.

To see her had by that time become an obsession. I picked up my hat, threw open the door, and, obvious of the shock to the office force of my presence, followed so immediately by my exit, I dashed out to the elevator. As I went down in one cage I caught a glimpse of Johnson and two other men going up in the next. I hardly gave them a thought. There was no hansom in sight, and I jumped on a passing car. Let come what might, arrest, prison, disgrace, I was going to see Alison.

I saw her. I flung into the station, saw that it was empty—empty, for she was not there. Then I hurried back to the gates. She was there, a familiar figure in blue, the very gown in which I always thought of her, the one she had worn when, Heaven help me—I had kissed her, at the Carter farm. And she was not alone. Bending over her, talking earnestly, with all his boyish heart in his face, was Richey.

They did not see me, and I was glad of it. After all, it had been McKnight's game first. I turned on my heel and made my way blindly out of the station. Before I lost them I turned once and looked toward them, standing apart from the crowd, absorbed in each other. They were the only two people on earth that I cared about, and I left them there together. Then I went back miserably to the office and awaited arrest.

BOYNTON
"Square Pot"
BOILERS

25% More Fire Surface than Other Boilers of Equal Diameter

The "square pot" and clinkerless, ash-cutting grate which has made BOYNTON hot air furnaces famous, are now features of BOYNTON hot water heaters and boilers. This undoubtedly marks the greatest advance yet made in steam and hot water heating.

The BOYNTON "square-pot," with its increased fire surface and free cleaning, gives a heat efficiency from 10% to 25% greater than is possible with the ordinary round type of fire pot. It won't take long to figure what that means on a winter's coal bill.

BOYNTON construction is substantial. We can't go into details, but a BOYNTON "square-pot" boiler may be used to the limit of its rated capacity, carry a steady water line and always furnish dry steam.

Look at the sectional cut at the top of this "ad" and see how perfectly BOYNTON Boilers are arranged for free steaming.

BOROUGHITES SMOTHER THE NEW BRUNSWICKS

Pounding the ball hard and fielding in fast style the N. P. H. S. nine smothered New Brunswick High's aggregation on Saturday by the score of 25 to 2. New Brunswick was lamentably weak in the field, the Middlesex athletes piling up an even dozen glaring misplays. They were also unable to hit the horsehide to any extent, C. Smith and Townley holding them down to three bingles.

C. Smith furnished a lot of fireworks with his bat, the borough athlete registering three hits, one a circuit drive, one triple and a double. Taylor and Adams also slapped the pellet for three hits each. The score:

NORTH PLAINFIELD A.C. STARTS WITH VICTORY

The fast Netherwood A. C. was defeated by the North Plainfield A. C. on the Leland avenue grounds Saturday afternoon by the score of 5 to 2. Frederickson, the south paw twirler, opposed Conshee and Perry.

Frederickson was in fine condition, securing fifteen strike outs and allowing five hits. Eddie Conshee twirled five innings and struck out five, and allowed no hits. Perry finished the game and also secured five strike outs and was touched up for three hits.

The features of the game was the classy catching of Mullen, the star playing of Margehi, Driver and Feiring of the North Plainfields. The playing at third base of Lambertson was especially good. The Netherwoods appeared in their new uniforms and presented a fine appearance. The score:

Y. M. C. A. LOSES FIRST GAME OF THE SEASON

Montclair A. C.'s crack collegiate aggregation proved too strong for the Y. M. C. A.s on Saturday at the former place, the Essex county aggregation winning by a score of 9 to 4. The locals, however, made a splendid showing and looked like a speedy combination.

Montclair secured a commanding lead which the locals were unable to overcome by scoring four runs in each the first and third innings. After this setback the locals improved in their work and held their opponents down.

Y. M. C. A. rallied in the fourth and fifth innings by totaling four runs, but after that it was all Montclair's way. Captain John Fritts led the locals in stickwork with three bingles. Evans, Hand and Stover were also three with a pair of wallops each. The score:

BASEBALL.

Rev. George H. Gardner, of New Market, who is an ardent all around fan, was one of the spectators of the battle.

While Lidgate had little to do in right field the High School star handled himself well and is sure to make good.

"BABE" ADAMS IS A MODEL ATHLETE

To the good influence of his mother who taught him to presevere, and never to smoke a cigarette or drink intoxicating liquor, Charles ("Babe") Adams, the famous pitcher, who helped the Pittsburg Club materially to win the world's championship, attributes his wonderful success on the diamond.

"The secret of success in baseball," says Adams, "is not different from the secret of success in any business undertaking. My early boyhood in Indiana was spent on a farm. I did my best on the farm, too. About ten years ago—I was only 16 then—we moved to Mount Moriah, Mo. There were some local fans in that locality that I used to look upon with awe. The baseball fever which I had brought with me from Indiana got worse. Oh, I had it bad. I used to practice curves with potatoes, stones, or any old thing I could get my hands on. I t used to tickle dad and mother to see me throw, and the fact of their pleasure in my physical development encouraged me to do better.

"Finally I got on a local team, and I still remember how I swelled up when I saw myself in the glass with my first uniform. My early success was phenomenal, and encouraged by my folks I worked harder, got up earlier, went to bed earlier, never smoked cigarettes or tasted liquor—nor have I yet—and finally landed a good job pitching. I consider luck and opportunity, backed by a life of moderation through the influence of father and mother, and the encouragement of the best girl in the world—my wife—are the secrets of my success.

"Pitching is an art only perfected by constant practice. There must be absolute harmony between the pitcher and his catcher. I use about ten different forms of the curve ball, and when speed is a factor it gives me a wide scope in putting in a mixture of balls that only the best have a right to negotiate."

LOCAL PIN KNIGHTS ARE IN BALTIMORE

With their strike arms well conditioned and brimful of confidence the local contingent of bowlers who are to compete in the N. B. A. tourney in the Oriole city tonight left town on the Washington Express at 2:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon Chauncey Stout's last words were: "We are sure to bring home some of the trimmings."

The five-man contests in which the Plainfielders will figure are down on the program for 10:15 o'clock tonight and the twoman competitions are carded for 5:15 p. m. The individual competitions will take place in the morning.

The Elks quintet will have for its opponents the crack Woodburn team, of Cincinnati, while the Plainfield five will stack up against the crack Matinees.

In the Elks lineup will be Blatz, Kiely, Laing, Stout and Campbell, and in the Plainfield combination will be Nash, Causbrook, Burscher, Schaub and Matthews. The two-man combinations will pair as follows:

Blatz and Stout, who carried off eleventh prize in the Madison Square Garden tourney last year; Laing and Matthews, Burscher and Schaub Kiely and Causbrook and Nash and Campbell.

South Plainfield Nine Wins.

Despite the cold weather a big crowd witnessed the opening of the ball season at South Plainfield yesterday when the South Plainfield B. B. C. trounced the Field Club aggregation of that place by a score of 16 to 3. The victors outplayed their opponents in all departments and had them blanked until the eight inning when the Field Club scored three runs. Miller and Conshay pitched a fine article of ball. The score:

LODGE MEN CELEBRATE

Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. Observes Fourth Anniversary.

INFORMAL PROGRAM RENDERED

Address of Welcome by Winfield S. Angleman—State Vice-Councilor LeRue Also Makes An Address.

Addresses, an entertainment and refreshments combined to make the fourth aniversary of Plainfield Council, No. 294, Jr. O. U. A. M., a pleasing affair last night. Despite the storm nearly one hundred members and friends of the order were present.

The program opened with an address of welcome by Winfield S. Angleman, after a piano selection by Charles Leland. Then followed a selection by the Harmonica Musical Club, an address by State Deputy Trimmer, of Roselle, after which Emil Closs, a professional entertainer from New York, amused the audience with his clever lightning change character impersonations.

Another piano selection by Mr. Leland preceded an address by John B. Oakley, of Elizabeth, and other selections by the Harmonica Club. State Vice-Councilor LaRue, of Bound Brook, made a few interesting remarks, congratulating the council upon its growth and success, as did also Mr. Angleman, who called attention to the excellent principles of the order. The program was concluded with a sketch, "The Village School," by Emil Closs, which kept everyone filled with laughter. Refreshments were served under the direction of the general committee comprising William F. Richards, chairman; Asher Fleming, William Peck, Frank Downs and Julius G. Williams.

Plainfield Council was instituted four years ago and today it has a membership of 124 and is constantly growing. These are the officers:

Councilor, William F. Richards; vice-councilor, Harvey VanPelt; past councilor, Arthur Spicer; conductor, Asher Fleming; warden, D. J. Fleming; inside sentinel, Joseph Boone; outside sentinel, Frank Downs; chaplain, John B. Oakley; recording secretary, Fredi E. Sebring; financial secretary, Joel Pennington; treasurer, Julius G. Williams; assistant recording secretary, Arthur Spicer; trustees, William Peck, Arthur Spicer and Daniel G. VanWinkle.

The refreshments left over from last night's affair, and there was a large quantity, were sent to the Children's Home.

Entertainment for Young and Old.

Prof. Milton Henderson, of New York, father of Mrs. Charles Graves, of this city, well-known throughout the country as a clever sleight-of-hand performer and entertainer of children with "Punch and Judy" show, ventriloquism, etc., will give an entertainment in the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Thursday night, May 5, at 8 o'clock. He will entertain the older folks with a marvelous magical seance; also the children with puzzling magic, "Punch and Judy" show and other pleasing features. The affair is under the auspices of the board of trustees of the church.

Did Not Support Children.

On a warrant issued by Justice Snape and served by Chief Weiss, Theodore Stites was arrested yesterday for failure to support his two children. Overseer of the Poor Fred Becker is the complainant. It is alleged in the complaint that Stites disappeared from the borough one month ago and left his children without a home or food. Stites and his wife are separated.

A Cellar Fire.

A barrel in the cellar underneath the store occupied by the Automatic Shoe Repairing Company, 39 Somerset street, brought the North Plainfield fire department out yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock. The blaze was extinguished quickly and no damage ensued. The origin of the blaze is a mystery.

Announce Business Changes.

Edward C. Paterson, of this city, certified public accountant, announces that he has opened an office for the general practice of accounting at 141 Broadway, New York city, and in this connection Henry J. Cochran, also of this city, announces that he has entered the office of Mr. Patterson.

Daniel L. Hulick, of Grove street, who sustained injuries from a fall while at work in a saw mill at Westfield several weeks ago, is able to be out.

OCEAN GROVE PROGRAM FOR THE COMING SEASON

Dr. Aaron E. Ballard, president of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association of the Methodist Episcopal church, has made public the summer program of religious and musical events. As in former years, Tali Esen Morgan, of New York city, will have charge of the music. He has arranged for the appearance of Mme. Schumann-Heink for a concert for August 2, and other well known grand opera stars will be engaged.

There will be two children's festivals, with a chorus of one thousand voices, and the fairyland entertainment given in connection with the Asbury Park baby parade. The usual oratorios are to be dispensed with because of the heavy expense involved in their presentation.

The religious program, arranged by the devotional committee, of which Dr. Ballard is the chairman, will begin Sunday, June 19, when the opening sermon of the summer will be preached by Bishop Rudolph Dubbs, of the Evangelical Society. Other well known ministers engaged include the Rev. Dr. John Wesley Hill, the Rev. Dr. William Eckman, the Rev. Dr. McMullen and the Rev. Dr. John Kranz, of New York city; the Rev. Dr. J. R. Shannon, of Washington; Bishop Candler, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and Bishop Quail, of the Methodist Episcopal Church North.

The annual camp meeting will extend over two Sabbaths, beginning Friday, August 19, and continuing for ten days. Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of Philadelphia, vice-president of the Camp-Meeting Association, will preach Sunday morning, August 21, the first Sabbath of the "camp." Well known evangelists will assist the devotional committee in conducting the twelve daily services of the camp meeting.

The young people's meetings, held daily during the summer at 9 a. m., will be in charge of the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Mead and the Rev. Dr. William H. Morgan, both of Newark, and both members of the Camp Meeting Association. The holiness meetings, held at the same hour, will be led by the Rev. Dr. John H. Alday, of Ocean Grove. The Sunday afternoon Bible class, said to be the largest in the world, will be in charge of the Rev. Dr. Leander W. Munhall, of Philadelphia, the Bible reader and evangelisist.

The National Association of Friends will hold its annual conference on the camp ground in July, beginning the week of the 6th. Two thousand delegates, it is expected, will attend. The annual Independence Day oration in the Auditorium will be delivered on the morning of the Fourth by Whitehead Kloontz, president of the North Carolina Senate.

Planning for Fete Champetre.

Henry Johnson, the steward of the Park Club, has begun operations preparing the grounds for the Fete Champetre which is to be held there the latter part of May to help along the playground work here. L. W. Randolph, who owns an adjoining piece of land, has kindly consented to allow the use of it for the affair, if those in charge will keep it in condition. The land will all be cleaned off, sodded and otherwise beautified. Mr. Johnson is co-operating with the committee of women in charge of the affair to make it a success.

Louis Bowlsby Killed.

Louis Bowlsby, aged 50 years, of Bound Brook, well known in this city, was killed in the yards of the New Jersey Central, at ersey City, last night, by accident. In some way he was run down by a train backing into the yard and did not see the approaching cars until too late to avoid being hit. Mr. Bowlsby formerly worked for the Public Service Corporation. He leaves a wife and five children.

Autoists Made Disturbance.

Dirke de Hass, who resides on the Rock road, near Watchung, summoned Chief Weiss to his home at 2 o'clock this morning to quell a disturbance. The fracas was started by a number of former boarders who reached the house yesterday afternoon in exuberant spirits. No arrests were made.

College Club to Entertain.

The College Club of Plainfield has invited the senior class girls of the North Plainfield High School to a reception and entertainment to be held at the Hartridge School auditorium, Saturday afternoon, April 30.

Among the automobile tourists registered on Sunday at the Hotel Wendell, Pittsfield, Mass., were Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Dillon, Miss Alice Dillon, Miss Mary Dillon, D. F. Doherty, Miss Margaret Doherty and D. F. O'Conner, Westfield.

TO ADJUST WAGE SCALE

Printing Press Manufacturers to Consider Machinist's Demands.

HOLD CONFERENCE TOMORROW.

Skilled Employees at Local Plants Ask for Wage Increase—Expect Favorable Action.

As a result of the recent meetings of the printing press machinists in this city, as well as the persistent efforts of H. V. Reilly, of Newark, business agent of District 47, International Association of Machinists, a meeting of representatives of the printing press manufacturers will be held at the offices of the Potter Press Work tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock to consider a schedule submitted by the machinists for a readjustment of the wage scale.

The fact that the manufacturers have shown a willingness to meet the representatives of the craft is taken as a hopeful sign by the machinists that the wage scale will be raised to compare favorably with those of the same trade in other parts of the country.

At the present time the inside men receive 26 and 28 cents an hour for inside work and between 33 and 35 cents an hour for outside work, which is considered a low rate for that class of work. The machinists want $3 a day as the minimum wage for inside work and $4 a day for outside work and a request based on that scale will be submitted to the manufacturers.

Those who will send representatives to the meeting on Wednesday include the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works, the Potter Press Works and the Hall Printing Press Company. It is said that all the manufacturers are willing to meet their men half way. The men through Mr. Reilly have adopted a policy of conservatism instead of resorting to the old method of calling a strike at the least provocation which might mean a long and bitter struggle. The local machinists will hold a regular meeting Wednesday night.

MAYORS AND EX-MAYORS TO ATTEND PERFORMANCE.

The mayors, past and present, of the city and borough, will occupy box seats at the closing performance of Trelawny of the Wells at the Plainfield theatre on Saturday night, May 21. On the preceding night, State Senator Ackerman and State Senator Frelinghuysen will occupy boxes.

There appears to be some misunderstanding as to the scale of prices. The rates are no higher than for any high class performance where such stars as Effingham Pinto and Edward Sheldon are in the cast. Good seats may be obtained while they last at anywhere from fifty cents to two dollars. As it is not unlikely that speculators will corner the market at the last hour, Hugh S. Jarvis, head of the press department, issued a formal warning this morning and advised that tickets be purchased now.

The pictures of the performers in the play will be found on page 6 of this issue.

THE WEATHER.

Partly cloudy with showers tonight or Wednesday, and cooler; moderate to brisk southerly winds.

Maximum, 71; minimum, 56.

Annual Meeting of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp.

The annual meeting of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp Association has been called for Thursday evening, April 28, at 8 o'clock, in the parlor of the Y. M. C. A. Full attendance is very much desired, not of the officers only, but of all those interested who have so kindly assisted in the past in various ways this worthy work, and any new friends we will welcome heartily. A full report of the bequest will be given, with an outline of the work contemplated; officers must be elected, so please come. J. D. Loizeaux, president. 4 26 3 ***

He Can Sober Up Now.

John Giles, of Lake street, whose record at police headquarters for drunkenness is one long chapter, received from Judge William N. Runyon this morning the sentence promised him on April 4, when Giles was up before him last. Giles will have to spend fifty days in jail and pay a fine of $50 or serve one day for each dollar of the fine.

NEED MARRIAGE LICENSE

New Law Prevents Hasty and Indiscreet Matrimonial Ventures.

TAKES EFFECT ON JULY 1.

Aims to Put an End to Elopements—Clergy and Civil Authorities Interested in the Act.

Aimed primarily at runaway marriages, but tending generally to minimize the evil of all indiscreet matrimonial affairs, revolutionary changes in the safeguards making for good husbands and wives will be brought about in New Jersey when the law introduced by Senator Brown, of Monmouth, consisting of a revision of the act concerning marriages, goes into effect on July 1. On and after that date every marriage consumated in the State will have to be accompanied by a license acquired under the restrictions designed to work to the advantage of society at large, and holding to strict accountability any minister or civil officer empowered to tie a matrimonial knot under the statute. The exact wording of the law is that "it shall be necessary for persons intending to be married within this State to first obtain a marriage license and deliver same to the clergyman, magistrate or the person who is to officiate before the proposed marriage to be lawfully performed."

The State Board of Health is prepared to secure a rigid enforcement of the new law, which will be felt especially in Camden, where a great many marriages of Philadelphia couples are consummated, and also in Jersey City and Hoboken, where many New York couples go at present to avoid the restrictions imposed by New York State.

Great interest is being manifested throughout the State by clergymen and others authorized to perform marriages, as well as by municipal authorities upon whom the duty falls to receive applications from lovelorn couples and granting them the license necessary to plight their troth. The administration of the new law, as far as the State is concerned, rests with the Bureau of Vital Statistics connected with the State Board of Health. The officers of this department draughted the bill that was introduced by Senator Brown, and are now preparing explanatory literature to be forwarded to the clergymen and all others whose duty it will be to respect and enforce the law.

Under the law marriages may be solemnized by the chief justice and associate justices of the Supreme Court, the chancellor and vice-chancellor, judges of the Court of Common Pleas, justices of the peace, recorders, police justices and mayors of any city in the State and every stated and ordained minister of the gospel. Marriages may also be consummated under the rules and customs of any religious society where either one or both of the contracting parties are members of such organization.

According to the law, "If the female party to the proposed marriage is a resident in any municipality of this State such licenses shall be obtained from the registar of vital statistics, if there be such officer, and if not, then from the clerk of such municipality wherein such female resides; of if the female parties to the proposed marriage is a non-resident of this State such license shall be obtained wherein the male party to the proposed marriage resides. If both parties to the proposed marriage are non-residents such license shall be obtained in the municipality where the proposed marriage is to take place." Where there is no registar of vital statistics the assessor of taxes is authorized to attend to the application for the license. Licenses to marry cannot be issued when either of the parties, at the time of making the application, is under the influence of intoxicating liquors or a narcotic drug or is imbecile, epileptic, or of unsound mind.

Before any municipal officer shall issue a marriage license he shall require one of the contracting parties to subscribe and swear to an oath or affirmation attesting the truth of the fact respecting the legality of the proposed marriage, and he shall issue the license only after it shall be so made to appear before him that no legal impediment to such marriage exists. The law requires the licensing officer to satisfy himself beyond peradventure that the proposed marriage is a proper one in all respects. When the applicants for a license are strangers to him, the rules laid down by the State Board of Health under the law will require the identification of the parties by some person known to the officer.

WILL HE ESCAPE CHAIR?

Prosecutor Says Sentiment is Changing in Murderer's Favor.

HE FINDS SOME FRIENDS.

Reported That Money Will Be Raised to Employ Able Counsel for the Defense of the Slayer.

Although a self-confessed murderer, John Buckley, alias John Grant, who shot to death Mrs. Frederick Covely on last Thursday morning, stands a chance of escaping the electric chair, it is believed. It became known yesterday that several prominent North Plainfield citizens have interested themselves in the youth and will unite in a fight to save him from being electrocuted. While at first sentiment was bitter against the prisoner the pendulem is now swinging in his direction.

It was reported yesterday that a well known lawyer of Somerset county will be engaged to defend the prisoner. Hon. Alvah A. Clark is prominently mentioned as the probable lawyer for the defense.

Prosecutor Frederick A. Pope did not hesitate to tell a Daily Press reporter yesterday at the Somerset county jail that sentiment is changing in favor of the murderer. Mr. Pope declared that he has received scores of letters and telephone messages protesting against sending Grant to the chair. These sympathetic expressions outnumber the requests that the prisoner be accorded a speedy trial, convicted, and made to suffer the death penalty at the earliest possible moment.

It was also stated by Prosecutor Pope that he had reecived information from a reliable source to the effect that prominent North Plainfield citizens will stand by the lad "and dig down in their pockets" for funds to secure able counsel to defend him.

Nothing, as yet, has been heard from the relatives of the murderer. In addition to having two brothers living it is believed that the lad's parents are still living in Charlestown, Mass. Information furnished the authorities by the murderer, since his arrest, shows that his relatives were living when he ran away from home when thirteen years of age because of parental restraint. His parents at that time were known as hardworking and honest people and among the respectable residents of the Boston suburb.

Whether Grant will be accorded a speedy trial, or whether the case will be put over until the September court, rests largely with Supreme Court Judge Parker. If his Oyer and Terminer calendar is well filled it is likely that the prisoner will not be tried until fall. Prosecutor Pope, however, is inclined to believe that Grant will be tried next month.

DR. BROWNING GIVES TALK "ON FIRST AID TO INJURED."

"First Aid to the Injured," was the subject of an address given before Company K by Dr. W. Kempton Browning, its former captain, at a meeting last night following the regular drill.

Private Houston was used as a subject in illustrating the talk, and Dr. Browning showed the different uses of bandages, explaining how a bandage can be wrapped to represent a figure "eight" on any part of the body. He also gave valuable hints and suggestions in cases of bleeding, showing how it can be stopped and often times save a life.

Grace Mission Fair.

The fair of Grace Church Mission will open tomorrow night and nothing has been left undone that would make the evenings of the affair interesting and attractive. Thursday night a concert will be given by local talent which promises much in the way of amusement and enjoyment for those who attend.

John Barone's Funeral.

The funeral service of John Barone, who was killed by being run down by a train on the Jersey Central tracks on Sunday night, was conducted at St. Mary's church this morning. A requiem mass was celebrated by Father Bogan. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

"Important Missionary Assets."

"Important Missionary Assets," a lesson from the Conquest Mission Study course, will be the topic of the Christian Endeavor Society meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church tomorrow night. Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry will be the leader.

ALL IS IN READINESS FOR N. P. A.'S BANQUET

The committee in charge of the first banquet of the North Plainfield Association, which will be held in Debele's auditorium on Thursday night, has completed all the details for the event. Tickets are being purchased liberally and it is expected that 150 representative citizens of the borough will be present. The dinner will begin at 7 o'clock.

The interior of the hall is now being placed in readiness for the event by Mr. Deble. Samuel St. John McCutchen will act as toastmaster and David J. Carney, chairman of the committee, will be in position to announce the speakers tomorrow.

Borough citizens desirious of securing tickets can obtain them at Debele and Stahl's store on Somerset street, or from members of the committee.

AMATEUR MINSTRELSY IN WEST END TONIGHT

The final rehearsal of the members of the William N. Runyon Association, of Hope chapel, last night was a corker and without doubt the actual performances, the first of which occurs tonight, will prove even more satisfying to the audience than to the genial judge himsel, who has done the work of training the minstrels in their work. The old injunction "Gentlemen be seated," had scarcely been uttered before the black-face artists were in their places ready to entertain.

"Now, fellows, you did that finely, but let's go over it once more and get the raw edges off and we'll show the people that talent is not lacking in this bunch." Of course this was Judge Runyon's voice and obedience was immediate.

They did repeat the song and from beginning to end of the program, too, and it was surely a splendid combination. Some of the familiar faces were good to see and it bodes well for the audience tonight. The boys are keenly alive to what is doing and everyone of them is right there with voice and humor. Tommy Muir, who is on the program for something more than a mere song will be remembered as one of the original "bunch" who have delighted audiences before, and all will be glad to hear him. Judge Runyon, the interlocutor, has worked hard to perfect the show and he personally thanked the "boys" for their splendid performance. The show will be given tonight, tomorrow and Friday nights.

Open Branch Office Here.

Under the management of William de La R. Anderson, of this city, Wrenn Bros. & Co., of New York and Boston, have opened a branch office in the Babcock building, for the transaction of a general stock brokerage business and execution of orders in all the principal markets of the country.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE WORK

Mrs. Haff Tells Local League of National Convention Doings.

SHE REVIEWS PROCEEDINGS.

Mrs. Champlain L. Riley Chosen President at Annual Election of the City—Borough League.

The Plainfield and North Plainfield Equal Suffrage League at its annual meeting yesterday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Stephen Haff, elected new officers and heard the report of the former president of the league on the experiences of the delegates to the recent convention held in Washington D. C., in which sensational papers alleged conduct unbecoming women. Mrs. Stephen Haff, who had announced her intention to resign the presidency of the league was firm in her determination and resigned and Mrs. Champlain L. Riley was elected in her stead.

The other officers elected were as follows: Vice-president, Dr. Clara DeHarte Krans; treasurer, Mrs. Samuel Huntington; secretary, Miss Mary B. Wells. A rising vote of thanks was given the retiring officers for their devoted services and regret expressed that Mrs. Haff would not accept a renomination to the office of president.

Mrs. Haff, who attended the recent convention at the nation's Capitol, was asked to give an account of the proceedings in the House of Representatives and in the Senate. She said she was not present when the reported hissing of President Taft took place, but that she understood that it was merely a slight sound immediately suppressed by the gavel of Mrs. Anna Shaw, the National President of the league, and deeply regretted by the convention as a whole.

Dismissing that dismal incident Mrs. Haff described the procession of seventy-five automobiles which went through the streets of Washington with brilliant yellow streamers floating from their fronts on April 18, bearing the monster petition for a change in the constitution which would give to woman the prerogative she craves—the vote. The procession evoked applause in many parts of its route and she said that the big bundles of signatures bedecked with yellow ribbons resembled nothing so much as bundles of fagots, but they found their correct destinations at the House of Representatives and at the Senate Chamber.

In the house, Mrs. Haff said, a Congressman presented a huge mass of petitions shortly after the opening of the session at 12 o'clock and the ensuing applause of the members was deafening. In fact it was such an uproarious demonstration that Speaker Cannon had hard work to restore order.

In the Senate things happened somewhat differently. Senator Oliver, of Pennsylvania, presented the bundle of petitions and the gallery applauded a little. Senator John Kean, who was in the chair, politely reminded the spectators that "It is not permitted to applaud in the United States Senate." Senator La-Follette, of Wisconsin, presented the petition from his State, exclaiming as he did so: "I hope the time will come when it will not be necessary for a great and intelligent body of people to petition Congress for rights which ought to be enjoyed by them in this free country." At this a great burst of applause came from over-zealous women in the galleries and again Senator Kean's gavel descended and he again called attention to the rules, announcing: "Applause is not permitted in the Senate of the United States." A threat to clear the galleries had to be issued by the Senator and that brought about order again.

The delegates to the convention attended lectures on industrial subjects given in the Arlington hotel which was the headquarters of the members during the contention. Among the speakers at the lectures were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Robbins, Mrs. Florence Kelley, president of the Consumers' League; Charles Edward Russell and others of equally splendid ability. The lectures showed woman's need for organization and the ballot in order to improve their conditions.

On the morning of April 19 hearings were given the delegates by the Juliciary Committee and the Woman's Suffrage Committee of the Senate on a bill providing for a sixteenth amendment to our constitution which will enfranchise women.

Mrs. Haff was present at the hearing in the Senate where professional women argued the need of women for power and the position the ballot would endow them with. The closing speech by Mrs. Anna Shaw was not wishing to take any chances hustled about and succeeded in getting fifteen women to vote for the new school. When the result was announced cheer after cheer was given for the women, without whose help the question would have been lost. Superintendent H. C. Krebs will have plans prepared for the new building and later an election will be held to pass the appropriation thought to be necessary.

SOMERVILLE.

Hans P. Freece lectured before the Men's Club of the Second Reformed church Sunday afternoon on Mormonism. Mr. Freece was born a Mormon and raised in the faith. J. Hart Herder also sang two tenor solos. In the evening the church was filled by a union service when Mr. Freece again addressed a large audience. Sunday evening was the last musical service under the direction of Mrs. Jane Satterthwaite. Geofrey O'Hara, of Bound Brook, will take charge of the music next Sunday.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

John Sweeney, the young Philadelphian, who has been an inmate of the borough jail since Thursday, was taken to New Brunswick yesterday. Dr. Platt, who examined Sweeney, believes the young man is demented and it was on his advice that he was turned over to the county authorities. Sweeney was taken into custody on Thursday in the vicinity of the Levering and Garrigues iron plant. In the lockup he acted strangely and at times displayed signs of becoming violent. One of his acts while in the lockup was to throw a glass of milk at Marshal James Benson when the officer handed it to the prisoner to drink. Mayor Sanford made efforts to locate some relatives of the unfortunate fellow in the Quaker City but he was unable to do so.

Asa D. Pope, who died in Plainfield on Thursday, was one of the oldest members of Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and was a regular attendant at its meetings when he resided in the borough seventeen years ago.

Mrs. S. Harris and daughter, the former the widow of the late Rev. M. Harris, of Raritan, have taken up their residence in the Liscomb building.

The young people of the Methodist church are planning for a May walk to Washington Rock in a few weeks.

The New Market fire department has elected Harry Tomlinson to membership.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nagle have returned from a visit to Brooklyn.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Word has been received in town of the death of Mrs. Adeline Hunter, mother of Mrs. Gideon M. Shott, whose husband was a former pastor of the Baptist church, being now pastor of the Baptist church at Mannington, W. Va. Mrs. Hunter died at her home at Madisonville, O., on Saturday, April 16, aged 82 years. She was one of the oldest Baptists in Ohio, being a member for 62 years. She is survived by two daughters, four sons, 20 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The weather will not interfere with the Bachelor Club's shirt waist dance which will be held in the hall tonight. The committee has spared no trouble to make this the best dance of the series.

Lynus Walpole, Jr., has resigned his position with the Rushmore Co., of Plainfield, to take a similar position with the Hall Signal Co., of Garwood.

Eugene Guerier and Jacob Coles have returned from a fishing trip to Bound Brook, where they were fortunate enough to land several shad.

Miss Louretta Hoffman, of the corps of teachers, has been obliged to go to her home at Spring City, Pa., on account of illness.

Frank Aberly, of New York, has been visiting his aunt, Mrs. M. A. Corrona, of Stanbury avenue.

Mrs. Gere Paff, of Westfield, was the guest yesterday of her mother, Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Jr.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Next Sunday the South Plainfield B. B. C. will go to Rahway to play the fast Elucid A. C. This is one of the classiest teams of its kind in the State and the game should be a good one.

Tickets for an entertainment to be given in the local school Thursday afternoon at 3:30 are now on sale. The proceeds will go toward the purchasing of more books for the school library.

The only consolation left to the Field Club is that the score last year was 24 to 1 and this year it was only 13 to 3. That shows some improvement. But—

Mass will be celebrated on Wednesday morning at 5:30 o'clock in the church of the Sacred Heart.

Miss Irene Miller visited relatives in North Plainfield yesterday.

Repairs are being made on the property of P. F. Kaine here.

MT. BETHEL.

The women "carried the day" at the school meeting held at Mt. Bethel, Saturday afternoon, thereby helping the "Circles on the Square" to out-vote the opposition to the question of building a new school at that place. In all ninety votes were cast, fifty-five being for the proposition and thirty-five against. The election was a lively one from the start and "Circles on the Square"

HOME CURE FOR ECZEMA.

Does it not seem strange that so many people suffer year in and year out with eczema?

A 25-cent bottle of a simple wash stops the itch and will surely convince any patient.

This wash is composed of mild and soothing oil of wintergreen mixed with thymol and glycerine, etc., and known as D. D. D. Prescription. We do not know how long the D. D. D. Labortories will continue the 25c offer, as the remedy is regularly sold only in $1.00 bottles and has never before been put on the market on any special offers.

If you want relief tonight try a bottle at 25c on our personal recommendation.

This was the expression of one of our patrons—she had just purchased a hat and was delighted with the style and surprised at its modest cost. You'll not have to go aworrying about the style hat most becoming to you if you'll visit our Millinery Department. You are sure to find just the hat you want—here.

Our designers keep ever abreast of the changing styles and design our models upon lines of the most favored ideas.

We aim to have every possible style in our millinery department—from a severe tailored model to one profusely trimmed with flowers and maline—and, you'll find prices are as notably characteristic of the store as styles are of the prevailing modes—Both will please you.

ONE of the LARGEST retail stores in New York City—in fact, anywhere in this country—regularly employs a large corps of chiropodists to care for the feet of its salesmen.

We know that a whole lot of benefit and comfort is thus assured but we believe nine-tenths of all foot trouble could be prevented by the adoption of our method of shoe-fitting.

"When we shoe you, you are shod right."

THE WHEREABOUTS of Phil Smith, a former pitching Goliah, has been discovered. He is twirling for the crack Crescent A. C., of Brooklyn.

PLAINFIELD is represented on Yale this season with Stewart Freeman, the former High School pitching star, in the box. Freeman's work on the slab is attracting the gaze of big league scouts already.

A COMPLAINT.—J. Nichol, an esteemed fellow scribe, who covers the games at Bound Brook, calls our attention to the fact that it is with difficulty tha he can secure room in the Bound Brook press box owing to the size of the score-book used by Owen Sullivan, the basehit and error recorder of the Bound Brook club.

According to "Nick" the press box is 4½ feet long by 2 feet wide, not counting the cracks. Mister Sullivan, he decarles, carries a book which measures about three feet square. While he is content to use a ledger about five inches by two inches.

"Now," said Nick yesterday, "tell me how I can get sufficient room?"

My advice is, and it's gratis, tell Sullivan to hire a hall.

NEWARK A. C. will be the opponents of the Y. M. C. A. on Crescent Oval next Saturday.

DUNELLEN is looking around the country for a pitcher. Here's a chance for "Smiling Jimmy" Montross.

MISTER SLOCUM, the Y. M. C. A. twirler, performed creditably against the Montclair A. C. on Saturday, although the locals lost their game. Manager Listman had the correct dope when he declared that this youngster had the stuff.

PETE LAMAR, the old Plainfield catcher, did backstop duty for New Brunswick on Saturday and Sunday. Plainfield "has beens" appear good enough for sedate Brunswick all the year 'round.

THE FORUM.

Another on Alcohol.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Tuberculosis is not the only disease aggravated by the use of alcohol. Woodbury, of Philadelphia, says: "While it gives a temporary sensation of relief, it really hastens the process of disease by paralysing the defensive function of the white blood cells." Add to this the statement by Traden that "alcoholic liquors tend to destroy nutrition" and we have the spectacle of a beseiged city, with its sentry anaesthetized, the guards unarmed and its inhabitants without food. Does it matter much which enemy comes to its gates?

It is a sad fact that under the seductive guise of tonics and blood purifiers, whose active principle is cologne spirits; which spells al-co-hol, thousands of lives are sacrificed every year. Among its victims, we see preachers of righteousness, philanthropic workers and white ribboners, deceived by the trade names and bogus testimonials of these nostrums until all hope of health, all self-control have gone. The inebriety of women is largely attributable to the same source.

The government withholds Jamaica Ginger from the Indians along with lemon and vanila extracts because they intoxicate, yet we find that in these same United States $75,000,000 are annually spent in such intoxicants as Swamp-root, Peruna and Celery compound. The little demon in the wine sauce, in branded cherries and mince pies, makes the low saloon a natural sequence, we might say a necessity, as a finishing room for the product of our Christian homes.

We learn that during the last decade the Long Island Hospital has diminished its use of alcohol fifty per cent. At Mt. Sinai the "use of alcohol is the exception rather than the rule," while Dr. Warbasse, chief surgeon of the German Hospital in Brooklyn, says: "I do not advise nor permit the use of alcohol as a beverage or a medicine in any form whatever."

E. P. COARD.

Seeks An Office.

Editor, The Daily Press:

A number of friends have asked me to try to secure the Republican nomination for Freeholder next fall and that I should announce myself now, so in deference to their wishes, I shall endeavor to secure the Republican nomination. This without any attempt to work an injustice on other gentlemen who desire to run. The township of New Providence has not elected a freeholder from within its territory since the separating of the borough from the township. It has always supported borough candidates for the office and many of the citizens of the borough of New Providence, as well as those in the township, feel that the township is entitled to a freeholder this year.

If one of the applicants is not properly identified, the license cannot be issued.

When the prospective bride and bridegroom are under the age of eighteen and twenty-one years, respectively, a license shall not be issued upless the parent or the guardian of the minor shall first certify in the presence of two reputable witnesses their consent thereto.

The officer to whom application for a license is made must satisfy himself thoroughly that the prospective marriage is a proper one before he grants the application. The fact that a license has been issued does not relieve the clergyman or civil authority requested to perform the ceremony of the duty to make sure in his own mind that there are no reasons why the couple should not be wedded.

Where any person applying for a license wrongfully makes false answers to any of the inquiries asked of them he or she shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and any one performing a religious ceremony between the parties without the presentation of the license therefore shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishment by imprisonment not exceeding six months or the imposition of a fine not exceeding $500.

Dr. T. Chalmers Easton, pastor of the Highland Park Reformed church, has resigned and the consistory of the church will meet tomorrow night to take action thereon. Dr. Easton formerly preached in Washington, and while there preached a sermon regarding theatricals which led to his being sued for damages by Olga Nethersole.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

HERE AND THERE.

Under the caption "Junk Offered to the Lord" the New York Sun of April 26 tells a story of how the rector of Christ Episcopal church in Brooklyn tried to raise $1,500 with which to pay off a mortgage on the church rectory. "Canon Chase," the story says, "was a disappointed man yesterday when he discovered that a large quantity of cast off and antiquated jewelry and silverware as well as pewter metal goods and mutilated coins, were gathered by his ushers on Sunday in response to an urgent appeal." The total value put upon the collection of junk by the appraisers of the collection is $150. Hence the disappointment. How different from our old friend, Dr. Simpson of the Methodist church! The last time he woke the people up as to the needs of the heathen, in Carnegie Hall, Dr. Simpson's persuasiveness netted about $100,000 for the cause. Why did the contributors to the fund in Christ church ransack their homes for useless stuff, vauleless discards and other unsalable merchandise? And the donors actually expected Canon Chase to sell the stuff. "I asked for bread and ye gave me a stone" What a pity!

WHEN MARK TWAIN WORKED IN MISSISSIPPI.

Steamboat men of the old days were regarded with envy by the landsmen of river towns, and rated in proportion of the importance and grandeur of the boat on which they ran, says Raymond Lee Hill in The Travel Magazine for April. A proud thing it was for a chap to be employed on such steamers as the Grand Turk, the Alex. Scott or the Robert E. Lee, especially for negro barbers and deckhands. Mark Twain tells of a husky darkey who with his pompous airs kept offending the guests at a colored ball in New Orleans until finally one of the managers approached him and demanded:

"Who is you, anyway? Who is you? dat's what I want to know!"

"Who is I?" retorted the latter, in nowise discomfited, and bristling with importance. "Who is I? I let you know mighty quick who I is! I want you niggers to understan' dat I fires the middle do' on de Aleck Scott!"

On another occasion the daughter of a middle-aged negro woman was following the usual custom of her colored friends—enjoying a twilight flirtation—when her mother stuck her head through a broken window pane and called out in a proud voice, loud enough for her neighbors to hear:

"You Mary Ann, come in de house dis minute! Stannin' out dah foolin' 'long wid dat low trash, an heah's de barber off'n de Gran' Turk wants to conwerse wid you!"

Pilots of this time were of special consequence. Every courtesy was shown them by captains and crews, and extreme deference by the negro barbers, waiters and roustabouts. Their wages were high. As a general rule, the scale was about $400 per month, but during the flush Kansas trade on the Missouri river, a good pilot received as much as $900 a trip, which amounted to $1,800 a month. But a pilot only mastered his trade after long experience and close application. And he had to be well versed in his vocation, for in those days there were no snag and dredge boats, beacon lights or powerful search-lights to play ahead of the vessel. The pilot must have a mental map of the river, remembering the location of every snag, sand bar, shallow and other danger, not only on clear days and nights, but also in the darkness, fog, sleet and snow. No danger must be considered. In fact, many of the steamboat disasters were due to sheer foolhardiness.—The Travel Magazine.

A FINE OLD ENGLISH RECIPE.

The roast beef of old England is presumably the finest in the world and has been celebrated in both song and story, but one seldom hears of the many other excellent ways in which English cooks prepare this meat. One of their most pleasing dishes is beefsteak stewed without the addition of water or any other fluid. To prepare this have 3 or 4 pounds of rump steak cut about an inch thick. Put one tablespoonful of butter in the frying pan and let it melt without browning. Wash the steak quickly in cold water, put it in the frying pan, cover closely and let it slowly become very hot. As soon as it is thoroughly heated add one teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of white pepper, then keep it just simmering (never allowing it to boil) until perfectly tender. It should be closely covered all the time. It will require about an hour and a half to cook it just right. When done place the steak on a heated platter, and add half a teaspoonful of walnut or tomato catsup to the gravy in the pan, let it get very hot and pour it over the steak. Sometimes a slice or two of onion or carrot are added to impart a delicate flavor to the steak, but it is quite delicious without.

Rushing Convent Plans.

It is expected that work will be started on the new St. Mary's convent some time during next month. The specifications have been prepared and are now being figured on by local contracts.

Foreign Meat in England.

Some English seem to think all meats coming in should be marked either "foreign" or "colonial" to show the buyer that he was not getting English meat. Every one of the chief joints would have to be stamped, and the exporter would have to do the stamping. Further, the butcher dealing in "foreign" as well as English meat must announce the fact on his shop front, so that his customers may know he deals in both foreign and English meat. Some of the farmers complain that much foreign meat is passed off as English to bring down their prices.

Burglar in Hard Luck.

A. Bristol (Eng.) burglar got more than he expected in his last expedition. It was stated in court that a Miss Sarah Williams saw the prisoner entering her bedroom one night, and, jumping out of bed, she rang for a companion and a servant. The three women tackled the burglar, giving him a sound thrashing, during which he howled for mercy. He was sent to prison for seven years.

Go Far Down for Coal.

No coal is mined in this country lower than a depth of 2,200 feet, while several English mines penetrate 3,500 feet down, and there are mines in Belgium 4,000 feet deep. Eight-inch seams of coal are mined commercially abroad, while few veins less than 14 inches thick are worked in this country.

"Sacred Music."

English people are trying to define "sacred music." A London divine says: "A man writes a waltz, and calls it "The Sailor's Return." But religious people will have nothing to do with it. It is 'secular music.' He sets it to a slower time and labels it 'Jonah's Return from the Belly of the Whale.' And that is oratorio."

Created a New Industry.

Necessity is the mother of invention. An out-of-work engineer in North London has set up a small steam boiler on a costermonger's barrow and invites the smoking public to submit their pipes to him for a thorough cleansing by steam injection, one penny being charged.

Great Commercial Asset Is Palm.

The oil palm is, perhaps, the greatest commercial asset in west Africa. On the palm the African has long depended for food, clothing, shelter, furniture, utensils, tools, weapons, ornaments, medicines, and intoxicating beverages.

City's Glory Departed.

The city of Wallsee, on the Danube in lower Austria, once famous and wealthy because of its millstone industry, has just seen its glory completely fade away through the closing of its last millstone concern.

Object in Light Shades.

Originally made merely for ornamentation, electric light shades now are designed along purely scientific lines to diffuse or reflect the light with the greatest economy.

Sharks Grow to Great Size.

Seventeen species of shark, some of them 25 feet in length, inhabit the far eastern seas, while the basking shark of the Indian ocean frequently attains a length of 50 feet.

Live in the Light.

Never do anything that involves secrecy or the want of candor, or it may lead to dark methods of inquiry by your neighbor.

Trolley Car Runs Amuck.

A trolley car left the tracks in Nashville, Tenn., and struck a line of telephone poles, laying 60 of them flat before ceasing its activity.

Costly Religious Feuds.

Liverpool's chief constable says that owing to the religious feuds the cost of policing the city last year was increased by more than $50,000.

Own Their Own Farm.

Eighty-seven in every hundred Canadian farmers own their own farms.

Pretty Names for Children.

Give your children pretty names; there are more than enough ugly ones already?

Light Superior to Ozone.

Experiments with the ultra-violet light appear to show that it is more effective for sterilizing liquids than ozone.

An Observation.

Working Hours on Steamships.

Steamship working hours are four on and eight off to the end of the voyage.

Fineness of Spider Web.

A web two and a quarter miles long has been taken from the body of a spider.

Exports of American Fruit.

The sale of American fruit abroad has amounted to about $16,000,000 annually for the last several years.

Decrease in London Crime.

Burglary and house breaking are on the decrease in London.

SIR ARTHUR PINERO'S "TRELAWNY OF THE WELLS" TO BE PRESENTED BY A TALENTED CAST OF PLAINFIELDERS

Performances Will Be Given in Aid of Muhlenberg Hospital.

Under the Direction of W. L. Saunders at the Plainfield Theatre.

That most delightful of all Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's plays, "Trelawny of the Wells," which will be presented by Charles Frohman in New York next season, will be produced at the Plainfield Theatre on Friday and Saturday nights, May 20 and 21. William L. Saunders, who consented to gather together Plainfield's most talented amateur thespians, for the noble purpose of enriching Muhlenberg Hospital's coffers, is directing the affair. He is being ably assisted by Mr. Patterson as coach, and Henry C. White as stage manager.

Such favorites as Colonel William R. Cock, Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, William N. Runyon and Charles H. Lyman are members of the cast which boasts of two professionals whose names are famous in the drama of two continents. One is no less a personage than Edward Sheldon, author of Salvation Nell and a score of equally successful plays. The other is Effingham Pinto, who made his reputation as a member of The Climax cast, which delighted New York, Chicago and London in turn. Pinto is a Plainfielder and Sheldon is no stranger in these parts. His grandfather owned an immense estate near Bernardsville somewhat less than a century ago.

Among the other particularly talented ones in the cast are Mrs. Serrell and Miss Louise Saunders. Mrs. Serrell has frequently appeared in amateur productions for charity's sake and her gifts as an entertainer are exceptional. While abroad a few summers ago just for amusement she took the examination for the Comedie Francais passing with high honors, though, of course, she took no part in any of the performances. Miss Saunders is not only a charming young actress but is a playright as well. Some of her work has been published by the famous house of French and the foreign rights have been acquired in England and France. This is the entire cast:

Tom Wrench, Judge William N. Runyon; Ferdinand Gadd, A. M. Abbott; James Telfer, W. L. Saunders; Augustus Colpoys, Laurens H. Van Buren; Rose Trelawny, Miss Louise Saunders; Avonio Bunn, Mrs. A. M. Abbott; Mrs. Telfer (Miss Violet), Mrs. Henry C. White; Imogen Parrott, of the Royal Olympic, Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell; O'Dwyer, Prompter at the Pantheon, Mr. W. T. Pelletier; Vice-Chancellor, Sir Wm. Grower, Kt., Charles H. Lyman; Arthur Gower, Effingham Pinto; Clara De Foenix, Mis Louise Curtis; Miss Trafalger Gower, Mrs. Harry L. McGee; Captain De Foenix, Clara's husband, Harry L. McGee; Mrs. Mossop, a landlady, Mrs. Laurens H. Van Buren; Mr. Ablett, a grocer, Hugh S. Jarvis; Charles, a butler, William R. Cock; Mr. Denzil, Mr. Van Wyck Brooks; Mr. Mortimer, Edward Sheldon; Mr. Huntston, William T. Glenney. Here are the scenes:

Act I.—Mr. and Mrs. Telfer's lodgings, at No. 2 Brydon Crescent, Clerkenwell, England. May.

Act II.—At Sir William Gower's, in Cavendish Square. June.

Act III.—Again in Brydon Crescent. December.

Act IV.—On the stage of the Pantheon Theatre. A few days later. Period—Somewhere in the early sixties.

Before returning a few weeks ago from London, where he appeared under the direction of Mr. Frohman in "The Climax," Effingham Pinto, who takes the part of Arthur Gower in "Thelawny of the Wells," had the good fortune to witness several rehearsals of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's celebrated play which opened its run there on April 5 and this is the criticism of the London Evening Standard and St. James' Gazette:

"I have an idea that "Trelawny of the 'Wells'" will be a classic—that it will be revived through the generations, and that each succeeding generation will like it better than the last. It is, first of all, a picture—legitimately exaggerated, but by no means a caricature—of two utterly different strata of society in the "Early Victorian" era; it has humor, sentiment and character. To see the crinoline in its habit as it lived, to have famous folk moving before us, thinly disguised, to laugh heartily at genuine comicality, and to appreciate a satire none the less keen because of its good temper, is to enjoy an entertainment without the necessity of numbing the intellect. And this is the experience we had at the Duke of York's Repertory Theatre last night. "Trelawny of the 'Wells'" has not 'aged' at all. It is as fresh as when first we saw it at the Court Theatre about twelve years ago. The audience last night appreciated it more highly than the audience then, and the audience five years hence will enjoy it more greatly still. Every year will add to its value, for the life it reproduces will be further off and the more different from our own.

"The rollicking, vulgar, good-hearted Bohemians, the actors and actresses of Bagnigge Wells Theatre—Sadler's Wells is meant of course—to Wrench, otherwise Robertson, who rejuvenated the stage, come before us. We hear of Phillips, which means Phelps; of Kean, which means Kean; and we see the tragedians, the comedians, the 'ingenues,' the romantic heroes of the 'early sixties.' Contrasted with them, with their lodgings in Clerkenwell, is the dull, respectable, opulent house in Cavendish Square, wheer live the Vice-Chancellor, Sir William Gower, and his sister, Miss Trafalgar Gower—born on an anniversary of Nelson's crowning victory—where it is 'out of place' for a young lady to sneeze more than twice, or for her betrothed, the son of the house, who is sent out to sleep during her visit, to act the 'troubadour' by gazing at her bedroom window from the other side of the street; where whist is a game of malevolent intensity, and where Dundreary whiskers are the pendants of faces as long as kites.

"In the last act—as good as any that has preceded it—we watch Tom Wrench's new play in rehearsal at the Pantheon Theatre. The old actors cannot find anything to 'get their teeth into' in the quiet, short, natural speeches—there is a grimness beneath the Pinero fun which cannot, however, deprive it of its comicality. The play ends brilliantly, and once again we thank Mr. Frohman for his Repertory Theatre. Such revivals as these make us very grateful for his enterprise."

FOWLER BREAKS TRUCE

His Attempt to Renew the Rules Fight Ends in Dismal Failure.

INSURGENTS ARE NOT READY.

Resolution Depriving Speaker of Committee Appointing Power Is Ruled Out Quickly.

Washington, April 26.—An ill advised and single handed attempt by Representative Fowler, of New Jersey, to bring about another battle over the rules of the House has proved a dismal failure, and the New Jersey Representative was unmistakably "sat upon" by the Democrats and by his insurgent coleagues. Contrary to the general understanding that there shall be no renewal of hostilities until the President's legislative program has been enacted, Mr. Fowler arose early in Wednesday's proceedings and offered what he said was a privileged resolution providing for the appointment of two committees on committees at the next session of oCngress. here was a meagre attendance at the time, but the news spread through the Capitol that war was about to be declared and the chamber promptly filled.

The clerk had hardly completed the reading of the Fowler resolution when Reprecentative Payne, of New York, made the point of order that it was not privileged under the rules. Representative Hardwick made the point of no quorum, after which the Speaker ruled that the resolution was not privileged.

It was at this point that Mr. Fowler expected his insurgent colleagues and the Democrats to join him in an attempt to overrule the decision of the chair. But the insurgent leaders surrounded the New Jersey Representative and advised him to withdraw the resolution, as they were not yet prepared to admit that a committee on commitees was necessary. The Democrats also made it clear that they would not support the resolution, so Mr. Fowler withdrew it and placed it in the bill basket to go to the Rules Committee.

Effingham Pinto.

When Mr. Fowler was recognized to speak on his resolution he announced that he did not wish it considered until May 2, but desired to have it referred to the Committee on Rules and to have it come up before the House as a privileged matter on the date mentioned.

The Speaker, while declaring that the resolution was not in order, said he was willing to hear arguments on the point. Mr. Fowler then said he would withdraw the resolution and "deposit it in the basket." With his resolution in his hand, he walked to the clerk's desk and deposited it in the basket. Derisive laughter from the regular Republicans greeted this action.

"Some forty minutes of the time of the House have been consumed at this stage of the session," shouted Speaker Cannon above the confusion, "and now the gentleman withdraws his resolution and says he puts it in the basket." The emphasis he put on the "says he" again provoked lauhgter, in which both Republicans and Democrats joined.

The Speaker had some difficulty in retoring order, and used his gavel vigorously. After several minutes of incessant hammering the excitement subsided.

The resolution provided that both the majority and the minority shall have a committee on committees, to be selected according to geographical limits. Afterward the insurgent leaders reiterated their determination to do all in their power to prevent a repetition of the rules fight until the colsing days of the session, when the motion to depose Speaker Cannon will be made.

A Fancy Initial.

An odd, quick method of working the thicker parts of an old English letter instead of padding and covering with satin is a modified buttonholing.

One side of the outline is buttonholed at regular spaces, the length of stitch being taken to opposite line. The other side of the letter is then worked, the buttonholing done so the spacing alternates.

This row has the stitches but half the length of the first, or to the middle of space to be covered.

Use a rather heavy cotton, coarser than for solid embroidery. But buttonholings may be alike, or one can be blue, the other white or two tones of a shade.

POINT OF VIEW

"Hello, Brackett!" the commuter said to the man who was taking the seat opposite him in the train. "What are you doing in this part of the world?"

"We're renting in your neighborhood now," said Brackett. "We've been up on the road for a year or so."

"Strange I haven't seen you," said the commuter. "I take the 7:50 every morning of my life, except Sundays."

"I take the 8:10 usually," said Brackett. "But this morning I am in a hurry."

"I thought you owned your own place over on the north side," said the commuter. "I understood you didn't believe in renting."

"I don't believe in renting now, either," said Brackett, grimly, "unless it's other people's property I rent. I'm never going to rent any of my own any more."

"What's the trouble? Burned out?"

"No, I sold out."

"Why, it isn't any time since you told me it was a great thing to own houses or flats and rent them. Great investment, big profits and all that sort of thing. What's the reason?"

"Everything's gone up, including taxes and repair bills," said Brackett. "But that wasn't why we wanted to get rid of the buildings. We sold in order to save my wife's life."

"I hadn't heard that she had been ill."

"She wasn't. It was her nerves. You see, she was home in the daytime and we had the misfortune to live in one of our own flat buildings."

"I should think that would be rather an advantage to a landlord."

"Well, it wasn't to the landlord's wife," Brackett laughed. "The doorbell rang from morning till night. The women would run in to complain about the hot water and the laundries. The children would stop on their way to school to say that the flat was cold or that the janitor couldn't be found. That was a funny thing, but, honestly, their prime grievance always was that the janitor did not stay in the building from morning till night."

"Some people are always afraid of fire or burglars."

"A few of the women were glad when he wasn't in the basement," said Brackett, "because they went on the supposition that I had hired an ex-convict for a janitor."

"I suppose he had his troubles?"

"He certainly did," said Brackett. "His experience in my building soured his disposition completely."

"It strikes me that you escaped most of the difficulties yourself."

"Indeed I did not," Brackett declared. "I paid the bills and settled claims. Have you any idea how many demands 12 families can make in a week?"

"I can imagine."

"No, you can't begin to imagine," said Brackett. "Why, they all wanted to be repapered every season, no matter how fresh the old paper was; they had to have newly varnished floors and half the window shades had to be new as well. Then there were endless plumbers' bills and the hall and stair carpets wore out so fast they made my hair stand on end.

"Nobody was ever satisfied with the apartment after he was once settled in it, as everybody's complaints plainly showed, but I noticed that the families seldom moved."

"That was a comfort, anyway."

"No, on the contrary, it wasn't," said Brackett. "After a tenant has been in a flat for a year he considers himself entitled to half your kingdom, and when he has stayed three years he is positively unbearable."

"I don't wonder you sold."

"Sold!" cried Brackett. "I'd have sold at a loss if the buyer had only known it. My wife has grown 20 years younger since we began to rent and I feel like a boy. Well, here's where I get off."

"Aren't you going all the way down town?"

"Not just yet," said Brackett, as he rose to leave. "I've got to stop here to see my landlord about repapering. Our walls are a perfect sight this spring and we must have new chandeliers in the two parlors. Our landlord is mighty close-fisted. Good-by."

Japanese Eating More Meat.

Meat eating is on the increase in Japan and for some time the Japanese government, under direct encouragement from the emperor, has been devoting attention to the improvement of Japanese cattle. The head of the cattle breeding department of the Japanese government, Mr. Hashimoto, is at present visiting England to make purchases of stock. According to Mr. Hashimoto, "the Japanese peasant does not eat much rice; it is too dear. Barley, vegetables and fish are his staple foods. The upper and middle classes, however, who have hitherto eaten large quantities of rice, are now slowly beginning to add meat to their dietary. Beef is the favorite dish. It is cut up small, boiled with a native bean sauce and vegetables and eaten with the hashi or chopsticks. The wholesale price of beef in Japan is about twelve cents a pound."

Success Assured.

"So you have an idea for a 'Don't Worry Club' that is bound to succeed!"

"Yes. Nobody will be eligible to membership in it except people with large investments and fixed incomes."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

On Saturday matinee and night, April 30, Mr. Thomas Whiffen will be seen at the Plainfield theatre in the new Jos. M. Gaites' production, "Three Twins," which may safely be called the comic opera success of the season. The piece was written by Charles Dickson, Otto Hauerback and Carl Hoschna, and a more entertaining and interesting comic opera has never been booked for this city. Mr. Whiffe is given great opportunity to display his peculiarly droll style of humor and his success has been unlimited. Mr. Gaites mounted the play elaborately, the cast is composed of many well known players and the chorus is pretty and vivacious, with the dancing sunbeams, the fairy phantoms, and the famous of all dancing chorus, the Yama Yama Girls, staged by Gus Sohlke.

RARITAN.

On Friday evening, April 29, the Christian Endeavor Society of the Third Reformed church will present two sketches in the chapel of the church. The sketches are entitled "Thank Goodness, the Table is Spread," and "The Dress Rehearsal."

Mrs. S. Manning Wyckoff, of Millstone, is entertaining her sister, Miss Anna Melick, of New Germantown.

Miss Mary Van Fleet, of East Millstone, has gone to spend the summer with friends at Tappan, N. Y.

Proctor's Strong Bill.

All love and reverence Abraham Lincoln for his strong character, goodness and readiness to help a friend in need, and Stephen Fitzgerald & Co., in a playlet, "The Welcome Guest," present a sketch at Proctor's theatre, that brings out these strong points. Mr. Fitzgerald portrays Lincoln in remarkably true fashion and the sketch is making a hit. A flying ballet is a novelty here and Nelson's Luminous Butterflies is a clever act. The dance tells a story of the butterfly. Larkin & Larkin are a merry pair, dispensing mirth and song and Torelly, the master harmonica player, teaches the boys a few tricks in playing. The pictures are always good.

SUPERSTITION EXISTS AMONG SOME PITCHERS

There is something more than superstition in the assertion that a big league pitcher always finds one or more teams that he nearly always defeats.

Just why this is a fact is unknown, but it is, nevertheless, true that some clubs, even if the line-up is frequently changed from year to year, have a hoodoo pitcher that they beat only by accident.

Take Harry Krause, the phenomenal young left-hander of the Athletics, Records show that Krause has a habit of beating about every team in the league, but he is particularly successful against Boston.

Last season Krause shut out Boston an five occasions, two of these performances coming in one series. This year Boston and the Athletics met for the first time last Friday, in the Hub, and Mack, with Krause's performances of last year in mind, picked the left-hander to pitch. The result was another shut-out triumph for this marvelous young left-hander.

Krause's complete mastery over Boston probably has no parallel in baseball, although there are other clubs which have their "goats."

For instance, Coveleskie, the former Phillie, can down New York if he can't beat any other team in the league. He put the Giants out of the pennant running in 1908 by beating them three times in five days, and has been as successful against the same club ever since.

When the Giants face the big Pole, Coveleskie can be depended upon to win, but it is unfortunate for him that he is not nearly so formidable against other clubs in the league.

Rucker, of Brooklyn, is another left-hander who is troublesome for the Giants, and rarely fails to win his game. So is Brown, of Chicago. Battling against Mathewson, the Giants' peer, Brown has won a number of notable victories.

Mathewson, however, has the Indian sign on a whole lot of teams, including the Phillies and Cincinnati. The Phillies were mighty glad that President Fogel and Manager Dooin obtained Bob Ewing, for the latter, when a member of the Cincinnati team, consistently defeated the Quakers.

Magee, of the Phillies, has gone on record as saying that Ewing is the hardest pitcher in the league for him to hit. He is mightly plased that he doesn't have to bat against Ewing for this year at least.

The Athletics have some hoodoos, notably Powell, of St. Louis, and Joss, of Cleveland. When the Mackmen defeat Joss they think it is worth two victories. Young, of Cleveland, has the singular habit of casting an extra-inning hoodoo on the Athletics.

Old Cy does not always beat the Mackmen, but when he walks to the box, the Athletic players always say, "Well, it's extra innings today." Waddell once beat Young in a twenty-inning game. Plank finds the Sox and Detroits easy foes, while Bender is also a Jennings batter.

Pittsburg players always detest the sight of Spade, of Cincinnati, and McIntire, now of Chicago, when they warm up just before a game. The champions have had little success against either man.

The Boston team of the National League, and the Washington team, of the American League, had the same trouble last year, only every opposing pitcher seemed to be their hoodoo. That was one of the reasons both teams finished in last place.

Braid and Embroidery.

Coarse cotton embroidery appears intermingled with many of the braided designs upon heavy linen frocks. Any little open space in the braiding may be thus filled in with solid work of a color matching either background or braid, and will add to the richness of the general effect.

ELKS ENCOUNTER HARD LUCK.

Johnny Campbell Leads Locals in the Individual Competition with a Score of 597—Tourney Ends on Saturday.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Baltimore, April 25.—Pin knights from Plainfield showed up well in the individual and two-man events of the National Bowling Association Tourney at the Garage here yesterday and some of them will bring home some of the prize money.

The Jerseyites rolled their individuals first with the 12 o'clock squad and Johnny Campbell was high man of the squad with 597, one missed spare preventing him from passing the 600 mark. Campbell's score landed him in twenty-first place in this event and will undoubtedly bring him a good share of the prize money.

Nash with 574, rolled consistently and with Schaub and Stout, who rolled 545 and 536 respectively, will also get some of the change.

In the two-man event the Plainfield boys went on with 5:10 p. m. squad.

Blatz and Stout with a total of 1,129, carried off high score in this squad and were it not for the splits Blatz met with in his first game, this team would have been flirting with the 1,200 mark.

Nash and Campbell with 1,091 and Laing and Matthews with 1,070 were next in order and both of these teams are likely to be awarded with a portion of the prize money. The scores:

Although scheduled to roll at 10:15 o'clock it was after midnight when the Plainfield teams got on the alleys for the five-man event.

The Plainfield B. C. five rolled a total of 2,684, which lands them in the money, while the Elks' five total was only 2,495. The Plainfield team inproved as they went along, rolling 847 in the first game, 891 in the second and 946 in the third.

The Elks' scores were all over the 800 mark, their totals being 804, 818 and 873. The scores:

CHAPTER XXVI.

On to Richmond.

Strangely enough, I was not disturbed that day. McKnight did not appear at all. I sat at my desk and transacted routine business all afternoon, working with feverish energy. Like a man on the verge of a critical illness or a hazardous journey, I cleared up my correspondence, paid bills until I had writer's cramp from signing checks, read over my will, and paid up my life insurance, made to the benefit of an elderly sister of my mother's.

I no longer dreaded arrest. After that morning in the station, I felt that anything would be a relief from the tension. I went home with perfect openness, courting the warrant that I knew was waiting, but I was not molested. The delay puzzled me. The early part of the evening was uneventful. I read until late, with occasional lapses, when my book lay at my elbow, and I smoked and thought. Mrs. Klopton closed the house with ostentatious caution, about eleven, and hung around waiting to enlarge on the outrageousness of the police search. I did not encourage her.

"One would think," she concluded pompously, one foot in the hall, "that you were something you oughtn't to be, Mr. Lawrence. They acted as though you had committed a crime."

"I'm not sure that I didn't, Mrs. Klopton," I said wearily. "Somebody did, and the general verdict seems to point my way."

She stared at me in speechless indignation. Then she flounced out. She came back once to say that the paper predicted cooler weather, and that she had put a blanket on my bed, but, to her disappointment, I refused to reopen the subject.

At half-past eleven McKnight and Hotchkiss came in. Richey has a habit of stopping his car in front of the house and honking until some one comes out. He has a code of signals with the horn, which I never remember. Two long and a short blast mean, I believe, "Send out a box of cigarettes," and six short blasts, which sound like a police call, mean "Can you lend me some money?" Tonight I knew something was up, for he got out and rang the door-bell like a Christian.

"By the Way, Mrs. Conway Dropped in the Office Yesterday, While you Were Away."

They came into the library, and Hotchkiss wiped his collar until it gleamed. McKnight was aggressively cheerful.

"Not pinched yet!" he exclaimed. "What do you think of that for luck! You always were a fortunate devil, Lawrence."

"Yes," I assented with some bitterness, "I hardly know how to contain myself for joy sometimes. I suppose you know"—to Hotchkiss—"that the police were here while we were at Cresson, and that they found the bag that I brought from the wreck?"

"Things are coming to a head," he said thoughtfully, "unless a little plan that I have in mind—" he hesitated.

"I hope so; I am pretty nearly desperate," I said, doggedly. "I've got a mental toothache, and the sooner it's pulled the better."

"Tut, tut," said McKnight, "think of the disgrace to the firm if its senior member goes up for life, or—" he twisted his handkerchief into a noose, and went through an elaborate pantomime.

"Although jail isn't so bad, anyhow," he finished, "there are fellows that get the habit and keep going back and going back." He looked at his watch, and I fancied his cheerfulness was strained. Hotchkiss was nervously fumbling my book.

"Did you ever read the Purloined Letter, Mr. Blakeley?" he inquired.

"Probably, years ago," I said. "Poe, isn't it?"

He was choked at my indifference. "It is a masterpiece," he said, with enthusiasm. "I re-read it to-day."

"And what happened?"

"Then I inspected the rooms in the house off Washington Circle. I—I made some discoveries, Mr. Blakeley. For one thing, our man there is left-handed." He looked around for our approval. "There was a small cushion on the dresser, and the scarf-pins in it had been stuck in with the left hand."

"Somebody may have twisted the cushion," I objected, but he looked hurt, and I desisted.

"There is only one discrepancy," he admitted, "but it troubles me. According to Mrs. Carter, at the farmhouse, our man wore gaudy pajamas, while I found here only the most severely plain night-shirts."

"Any buttons off?" McKnight inquired, looking again at his watch.

"The buttons were there," the amateur detective answered gravely, "but the buttonhole next the top one was torn through."

McKnight winked at me furtively.

"I am convinced of one thing," Hotchkiss went on, clearing his throat, "the papers are not in that room. Either he carries them with him, or he has sold them."

A sound on the street made both my visitors listen sharply. Whatever it was it passed on, however. I was growing curious and the restraint was telling on McKnight. He has no talent for secrecy. In the interval we discussed the strange occurrence at Cresson, which lost nothing by Hotchkiss' dry narration.

"And so," he concluded, "the woman in the Baltimore hospital is the wife of Henry Sullivan and the daughter of the man he murdered. No wonder he collapsed when he heard of the wreck."

"Joy, probably," McKnight put in. "Is that clock right, Lawrence? Never mind, it doesn't matter. By the way, Mrs. Conway dropped in the office yesterday, while you were away."

"What!" I sprang from my chair.

"Sure thing. Said she had heard great things of us, and wanted us to handle her case against the railroad."

"I would like to know what she is driving at," I reflected. "Is she trying to reach me through you?"

Richey's flippancy is often a cloak for deeper feeling. He dropped it now. "Yes," he said, "she's after the notes, of course. And I'll tell you I felt like a poltroon—whatever that may be—when I turned her down. She stood by the door with her face white, and told me contemptuously that I could save you from a murder charge and wouldn't do it. She made me feel like a cur. I was just as guilty as if I could have obliged her. She hinted that there were reasons and she laid my attitude to beastly motives."

"Nonsense," I said, as easily as I could. Hotchkiss had gone to the window. "She was excited. There are no 'reasons,' whatever, she means."

Richey put his hand on my shoulder. "We've been together too long to let any 'reasons' or 'unreasons' come between us, old man," he said, not very steadily.

Hotchkiss, who had been silent, here came forward in his most impressive manner. He put his hands under his coat-tails and coughed.

"Mr. Blakeley," he began, "by Mr. McKnight's advice we have arranged a little interview here to-night. If all has gone as I planned, Mr. Henry Pinckney Sullivan is by this time under arrest. Within a very few minutes—he will be here."

"I wanted to talk to him before he was locked up," Richey explained. "He's clever enough to be worth knowing, and, besides, I'm not so cocksure of his guilt as our friend the patch on the seat of government. No murderer worthy of the name needs six different motives for the same crime, beginning with robbery, and ending with an unpleasant father-in-law."

We were all silent for awhile. McKnight stationed himself at a window, and Hotchkiss paced the floor expectantly. "It's a great day for modern detective methods," he chirruped. "While the police have been guarding houses and standing with their mouths open waiting for clews to fall in and choke them, we have pieced together, bit by bit, a fabric—"

The door-bell rang, followed immediately by sounds of footsteps in the hall. McKnight threw the door open, and Hotchkiss, raised on his toes, flung out his arm in a gesture of superb eloquence.

"Behold—your man!" he declaimed.

Through the open doorway came a tall, blond fellow, clad in light gray, wearing tan shoes, and followed closely by an officer.

"I brought him here as you suggested, Mr. McKnight," said the constable.

But McKnight was doubled over the library table in silent convulsions of mirth, and I was almost as bad. Little Hotchkiss stood up, his important attitude finally changing to one of chagrin, while the blond man ceased to look angry, and became sheepish.

It was Stuart, our confidential clerk for the last half dozen years!

McKnight sat up and wiped his eyes.

"Stuart," he said sternly, "there are two very serious things we have learned about you. First, you jab your scarf-pins into your cushion with your left hand, which is most reprehensible; second, you wear—er—night-shirts, instead of pajamas. Worse than that, perhaps, we find that one of them has a buttonhole torn out at the neck."

Stuart was bewildered. He looked from McKnight to me, and then at the crestfallen Hotchkiss.

"I haven't any idea what it's all about," he said. "I was arrested as I reached my boarding-house to-night, after the theater, and brought directly here. I told the officer it was a mistake."

Poor Hotchkiss tried bravely to justify the fiasco.

"You can not deny," he contended, "that Mr. Andrew Bronson followed you to your rooms last Monday evening."

Stuart looked at us and flushed.

"No, I don't deny it," he said, "but there was nothing criminal about it, on my part, at least. Mr. Bronson has been trying to induce me to secure the forged notes for him. But I did not even know where they were."

"And you were not on the wrecked Washington Flier?" persisted Hotchkiss. But McKnight interfered.

"There is no use trying to put the other man's identity on Stuart, Mr. Hotchkiss," he protested. "He has been our confidential clerk for six years, and has not been away from the office a day for a year. I am afraid that the beautiful fabric we have pieced out of all these scraps is going to be a crazy quilt." His tone was facetious, but I could detect the undercurrent of real disappointment.

I paid the constable for his trouble, and he departed. Stuart, still indignant, left to go back to Washington Circle. He shook hands with McKnight and myself magnanimously, but he hurled a look of utter hatred at Hotchkiss, sunk crestfallen in his chair.

"As far as I can see," said McKnight dryly, "we're exactly as far along as we were the day we met at the Carter place. We're not a step nearer to finding our man."

"We have one thing that may be of value," I suggested. "He is the husband of a bronze-haired woman at Van Kirk's hospital, and it is just possible we may trace him through her. I hope we are not going to lose your valuable co-operation, Mr. Hotchkiss?" I asked.

He roused at that to feeble interest. "I—oh, of course not. If you still care to have me, I—I was wondering about—the man who just went out, Stuart, you say? I—told his landlady to-night that he wouldn't need the room again. I hope she hasn't rented it to somebody else."

We cheered him as best we could, and I suggested that we go to Baltimore the next day and try to find the real Sullivan through his wife. He left sometime after midnight, and Richey and I were alone.

He drew a chair near the lamp and lighted a cigarette, and for a time we were silent. I was in the shadow, and I sat back and watched him. It was not suprising, I thought, that she cared for him; women had always loved him, perhaps because he always loved them. There was no disloyalty in the thought; it was the lad's nature to give and crave affection. Only—I was different. I had never really cared about a girl before, and my life had been singularly loveless. I had fought a lonely battle always. Once before, in college, we had both laid ourselves and our callow devotions at the feet of the same girl. Her name was Dorothy—I had forgotten the rest—but I remembered the sequel. In a spirit of quixotic youth I had relinquished my claim in favor of Richey and had gone cheerfully on my way, elevated by my heroic sacrifice to a somber, white-hot martyrdom. As is often the case, McKnight's first words showed our parallel lines of thought.

"I say, Lollie," he asked, "do you remember Dorothy Browne? B-r-o-w-n-e! That was it!"

"Dorothy Browne?" I repeated. "Oh—why yes, I recall her now. Why?"

"Nothing," he said. "I was thinking about her. That's all. You remember you were crazy about her, and dropped back because she preferred me?"

"I got out," I said with dignity, "because you declared you would shoot yourself if she didn't go with you to something or other!"

"Oh, why yes, I recall now!" he mimicked. He tossed his cigarette in the general direction of the hearth and got up. We were both a little conscious, and he stood with his back to me, fingering a Japanese vase on the mantel.

"I was thinking," he began, turning the vase around, "that, if you feel pretty well again, and—and ready to take hold, that I should like to go away for a week or so. Things are fairly well cleaned up at the office."

"Do you mean—you are going to Richmond?" I asked, after a scarcely perceptible pause. He turned and faced me, with his hands thrust in his pockets.

"No. That's off, Lollie. The Seiberts are going for a week's cruise along the coast. I—the hot weather has played bob with me and the cruise means seven days' breeze and bridge."

I lighted a cigarette and offered him the box, but he refused. He was looking haggard and suddenly tired. I could not think of anything to say, and neither could he, evidently. The matter between us lay too deep for speech.

"How's Candida?" he asked.

"Martin says a month, and she will be all right." I returned, in the same tone. He picked up his hat, but he had something more to say. He blurted it out, finally, half way to the door.

"The Seiberts are not going for a couple of days," he said, "and if you want a day or so off to go down to Richmond yourself—"

"Perhaps I shall," I returned, as indifferently as I could. "Not going yet, are you?"

"Yes. It is late." He drew in his breath as if he had something more to say, but the impulse passed. "Well, good night," he said from the doorway.

LONELINESS OF IT

Pining, then, for the seclusion that dances attendance upon the dwellers in flats, we moved from the country to the city, gayly, happily and with never a thought of care, for, as I mentioned to Josephine and as Josephine mentioned to me, the quiet and peace mentioned to me.

"Augustus!"

"My love?"

"Augustus! I had two callers today. The strangest women!"

Thus my Josephine upon my return from the marts of trade in the evening of the first day after we had settled in our apartment and had begun to live the life that we desired, unseeing and unseen.

"The strangest women!" repeated she, my love, and her eyes were large with bright amaze and her lips quivered, whereby I knew that thereby hung a tale. "The first one rang the doorbell in the morning and asked me if I'd lend her a saucerful of salt. She staid an hour, Augustus, and she told me all."

"All, my love?"

"Augustus, she told me all. That is to say," added Josephine, thoughtfully, "all except herself. The second woman told me that."

"She, too, wished to borrow a saucerful of—"

"No, Augustus. She lives in the apartment above, and a handkerchief which was drying in her kitchen blew out of her window and lodged upon our fire escape. When I went for it I could not find it; it had blown somewhere else, but she said, 'Never mind it, then,' and she staid an hour, Augustus! I know what every one has for dinner.

"First floor front: roast beef, spinach and beets; first flood rear: beefsteak, onions and potatoes; second floor front: leg of lamb, mint sauce and broccoli; second floor rear—"

Whereat I stopped her with a gesture of absolute helpelessness, saying:

"Tell me—"

Whereat she stopped me, murmuring:

"Sh!"

Leaning then over, she whispered:

"Everyone can hear what everyone says. The walls are thin."

And reverting to the mystery of everyone's dinner, she whispered:

"I saw them on the dumb waiter."

And leaning over still further, her eyes large with the news she brought, she breathed:

"I smelled them cooking, too!"

And almost in a pantomime—

"The folks above have corned beef and cabbage! And they go in strong for cheese!"

Thus lived we in the privacy of our apartment.

"Augustus!"

"My love?"

"Augustus! The janitor and his helper were in our kitchen all day today. A pipe!"

Thus said my Josephine in the evening of the third day after our arrival into the life of a great city.

"A pipe?" I said.

"Leaked!" whispered she, my Josephine. "They had to put everything out into the hall, and even then they didn't finish it. They'll be back again to-morrow."

The next day was Saturday, and returning early home I helped to entertain the janitor and his assistant, holding their tools for them, handing them the oil can and performing other little offices, while on a swinging bridge in front of the house a painter brightened our woodwork, his gaze frankly and reflectively meeting ours whenever we chanced to look at him.

Thus flourished we.

But it was in the evening that we found our greatest measure of seclusion, rest and quiet. Of the distant elevated and the nearer surface cars I speak not, caring not; of the woman in the first floor rear (she who loves her beefsteak and her onions) I speak not, notwithstanding the passionately sad ballads she sings with such a quiver of voice that my love bursts into tears; of him on the sixth floor who breathes tender secrets into his flute I speak not; it is the conversations that rest us the most; intimate conversations, personal and private conversations, floating to us from the windows of the court or permeating through the walls, and hearing which Josephine sometimes looks at me and smiles, and sometimes looks at me with a new alarm, whispering imploringly:

"Augustus!"

To which I make my fond reply as ever:

"My love?"

"Augustus! Be careful to whom you speak in these apartments!"

And leaving her remark a mystery, she solved yet others.

"Augustus!"

"My precious one?"

"Augustus! Did you ever hear anything like these sparrows?"

Thus did she solve another mystery, for every morning had my sleep been broken by a chattering hitherto undetermined. Looking out, I saw a flock of sparrows swirling around the house and looking in at the windows. Bold and brazen they were, as big as hens almost, with fighting faces and domineering chirps, and when I looked out at them they looked back impudently, sharpening their beaks with savage emphasis on the fire escape and daring me to come out and be pecked.

"At least," I cried unto my love, "at least I shall be careful how I speak unto the sparrows!"

Settlement of Britain.

It is quite generally held by students of the ethnic migrations across Europe that the Irish are of a race older than the British, but that they settled in Britain first and then moved on to Ireland under the impulse of later swarms behind them. The settlement of Scotland is similarly explained as a crowding of the same race to the northward, upon which was later overlaid a backward migration from the north of Ireland to the nearest point of Scotland.

Sharpens the Wits.

Isn't it strange what baldness will lead a man to do? There is some sense in the action of that minister who resigned because he lost his thatch and thereby cleared the way for a succession of colds, but imagine the wonderful possibilities in the think tank of that man who had a spider's web tattooed on a dome that was as smooth as a tin roof!

Knew What She Wanted.

Customer—"My wife told me to stop in and buy her a bathing suit. What are your prices and sizes?" Dealer—"We have a very nice one here that I'm sure she will like. A fifty-dollar bill will just cover it." Customer—"That is just about the size she wants. How much is it?"—Springfield Union.

Prepared for Trouble.

"Doesn't it ever make you unhappy to see the way the papers refer to your husband as a grafter?" "It used to, but I don't let it bother me any more. He says he has things fixed so that he could stand any kind of an investigation."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Suggested Improvement.

Hospital Doctor—"Well, my man, and how did you like the port wine and egg I ordered you?" Patient—"Well, doctor, I should have liked it all right if only the port was as old as the egg and the egg was as new as the port."—M. A. P.

Proper Estimate of Values.

Life is spoiled because we fail to estimate values. We think too much of trifles. The sick woman toils away until death comes prematurely; she thought darning socks was more important to her children than her own life.

Less Exacting Circumstances.

"I wonder how George Washington managed to get through life without uttering a single falsehood." "Oh, conditions were easier in his day. The public did not expect a constant flow of epigrams from its celebrities."

Distinctions.

"Do you think that current literature is a dignified and desirable profession?" "It depends," replied Miss Cayenne, "on whether you are a penny-a-liner or a dollar-a-worder."—Washington Star.

Optimism: A Definition.

When the coal supply is low one member of the family stays in bed longer in the morning to keep warm and refuses to worry about it. That member is an optimist.—Atchison Globe.

Sir Walter's Knock.

"Ruff on the cloak," remarked Sir Walter Raleigh, as he spread down his velvet garment before Queen Elizabeth. He couldn't resist giving her this little wrap.—Lippincott's.

The Pity of It.

The blighting of love's young dream. Pathetic advertisement in an Auckland paper: "Wanted to sell, engagement ring (five rubies), almost new."—New Zealand Lance.

Cause of Discord.

She—"They do not live happily together?" He—"No. It's the eternal struggle between religion and society. He is as straight-backed as she is straight-front."—Puck.

Definition of Music.

Music is a kind of inarticulate unfathomable speech, which leads us to the edge of the infinite, and lets us for a moment gaze into that.—Carlyle.

Evening Thought.

To profess one thing and to do another occurs very often, especially with those who continually boast of their virtue.—T. Gautier.

Lacks Something.

Those who have tried say that beefsteak smothered in onions without the beefsteak somehow seems to lack something.

Chinese Fantasy.

Chinamen call the woman in the moon the queen of all fairies and fancy they can see her palace.

Revised Version.

A woman's crown of beauty is several other women's hair.—Atchison Globe.

Farmer Lives Longest.

The average life of a tradesman is about two-thirds that of a farmer.

World's Vital Statistics.

It is computed that 67 people die, and 70 are born every minute.

DEADLOCK OVER SEWERS

City and Borough Commissions Can Not Agree on the Terms.

AT PRELIMINARY DISCUSSION.

Plainfield Representatives Say They Consider City Should Bear 70 Per Cent. of the Burden.

The first conference of the Plain- and North Plainfield special commissions since the passage of the law permitting these municipalities to unite in establishing and maintaining a joint sewage disposal works, was held in the office of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, last night, and resulted in a dead-lock. Whether this will eventually be broken, remains to be seen. The dead-lock was as to the apportionment of the cost of building a plant, and both sides remained firm.

Both commissions had gone over the details prior to the conference and were prepared to submit a proposition. The borough commission, through William J. Buttfield, who acted as spokesman, proposed that Plainfield should pay seventy-five per cent of the cost of building the plant, and that North Plainfield's share should be twenty-five per cent. He based this percentage on the relative populations of the two municipalities.

The Plainfield commission proposed that the city should assume seventy per cent. of the cost and North Plainfield thirty per cent. This the borough commission was not willing to agree to, and as there was no immediate prospects of either side giving in an adjournment was taken subject to a call by the chairman of either commission.

The conference did not last very long. Some time was spent in going over the details of the proposition, reviewing the work of the old commissions, as well as the report compiled by Hering & Fuller, engineers, as to what could be done and the approximate cost of the work.

There was no question on the part of either commission as to the advisability or necessity of the two municipalities joining in the plan for one large disposal plant, in fact it was thought to be the only satisfactory solution to a difficult problem, but when it came to deciding on an apportionment of the expense, the two commissions could not arrive at a conclusion.

The Plainfield members thought that seventy per cent. would be a fair amount as the city's share, and that the borough commission should balk over an extra five per cent. was unexpected.

No doubt another conference will be held in the near future when another effort will be made to reach a conclusion. Of course, neither has any authority to act. The members are simply empowered to investigate and recommend to the governing bodies what they think would be fair and equitable and it is then up to the Common Council and the Borough Council to decide the matter. As has already been stated, the plan is to locate a large disposal works in the west end of North Plainfield township, options having been secured on land for that purpose.

Those present at last night's conference were Mayor C. J. Fisk, and Councilmen F. E. Mygatt, Duncan W. Taylor and C. C. Randolph, all of the third ward, representing Plainfield as a special mission; W. J. Buttfield, Joseph O. Osgood, Samuel St. John McCutchen, John P. Emmons, Edward Boyer and George T. Rogers, comprising the borough's special sewage commission.

Annual Meeting of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp.

The annual meeting of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp Association has been called for Thursday evening, April 28, at 8 o'clock, in the parlor of the Y. M. C. A. Full attendance is very much desired, not of the officers only, but of all those interested who have so kindly assisted in the past in various ways this worthy work, and any new friends we will welcome heartily. A full report of the bequest will be given, with an outline of the work contemplated; officers must be elected, so please come. J. D. Loizeaux, president. 4 26 3 ***

HOPE BOYS' MINSTRELSY

Under William N. Runyon's Direction, Burnt Cork Artists Give Fine Show.

GREETED BY A LARGE HOUSE.

Performances Again Tonight and Friday Night—Good Songs and Jokes and a Capital Sketch Make up Program.

Replete with catchy songs and snappy jokes the Hope Chapel minstrels scored a big hit before a crowded house last night. Hope's burnt cork artists have given first class performances in past years, but the 1910 troupe is the best ever; at least that was the verdict of all who witnessed the performance last night. The show will be continued tonight and on Friday night.

Thomas M. Muir starred in the performance with his topical song "In the Sweet Bye and Bye." The audience enjoyed the local hits in the different verses and Mr. Muir was obliged to respond to encores. In the verses the singer made special reference to the Council purchasing an auto for Fire Chief Doane and suggested that Overseer of the Poor Alex Ayers should also have a machine; a children's court, and the city's unpaid beer bill for the Charter Day celebration were well received. New verses will be added each night.

All of the end men, T. M. Muir, Bertram C. Firstbrook, George Rittenhouse, Frank Clark, Russell Randolph and William J. Firstbrook received volleys of applause as they did their turns. One of the marked features of the entertainment was the solos rendered by Bertram Tallamy, Frederick V. Tallamy and Harry S. Kartsher. This trio of artists was also obliged to respond to encores.

In the olio, Caruso and Lapiparo and Joseph Denny furnished a musical treat in the form of piano, mandolin and violin selections. The etertainment terminated with a humorous sketch entitled "The Telephone Office."

Benjamin Washington Evans made an excellent interlocutor and Judge William N. Runyon was found in his accustomed role as director and pianist. The program in detail follows: Part First—Prelude, Hard Times, the company; opening chorus, The Big Six, end men and company; end song, Alexander Jones, Russell Randolph; end song, What's the Matter with Father? Bertram C. Firstbrook; solo, When I Dream in the Gloaming of You, Bertram F. Tallamy; end song, That's a Plenty, Frank Clark; solo; Selected, Frederick V. Tallamy; end song, Poverty, George Rittenhouse; solo, The Garden of My Heart, Wm. Anderson; end song, Alabam, William Firstbrook; solo, The Garden of Roses, Harry S. Kartsher; topical song, In the Sweet Bye and Bye, Thomas M. Muir; closing chorus, Medley, the company.

Part Second—Caruso and Lapiparo, "Musical Favorites." Mr. Joseph Denny.

"The Telephone Office"—I. Will Do, Benjamin W. Evans; Jim, Harry Roberts; Miss I. M. Wise, William Anderson; Chewing Gum Nell, Frank Clark; Wild Bill, Russell Randolph; Mr. Vandergould, Harry S. Kartsher.

Mrs. E. R. Vail Fractures Hip.

Mrs. Edward R. Vail, mother of Charles E. Vail, of 26 Norwood avenue, is confined to her bed with a fractured hip, the result of a fall at her home on Saturday. She was found by members of the family and assisted to her room. Mrs. Vail is 89 years old and owing to her advanced age, the break is likely to be a long time mending. She is one of the oldest members of the Religious Society of Friends.

LEWIS FIGHTS EXTRADITION

Alleged Embezzler's Counsel, C. A. Marsh, Makes an Able Argument.

HEARING BEFORE GOVERNOR.

The Lawyers in Case to Submit Briefs and Fort Continues the Hearing for One Week.

Craig A. Marsh, counsel for Frederick Lewis, made an earnest and exhaustive argument before Attorney-General Wilson yesterday at Trenton against Governor Fort honoring the requisition of Governor Hughes, of New York, for the extradition of Lewis to New York city to face an indictment for embezzlement in connection with the affairs of an estate for which he was trustee thirty years ago. Lewis claims to be a resident of Newark, but was apprehended in this city on the allegation that he was a fugitive from justice.

Mr. Marsh insisted that Lewis is not a fugitive from justice. He declared if any crime had ever been committed in connecten with the estate it had occurred more than twenty years ago, and that under the New York law the statute of limitations had run against it for fifteen years before the indictment was found. The indictment found against Lewis, he said, cited April 1, 1909, as the date of the commission of the offense, but Mr. Marsh said that Lewis had not been in New York State for six months previous to this date, nor had he been there since.

Replying to the comment of the Attorney-General that an indictment must be considered presumptive evidence of a crime having been committed, Mr. Marsh insisted that the circumstances in this case justified the assertion the form of the law was being put to an insiduous use to work out the ulterior motives of those who have preferred the charges against Lewis. Mr. Marsh argued that it was the duty of the Governor of New Jersey to analyze the situation thoroughly and not accept merely the ex parte statements of residents of another State as against the rights and liberty of a citizen of New Jersey.

Assistant District Attorney Johnstone, of New York, urged that the Governor be advised to grant the requisition.

Before the hearing closed both lawyers agreed to submit briefs, and the case went over for a week.

PAPILLO IS REMANDED FOR FURTHER HEARING

Matteio Papillo, an Italian, who is accused of assaulting Maria Brascio and her brother, Nicolo, on April 18 last, was remanded for a further hearing by Judge Runyon this morning. It is alleged that Papilio stabbed a fellow countryman in the head after tearing the scalp of Maria Brascio and the face of her brother with a beer bottle on Sunday afternoon, April 18.

The case seems to be one of the ordinary drunken sprees in which the ugly temper of Papillo was given full sway. It is alleged that he carved a slice out of the head of Nicolo Brascio, and not being satisfied with that accomplishment tried to brain Brascio's sister with a bottle. There are others implicated in the assault, and one or two witnesses of the fracas are still missing. When they are all rounded up a preliminary hearing will be given the accused man by Judge Runyon.

PARENT TEACHER ASS'N. ELECTS MRS. PIERSON HEAD.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Irving School held a special meeting yesterday for the election of officers for the ensuing year. The following were chosen: President, Mrs. J. C. THIEVES GET $100 AND LEAVE NO CLUE

Thomas Timbo, the North avenue restaurateur, was robbed this morning between 3 and 5 o'clock of a sum exceeding a hundred dollars.

Mr. Timbo and Erwin Neighbor left the restaurant shortly after 3 this morning and on their return an hour later discovered that some one had rifled the cash register of the change it contained and had taken ten ten-ollar bills from a secret hiding place.

The police department have been busy all the morning investigating the robbery, but up to 2:45 no clue had been obtained. One suspect has been questioned, and another is expected to be incarcerated before night. Chief Kiely is exerting himself to the utmost in an endeavor to locate the thief.

THE HETFIELD WILL IS REFUSED PROBATION

Judge E. S. Atwater in the Union Court, today, refused to admit the will of the late Cora O. M. Hetfield to probate. The decision is a signal victory for Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., who represented the contesting relatives. Charles A. Trimble, who represented Joseph Gallagher, of Rahway, the sole beneficiary under the will, has given notice of appeal. The caveators were Scott Terry and William Hetfield.

Cora O. M. Hetfield, who left an estate valued at about $14,000, was a well-known resident of the county. He was a regular patron of Joseph Gallagher, a hotel keeped at Rahway, and when he died it was learned that he had left everything to the latter.

The will was contested on the ground that Hetfield was not mentally capable of making his will and that undue influence was used in the making of the instrument. The contest has been in the courts for several months and a great many witnesses were examined.

TILDEN EXECUTORS' ACCOUNTS APPROVED

At a special term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, judgment has, within the last few days, been entered in respect of the accounts and management of the estate of the late Hon. Samuel J. Tilden. The executors and trustees are Hon. John Bigelow and George W. Smith, of New York, and L. V. F. Randolph, of this city. The judgment finds, amongst other things: "That said John Bigelow, George W. Smith and Lewis V. F. Randolph, as trustees under said will, have fully accounted to the several beneficiaries of and under the several special trusts created by said will, as above set forth, for the income arising from the principle of said trust funds, and for all matters with respect to said trusts, as set forth in their said accounts;" and further: "That said executors and trustees are hereby released and discharged from all further liability and accountability in respect to the estate of the said Samuel J. Tilden, deceased, except that these plaintiffs are accountable in respect to the property remaining in their hands."

The property still in the hands of the executors and trustees consists of about seven hundred thousand dollars held, under numerous clauses of Governor Tilden's will, for the benefit of various relatives and friends; and also, about thirty thousand dollars which the executors are, by the sanction of the court, to use in the erection of a monument in New York. It is likely that this monument will be erected in Bryant Park.

No question has ever arisen as to the faithful and wise administration of Governor Tilden's estate, or of any part thereof. At the first "accounting," it was shown to amount to about seven millions of dollars; and most of this has been distributed to the heirs.

C. H. Leveridge a Benedict.

Charles H. Leveridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Leveridge, of Sherman avenue, and Miss Belle Harradon, of New York city, were married last night at the home of the bride's mother, in the presence of the relatives and a few intimate friends. The couple left, after a brief reception, for Bermuda, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will reside at 432 Spooner avenue, after June 1.

THIEF ENTERS CHURCHES

Makes a Small Haul at St. Stephen's But Gets Nothing at Grace.

DETECTED BY THE JANITOR.

Burglar Escaped After Being Found by Eugene Johnson Who Tried to Hold Him—Police Have Description.

A church thief, the most despicable kind of robber, operated in this city on Monday night and although he managed by a subterfuge to get away from Grace Episcopal church empty handed he contrived to steal some of the altar cloths and other small articles from St. Stephen's without being caught. A good description of the man has been obtained from Eugene Johnson, the janitor at Grace church, and it is thought likely that the man will be apprehended shortly.

On Monday evening just before 8 o'clock Johnson entered the cellar of Grace church while he was preparing the parish house for the meeting of the Men's Club and as he entered a man emerged from the toilet. Johnson asked the intruder what he was doing there and received the response that necessity drove him to shelter. It was raining hard and the story seemed plausible enough.

Johnson, however, was suspicious and endeavored to detain the stranger until some of the club members should arrive, but the fellow feigned illness and managed to escape through a window which Johnson opened to admit air. Johnson followed, chasing the suspicious man over fences and through the streets near the church. The janitor lost his man. He immediately telephoned to police headquarters and the reserves turned out to help in the search.

The thief disappeared only to turn up later at St Stephen's where he got in by forcing a window in the rear of the church with the result above noted. The thief is a slick article and the police would be happy if they could land him. The value of the goods stolen from St Stephen's is estimated at $50.

WHAT'S THE POPULATION OF CITY AND BOROUGH?

What's the population of Plainfield? What's the population of North Plainfield? The Daily Press will give $5.00 in gold to the man, woman or child living in Plainfield giving the nearest correct guess as to the city's population as announced in the forthcoming official census. The resident of North Plainfield who comes nearest to guessing its population five dollars will be given. It is not necessary to be a subscriber to this paper to qualify; in fact there are no conditions other than that you be a resident of the municipality of which you make a guess as to the population. All guesses must be made over the signature of the contestant; no attention will be paid to anonymous communications, following the regular policy of this paper.

The census enumerators are at work. Before the result of their labor is officially announced this contest will be closed and therefore, those who wish to make a guess should do so without delay.

TOWNSHIP IMPROVEMENT CLUB BEING ORGANIZED.

The promoters of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Society now in progress of organization, met at Watchung last night, and discussed plans for the future. The leaders in the movement include Dr. Richard Moldenke, Charles C. Wheeler and W. de La R. Anderson.

The society is being formed to promote the welfare of the township in general and take steps to protect its interests. As soon as the organization is completed a definite plan of action will be determined upon. Another meeting will be held in a short time when an opportunity will be given persons to identify themselves with the society.

From the Police Blotter.

Spencer Conway had his horse on exhibition this morning opposite police headquarters expecting that the case of the S. P. C. A. against him would be called. Owing to the absence of the veterinary who was to testify as to the animal's condition the hearing was postponed until Monday. Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen is the complainant.

PAINTERS MEET BOSSES

At Banquet in the Waldorf—Celebrate the Tenth Anniversary.

JAMES F. BUCKLE'S SPEECH.

Suggestion for "Painters' Day" Made by Howard Woolston, Organizer of Local No. 480.

Painters, paperhangers and their guests to the number of 100 gathered in the large dining room of the Waldorf last night at 9 o'clock to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the organization of Local No. 480 and the three hours which followed were possibly the pleasantest in the history of the union. The local had as its guests of honor James F. Buckle, Howard Woolston and Ernest P. De Veaux, A. F. L., and several out of town friends.

Mr. Buckle made the speech of the evening and an orchestra made up of members of the organization furnished some delightful music.

President John Donaldson was master of ceremonies and toastmaster and with him on the committee were Allen Anderson, Charles Trotter, J. B. Harsell, J. H. Cushman and John Emery. Besides Mr. Buckle and Mr. Woolston the following boss painters sat at the speaker's table: Clarence Mundy, G. Luthman, Thomas Ostrum, Clarence Waldren, James Buckley, Charles Conover, James Hanson and Mr. Martin, of Seeder and Martin.

No jollier or more happy a company of men could have been found anywhere than those who enjoyed the feast prepared by Mr. Windham. They gave the greatest attention to Mr. Buckle's address in which he told of his experiences and impressions during his recent trip around the world. Mr. Buckle never even remotely hinted that "human nature is the same the world over." In fact he confined himself to descriptions of foreign places and people and told some funny incidents of the long voyage. He said it was a trip which most painters do not get the chance to take, but he advised them all to keep away from India if they wanted to make a living in the Far East.

Speeches were also made by James Hansen, Charles Conover, Mr. Luthman and Howard Woolston, the last named complimented the men on their successful organization and work and suggested that a day be appointed each year for an outing when all the journeyman could lay off for the day and enjoy a little recreation and strengthen the bonds of fellowship which bind them together. A committee will be shortly be appointed to further Mr. Woolston's suggestion.

During the hour preceding Mr. Buckle's speech the orchestra played some popular airs and Ed. Townley rendered a cornet solo. John Vardon sang acceptably "If I Had a Thousand Lives to Live." And after the orchestra had played another selection the entire company arose and sang "Auld Lang Syne." The orchestra was composed of the following: John Emery, John Mitchell, Edward Townley, Samuel Waynesborough, E. S. Squires and Charles Christianson.

JOY RIDE CHAUFFEUR HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Conusellor J. Henry Crane appeared for William Banks, colored, this morning to defend him on the charge of joy riding brought by H. W. Stover, of West Sixth street. Citing a previous similar case Judge Runyon held Banks under $500 bail for the action of the grand jury. Bail will probably be furnished this afternoon.

Counsellor Crane moved for the dismissal of the case on technical grounds, but Judge Runyon overruled the motion and the above action was taken.

Why They Fell.

Working night and day was too great a tax on Elmer St. Clair and John McLeod, of Rock avenue and Third street, yesterday, so they both drank immoderately and were taken to the lockup for safekeeping. This morning Judge Runyon suspended sentence on both men. It was their first appearance in court on charges.

FIGHT SUNDAY BASEBALL

The Citizens of Scotch Plains Headed by Baptist Pastor Prepare for a War.

GAME CARDED FOR SUNDAY.

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews Declares That Village Will Not be Made a Sunday Amusement Park.

A warfare against Sunday baseball games is going to be waged by the Rev. Franklin Mathiews and other citizens in Scotch Plains. Posters announcing that the 'Plains nine, with Willie Deegan in the box, would open the season on next Sunday in a game with the Stirling A. C., of Brooklyn, has resulted in the anti-Sunday ball advocates rallying to the standard of Sabbath observance.

Pastor Mathiews, who is looked upon as the leader of the crusade, declared to a Daily Press reporter today that he is in the fight against Sunday ball playing, not in the role of a minister of the gospel, but as a plain citizen.

"The attitude of the best citizenship of the village," said Mr. Mathiews today, "is decidedly against Sunday ball games being played. Citizens of the village realize that it is their duty to block any attempt made to desecrate the Sabbath.

"Sunday baseball is not essential to good citizenship. It is a damage to any community, both morally and financially. It depreciates the value of real estate. The good citizens of Scotch Plains don't propose to have Scotch Plains established as a Sunday amusement park for Plainfield and other towns."

Mr. Mathiews inofrmed a Daily of the township committee are opposed to Sunday ball playing. Up to date no complaint has been registered with the Township Attorney Walter L. Hetfield, Jr. If such a complaint is forthcoming the likely procedure is to secure an injunction from the Supreme Court restraining the ball players from engaging in the contest. If a fight is instituted it is the belief that the ball club will submit peaceably to the dictates of the authorities.

Mr. Matheiws informed a Daily Press reporter that the campaign against Sunday ball playing will be carried on in the same manner as the fight was made against renewing licenses to two hotels in the village. "The matter is solely a moral issue," said Mr. Mathiews, "and I do not believe that the good citizenship of Scotch Plains will tolerate Sunday ball games."

In talking on the situation Mr. Mathiews complimented Township Attorney Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., for his zealous co-operation in the warfare against certain hotels which resulted in two places being closed. "I believe Mr. Hetfield will also do his duty when called on to prevent the contemplated Sunday ball games," added Mr. Mathiews.

An agitation was inaugurated last summer to stop Sunday playing by the church folk, but the fight was not pursued with vigor. According to Mr. Mathiews this was due to the fact that George Frentz, who was manager of the club at the time, requested the former not to push the fight, on the promise that the club would not make any effort to conduct Sunday games this season. Mr. Mathiews said he agreed to this truce. Since last season, however, Mr. Frentz removed from the village and the team is under new management.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The shirt waist dance, given by the Bachelors Club last night to their friends, was a success in every way, the hall being crowded with the friends of the club who were out enjoying the two-steps and waltz to the strains of Suhr's orchestra. The committee in charge deserve great credit for the tasty way in which the hall was trimmed, bunting and crepe paper being used with pretty effect. Guests were present from Plainfield, Westfield and the borough. The next of the club's dances will be held about the middle of May.

Alberts and Deegan, who are to do the battery work for the local ball team this season, should make a strong combination, when backed up by the stars Manager Alberts has selected for the infield and outside garden.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Nichol, who have been making their home in Plainfield during the past winter, will return to their home on Mountain avenue during the coming week.

The Game Society have liberated several lots of quail and English pheasants through the territory during the past two weeks. This is good news to the hunters.

Mr. and Mrs. David R. Clark, who have been visiting Mr. Clark's mother, Mrs. Benjamin Clark, of Prospect avenue, have returned to their home at Newark.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The spring meeting of the Ocean Grove Association will be held May 19.

Through a resolution the Camden City Medical Society favors a "sane Fourth," and calls upon the Council to take action at once.

In the Camden Circuit Court Monday a jury in the suit of Carl Workmeister against the Germania Brewing and Distilling Company of Egg Harbor, an action on contract, awarded the plaintiff $1,095.

Grace chapel, of the Presbyterian church, Beverly, which was almost destroyed by fire on Christmas night, and which has since remained untouched, will be rebuilt at a probable cost of $5,000.

The Plumsted Township Board of Education organized at New Egypt with these officers Monday: President, J. H. Groves; vice-president, Ernest Stevens; truant officer, William H. Thompson; district clerk, George W. Ivins.

Beverly Fire Company No. 1 has elected these officers: President, William A. Cortright; vice-presidents, William H. Currie, E. F. Woolston; treasurer, William H. Huff; financial secretary, Joseph L. Somon; recording secretary, John T. Morrell; foreman, E. N. Perkins.

The tenth anniversary of the First Methodist Protestant church, Millville, will be held Sunday, May 1, and continue eight days. Among the speakers will be Rev. De Witt C. Cobb, of Bridgeton; Rev. Frank B. Lane, Dr. Joseph Conwell and Rev. Dr. David H. King, of Vineland.

In Jersey City Monday Policeman Fred Kahar, of the Oakland Avenue Station, discovered smoke coming from a two-story frame building at 88 Lake street and after sounding the fire alarm rescued eight persons —five of them children between the ages of five and fifteen years. He broke into the grocery store of Henry Bengen, and finding Bengen asleep took him in his arms and carried him to the sidewalk. The damage is estimated at $8,000.

The friends of former Surrogate Samuel R. Fithian, of Bridgeton, are urging him to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for State Senator next fall. Mr. Fithian is the father of County Prosecutor J. Hampton Fithian, and is engaged in the oyster shipping business at Maurice River.

"Original day" was celebrated by the Alpha Literary and Musical Club of Bayonne Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. William Wauters, Avenue A and Thirty-fifth street. The principal guest was Mrs. Frank A. Patterson, president of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs. Every number on the program was original.

Police started a crusade against carrying concealed deadly weapons in Atlantic City Monday by arresting James Green, a negro, who was committed to jail for ninety days after a big revolver had been taken from him. The man said he had forgotten to remove the revolver from his pocket after he had carried it to his home. Recorder Keffer announced during the hearing that the next person caught carrying knives or revolvers would get the full limit of nine months in jail, and that excuses would not avail.

Harry Price, a brakeman on a shifting engine at the Roebling plant, near Kinkora, while trying to put sand on the wet rails with his foot at the works Monday, had the foot run over and so badly crushed that it was necessary to amputate it, leaving nothing but the heel. He is married and lives at Roebling.

Atlantic City's "navy," consisting of a score of lifeboats used for rescue on the beach during the summer, were hauled out of storage buildings Monday and are being placed in shape for the official opening of the bathing season. Several new boats have been ordered for use at new bathing stations to be located along the Chelsea beach and in the inlet district.

Annie Bower, of Trenton, is suffering from severe burns as a result of cleaning a stove with highly inflammable stove polish. The liquid exploded and the girl was burned on the face, hands, breast and arms. Her condition is serious.

United States Senator Smith, of Maryland, who has been in Atlantic City for more than a week recovering from a slight illness, was reported Monday as steadily improving.

The Gloucester City police Monday were asked by William Wiltsey, of 321 Morris street, to look for his seventeen-year-old daughter, Sarah E. Wiltsey, and Elizabeth Johnson, nineteen years, of 222 Warren street, who left their homes Saturday and have not been seen since.

Charles J. Clark, sixty-five years old, who many years ago was a member of No. 2 Truck Company, Jersey City, was found dead in bed in his boarding house at 158 Newark avenue, Monday.

While paying her taxes in City Collector Davis' office, in the city hall, Jersey City, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. G. Deluchi, of 624 Tonnele avenue, was seized with an attack of heart trouble.

Recorder Mara, of Bayonne, Monday fined Charles Engle, of 29 King avenue, Weehawken, and Henry B. Ottersen, of Summit Park, Hackensack, $5 each for exceeding the automobile speed limit on the boulevard. Engle was alleged to have been going forty-five miles an hour.

Members of City Council, Atlantic City, voted Monday night to save about $500,000 by building a closed concrete conduit to carry off surface water instead of the proposed six-foot-wide open drainage canal, called for by city beautiful plans. Leaders of councils, who feared a movement to force up price of land for the open canal, decided to construct the closed conduit on city streets toward mainland. Engineer T. Chalkley Hatton furnished figures to show that the closed drain can be built for $386,000, while the open canal would cost $91,000, with an estimated addition of $600,000 for purchase of land.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

A musical service will be held at the First M. E. church Sunday night under the direction of Organist J. E. Skiff.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will meet Friday night for Bible study.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society will meet at the First Presbyterian church, Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, will meet Friday afternoon at the church, when Miss Tapping, of the Y. W. C. A., will give a practical talk.

The ordination and installation of elders and deacons was an impressive part of the morning service at the First Presbyterian church, Sunday. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring was in charge of the service.

The Junior Endeavor Society of the Congregational church will enjoy a bicycle ride, Saturday morning, starting from the parsonage at 9 o'clock. Rev. C. L. Goodrich, the pastor, will chaperone the party.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered at the Crescent Avenue and First Presbyterian churches Sunday morning, with reception of new members. Preparatory services will be held this evening.

CASE AFTER CASE.

Plenty More Like This in Plainfield.

Scores of Plainfield people can tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills. Many a happy citizen makes a public statement of his experience. Here is a case of it. What better proof of merit can be had than such endorsement?

Robert Love, 44 Duer street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For eight or nine years I was a victim of kidney complaint. Every cold I contracted, settled in my kidneys and caused my back to ache severely. Any heavy lifting or much standing gave me additional pain. In the morning upon arising, my back was very lame and this did not disappear until I exercised for some time. I doctored and used several so called kidney cures, but it was only a waste of money. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended in the newspapers, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and began their use. When I had taken about half the contents of the box, my condition was greatly improved and before long the pain left me entirely. I wil always stand ready to speak a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

A Square Pot Keeps a Live Fire

Any BOYNTON dealer will gladly point out to you the great advantage of the BOYNTON "Square-Pot" Furnaces over the ordinary round fire pot kind. Being square at bottom, the BOYNTON fire pot has most grate surface. Being perpendicular at corners, it clears of ashes quickest and most thoroughly.

BOYNTON

"Square Pot" PATENTED

FURNACES

Always keep a live fire, and so give steady heat with slow and perfect combustion.

BOYNTON steam and hot water heaters (for residences, schools, factories, and stores) embody the same perfect principle—investigate them.

Gilmore, Y. M. C. A.'s third sacker is a coming star according to the opinion of Manager Listman. The local boy distinguished himself in Saturday's game against the Montclair A. C. by catching a liner from Underhill's bat that was going at the rate of 90 miles an hour, according to Mr. Listman's speed observations.

Manager McDonald, of Westfield, is booking games for Mt. Ararat. Two dates have been secured with the Y. M. C. A.

Managers Dorflinger and Listman expect to have a conference in a few days relative to arranging a five game series to decide the local championship. Such a series would no doubt create considerable rivalry and be a moneymaker for both clubs.

Manager Listman, of the Y. M. C. A., is looking ahead all right. While at Montclair on Saturday he booked a game with Montclair for next season.

JUDGING FROM the natured looks of some of the college balltossers in this part of the East, they can hardly be expected to show their best form until August.

BAN B. JACKSON and Thomas Clynch are the only baseball celebrities over-looked in Christy Mathew's new book, "Lost in the First." This entertaining story is now running serially in the Breakfast Food Weekly, of Battle Creek, Mich.

JUDGING FROM the number of "Jeffries-as-he-is-today" pictures, the boilermaker is afraid to make a move unless he is in front of the lens of a camera.

PLEASING RECIPROCITY, witness some of the brewing concerns spending some of the money that they get from baseball fans in publishing advertising cartoons in the newspapers.

INTEREST IN the Jeff-Johnson bout is unabated. In Vladivostock, eastern Russia, they are giving a ringside ticket with each barrel of vodka.

ROWARDENNAN, CAL., won't give the census man much of a battle, but it is getting more publicity in the newspapers than many other cities with 200,000 inhabitants or more.

AFTER A LONG FIGHT, everybody agreed to the present big league schedule excepting the weather man.

WHY DOESN'T a wise big league manager farm out a player to New Iberia, La., for further "seasoning." They ought to get the necessary tabasco there.

ADD SUMMARY—Condition of the weather, fickle; condition of the ground, level; condition of the players, petulant; condition of the umpires, distracting; condition of the crowd, wonderfully considerate. Time of game 1.45 Fahrenheit.

FIRST BREAK IN President Taft's cabinet. Mrs. Taft's social secretary has resigned.

THE FORUM.

The Music Festival.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The lovers of children and of music will be deeply interested in the Contest or Music Festival to be held in our High School on Thursday and Friday afternoons and Friday evening of this week. There will come to our city the flower of the childhood and youth of the county and surrounding towns, with their gift of song. This event has been anticipated with every delight by the hundeds of children who are coming, after months of preparation, to pour out their hearts in song.

The Music Supervisors of Union county have planned the affair to stimulate interest in the study of music in the Public Schools and also to show what we are doing and what it means to the children. While the prizes may be first in the thoughts of the children, they are not at all the object or end of the contest. Three unusually competent judges will listen to the various programs and their decisions will be awaited with interest, but the songs the children sing and the way they sing them will be, after all, the object lesson for which the contest was planned. The limited number of tickets allowed Plainfield will prevent many from hearing the contest, but the coming of so many children into our city for such a purpose will inspire and rejoice the hearts of the people. Pupils from Elizabeth, Somerville, New Brunswick, Bound Brook, Roselle, Roselle Park, Rahway, Westfield, and North Plainfield are coming, to join with us in a "Singing Festival," the primary schools on Thursday afternoon, grammar schools on Friday afternoon and high schools on Friday evening.

CHARLES L. LEWIS.
Supervisor of Music, Plainfield public schools.

Evil Effects of Tobacco.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Tobacco is perhaps the best loved and most seductive enemy we have. Some use the little cigarette because it is small, others the fragrant cigar while still others prefer the pipe, as it is supposed to withhold somewhat of the poisonous nicotine. Yet the cumlative effect of repeated small doses often proves more disastrous than much larger doses with time for partial recuperation between.

Dr. L. Pierce, consulting neurologist at the Manhattan State Hospitl, at the Craig Colony, for epilectics and at the Vanderbilt Clinic, Columbia University, says: "From experiments upon acute and chronic tobacco poisoning the following conclusions are drawn: First, it is proven definitely that tobacco in excess acts as a heart and blood-vessel poison; second, it acts upon the muscle and nerve structure of the body as an excitant and secondarily as a nerve depresser finally paralysing the central nerves and nerve endings of the heart and lungs; third, its chronic effect on the nerves is to induce a poisonous congestion of the brain, spinal cord and nerve endings in the heart, lungs, muscles and skin. It induces a sort of slow nerve degeneration in the nerve-endings."

With the nerves in this condition we need not wonder that there are so many cases of deafness and defective sight. That a pneumonia patient often has a harder struggle with his tobacco heart than with the original disease.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The best example of the progress of electrical stage illumination is found in Joseph H. Gaites' production of "Three Twins," which will be seen at Plainfield theatre Saturday, matinee and night, April 30. Features of this charming musical comedy are: a gigantic electrical swing, weighing three tons, the wonderful "Faceograph," in which the features of one of the pretty chorus girls is reproduced on a canvas cloud and in addition to these hundreds of small incandescent lamps. This is in distinct contrast to the first efforts at such a novelty, made many years ago by the late Dave Henderson, producer of Spectacles. He organized an "Electric Ballet" in which each girl bore several bulbs but the power came from large storage batteries, one of which burdened each dancer, having the appearance of a soldier's knapsack.

Col. William R. Cock, who will take the part of Charles, a butler, in Thelawny of the Wells, though it is not generally known, studied architecture in his youth. The other day he was standing on the sidewalk of Fifth avenue, New York, absorbed in admiration of the New York Public Library's classic Corinthian lines. A strange pedestrian stopped nearby and gazed in the same direction, silently rapt in contemplation of the fine building. After a few moments the stranger observed. "Beautiful, ain't it?"

"Magnificent!" said Mr. Cock.

"Too bad, though," remarked the stranger, "if they don't hurry up that style of arkitectur 'll change 'fore they git it done. Seems to me they invent new shapes for houses every few years."

And the observant stranger disappeared up the avenue in a cloud of linen duster.

Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA'S LAST CONCERT, MAY 10.

The Y. M. C. A. orchestra will give its last concert of the season on Tuesday night, May 10. This concert will also mark the completion of twenty-five years of service as an orchestra leader by Director M. A. Korff.

An attractive program is being prepared for the concert. The assisting artists will be Miss Grace Carroll, contralto, of the Crescent Avenue church choir; Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnson, violinist; Dr. Leonard Waldo, 'cello, and a male quartet from the Grace P. E. church choir.

On Tuesday evening, May 17, the members of the orchestra will be tendered a complimentary dinner by the association.

Funeral of Henry G. Bowers.

The funeral services of Henry G. Bowers were held yesterday afternoon from the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Bowers, 400 Franklin place, and were largely attended. There were representatives from the Cranford fire department, of which Mr. Bowers was the chief for several years, as well as many friends from this city. Rev. J. L. Hurlburt, former pastor of the First M. E. church, officiated, and the burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Ladies' Auxiliary Tea.

The Ladies' 9uxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., will hold a tea at the home of the president, Mrs. James S. Pray, 227 East Sixth street, Saturday afternoon, from 3 to 6 o'clock. Useful articles, cake and home-made candy will be for sale and a silver offering will be received at the door. The affair will be for the benefit of the fund to endow a bed at Muhlenberg Hospital.

MISSIONARY TALK AT A CHURCH TEA

Seventy-five women members of the Congregational church and their friends assembled yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Weeks, 825 West Seventh street, to celebrate the annual tea of the Women's Association and to hear something new about the foreign missionary field. Mrs. Henry Wade Hicks entertained the company with stories of her personal experiences among the Chinese, wearing the costumes of the different places about which she spoke. Some of the costumes were of the finest silk embroidery and were made by men and boys, a wonderful exhibition of beautiful handiwork hardly expected from members of the male sex.

Mrs. Hicks spoke on "Our Missionaries" and her short address interested the women greatly. Besides China, India and Turkey were represented in the costumes. Miss Katharine Phillips appeared in Indian costume and the Rice children, nine and ten years old, respectively, were attired in the costumes of the Indian bride and groom. After the stories of the far-away lands had been told refreshments were served and the self-denial envelopes were gathered. These represented a sum of nearly $80, which will be devoted to missionary work.

Tonight a preparatory service will be held looking toward the communion service of next Sunday morning.

PERSONAL.

J. P. Latre is detained at his home at Truell Court suffering with erysipelas.

John Counsel, of Lake Waukemau, N. C., is visiting A. I. Smalley, of the borough. The latter recently returned from the south, where he spent several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Runyon, who have been spending the past season in Florida, have returned to Plainfield much benefitted by the change.

Charles Butts, for many years an employee of the Potter Printing Press Works, but now a resident of Montreal, Canada, is spending a week in town. Mr. Butts likes Plainfield, but he declares that Montreal is also an ideal city.

Miss Addie Dietrich Returns.

Miss Addie Dietrich, of Sandford avenue, returned today from a seven months' trip around the world, much improved in health. Her last stopping place was Washington, where she visited points of interest. She spent some time in San Francisco, after returning with the round-the-world tourists, and Mr. and Mrs. James F. Buckle, of this city, who were in the same party, came right through after visiting their son in the West.

Summit's New Library.

A $25,000 library, the gift of Andrew Carnegie, is assured for Summit, it is declared, the library trustees, the Summit Common Council and the committee of the Board of Trade on beautification of that city having come to an understanding on site and other details of the building. The site for the library at Maple street and Morris avenue has been given by the Summit Home Land Company.

The offering at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning will be for the deacons' fund.

FORT NOT A CANDIDATE TO SUCCEED JOHN KEAN

It had been anticipated that Governor Fort would yesterday issue a statement declaring the position with reference to the United States Senatorship. The Governor said last week that he was not a candidate to succeed John Kean at Washington and that later on he might have something to say on the subject. But when he was pressed for a statement yesterday he declined to say anything further.

State House interest in the Senatorial fight was intensified yesterday by the freedom with which Assemblyman Nichols, of Cumberland, who is a candidate for the State Senatorship from that bailiwck this fall, talked concerning the candidacy of former Governor E. C. Stokes to succeed Senator Kean. Mr. Nichols, who is confident of his chance to be elected a State Senator, is still an avowed and a bitter opponent of Mr. Stokes.

Mr. Nichols declares that the petitions which are being circulated in Cumberland county in favor of Mr. Stokes, by which a vote of the people will be secured in relation to the latter's candidacy, are being numerously signed by Democrats as well as Republicans. Mr. Nichols says that he has not been asked to sign the Stokes petition and intimates that he would not do so under any circumstances. "If I am elected to the State Senate I shall go absolutely unpledged as to how I will vote for a United States Senator," said Mr. Nichols.

Mr. Nichols had a copy of the petition that is being circulated in favor of Mr. Stokes. It recites that Cumberland has not had a United States Senator for over seventy-five years, and referring to Mr. Stokes it says that he is "one of our own citizens who has lived among us since boyhood and has been favorably mentioned in this connection."

Plum for Hansel.

Governor Fort has approved of the selection of Charles Hansel, of Cranford, as the expert to supervise the continuance of the work of revaluation of the railroad property in New Jersey, as provided for by the Legislature by an appropriation of $100,000. As the work must be completed within one year, according to the law, Mr. Hansel will get down to his job without delay.

No Investigation.

Governor Fort yesterday afternoon sounded the death-knell to an official or semi-official investigation into the alleged orgies marking the closing hours of the Legislature. The affair is a closed incident so far as the Governor is concerned, as he frankly states that he does not intend to make any reply to the recent letter of Speaker of the House Ward.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS PLAN FOR THE DOLLAR DINNER

The West End Democratic Club at its meeting last night made final arrangements for the Dollar Dinner to be held at the Hotel Kensington on Wednesday night, May 18. A brilliant array of speakers will be the guests of the club, the list including State Senators George A. Silzer and Harry V. Osborne, Representative Eugene Kinkhead, Mayor Otto Wittpen, of Jersey City, and Assemblymen Mark A. Sullivan, Joseph Tumulty and President Job Lippincott of the State League of Democratic Clubs.

A report from the committee of arrangements showed that tickets are selling freely. It is the plan of the committee to limit the dinner to 100 plates. The club is growing and five new members were elected last night. It was also decided to conduct weekly trolley parties during the summer season.

SPEAKERS ANNOUNCED FOR THE N. P. A. BANQUET.

Preparations for the first banquet of the North Plainfield Association which will be given in Debele's auditorium tomorrow night are completed and the indications are that it will be one of the biggest functions of its kind in the history of the borough. The banquet committee will meet in the borough Council chambers tonight to prepare a diagram of seats. Members who hold tickets are requested to be on hand to report their sales.

The speakers will be George T. Hughes, of the New York Evening Mail, who is a resident of Watchung. Other speakers are Superintendent of Schools H. C. Krebs, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, former Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., and Mayor Newton B. Smalley. The toastmaster will be Samuel St. John McCutchen.

One of the attractive features of the banquet will be the music. An orchestra under the direction of Dr. J. Hervey Buchanon will furnish instrumental music and Horace J. Martin will have a corps of song artists on hand.

David J. Carney, chairman of the banquet committee, today reported a big demand for tickets. More than 150 borough citizens are expected to be present.

SOLVING A DIFFICULTY

"Yes, we've finished our housecleaning," said Mrs. Darby, with a sigh. "It was a great task and I'm glad it is over."

"We are waiting for the calcimineers," said the caller. "I certainly dread them."

"We didn't mind the decorators. It was our dining-room rug that gave us the most worry."

"Oh, did you get a new one? I knew you said you were planning to do so."

"Well, we did—several of them," laughed Mrs. Darby. "Though our old one was not actually in holes, the family felt that it was dingy and Louise said it was old fashioned. George called my attention to the antiquated pattern of the center and Mame declared that it never had been a pretty rug. My husband said there was an indescribable something about it that made it look as if it had come out of the ark. I never knew my family to feel so strongly about anything before as they did about getting rid of that rug."

"I always liked it so much," remarked the caller.

"So did we, at first. But you know how you get to feel about things you have had a long time. The family were united on the subject. Perhaps we should not have noticed it so much if we had not invested in new bookcases. New furniture always manages to make everything else one may have in the room look so shabby."

"Yes, doesn't it?"

"Louis spoke of it first, for she believes, in having things so new that the whole place smells of varnish."

"That's the way with young girls," said the caller.

"She said so much about it that I finally consented to get a new rug. I intended, of course, to choose it myself, but before I got around to it Louise went down and selected one. She came home so tired out that she had to go to bed, but she took satisfaction in telling me that the rug would be up the next day.

"It came when she was over at Olive's, so I had the old rug taken up and the new one put down in order that she might get the effect as soon as she came in. There was a good deal of red in the border—that turkey red which is so very abominable—but I made no comment. Louise remarked so many times that the rug was a bargain that I began to suspect she was not satisfied, but, of course, she would not acknowledge it.

"As soon as it began to get dark she turned on the electric light, remarking that she had first seen the rug by artificial light. I could not see that it was improved by the change. When my husband came home he gave the rug one look and said it was atrocious, whereat Louise melted into tears.

"As a result we had the store send for the rug. My husband said he would stop in somewhere and choose one himself. He did, but he forgot to ask the price. I acknowledge that his taste was good, but I thought $300 was a little steep."

"Well, I should think so," said the caller.

"Aunt Martha was so disturbed by all the rug controversy," Mrs. Darby went on, "that she selected a choice specimen in shades of brown. She made the salesman carry it from window to window to get the different lights on it before she had it sent out. It really was a handsome rug, but when it was laid down it clashed with everything. We couldn't make up our minds just what was wrong, but something jarred on all of us. Even Aunt Martha had to acknowledge that it wouldn't do. By this time all our relatives were interested in our search and so many persons sent up rugs for our approval that I am sure the stores grew suspicious of us. There are people who keep their floors covered with rugs sent up on approval, you know."

"I've heard so," said the caller.

"I didn't mind the relatives so much," Mrs. Darby said, "but I was a little provoked when that Mrs. Kadew from across the street ran in and offered to sell me her dining room rug. She said they were breaking up housekeeping and would be glad to give me a bargain. I thought if my affairs were so much neighborhood property as all that something would have to be done."

"Oh, Mrs. Kadew always knows everything that's happening," said the caller.

"So I made up my mind to take the matter into my own hands."

"I should think you would have done so at the beginning," said the caller. "I should have insisted on it."

"Yes, but when you have kept house as long as I have you won't," said Mrs. Darby. "When everybody is so sure that a thing is very simple the best way is just to let everybody try it."

"How did the affair come out?" asked the caller. "I see you have a very handsome new rug on the floor now."

"That was my choice," said Mrs. Darby. "I had it put down and let the family see it without their knowing where it came from. Every one of them was perfectly satisfied with my selection. I made sure of that before I told them the story of the rug."

"You always had exquisite taste," said the caller.

"Thank you. But the point is that this isn't a new rug. It's just the old one cleaned."

One Hundred Beautiful Silk Dresses

Messalines, Chiffons, Taffetas, Serges—Worth $16.50 to $23—To go at $8.75

We count ourselves lucky as you will count yourself lucky to get these beautiful sample dresses at a price enabling us to sell them so cheaply. It is one of those transactions that are made very rarely, usually only once in a season, when the makers dispose of their show dresses.

In this instance we secured a hundred or more sample dresses from one of the best makers we trade with—one who is not only original in his designs and most particular about the quality of the fabrics that enter into his dresses, and about the way in which they are put together.

Naturally these dresses are in the very best and latest styles; the waists are fully trimmed with hand embroidery or accordion plaited effects, with exquisite lace yokes, with or without high lace collars; sleeves are in long or three-quartered lengths; skirts in tunic, accordion or full plaited styles—all are handsome dresses, indeed, made of the nicest messalines, chiffons, taffetas and serges—dresses that would sell in the ordinary course of trade at $16.50 to $23.00, and they are all to go at the one price $8.75

No special orders taken. No mail or C. O. D. orders accepted. Second Floor.

The Man in Lower Ten

By Mary Roberts Rinehart
Author of The Circular Staircase

Illustrations by M. J. KETTNER

(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"Good night, old man."

The next moment the outer door slammed and I heard the engine of the Cannonball throbbing in the street. Then the quiet settled down around me again, and there in the lamplight I dreamed dreams. I was going to see her.

Suddenly the idea of being shut away, even temporarily, from so great and wonderful a world became intolerable. The possibility of arrest before I could get to Richmond was hideous, the night without end.

I made my escape the next morning through the stable back of the house, and then, by devious dark and winding ways, to the office. There, after a conference with Blobs, whose features fairly jerked with excitement, I double-locked the door of my private office and finished off some imperative work. By ten o'clock I was free, and for the twentieth time I consulted my train schedule. At five minutes after ten, with McKnight not yet in sight, Blobs knocked at the door, the double rap we had agreed upon, and on being admitted slipped in and quietly closed the door behind him. His eyes were glistening with excitement, and a purple dab of typewriter ink gave him a peculiarly villainous and stealthy expression.

"They're Here," He Said.

"They're here," he said, "two of 'em, and that crazy Stuart wasn't on, and said you were somewhere in the building."

A door slammed outside, followed by steps on the uncarpeted outer office.

"This way," said Blobs, in a husky undertone, and, darting into a lavatory, threw open a door that I had always supposed locked. Thence into a back hall piled high with boxes and past the presses of a bookbindery to the freight elevator.

Greatly to Blobs' disappointment, there was no pursuit. I was exhilarated but out of breath when we emerged into an alleyway, and the sharp daylight shone on Blobs' excited face.

"Great sport, isn't it?" I panted, dropping a dollar into his palm, inked to correspond with his face. "Regular walk-away in the hundred-yard dash."

"Gimme two dollars more and I'll drop 'em down the elevator shaft," he suggested ferociously. I left him there with his blood-thirsty schemes, and started for the station. I had a tendency to look behind me now and then, but I reached the station unnoticed. The afternoon was hot, the train rolled slowly along, stopping to pant at sweltering stations, from whose roofs the heat rose in waves. But I noticed these things objectively, not subjectively, for at the end of the journey was a girl with blue eyes and dark brown hair, hair that could—had I not seen it?—hang loose in bewitching tangles or be twisted into little coils of delight.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Sea, the Sand, the Stars.

I telephoned as soon as I reached my hotel, and I had not known how much I had hoped from seeing her until I learned that she was out of town. I hung up the receiver, almost dizzy with disappointment, and it was fully five minutes before I thought of calling up again and asking if she was within telephone reach. It seemed she was down on the bay staying with the Samuel Forbeses.

Sammy Forbes! It was a name to conjure with just then. In the old days at college I had rather flouted him, but now I was ready to take him to my heart. I remembered that he had always meant well, anyhow, and that he was explosively generous. I called him up.

"By the fumes of gasoline!" he said, when I told him who I was. "Blakeley, the Fount of Wisdom against Woman! Blakeley, the Great Unkissed! Welcome to our city!"

Whereupon he proceeded to urge me to come down to the Shack, and to say that I was an agreeable surprise, because four times in two hours youths had called up to ask if Alison West was stopping with him, and to suggest that they had a vacant day or two.

"Oh—Miss West!" I shouted politely. There was a buzzing on the line. "Is she there?"

Sam had no suspicions. Was not I in his mind always the Great Unkissed?—which sounds like the Great Unwashed and is even more of a reproach. He asked me down promptly, as I had hoped, and thrust aside my objections.

"Nonsense," he said. "Bring yourself. The lady that keeps my boarding-house is calling to me to insist. You remember Dorothy, don't you, Dorothy Browne? She says unless you have lost your figure you can wear my clothes all right. All you need here is a bathing suit for daytime and a dinner coat for evening."

"It sounds cool," I temporized. "If you are sure I won't put you out—very well, Sam, since you and your wife are good enough. I have a couple of days free. Give my love to Dorothy until I can do it myself."

Sam met me himself and drove me out to the Shack, which proved to be a substantial house overlooking the water. On the way he confided to me that lots of married men thought they were contented when they were merely resigned, but that it was the only life, and that Sam, junior, could swim like a duck. Incidentally, he said that Alison was his wife's cousin, their respective grandmothers having, at proper intervals, married the same man, and that Alison would lose her good looks if she was not careful.

"I say she's worried, and I stick to it," he said, as he threw the lines to a groom and prepared to get out. "You know her, and she's the kind of girl you think you can read like a book. But you can't; don't fool yourself. Take a good look at her at dinner, Blake; you won't lose your head like the other fellows—and then tell me what's wrong with her. We're mighty fond of Allie."

He went ponderously up the steps, for Sam had put on weight since I knew him. At the door he turned around. "Do you happen to know the MacLure's at Seal Harbor?" he asked irrelevantly, but Mrs. Sam came into the hall just then, both hands out to greet me, and, whatever Forbes had meant to say, he did not pick up the suoject again.

"We are having tea in here," Dorothy said gaily, indicating the door behind her. "Tea by courtesy, because I think tea is the only beverage that isn't represented. And then we must dress for this is hop night at the club."

"Which is as great a misnomer as the tea," Sam put in, ponderously struggling out of his linen driving coat. "It's bridge night, and the only hops are in the beer."

GOLF.

A recent report had it that Willie Smith, of late years connected with the Country Club of Mexico, and Alec Ross, of Brae Burn, were going to Europe this spring to compete in the open. Smith is already on the other. It seems that Donald Ross, instead of Alec, is going to make the trip. As Donald explains it, he intends to go over for a holiday, and while there will probably take part in the open. Smith is already in the other side, having received his usual leave of absence from the club in Mexico. Alec Ross and Jack Jolly are taking a long look ahead in planning to go over a year hence.

Competitive golf of the real brand will receive its season's start with the opening of the annual spring invitation tournament at the Country Club of Lakewood tomorrow. Many of the amateurs who lingered in the Southland for the last of the important tournaments there are back at the old stand and impatient for an opportunity to engage in friendly rivalry once more over the popular course among the pines. Since back in 1895 these Lakewood affairs have always attracted strong fields of golfers. Last fall Fred Herreshoff won, defeating Walter J. Travis in the final round. Herreshoff also eliminated Findlay S. Douglas in the semi-final stage, while in the other half of this round Travis disposed of Jerome D. Travers.

Competitions which will attract attention at the Fox Hills Golf Club this season include the annual invitation tournament on May 12, 13 and 14 and the Staten Island championship affair on June 16, 17 and 18. On April 30 the members will have a chance to qualify in five eights in a competition to be known as the Spring Club Tournament. Charles Presbrey offers a cup to the member who has the best selected score made up from the cards returned between April 30 and November 8. A gold medal will also be presented to the Fox-hillian who during the season in competition makes the lowest record, provided he breaks the present amateur competitive mark of 73.

Stelton Farmer a Suicide.

Thomas Kennedy, a Stelton farmer, committed suicide in the lavatory of Belloff's cafe in New Brunswick yesterday morning. Kennedy drank a quantity of carbolic acid and he was discovered in a dying condition. He was taken to St. Peter's hospital, where he died one hour after his arrival. Kennedy was 62 years of age.

For a Wagon Bridge.

The Board of Trade and merchants of Bayonne have started a movement to build a wagon traffic bridge over Newark Bay between Bayonne and Elizabethport. The boards of trade of Newark and Elizabeth have been urged to join in the movement, and it is planned to bring the matter before the next Legislature.

Mrs. G. M. Van Nest will be in charge of the meeting of the W. C. T. U. tomorrow afternoon.

MONTCLAIR HIGH BEATS LOCAL SCHOOL TEAM

Montclair High's crack ball nine defeated Plainfield High at the former place yesterday afternoon by a score of 4 to 3 in a fast played game. The local nine was accompanied on the trip by a big delegation of rooters. Although P. H. S. lost the local boys played hard and made the Montclarites exert themselves to win.

Terry was in the box for the locals and pitched fine ball. He had eight strikeouts to his credit to three by Wilson, the Montclair twirler. Calder starred at the bat for the Essex county nine with three bingles. The score:

ENTRIES COMING IN FOR 25-MILE BICYCLE RACE

More than one hundred entries, including all of the crack pedallers of the east, are expected for the twenty-five mile cycling Derby, which will be conducted on the Mountain avenue course on Decoration Day morning. The Plainfield Derby has succeeded the old Irvington-Millburn race and is sanctioned by the N. C. A.

Chief Promoter Jack Horner is new engaged in sending out entry blanks. Yesterday he received the names of a dozen riders who will compete in the event. The race will be one of the biggest sporting events on Decoration Day in the east and will bring an array of cyclists to town. Local riders will be well represented in the race.

TO GIVE PERFORMANCE FOR A LOCAL CHARITY

Unity Circle, of The King's Daughters, which was organized last winter by its president, Mrs. George A. Beaton, is planning to hold a fair and give an amateur theatrical performance at the Park Club, on May 13, for the benefit of the splendid work being carried on by the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

The play to be given is entitled "The Moonlight," and Effingham Pinto has kindly consented to take charge of it, in addition to having a part in the cast. The other talent will be local.

The members of the Circle include Mrs. George A. Beaton, Miss Marion Rocap, Miss Sylvia Curtis, Miss Alverda Holland, Miss Jean Wharton, Miss Gwendolyn Gough, Miss Alice Smith, Miss Barbara Fleming, Miss Marion Snyder, Miss Gertrude Bowlby, Miss Marguerite Bowlby, Miss Alice Rowland, Miss Marion Marsh, Miss Louise French, Miss Mary French, Miss Anna Yerkes, Miss Marguerite Blendinger, Miss Louise Andrews, Miss Dorothy Adams, Miss Helen Harrington and Miss Naomia Markley.

JAS. CAREY'S SLAYER ESCAPES FROM PRISON

John Aitken, alias "Sailor Jack" Allen, who on August 30, last year, stabbed to death James Carey, Jr., son of James Carey, assistant custodian of the Court House, Elizabeth, escaped from State Prison, at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. He was serving a twenty-year term for murder in the second degree. Up to last night the police of the State had no trace of the man. Aitken escaped by sawing the bars from a window in the engine room, where he was working as fireman.

The prosecutor's office in Elizabeth yesterday received a typewritten letter from Aitken, bearing the "O. K." of the State Warden, in which he informed the prosecutor that he intended applying for a pardon and alleging that he had stabbed Carey in self-defense. He asked the prosecutor to use his influence to get the pardon. This letter, it was learned, was used only as a "blind" to throw the warden off his guard and make Allen's escape easy.

The prison officials believe that Aitken has been planning his escape for weeks. The fact that he sawed the bars from the window and made the duplicate key leads to this conclusion. How Aitken managed to escape being seen is a problem which must be solved by the keepers.

HERE AND THERE.

Americans who visit France annually taking their automobiles with them will be interested to learn of the regulations governing international automobile traffic adopted in compliance with the convention signed in Paris last October between the Ambassadors of the great Powers, including the United States. The Journal Ojciel published the decree.

The decree does not concern the customs duties, but provides for the free transit over the frontiers of cars belonging to subjects of the various nations and which have obtained the right to carry the international plate of identity. The certificates given for each car and driver are good for one year and their validity will lapse only in case it is proved that the car or driver no longer comes up to the conditions required.

The car, to be allowed to cross the frontier, must bear in evidence a plate with a particular number and letter of nationality. The plate must be oblong in form, twelve inches high, the letters four inches high and one-quarter inch thick, painted in black on a white background. The letters for the respective countries are as follows:

G. B., Great Britain; F., France; D., Germany; U. S., United States; B., Belgium; G. R., Greece; H. O., Hungary; A., Austria; I., Italy; R., Russia; E., Spain; N. L., Netherlands; S. B., Sweden; P., Portgual; R. M., Roumania; S. B., Servia; M. N., Montenegro; C. H., Switzerland; M. C., Monaco.

The decree also provides for the erection of the proper international signals to indicate a frontier crossing, a custom house, a place where a stop is obligatory and for danger signals on certain roads. The conditions for passing the examination and for obtaining the certificate will be drawn up shortly by the Minister of Public Works.

Americans going to France this summer had better note the dimensions of the plates required and have them made at home. It will save delay and annoyance upon arrival at the French ports and frontier customs stations.

"Ikey," the pet maltese cat that makes its home at fire headquarters, is improving from an attack of mumps. Last week the life of the cat was disparired of, but under the care of "Dr." Bill Jaeger the feline has obtained a new lease of life.

WILL STOP SUNDAY BALL

Assistant Prosecutor Says He Will See That Law is Obeyed.

SCOTCH PLAINS IS EXCITED.

Crusade Against Descreation of Sabbath Started by Pastor—Manager Says Game Will Be Played.

"I will stop Sunday ball playing at Scotch Plains if it is necessary to call out a regiment of soldiers, if so instructed by the members of the Fanwood Township Committee," declared Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., this morning. Mr. Hetfield made this statement when he was informed that Manager Joe Alberts, of the Scotch Plains ball club had issued an announcement that the game scheduled for Sunday afternoon will be played despite the protests of the Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, and other citizens.

The township committee consists of Scott Terry, H. C. Meyer and Ira Walker. It is understood that Meyer and Walker oppose the playing of Sunday games while Terry is noncommital on the subject. Pressure is being brought on the last two-named members of the committee to prevent the first game to be played on Sunday and a hot time is expected.

In talking of the case to a Daily Press reporter this morning, Mr. Hetfield declared that the ball club by arranging the game for next Sunday had repudiated its promise made to the township committee last season. At that time, said Mr. Hetfield, Geo. Frentz, the manager of the club, appeared before the committee and informed the members that the club had gone to considerable expense in arranging the grounds, and asked to be permitted to continue playing for the remainder of the season on the understanding that no attempt would be made to play Sunday games this season.

Manager Joe Alberts announced last night that the club would play as scheduled on Sunday despite protests by Pastor Mathiews or anybody else. When Township Attorney Hetfield heard of this threat he declared:

"This fellow Alberts don't want to get too funny in his threat of defiance. The laws must be obeyed and I will devote all my efforts in urging the enforcement of them. The club went back on its promise made last season and now the citizens will have their inning."

According to reports the baseball people have completed a canvass of the residents in the vicinity of the ball grounds. While a majority of them favor Sunday ball there are others who oppose the game being played on that day and it is due to the objection of these citizens that efforts will be made to stop the game on Sunday.

ODD FELLOWS CELEBRATE NINETY-FIRST ANNIVERSARY

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., observed the ninety-first anniversary of the founding of Odd Fellowship in its rooms last night when it entertained District Deputy Grand Master John M. Shoe, and staff, of Lawrence Lodge, No. 6, of Perth Amboy. During the evening the third degree was conferred on nine candidates.

After the business, an adjournment was taken to the banquet rooms, where super was served and a social session enjoyed. There were brief informal speeches by the visiting officers, during which Queen City Lodge was highly complimented for its fine work, it being the banner lodge of District No. 10, with a membership of two hundred. Adam Jordan is the present noble grand and was in charge of the program. The committee which provided the entertainment comprised George Slorah, Albert Ford and Clark Bird.

There were about one hundred Odd Fellows present from Rahway, Elizabeth, Perth Amboy and this city, and all entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion, being proud of the record of the order during the ninety-one years of its existence.

SALAMONDI'S DOG CAN'T COUNT WHEELS' TURNS

Forgetting that his dog was not an automaton and that mere flesh cannot keep on going forever, Palmestro Salamoni, driver of a bakery wagon neglected the canine, which he had fastened by a chain to the rear axle of his wagon yesterday, and went joyfully on his rounds delivering his loaves.

The dog evidently objected to moving to the rythm of the circling wheels, or perhaps he became dizzy watching the irradiating spokes, in any event when some passersby on West Third street saw the poor brute lying under the wagon apparently dead, they called Patrolman James Saunders, who released the dog and resuscitated it by the roadside.

When arraigned this morning before Judge Runyon, Salamoni said that he had not believed it possible that so good a dog could have lost his stamina so quickly, and in fact, declared that he was not aware of the collapse. Judge Runyon believed the lad and discharged him.

Hindu Dancers at Proctors.

During the past two years Hindu dancing has been the craze in this country. At Proctor's theatre today The Istar dancers will introduce a new form of the celebrated East Indian dance. There are five members of the company, and the act is a spectacular one. Curtis Wilson & Co., present a comedy sketch, and "Innocents Abroad," a tale of the Latin quarter is the title of a chatty duolog offered by Wheeler Earl and Vera Curis. Harry Burgoyne, an English character singer and comedian, and Barr & Evans, in a comedy sketch, complete the bill.

SCHOOL MUSIC CONTEST

Union, Middlesex and Somerset County Children Show Splendid Talent.

IN HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM.

Judges of Today's Contest Select Winners—Music Supervisors Are Well Pleased.

The High School auditorium was filled to its capacity this afternoon when the first competition between pupils of the public schools of this city, Somerville, Roselle, Roselle Park, Westfield, Rahway, North Plainfield, New Brunswick, Elizabeth and Bound Brook began. This contest which will prove to be a splendid test of the music teaching system in vogue in this State, will probably result in making the contest an annual fixture and one which will inspire the pupils of the various schools to greater efforts and the sublimest of the arts.

This afternoon the judges of the concerted singing were chairman, C. Whitney Coombs, the well-known New York music critic; Miss Louise Westwood, of Newark, and Professor Leonard B. McWhood, of Columbia University, New York city.

The first number on the program in which the junior sections of the various schools participated included (a) 'There Were Four Lillies" and (b) a selection by Supervisor of Music, Charles L. Lewis. Following these two selections during which the competing pupils were applauded by their parents and other interested listeners, the Grammar section in solo work were heard. Those who competed in this work were Theresa Rosania, Somerville; Harold Griffiths, Westfield; Mary Aiten, New Brunswick; Isabelle Kohlhepp, New Brunswick; Catharine Vogel, Bound Brook; Clifton Hopf, Elizabeth; Clifford Ewing, Westfield; and Percival Ware, Elizabeth.

The song selected for the contest between the High School pupils which immediatedly followed the Grammar department solos, was Rubenstein's "Thou'rt Like Unto a Flower." This beautiful composition was sung with much expression and finesse by the following aspirants for honors: Misses Ruth Trost, Roselle; Florence Parks, Roselle; Hazel Hughes, New Brunswick; Elizabeth Beatty, Elizabeth; Marion Tice, Westfield; Florence VanSyckel, Somerville; Sarah P. Bross, Rahway, and Laura Bristol, Plainfield, and Allen McGuire of Westfield.

Interest in the individual work was noticeably greater than that evinced in the concerted work and in every instance the work of the singers was meritorious and showed that the training, whether in individual work or as solo singing, had been of the best. A conscientious regard for expression and enunciation characterized all the work, and as a matter of fact the judges were put to it to select the winners of the various sections.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock the program of contests will be continued. These will consist of two part and three part songs and sight reading. In the evening at 7.45 the orchestras of the different schools will play the concerted number, "Bridal Rose,' after which the boys, chor-

MINSTRELSY DRAWS ANOTHER BIG CROWD

Another large audience listened to the tuneful melodies and pointed jokes of the members of the William N. Runyon Association at their minstrel show in Hope chapel last night. None of the songs or jokes have lost anything by repetition and the artists were continually reapplauded.

As on Tuesday night the big hit of the show was scored by Tom Muir in his topical song, "The Sweet Bye and Bye." Ben Evans repeated his success as an interlocutor, and as usual Judge Runyon was inimitable in the role of conductor.

The show will be repeated tomorrow night and in the meantime some additional songs and topical verses will be prepared.

LOUIS MOREL, SR., DIES AGED SEVENTY-SIX YEARS

Louis Morel, Sr., for thirty-eight years a resident of Scotch Plains, died this morning. Death was due to the infirmities of old age. Mr. Morel was seventy-six years of age and was a native of France. He was well known at Scotch Plains and this vicinity where he was employed by several families of a landscape gardener.

Surviving the dead man is Louis Morel, Jr., who is engaged in the plumbing and heating business at Scotch Plains, and a son-in-law, John Warta, of Siegfried, Pa. Mr. Morel's wife died on March 4, 1909, and since that time he has been in feeble health.

The funeral services will be held on Saturday morning, at 9:30 o'clock from his late home and at 10:30 o'clock at St. Mary's church at Stony Hill.

JURY ACQUITS RICHARDSON OF CRUELTY CHARGE

It required a jury of "twelve good men and true" to decide that Robert I. Richardson was justified in shooting a bulldog which attacked his pair of setters on Sunday, March 27, and at the same time exonerated Mr. Richardson for protecting his property. Westfield was the scene of the trial and Judge Toucey presided. Walter L. Hetfield defended Mr. Richardson, while Paul Q. Olliver prosecuted the case for the S. P. C. A., represented by Mrs. Van Hoesen.

The story as told in court showed that Mr. Richardson, with his friends, Messrs. Dallas and Walker, had been accustomed to take their dogs out for an airing every Sunday morning, weather permitting, and that on Sunday, March 27, while passing the home of John Keegan, in Westfield, a bulldog owned by Mr. Keegan attacked the dogs held in leash by the three men. Ordinary persuasion augmented by sundry kicks and blows failed to make Keegan's dog release his hold on Mr. Richardson's pet with the result that Mr. Richardson, having in mind the recent mad dog scare and having prepared for an emergency, drew his revolver and fired a shot over the head of the belligeant bull. This had no effect and the next shot took effect in the anatomy of the bulldog so effectively that he released his hold and went whining home.

Dr. Butler, a veterinary of Westfield, extracted the bullet from Mr. Keegan's dog and the pugnacious animal is alive now and appears to be getting stronger every day.

The cruelty charge, in the light of recent happenings in Westfield could hardly be sustained and especially so when Mr. Keegan had warned others of the ferocious character of his dog. The excitement has not altogether disappeared in Westfield and strange dogs or those which exhibit unusual traits are liable to meet with summary treatment.

PINTO LEAVES THE CAST

Professional Engagement Forbids His Appearance in Trelawny of the Wells.

SHELDON TO BE THE STAR.

Author of "The Nigger" and "Salvation Nell" Will Appear as Mr. Mortimer in Hospital Benefit.

The talented cast that has been gathered for the production of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's most delightful play, Trelawny of the Wells, to be given at the Plainfield theatre on Friday and Saturday nights, May 20 and 21, for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital, will lose one of its members, Effingham Pinto. It was learned today that Mr. Pinto has been summoned by Joe Weber to join the cast for a revival of The Climax in New York and will be unable to appear here.

Edward Brewster Sheldon, who will appear as Mr. Mortimer, is a Plainfielder, and is the author of Salvation Nell, a drama of the slums, which has made a tremendous success with Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske in the title role. This came from his pen while a senior at Harvard. Two years after his graduation from that institution, Mr. Sheldon gained more fame as the playright of The Nigger, a drama of great power, which caused the widest comment when produced this season at the New Theatre. Sheldon is a native of this city and is the son of a Presbyterian minister who had a charge at Princeton and who was graduated from Princeton University. The elder Sheldon married the daughter of Justice Strong, of the Illinois Supreme court. The younger Sheldon was graduated from Harvard in 1908, and while at that seat of learning was president of the Harvard Advocate, a bi-monthly publication, and was an editor of the more serious Harvard Monthly. He was founder and first president of the Harvard Dramatic Club, which by its presentation of one act plays has excited so much the interest of professionals. He was also a member of the Hasty Pudding Club, a senior organization, the celebrated Signet, the O. K., and the Stylus clubs, the latter three being literary clubs. He is but twenty-four years of age.

Sheldon's chum at Harvard, Van-Wyck Brooks, son of the late Charles E. Brooks, of this city, is another member of the cast who has gained no mean reputation. A year after he left Harvard, Brooks, who entertered that institution after completing his course at John Leal's School, published in England "The Wing of the Puritans," a study of America in its social, political and economic aspects. He now spends his time contributing regularly essays of a critical and reflective nature for the Chicago Evening Post. He was editor in chief of the Plainfield High School Oracle and at Harvard he was an editor of the Advocate and a member of the Signet and Stylus clubs.

William L. Saunders, who has the benefit in charge said today that Mr. Pinto's successor would be announced in a day or two. Tickets are selling rapidly and therefore those who have not yet obtained seats should lose not time in doing so.

COUNSEL RETAINED FOR ALLEGED SLAYER

Robert Newton Crane has been retained as counsel for John V. Buckley, alias John Grant, the self-confessed murderer of Mrs. Frederick Coveley. The Mernagh family has interested itself in the prisoner's behalf and Mr. Crane was engaged by William Menagh, Jr., a former chum of the murderer, yesterday.

Lawyer Crane visited the prisoner in the county jail at Somerville this afternoon. Speaking on the case this noon, Mr. Crane declared:

"The prisoner will never see the electric chair. There'll be some surprises at the trial, something that the prosecution is least expecting." It is the general opinion that insanity will not be the defense of the prisoner.

Grant will have a speedy trial. Prosecutor Frederick A. Pope announced yesterday that the Grand Jury will convene on next Monday. If Grant is indicted the prisoner will be tried within two or three weeks. Sheriff Ross sent notices out to the jurymen this morning.

JUDGE ADMONISHES ITALIAN OFFENDERS

Matteo Papillo, Nicolo Brazio and his wife, Maria, and several other Italians, residents in the little colony at 39 Watchung avenue, will hereafter keep the peace or pay into the city $50 apiece.

The scrap which occurred on Sunday, April 17, seemed to involve everybody in the house and, as appeared this morning, was the result of an old feud between Papillo and the Brazios who happened to get the greatest number of wounds. Mrs. Brazio was cut on the head and her husband had contusions on his head and cuts on his face, while an innocent peacemaker, Frank Cuneo showed evidences of having been stabbed over the right eye.

Papillo declared, through an interpreter, that he had been threatened with a "Bigga da gun" in the hands of Nicolo Brazio, who was assisted by his wife, whose dextrous handling of a broomstick complicated the matter so that it was impossible to see anything but flying beer bottles and brooms.

Judge Runyon advised the excitable people to keep away from each other in the future and imposed fines of $50 in each case, suspending execution of the sentence pending further disturbances.

Police Court Note.

Mrs. Mary Daniels, of Fillmore avenue, notified the police yesterday afternoon that her son, Willie, ten years old, had disappeared taking with him a dollar which she had in her pocketbook. The boy failed to attend school yesterday morning and when he did not show himself in the afternoon Mrs. Daniels became alarmed. It was reported at 2:30 this afternoon that the youngster had been seen going towards his home and by this time it is expected he has felt his mother's displeasure.

HORSE SHOW JUNE 2, 3, 4

Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Judge Moore and J. W. Harriman Among Directors.

ORVILLE T. WARING PRESIDENT

The Officers Re-elected and Board Increased to Twenty Members—Who the New Ones Are.

Arrangements for the seventh annual horse show together with changes in the organization were effected at the annual meeting of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club last night. The board of directors was increased from twelve to twenty the new members elected being Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Judge William H. Moore, J. W. Harriman, Edward R. Finch, and Frederick K. Bull, all of New York; Charles W. Watson, Baltimore, and Joseph W. Ogden and Walter P. Bliss, of Morristown. Tonzo Sauvage, of Morristown, was chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of George A. Beaton, of this city, and Henry L. Finch in place of Daniel F. Ginna, both of this city. The other directors who continue in office are Orville T. Waring, of this city president; Robert A. Fairbairn, of Westfield, vice-president; Edwin S. Hooley, of North Plainfield, treasurer; William J. Buttfield, Charles J. Fisk, Charles W. McCutchen, George P. Mellick, Lewis E. Waring and S. A. Cruikshank, all of this city.

In former years the National Horse Show Association has always given Plainfield dates immediately following the Philadelphia exhibition, but inasmuch as the Quaker City has not been able to make a financial success of the horse show and has therefore abandoned it, the local club will have its seventh annual exhibition earlier this year. The dates announced last night are Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 2, 3 and 4. Cups will be offered by Vanderbilt, Thomas W. Lawson, Edwin S. Hooley and two score of others, and an effort will be made to equal the Madison Square show.

President Waring last night announced these judges for the exhibition: Saddle horses and ponies in harness—R. Lawrence Smith, Smithtown, L. I.; hunters and jumpers—Clarence F. Levin, Avon, N. Y., and Major J. G. Beresford, of London, England; harness horses and ponies in harness—James G. Marshall, New York, and Walter P. Bliss, Morristown; roadsters—George Willing, Philadelphia.

These are the officers of the club: President, Orville T. Waring; vice-president, Robert A. Fairbairn; treasurer, Edwin S. Hooley; secretary, Lewis G. Timpson; assistant secretary, Charles W. Smith. The veterinary judge is Dr. E. R. Voorhees, of Somerville. President Waring will announce his committees in a fortnight.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR N. P. A. BANQUET.

Owing to the great demand for tickets for the banquet of the North Plainfield Association to be held in Debele's auditorium tonight the committee stopped the sale this morning. As originally planned by the committee the plates will be limited to 150 persons.

D. J. Carney, chairman of the committee, announced today that the dinner will start promptly at 7 o'clock. William Debele and a corps of assistants decorated the hall this morning and everything is in readiness for the affair. De Molli will serve the dinner.

Birthday Party.

Augusta Berrien, daughter of Mrs. E. J. Berrien, celebrated the eleventh anniversary of her birthday yesterday, at her home, "The Plainfield," 515 Park avenue, and last night she entertained the Misses Florence and Ruth Small and Estes Small, of North Plainfield, at dinner. The guests presented the young hostess with beautiful bunches of lilacs, while a number of guests at the home remembered Miss Berrien with suitable gifts. Miss Berrien is a bright and entertaining young girl and very popular with all who are stopping at "The Plainfield." There were many pleasing features in connection with the celebration that combined to afford enjoyment for the party. After dinner the young folks played games and had a good time in general.

Grace M. E. Sociable.

The Epworth League of the Grace M. E. church has arranged to conduct a sociable tomorrow night which will be known as "An indoor college meet."

SOMERVILLE.

The St. John's parish house held a large audience Tuesday evening, when J. Granville Smith, of New York, gave a farewell concert. Mr. Smith has been organist of St. John's Episcopal church in Somerville for two years. Mr. Smith was assisted Tuesday evening by Mrs. James Stanley, bass; Miss Anita Marquisee, violinist. Mr. Smith resigned from St. John's church as organist. He will be succeeded by Mr. MacClymont.

A reception was tendered the Rev. and Mrs. M. D. Church by the members of the congregation of the Methodist church at the parsonage last evening.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist church met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Mason, on North Grove street.

The Fragment Circle of King's Daughters met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Hodge, on East High street.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton C. Porter, of New York, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Labaw, on Altamont place.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Brokaw have been visiting their son, J. E. Brokaw, and family, in Philadelphia.

Miss Reba Kirchner, of Plainfield, has been spending several days with Miss Bessie Talbot.

John Case, of Pennington, is visiting his brother, Philip Case, on West Cliff street.

Miss Arvilla Farlee, of Newark, has been visiting her grandfather, J. Stryker Conover.

RARITAN.

The cast of characters for the two short plays to be given in the Reformed chapel Friday evening will contain the following well-known amateurs: The Misses Virginia Beard, Pearl Coleman, Emma M. Johnson, Margaret Elliott, Ella Fennor, Cora V. Lane and Myrtle Lane, Arthur V. DeHart, Frederick W. DeHart, Marvin D. Myers and J. Harvey Wyckoff.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Manning, of Elizabeth, are guests of Mrs. William Honan, in Raritan.

John McWilliams has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Thomas Flynn, in Plainfield.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The Electric Light Company is replacing its old poles on Westfield avenue with new ones. Many of the old poles were showing signs of decay, having done service for a number of years.

Louis Morel, Sr., is seriously ill at his home on Park avenue. On account of his advanced age but little hope is entertained for his recovery.

George Baldwin, who has been making his home in Brooklyn during the past winter, has been visiting friends in town.

Frederick Hetrick ad family have removed from here to West Orange, where he expects to engage in the hotel business.

James Linday, who has been visiting Henry Demarest, of Front street, has returned to his home at Plainfield.

The monthly communion will be held Sunday at the close of the morning sermon at the Baptist church.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

An entertainment will be given in the school this afternoon for the benefit of the school library. The entertainment will be given by Philadelphia talent and will include the famous bird warblers and animal imitators besides singing, humorous impersonations and good music.

The new uniforms of the South Plainfield B. B. C. arrived yesterday. The uniforms were delayed. They should have gotten here in time for last Sunday's game.

Countly Superintendent A. Willis, of New Brunswick, visited the local schools yesterday.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

A prayer meeting will be held at the West End Tabernacle tonight at 8 o'clock after which a business meeting will be called.

The choir practice at Hope chapel will be omitted tomorrow night on account of the entertainment at the chapel, but will be held next week as usual.

The regular covenant meeting was held at the First Baptist church, last night. There will be communion and reception of members Sunday morning.

Miss Edna French will give a "Candle Talk" to the Junior Epworth League in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. All the boys and girls are invited.

Alexander Russell, of New York, the new organist at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will preside at the organ on Sunday for the first. He succeeds R. Laslett Smith, of Stamford, Conn., who recently resigned.

Among the delegates who have attended the meetings of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, holding its fortieth anniversary in the Baptist Temple, Brooklyn, this week, are Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, Mrs. J. B. Bonnell, Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Mrs James L. Manning, Mrs. George H. Robins, Miss Laura Runyon and Miss Ida Yerkes.

Rev. and Mrs. W. C. O'Donnell, of Newark, have been visiting Mrs. O'Donnell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Bowers, of Franklin place, having been called here by the death of Mrs. O'Donnell's brother, Henry G. Bowers.

MAY ANNOUNCE SNEAD DECISION THIS WEEK.

Trenton, April 28.—With the understanding that a decision might be given before the end of the week, Judge Lanning, of the United States Circuit Court, reserved decision Tuesday afternoon on the application of Mrs. Mary W. Snead for a writ of habeas corpus. Mrs. Snead is held by the Essex County authorities on a joint indictment with her two sisters, Mrs. Caroline B. Martin and Miss Virginia O. Wardlaw, for the murder of Ocey Wardlaw Snead.

Chandler W. Riker, one of counsel for Mrs. Snead, closed the argument on behalf of the petitioner. Judge Lanning, in reserving decision, said that, if possible, he would announce his ruling before the end of the week. He then signed an order remanding Mrs. Snead to the custody of Sheriff Harrigan, of Essex county.

MANUFACTURER'S NECK BROKEN BY FOLDING BED.

New York, April 28.—Groans from the apartment occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Willard Smith, in a boarding-house on West Thirty-sixth street, early yesterday, attracted the attention of other inmates. When they broke down the doors and entered they found the couple doubled up in their folding bed. Smith was dead, his neck having been broken, and Mrs. Smith nearly smothered. The bed had closed while they were asleep.

Smith was a wealthy wallpaper manufacturer, with a factory in Waterbury, Conn. He and Mrs. Smith arrived here two days ago and went to the boarding-house, which was their usual stopping place while in this city.

Another Kind of Scratch.

"I hope you'll take good care of your doll, dear!" said the mother. "Be careful and not scratch it."

"Why, mamma?"

"Because you'll spoil it if you scratch it."

'It won't spoil it to scratch its head, will it, mamma."—Exchange.

WANT LESLIE FORT FOR THE ASSEMBLY

Lakewood, April 28.—Republicans hereabouts who have been lined up in opposition to the Shinn-Thompson Berry machine are doing their utmost to prevail upon Leslie R. Fort, son and private secretary of Governor Fort, and editor of the Lakewood Times and Journal, to run for the Assembly nomination in Ocean county this fall. Assemblyman Benjamin H. Crosby has just been appointed confidential parole agent for the Rahway Reformatory, which means that he will not seek renomination, and the anti-machine men want Mr. Fort to go after the position. It is not likely Mr. Fort will consent.

Mr. Fort, in his position as editor, has been bitter in his criticism of the Shinn-Thompson-Berry crowd and had much to do with defeating Shinn for re-election to the State Senate several years ago. County Chairman Thompson has spoken favorably when questioned regarding the possibility of Mr. Fort being a candidate. Mr. Fort does not look with too much favor on the matter, however, and it is expected will have something to say soon in relation to the nomination.

NO JEWELED BELT FOR GOVERNOR FORT.

Trenton, April 28.—Governor Fort declined with thanks Tuesday afternoon to expend $12,000 for a gold and bejeweled belt at one time worn by an East Indian Rajah. The members of the Board of Pardons, who were with him when the offer was made, seem to feel the Executive was wise. So did others who saw and admired the waist ornament, but who couldn't seem to see its alleged value for dress purposes.

The Governor is well acquainted with the various New York millionaire members of the Stokes family, one of whom is John Phelps Stokes, the Socialist and settlement worker. Yesterday afternoon an emissary from this family brought the belt to the Executive to sell. It belonged to a wealthy New York woman, who had purchased it at one time in India. Recently she found she needed ready money and decided to sell the ornament. She conferred with the Stokeses and one of them suggested Governor Fort as a shining mark. Hence the presence of the belt at Trenton and the Governor's laughing refusal to buy.

The Stokes' emissary said the belt was worth $25,000, and than any pawnbroker would loan half that amount on it. The Governor couldn't exactly understand why it wasn't pawned then, and was willing to so express himself to the caller, but didn't. However, the belt looked pretty. It was made of a heavy metal that looked like gold and was studded with stones that looked like diamonds, rubies, emeralds and pearls. In the centre of the breast plate was a monstrous opal. It was attractive, but the Governor said he preferred suspenders.

TO ASK FETE BOARD'S CHAIRMAN TO RESIGN.

Asbury Park, April 28.—Announcement was made by Mayor Appleby today that he would ask for the resignation of Chairman Harold B. Ayers of the Carnival Commission, whom he appointed a few weeks ago, on the ground that Mr. Ayers had asked to have the appropriation increased, contrary to an understanding with the Mayor.

At a secret meeting of the Council Monday night, it was voted to make the $1,000 increase provided Mr. Ayres' commission took care of the Fourth of July celebration. The Mayor claims that under the last agreement Mr. Ayres' salary can be increased to any sum he desires and that the appropriation is in excess of the carnival necessities. It is believed that Mr. Ayres' resignation will be forthcoming and that the carnival commission will be reorganized.

FIRE TRUCK CRASH KILLS HORSE; HURTS MAN.

Elizabeth, April 28.—While rushing to an alarm of fire shortly before noon yesterday, Truck No. 2 of the Elizabeth Fire Department collided with a horse and delivery wagon belonging to Charles Max & Sons, of 520 Fourth avenue, Elizabeth. The horse, valued at $200, was killed and the wagon demolished. Mr. Max, who was driving, had his arm broken and was severely bruised about the body. He is fifty years old and was taken to the Elizabeth General Hospital.

The fire truck was slightly damaged. The accident happened at Fourth and Franklin street, Elizabeth.

HERE AND THERE.

Detroit may have a whistlers' club added to its other musical organizations if the ambitions of Mrs. Mary E. Thomas materialize.

Mrs. Thomas believes that there are musical possibilities in the whistle, the same as in the voice. Her idea is to form a choral society of whistlers, with a view to learning what can be done in concert work.

"Most persons who make an art of whistling go merely for bird imitations and grace notes," said Mrs. Thomas recently. "That is all right in itself, but I want to get whistlers who can learn to whistle by note and who can carry the different parts of a composition. I have had two or three persons together and carried such pieces as the hymn 'Sowing the Seed.' It works up prettily and shows that there are great possibilities for more pretentious pieces.

"I put an advertisement in the paper asking for whistlers and received some responses, but they are nearly all sopranos. I have one mezzo and am looking for an alto. I know there are many in the city who enjoy whistling and I think that with practice together we can form an organization that will be something distinctively new in the musical world."

Mrs. Thomas received her whistling training from the Rev. H. S. Riggs, a musician entertainer of Auburn, N. Y., and has given lessons to several young entertainers in Detroit.

NORTH PLAINFIELD A. C., A STRONG COMBINATION

The North Plainfield A. C. would like to arrange games with first class amateur teams having home grounds. The team have an open date this Saturday, April 30. This will be one of the leading teams of the city this season. The following players will be in the lineup: Eddie Conshay, Will Perry, Thomas Mullen, Clarence Pope, George Perry, Edward Harriman, John Jacot, Gus Fiering, Bert Trotter, Louis Marenghi, Fritz Allen, John Reinmann and Alex Perry.

The team will play the Dunellen F. C. at Dunellen Saturday, May 7. Address Clarence R. Pope, 173 North avenue.

GOLF.

Although the season has hardly begun, the rearranged course of the Inwood Country Club, at Far Rockaway, is in excellent condition. The eighteen-hole circuit now covers a playing length of 5,971 yards, and the par is 75. The third hole, a matter of a hundred yards, has been pronounced as one of the best one-shot holes to be found anywhere in the East. It is an island hole, or nearly so, as water surrounds the green on three sides.

Unless something unforseen happens the Rumson Country Club will have its new eighteen-hole course ready for play sometime in July. The club is the outgrowth of the Seabright Golf Club, the Rumson Polo Club, the Meadow Yacht Club and the Seabright Tennis Club. It owns its own property and any quantity of extra land in the vicinity of Seabright, with ample water frontage on the Shrewsbury.

The course will measure about 5,800 yards, the outjourney being more than 3,200 yards and the homeward journey a trifle more than 2,500 yards. There are three water hazards on the course, a pond to be crossed on the approach to the fourth, another going to the fifth and still another to the home hole. A wide sand hazard at the eighth hole furnishes a pleasant variety.

Arrangements have been completed by the Midland Golf Club, of Garden City, for an attractive competitive season to begin on May 7 and finish on Election Day. The officers of the club are: President, William J. Youngs; secretary, George H. Logan; treasurer, Henry L. Nichols; tournament committee, Henry L. Nichols, James L. Brumley and Jesse Richards, and handicap committee, Donald McKellar, Perry M. Rushmore and August Van Cortlandt, Jr.

Will Ride "Essex B."

Hugh Gormley, of Putnam avenue, will ride Peter Hauck's horse, "Essex B." in the steeplechase meet at Cedarhurst, L. I., on Saturday. No horses from Plainfield have been entered in the meet.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Jos. M. Gaites' wildfire musical comedy success, "Three Twins," is the attraction announced at the Plainfield theatre for Saturday matinee and night, April 30. Not in years has the press and the public given an attraction such unanimous endorsement as "Three Twins" has received and justly so, as it is the cleanest, neatest and daintiest musical comedy that has been produced in a decade. There is not a dull moment in the entire action of the play; it is full of mirth and music, pretty girls, funny comedians, clever dancers and wonderful electrical effects, the chief of which is the marvelous "faceograph" which is one of the most beautiful novelties ever seen. Two large baggage cars are required to carry the scenery and effects and the company, including the musicians, numbers over seventy people.

Westfield Author's Book.

J. William Loyd, of Westfield, has just published a book entitled "Life's Beautiful Battle," demonstrating throughout the beautifully printed volume "the battle of life is not an evil but a blessing." The critic says of it: "All the while the best thing about Mr. Loyd's 'Battle of Life' is the sweetness and poetic plausibility of it from page to page all the way through."

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., will hold a regular conclave on Monday night when arrangements for the Ascension Day services in May will be completed.

NEARLY GOES FREE THROUGH A MISTAKE.

Trenton, April 28.—Just a peep at the outside world was all that was allowed Antonio Sarionelli. After one short look from the open door of the prison, through which he expected to pass a free man, he was hustled back to prison life.

Sarionelli was one of the applicants to the Court of Pardons for parole, and his case was considered at Tuesday's session. He was sentenced from Paterson in September, 1906, to serve ten years for assault and battery and keeping a disorderly house. His application for parole was denied, but through an error the prison officials received official notice that Sarionelli had been paroled.

Yesterday a deputy keeper took to Sarionelli a suit of citizens' clothes, such as given discharged convicts. He donned them and felt the jingle of the coins with which the State was sending him out into the free world. He was marched to the "centre" and put through the usual examination and course of instruction as to his duties under his parole. Then the gates leading to the main corridor were swung open and he started toward the prison entrance. Here a deputy keeper swung wide the big iron door. Freedom was just a few steps ahead of Sarionelli.

"Where is that man going?" cried Headkeeper Osborne.

"He has been paroled," replied Parole Agent Madden.

"There is some mistake," said Keeper Osborne. "His parole application was refused."

Madden produced the parole papers, all properly made out and signed, but Keeper Osborne showed that a mistake had been made, and Sarionelli, weeping like a child, was led back to his cell.

Receives Two Bequests.

New Brunswick, April 28.—Two bequests were added to the permanent fund of the Hannah Hoyt Alumnae Association at its meeting yesterday, one in memeory of Mrs. Peter R. Letson, late of Stelton, by her husband, and the other in honor of Miss Rachiel Harrison, now living in New York.

ONE SHOT, MANY INJURED IN RIOT.

Newton, April 28.—In a fierce battle between Poles and Austrians at Franklin furnace late yesterday, one man was so badly injured that he may die and a score of others received cuts and bruises. The injured man is Andrew Shonick, who was shot through the abdomen. He is in the Franklin Furnace Hospital.

Late yesterday afternoon Jacob Ardovosky was arrested and taken to the hospital by Police Chief Matthew Buckley, where he was identified by the wounded man as the person who had fired the shot. There are eight men in the county jail here charged with participating in the fight. They were held by Justice of the Peace Clopper without bail for hearings Saturday.

The men are employed by the New Jersey Zinc Company, who operate mines at Franklin Furnace. For some time there has been bad blood between men of the two nationalities. Today the trouble assumed a serious aspect.

Policeman Joseph Brook, of Franklin Furnace, heard the reports of the shots, and, assisted by Frederick and Allen Southard, dispersed the warring factions. After the battle several knives and revolvers were found.

OLD BIBLE IS FOUND IN WASTE AT MISSION.

Among the things collected by one of the Rescue Mission workers in Elizabeth yesterday was a Holy Bible which was printed in 1684 and which is wonderfully well preserved. Superintendent Howard T. Schleckler has laid the Bible aside, believing that the owner will call for it.

The Bible is a leather-covered book, although the worn leather has been replaced by a substantial cloth. The title page contains the following inscription: "The Holy Bible, Containing the Old and New Testaments Newly Translated Out of the Original Tongues and With the Former Translations Diligently Compared and Revised, by His Majesty's Special Command. Appointed to be Read in the Churches. London. Printed by the Assigns of J. Bill, Thomas Newcomb and Harry Hills, printers to the King's Most Excellent Majesty." The date "1684" is printed beneath the names of the printers.

On the inside of the front cover of the Bible is the name of "Mary Bonnett," under which is the date "1874." It is believed that she is, or was, the last owner of the Bible.

Mr. Scheckler does not know where the old Bible was found but he feels sure that its owner will be desirous of recovering it and so he is holding it in his office for identification.

TO ATTEND CONVENTION OF CHIEFS OF POLICE

A delegation from Union county will sail on Thursday, May 5, for Savannah, en route for Birmingham, Ala., where two days later the International Association of Chiefs of Police will hold its annual convention. In the party will be Chief of Police George C. Tenney, Captain John A. Peters, County Detective John A. Galatian and Chief of Police Patrick S. Kiely, of this city.

The convention this year promises to be the biggest ever held by the association and many matters of importance to police departments all over the country will be discussed. Probably one of the best known men in the organization is Chief Kiely, of this city. On several occasions he has had the presidency of the organization offered to him and each time has modestly refused to accept the honor.

LEFT CITY'S MONEY.

Missing Newark Auditor Left Public Checks Made Payable to Him.

Several checks left behind by George Forman, the missing City Auditor of Newark, were discovered yesterday. The finding of the checks revealed that he had refrained from taking with him any of the city's money. Forman confined his irregularities to individuals who intrusted their money to him.

The checks found had been issued by the city to property owners, whose land had been taken for the opening of new streets in Newark. The amounts of these checks aggregate $4,000. They were all indorsed in blank by the persons to whose order they were drawn.

Forman could have converted these into cash as readily as he did the checks for $3,876, intrusted to him in connection with the settling of a dispute of the contractors on the building of the Cedar Grove reservoir for Newark.

Rice a la Creole.

Chop one large onion and a small slice of cooked ham fine; put in a saucepan with one tablespoonful of butter; add one cup of cooked rice, also one small can of tomatoes or a dozen fresh ones, one teaspoonful of salt and a little paprika. Mix well together and beat thoroughly. Then put in baking dish, cover with bread crumbs and put in the oven for fifteen minutes. The tomatoes should be stewed until thick before serving.

His Occupation.

"He had a good business, but he lost it."

"Did he drink?"

"No; but he was too busy being a prominent citizen to attend to anything else."

HERE AND THERE.

Twelve years ago yesterday—April 27, 1898—Plainfield was in a fever of excitement. Following President McKinley's call for volunteers at the outbreak of the war with Spain, Foster M. Voorhees, then Governor of the State, on that day designated the Third New Jersey, which included the men of the two local companies, as one of the three regiments of troops which the State was asked to present to the War Department for active service.

An epitaph placed on the tombstone of a man who died recently in Heligoland has given rise to an action for libel. The words that have given offence were chosen by the man's widow and were as follows: "Neglect shortened your life, my beloved, when you were in the prime of manhood."

The physician who attended the husband during his last illness, Dr. Woltersdorf, considers the inscription a reflection on himself and has taken proceedings against the widow. On her side she maintains that the accusation refers to herself alone and that she had it placed on the tomb as an everlasting record of her own negigence.

Mrs. Chapman, of Staines, near Windsor, England, who first handled a rifle less than four years ago, has won the world's record for women's rifle shooting with 99 points out of a possible 105 in a competition of the South London Rifle Club at Bisley. Quartermaster-Sergeant Fulton, winner of the Queen's prize in 1888, secured the same aggregate, but was beaten by Mrs. Chapman at 500 yards, although he scored 34 to her 32 at the longest range.

Mrs. Chapman, who has won over 100 prizes, uses the regulation Lee-Metford. She took up rifle shooting as a recreation much as other women play golf or croquet.

At Bisley last year, where she was the only woman shooting with the service rifle, her name appeared in the Alexandra Brownlow and civilian prize lists, her scores being 62 out of a possible 70, 30 out of 35 and 67 out of 70.

TINY HOT WATER BOTTLE.

A tiny hot water bottle for a baby is now a necessary part of its outfit.

Therefore it makes a good gift to a young mother.

To make the gift daintier looking include a cover. These covers can be bought, but are more attractive when made.

One is of flannel in blue, pink or white. It is cut large enough for the bag to slip in easily and is bound together with wash ribbons. A draw string is in the top and on one side the initial of the baby in a contrasting color.

The letters should not be too heavily padded, as they are not comfortable if pressed on delicate skin.

Another cover, newer than the embroidered flannel ones, is the crocheted one in heavy knitting silk. These covers are in blue and pink with inch-wide ribbons to draw them at the top.

Patterns for such bags can be found in books on crochet and form a pleasant change from the interminable silk neckties which most women keep on hand to fill odd minutes.

STARCH BATH FOR THE SKIN.

The starch bath is a good means of allaying itching or annoying skin eruptions.

Into a tub of say ten gallons of water drop one-half pound of starch.

The geletin bath serves a similar purpose. It is soothing to an irritated skin. The proportions are ten gallons of tepid water.

Two hundred and fifty grams of white French geletine.

The cold bath is a stimulant for those who are strong enough to react from it. The test is whether after the cold plunge the skin turns red. If it turns blue the vitality is not sufficient to bear such heroic treatment. Cold baths should not be taken without the advice of a competent physician.

The hot bath is soothing, but if taken too often is enervating. Once a week, under ordinary circumstances, is often enough for a hot bath.

The tepid bath, graduated to a cool bath by letting the cold water run in as the warm water runs off, is the best daily bath.

Lemonade.

There is nothing more satisfactory, usually, on hot days than a good lemonade or "lemon squash," as our British cousins call it. One lemon to one pint of water, very little sugar, is best. But when one is forty miles from a lemon, a harmless substitute may be made from citric acid, either pulverized or in crystals, using lemon extract for flavoring. No ill effect can result from using this acid in such small quantities as to make tart a cooling drink or pudding sauce, for it must be remembered that this is the acid found in the fruits of the citron family the lemon, the lime, orange, grape fruit, etc., and used in moderation is healthful.

Choice New Batistes.

For the dainty home-made frock there can be found no more attractive material than barred and printed batiste. It is of a delicate filminess; it is barred even as plaid muslins are, and then there are printed over its surface, regardless of the bars, the daintiest little old-fashioned bouquets in gay colors. Particularly suitable is this dainty stuff for the quite young girl, and altogether pretty enough for a short party frock. Ideal material for the garden party, which you will be considering before you know it.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

HOME FOR BAD BOYS TO BE AT FRENCHTOWN

Following the passage of the measure by the Legislature empowering the Union County Board of Freeholders to establish a home for "the no too bad boy" who should not be sent to Jamesburg, the juvenile delinquent committee from the board, comprising Freeholders Smith, Wilbur, Krausse, Gruener and Meisel, will go to Frenchtown on Monday to inspect a site for such a home. A plot of land has been deeded for the purpose and the board plans to erect a home at a cost not to exceed $2,000, which will accommodate about fifteen boys ranging in age from 10 to 14 years.

William Kight, who has had ten years' experience in this line of work, will be put in charge of the work when the home is completed. The institution will be for boys who are not considered real bad and by this method the freeholders hope to be the means of reforming such boys before they are permitted to reach the more advanced stage of iniquity.

The bridge committee of the board met at Elizabeth yesterday and completed details for finishing the new bridge over the Rahway river at Cranford. It has also been decided to make some improvements to the West End avenue bridge, which was left in an unsatisfactory condition.

The State road department has approved the road leading from Two Bridges to Clark township and Central avenue, Rahway, and the board will now advertise for bids for the building of this road.

It was reported that the W. H. Weldon Company is now putting the Berkeley Heights road, extending from Berkeley Heights to Summit, in good condition.

EXCISE BOARD'S ACTION AROUSES INDIGNATION.

Elizabeth, April 28.—After making a big stir in the direction of reform a month ago, when several saloon-keepers were "electrocuted," as Excise Commissioner Kling states it, Elizabeth's new Republican Board of Excise Tuesday night fell back into the old rut, and granted twenty-one new licenses, two of them being the most notorious dives in the city.

This unlooked-for action of the board has aroused a storm of indignation comment, and ugly reports are being freely circulated.

It is pointed out that some of the places closed by the board at the previous meeting were far superior in every way to several of those that obtained licenses Tuesday night, and that either spite work or favoritism was back of the action of the excise men. Only two license renewals were refused at the meeting, one of Frank Ratte, at 95 Bayway, and William Radewick, at 233 Second street, both in Elizabethport. This makes a total of seventeen licenses refused by the board since January 1.

Among the licenses granted last night was one to a saloon-keeper on Elizabeth avenue at Elizabethport who was indicted last fall by the Union County Grand Jury for conducting a disorderly house, plead guilty to the charge and was fined $250 by Judge Atwater in the Union County Court.

PETER DEGENRING DIES.

Was Father of Eleven Children and Well Known.

Elizabeth, Arpil 28.—Peter A. Degenring, forty years a resident of Elizabeth, and well known throughout the city, died after a lingering illness in his home, 1148 East Grand street, last night. He was 75 years old.

He is survived by a widow and eleven children. They are: Dr. Anne Degenring, of Melior, India; Dr. Adolph Degenring, Mrs. Johanne Geppelt, of La Salle, Ill.; Theodore Degenring, of Perth Amboy; Elise, Gustave, August, Ernest, Clara and Freida Degenring, all of this city.

FIVE DOLLARS IN GOLD FOR POPULATION GUESS

What's the population of Plainfield? What's the population of North Plainfield? The Daily Press will give $5.00 in gold to the man, woman or child living in Plainfield giving the nearest correct guess as to the city's population as announced in the forthcoming official census. To the resident of North Plainfield who comes nearest to guessing its population five dollars will be given. It is not necessary to be a subscriber to this paper to qualify; in fact there are no conditions other than that you be a resident of the municipality of which you make a guess as to the population. All guesses must be made over the signature of the contestant; no attention will be paid to anonymous communications, following the regular policy of this paper.

The census enumerators are at work. Before the result of their labor is officially announced this contest will be closed and therefore, those who wish to make a guess should do so without delay. Many guesses have been received. Send in yours now! Boys and girls here is a chance for you.

SEA GIRT DATES NOT FIXED.

Trenton, April 28.—The meeting of the State Military Board scheduled for yesterday, was called off yesterday by Adjutant-General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr. He said the meeting was for the purpose of considering a ten-day camp of the whole First Battalian at Sea Girt, the Second Battalian going to the army maneuvers in Pennsylvania. When the adjutant-general found from the office of the quartermaster-general that there was not enough money for a ten-day camp of the First Battalion the meeting to arrange for the Sea Girt encampment was abandoned.

It is thought likely that Governor Fort will issue the necessary order giving permission to the major-general to call for the Sea Girt camp. It is the province of Major-General Wanser to issue the command for the camp, the commander-in-chief giving the permissive order. It is still thought that the dates will be July 11 to July 30, but they have not been fixed.

An order giving General Sadler, Colonel Austen Colgate and Major William G. Schauffleur permission to be absent in Europe four weeks from next Saturday has not been issued. It is likely when it is issued that it will be a general order assigning Assistant Adjutant-General Frederick Gilkyson to act as the adjutant-general of New Jersey. Under the military law he is the only man who can be assigned to command.

COL. HINE TO ESCORT TAFT.

Will Command Regiment Guarding President in Passaic.

Orders have been issued to the field and staff of the Fifth Regiment Infantry to act as an escort to President Taft upon his visit to Passaic, Monday evening, May 9, when he will attend the annual dinner of the Passaic Board of Trade.

Colonel Edwin W. Hine will be in command. Company A, of Passaic City, will be in service to guard the President. Bergen county will be represented at the banquet by a number of public officials and citizens.

NEW JERSEY PLANS TO WELCOME G. A. R.

Plans for the participation of New Jersey in the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which will open at Atlantic City September 19, were discussed in the executive chamber yesterday by Governor Fort and a delegation consisting of Colonel Charles Boroughs, of Rutherford; Frank M. Sterrett, executive director of the National Encampment; J. Haynes Lippincott, treasurer of the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred of Atlantic City, and A. T. Bell, of Atlantic City. State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees and State Controller Henry J. West were also present.

It was partly at the request of Mr. Voorhees that the conference was called to determine the regulations which should govern the expenditure of $25,000 provided for in the bill of Senator Edmund Wilson, of Atlantic county, for the entertainment of visitors at the encampment. It was agreed that he Stae Treasurer should formulae rules for the expenditure of the money.

Of the appropriation it was decided that one third should be turned over to the Citizens' Committee forthwith, one third in July and one third in September.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Governor that the Sea Girt camp of the National Guard would be held from July 25 to August 6, this year, two weeks instead of five. The shortening of the period is due to the fact that the First Brigade will manoeuvre with the regular army at Gettysburg.

TESTS OF LOW TEMPERATURE.

Princeton's New Laboratory Gives First Scientific Results.

Princeton, N. J., April 28.—There have just been installed in Palmer Physical Laboratory, Princeton's new $500,000 structure, practically the only successful constant low temperature rooms in the world. They have already aided in obtaining results of great importance to physics and chemistry, and scientists generally predict that the new rooms will be of incalculable value in determining the truth of several theories which have not heretofore been sufficiently tested because of lack of proper facilities.

The temperature of the rooms can be kept at 7 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, with a variation of not more than one-tenth of a degree, which has never before been achieved. They are also kept entirely dry, and in damp weather no air is admitted except such as may be freed from all moisture and vapor by a special process used for this purpose. The walls are protected from outside influence by a six-inch layer of cork.

The rooms are cooled by means of the ordinary ammonia process, and while one room can be lowered from 32 degrees Fahrenheit, the freezing point, to a few degrees above zero and kept there, the other rooms can be lowered to 7 degrees below zero and maintained at that point.

FIND SAVING EXPENSIVE.

Library Trustees Will Have to Make Cellar Waterproof.

A spring has just been discovered in the cellar of the new Public Library building at Cranford. To save $100 the trustees voted not to make the cellar waterproof. There is now about two feet of water in the basement.

Tonight the trustees will receive bids for making the cellar waterproof. It is believed the work will cost about $200.

A Minute Lamp.

Physicians occasionally use, for the purpose of illuminating parts of the interior of the body, a delicate electric lamp, called the "pea lamp," because its little glass bulb resembles a small pea in size, being only one-quarter of an inch in diameter. It is, nevertheless, a complete incandescent lamp, having a carbon film one-eighth of an inch long and about one two-thousandths of an inch in diameter.

Charity.

How often it is difficult to be wisely charitable—to do good without multiplying the sources of evil. To give alms is nothing unless you give thought also. It is written, not "blessed is he that feedeth the poor," but "blessed is he that considereth the poor." A little thought; and a little kindness are often worth more than a great deal of money.—John Ruskin.

Frauds.

Some frauds succeed from the apparent candor, the open confidence, and the full blaze of ingenuousness that is thrown around them. The slightest mystery would excite suspicion and ruin all. Such stratagems may be compared to the stars; they are discoverable by darkness and hidden only by light.—Colton.

Unique System of Voting.

In Belgium and in Holland a black square with a white spot in its center is printed opposite the name of each candidate. The elector votes by blackening out as many of the white spots on his paper as he is entitled to; he then folds it and drops it into the box.

So Look Out.

Just because the sentimental girl looks rapturously up at her lover and calls him "My king!" during their engagement, he mustn't be surprised if she expects him to sift the ashes, and wipe the dishes, and bring up the coal, after they are married.

Fortune's Opportunities.

There is a supreme moment in your life when, by a bold stroke, you may change it all. There is a day when you stand where the road forks; one way leads up to the heights, the other runs through dust and strife to a miserable grave.

Appropriate.

An old darky, plodding along a country road with a frazzled looking mule, was asked what the mule's name was. "I calls him Trust," he replied, "becuz he kin take mo' abuse an' pay less attention to it dan any animal dey is."

Uncomplimentary.

Deacon Berry—"You remember the words of St. Paul in his defense before Agrippa?" Miss Stalemate—"No, deacon, I do not. St. Paul, you know, was before my time." Deacon Berry—"You surprise me."

The Judge's Interruptions.

Sir John Bigham complained to Lord Watson that he interrupted counsel too much; and the reply was: "Eh! man, you should never complain of that, for I never interrupt a fool."—Saturday Review.

The New Disease.

"Telephone nerve" is a new complaint. Those who run in to a neighbor's to call up somebody without expense are the real cases, though the doctors don't include them.—Boston Herald.

Voice of the Pessimist.

"Do you believe," queried the fair widow, "that universal peace will ever be established?" "Not unless people quit getting married!" growled the old bachelor.—Chicago Daily News.

Cynical.

"Why does that dog of yours always howl when he sees me?" "Because, my dear fellow, he's rude enough to express what other people feel."—Baltimore American.

Too Many of Them.

Nobody can read the mystic verses in the magazines without thinking that the price of poets' licenses ought to be increased.—Somerville Journal.

The Usual Reason.

The Minister—"Why did you leave the straight and narrow path?" The Chauffeur—"It was due to a faulty steering gear."—Brooklyn Life.

Woman.

Every time a woman hears of a widower who has taken a second wife she treats her husband a little meaner.—Atchison Globe.

Uncle Ezra Says:

"It's a purty good man who is willin' to hide his light under a bushel so's it won't hurt his neighbor's eyesight."

The Past.

I was not born to understanding. I loved the past and questioned it earnestly.—Confucius.

Natural Leaders.

Those who can command themselves command others.—Hazlitt.

Foreign Waiters in London.

There are said to be 130,000 foreign waiters employed in London.

Are Not Worth the Price.

Flattery is usually paid for in advance.—Dallas News.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 1, 1910.

Topic.—Christ our King.—John xviii, 33-40. (Consecration meeting.) Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The kingship of Christ is here suggested in connection with the examination of Jesus by the Roman governor, Pilate, before whom the Jews had brought Him. The night before Jesus had been arrested. He had been several times before the high priests and the sanhedrin. But, while they found him guilty of blasphemy upon false testimony and therefore worthy of death by the Jewish law, they could not execute Him, because the Roman conquerors of the Jews had deprived them of the right to take human life. Only the Romans could condemn to death; therefore it was necessary to take Christ before Pilate and get his consent to put Him to death. They had probably charged Him before Pilate with claiming to be the king of the Jews in order to arouse Pilate's jealousy and fear of losing his high position; hence Pilate questioned Him upon this point. But the answers of Jesus were incomprehensible to Pilate, though He did not deny His kingship. Yet Pilate found no fault in Him and so announced to the Jews. Finally he released Barabbas unto them and delivered Jesus to be crucified, the Roman method of execution, and this was done. King? Yes, Christ was a King—yea, King of kings—yet He died for those who belonged to His kingdom.

Christ was and is today a King. His kingdom was prophesied in the Old Testament and declared in the New. On one occasion the people wanted to take Him by force and make Him their temporal king, but He left them and went out to be alone with God. On another occasion, as the shadow of the cross was falling upon Him, He did for once, at His triumphal entry into Jerusalem, allow Himself to receive the homage paid to kings alone. But this was for a short time only and was soon overshadowed by His death upon the cross. Christ's kingdom was not of this world, else His friends would have supported His claims to it. To Pilate's question He answered, "My kingdom is not of this world; if My kingdom were of this world then would My servants (officers) fight that I should not be delivered to the Jews, but now is My kingdom not from hence." Christ meant that His kingdom was a spiritual one; that He was to rule over the souls and hearts of His subjects. Neither the Jews nor the Roman governor could comprehend such a kingship or kingdom. The day had not yet dawned when the world would understand it. But it does understand it today, and in millions of hearts Christ reigns as a King, directs and defends the spiritual interests of His subjects, ruling in their hearts by love and not simply to a limited extent over their outward lives by force. No king in all the world today has so many loving and obedient subjects as King Jesus, and they will continue to increase in numbers until "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun doth his successive journeys run."

As our King, Christ is ideal in His Kingship. The true king seeks only the best interests of his subjects. He is indeed no king who seeks only his own interests in ruling the lives and destinies of his subjects. But Christ is no such King. He even died for us, and what better proof can we demand to show that He reigns for our best interests alone? As His subjects we should strive to be as ideal in our relation to Him as He is to us; therefore on this consecration evening let us dedicate our lives to a more loving and devoted service to our King.

Christian Endeavor, a Vine.

Twenty-nine years ago, on Feb. 2, 1881, Dr. Francis E. Clark organized the first Christian Endeavor society in the Williston church of Portland, Me.

DR. CLARK STANDING UNDER A GRAPEVINE.

Since then, under the favoring providence of God, the society has reached a worldwide usefulness.

A fitting symbol of the far outreach and blessed influence of Christian Endeavor is this picture of Dr. Clark standing beneath a mammoth grapevine at Carpenteria, Cal. As it was not then the season of grapes, Dr. Clark has in his hand a bunch of California oranges.

The Man in Lower Ten

(Copyright, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

He was still gurgling over this as he took me upstairs. He showed me my room himself, and then began the fruitless search for evening raiment that kept me home that night from the club. For I couldn't wear Sam's clothes. That was clear, after a perspiring seance of a half hour.

"I won't do it, Sam," I said, when I had draped his dress-coat on me toga fashion. "Who am I to have clothing to spare, like this, when many a poor chap hasn't even a cellar door to cover him. I won't do it; I'm selfish, but not that selfish."

"Lord," he said, wiping his face, "how you've kept your figure! I can't wear a belt any more; got to have suspenders."

He reflected over his grievance for some time, sitting on the side of the bed. "You could go as you are," he said finally. "We do it all the time, only to-night happens to be the annual something or other, and—" he trailed off into silence, trying to buckle my belt around him. "A good six inches," he sighed. "I never get into a hansom cab any more that I don't expect to see the horse fly up in the air. Well, Allie isn't going either. She turned down Granger this afternoon, the Annapolis fellow you met on the stairs, pigeon-breasted chap—and she always gets a headache on those occasions."

He got up heavily and went to the door. "Granger is leaving," he said, "I may be able to get his dinner coat for you. How well do you know her?" he asked, with his hand on the knob.

"If you mean Dolly—?"

"Allison."

"Fairly well," I said cautiously. "Not as well as I would like to. I dined with her last week in Washington. And—I knew her before that."

Forbes touched a bell instead of going out, and told the servant who answered to see if Mr. Granger's suitcase had gone. If not, to bring it across the hall. Then he came back to his former position on the bed.

"You see, we feel responsible for Allie—near relation and all that," he began pompously. "And we can't talk to the people here at the house—all the men are in love with her, and all the women are jealous. Then—there's a lot of money, too, or will be."

"Confound the money!" I muttered. "That is—nothing. Razor slipped."

"I can tell you," he went on, "because you don't lose your head over every pretty face—although Allie is more than that, of course. But about a month ago she went away—to Seal Harbor, to visit Janet MacLure. Know her?"

"No."

"She came home to Richmond yesterday, and then came down here—Allie, I mean. And yesterday afternoon Dolly had a letter from Janet—something about a second man—and saying she was disappointed not to have had Alison there, that she had promised them a two-weeks' visit! What do you make of that? And that isn't the worst. Allie herself wasn't in the room, but there were eight other women, and because Dolly had put belladonna in her eyes the night before to see how she would look, and as a result couldn't see anything nearer than across the room, some one read the letter aloud to her, and the whole story is out. One of the cats told Granger and the boy proposed to Allie to-day, to show her he didn't care a tinker's dam where she had been."

She Was Sitting on an Overturned Boat.

"Good boy!" I said, with enthusiasm. I liked the Granger fellow—since he was out of the running. But Sam was looking at me with suspicion.

"Blake," he said, "if I didn't know you for what you are, I'd say you were interested there yourself."

Being so near her, under the same roof, with even the tie of a dubious secret between us, was making me heady. I pushed Forbes toward the door.

"I interested!" I retorted, holding him by the shoulders. "There isn't a word in your vocabulary to fit my condition. I am an island in a sunlit sea of emotion, Sam, a—an empty place surrounded by longing—a—"

"An empty place surrounded by longing!" he retorted. "You want your dinner, that's what's the matter with you—"

I shut the door on him then. He seemed suddenly sordid. Dinner, I thought! Although, as a matter of fact, I made a very fair meal when, Granger's suit-case not having gone, in his coat and some other man's trousers, I was finally fit for the amenities. Alison did not come down to dinner, so it was clear she would not go over to the clubhouse dance. I pled my injured arm, and a fictitious, vaguely located sprain from the wreck, as an excuse for remaining at home. Sam regaled the table with accounts of my distrust of women, my one love affair—with Dorothy; to which I responded, as was expected, that only my failure there had kept me single all these years, and that if Sam should be mysteriously missing during the bathing hour to-morrow, and so on.

And when the endless meal was over, and yards of white veils had been tied over pounds of hair—or is it, too, bought by the yard?—and some eight ensembles with their abject complements had been packed into three automobiles and a trap, I drew a long breath and faced about. I had just then only one object in life—to find Alison, to assure her of my absolute faith and confidence in her, and to offer my help and my poor self, if she would let me, in her service.

She was not easy to find. I searched the lower floor, the veranda and the grounds, circumspectly. Then I ran into a little English girl who turned out to be her maid, and who also was searching. She was concerned because her mistress had no dinner, and because the tray of food she carried would soon be cold. I took the tray from her, on the glimpse of something white on the shore, and that was how I met the girl again.

She was sitting on an over-turned boat, her chin in her hands, staring out to sea. The soft tide of the bay lapped almost at her feet, and the draperies of her white gown melted hazily into the sands. She looked like a wraith, a despondent phantom of the sea, although the adjective is redundant. Nobody ever thinks of a cheerful phantom. Strangely enough, considering her evident sadness, she was whistling softly to herself, over and over, some dreary little minor air that sounded like a Bohemian dirge. She glanced up quickly when I made a misstep and my dishes jingled. All considered, the tray was out of the picture; the sea, the misty starlight, the girl, with her beauty—even the sad little whistle that stopped now and then to go bravely on again, as though it fought against the odds of a trembling lip. And then I came, accompanied by a tray of little silver dishes that jingled and an unmistakable odor of broiled chicken!

"Oh!" she said quickly; and then, "Oh! I thought you were Jenkins."

"Timeo Donaos—what's the rest of it?" I asked, tendering my offering. "You didn't have any dinner, you know." I sat down beside her. "See, I'll be the table. What was the old fairy tale? 'Little goat bleat; little table appear!' I'm perfectly willing to be the goat, too."

She was laughing rather tremulously.

"We never do meet like other people, do we?" she asked. "We really ought to shake hands and say how are you."

"I don't want to meet you like other people, and I suppose you always think of me as wearing the other fellow's clothes," I returned meekly. "I'm doing it again; I don't seem to be able to help it. These are Granger's that I have on now."

She threw back her head and laughed again, joyously, this time.

"Oh, it's so ridiculous," she said, "and you have never seen me when I was not eating! It's too prosaic!"

"Which reminds me that the chicken is getting cold, and the ice warm," I suggested. "At the time, I thought there could be no place better than the farm-house kitchen—but this is. I ordered all this for something I want to say to you—the sea, the sand, the stars."

"How alliterative you are!" she said, trying to be flippant. "You are not to say anything until I have had my supper. Look how the things are spilled around!"

But she ate nothing, after all, and pretty soon I put the tray down in the sand. I said little; there was no hurry. We were together, and time meant nothing against that age-long wash of the sea. The air blew her hair in small damp curls against her face, and little by little the tide retreated, leaving our boat an oasis in a waste of gray sand.

"If seven maids with seven mops swept it for half a year
Do you suppose, the walrus said, that they could get it clear?"

she threw at me once when she must have known I was going to speak. I held her hand, and as long as I merely held it she let it lie warm in mine. But when I raised it to my lips, and kissed the soft, open palm, she drew it away without displeasure.

"Not that, please," she protested, and fell to whistling softly again, her chin in her hands. "I can't sing," she said, to break an awkward pause, "and so, when I'm fidgety, or have something on my mind, I whistle. I hope you don't dislike it?"

"I love it," I asserted warmly. I did; when she pursed her lips like that I was mad to kiss them.

MONUMENT COMMITTEE DISCUSS COUNTY LAWS

Members of the Soldiers and Sailors' Monument Committee of the Board of Freeholders held a consultation yesterday in the Courthouse at Elizabeth. Discussion was directed chiefly to the law which compels the county, through its supervisor of headstones, to see that the graves of all veterans are decorated with flags and flowers on Memorial Day.

General J. Madison Drake, supervisor, informed the committee yesterday that he had written to all the Grand Army posts in the county and explained that the county would furnish them with flags and flowers to decorate the graves in their sections, if so desired.

The general also made an interesting informal report on his work relative to marking the graves of the Continental soldiers buried in the county. He has just finished an examination of the records of the "Old First Church" in this city and took from the records the names of about 200 men who were buried in the churchyard between the years 1775 and 1810.

The records of the church burying ground during its early history, the general says, were kept in a manner peculiar to the time. He intends to trace the history of each name found on the records and learn, if possible, whether or not the man named was a soldier in the great war for liberty.

This will be an arduous undertaking, and it will probably take some time to glean the necessary facts. In glancing over the papers the general found the records of twenty-five graves in which it is stated soldiers were buried. One grave is marked "a rifleman," another "Capt. ——" On still another grave the general finds the name of a man and his age as 67. An inscription says "died of old age."

The general is preparing a petition which will be presented to the trustees of the church asking them to set aside a plot of ground to be used by the county on which to erect Government monuments in memory of the unknown and known Continental soldiers. The freeholders' committee agrees with the general that, as many graves cannot be loacted in the churchyard, a plot should be set apart and the monuments erected according to a plan to be suggested. The monuments will be inscribed "a soldier," and will cover imaginary graves.

In studying the law yesterday the committee learned a new point in regard to veterans' graves in the county. It is that the Board of Freeholders is responsible for the perpetual care and preservation of all the graves. This will mean considerable work and expenditure on the part of the county, as many graves have been neglected.

CLAIMS SHE IS HEIR TO ESTATE OF MISER.

Mrs. Hannah J. Cooke, of 820 Lombard street, Baltimore, claims, through relatives who live in Elizabeth, to be kin to Daniel Creedon, a miserly recluse who died some time ago at Bayside, L. I. Surrogate Noble, of Queens county, New York, is searching for heirs of Creedon. Creedon lived in a unique old structure at Bayside.

Surrogate Noble has received a letter from Mrs. Cooke in which she claims kinship to the dead man through Hannah Creedon, who until her death lived in Elizabeth, and Hannah Creedon's daughter, Matilda Clark, who resides at 1073 East Jersey street. Creedon left no will and his estate is valued at more than $150,000.

GOLF BEGINS SATURDAY

Competitive Season Events at the Plainfield Country Club.

MANY PRIZES ARE OFFERED.

Cups and Other Trophies as Awards —The Spring Handicap Classes Will End on June 25.

The competitive golf season will start at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday, for the Spring Handicap cups, two classes, A and B, which will be played for each Saturday afternoon for June 25 inclusive, 18 holes, medal play. As in the past the players in each class returning three lowest net scores each Saturday will receive three, two and one points, respectively. The prizes to be awarded to the player in each class having the greatest number of points upon completion of competition on June 25.

The course has been put in fine condition for the opening of the active season. Of course, there will be the regular Holiday competitions, play for the club championship, as well as other competitions which will be arranged for from time to time. Announcement of these will be made later. Members desiring to donate prizes should communicate with the chairman of the Golf committee, Julius E. Erickson.

In addition to the above there will be a boys' competition for boys 17 years of age and under. This competition will be held Saturday mornings during May and June, commencing May 7, 18 holes, medal play. The scoring of points will be the same as in the competition for the Spring Handicap cups. There will be two prizes, a gross score prize to be presented by Leighton Calkins, for the player having the greatest number of gross score points at the end of the play, and a net score prize, to be presented by George S. Clay, for the player having the greatest number of net score points at the end of the competition.

To enter this competition boys must report to the superintendent at the office giving information as to the scores they have made over the course in order that they may be given handicaps. Then each boy must enter his name on the score sheet each Saturday morning before starting from the first tee and immediately upon completion of the round each boy must return his score properly attested.

us section will be heard in a two part song and one other selection. In this competition choruses of fifty boys representing schools in Bound Brook, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, North Plainfield, Rahway, Roselle, Roselle Park, Somerville and Westfield will compete.

In the orchestral selections to follow the competition will be between three school orchestras, Bound Brook, Elizabeth and Westfield. All the schools with the single exception of Rahway will compete in the four-part songs of which there will be two and the chorus will consist in each case of at least fifty voices. Interest is high as the contests proceed. The following are the supervisors under whose care the contests have been arranged: Westfield, Miss Mabel E. Bray; Rahway, Miss Catharine Coover; Roselle Park, Miss Christine Munoz; Somerville, Miss Elizabeth Van Fleet; Vosseller; Plainfield, C. L. Lewis; Bound Brook and North Plainfield, Herbert Lloyd; New Brunswick, G. W. Wilmot, and Elizabeth and Roselle, Thomas Wilson.

Tickets of admission will be sold at the door of the High School.

Machinists Make Demand for More Wages.

There is little chance of machinists in the employ of local printing press factories getting an increase in wages, according to rumor. All of the manufacturers, with the exception of the Scott Printing Press Works, were represented at a conference yesterday afternoon.

What the result of the conference was is difficult to ascertain. Representatives of the Hall Printing Press Works, Dunellen, and the Potter factory evaded all questions of a Daily Press reporter this morning. It is known that a conference was held, and reliable report says that the printing press manufacturers will not grant the increase asked by the machinists.

FIVE HUNDRED MILE SPIN ON RUNAWAY MOTORCYCLE

Valentine McLaughlin, a Dunellen barber, had a 500 mile spin on a motorcycle yesterday which he will not forget in years. Six months ago McLaughlin was bequeathed $5,000 and last week he received the legacy. The first purchase he made with his funds was a $300 motorcycle.

McLaughlin received the machine on Saturday and he started taking lessons on Monday. Yesterday Mr. McLaughlin conceived the idea that he was able to operate the machine and he started out on a ride.

He had a ride. He mounted the machine and never got off until he had covered about 500 miles of territory. McLaughlin's thrilling journey was due to the failure of the controller or "throttle" of the machine to work and he was obliged to remain on the machine until the six quarts of gasoline gave out. When that time came McLaughlin was exhausted and fell from the machine near Fanwood.

According to McLaughlin he covered and re-covered a large aera of territory. Leaving Dunellen he journeyed to Somerville. It was at that town that he discovered that the controller on the machine refused to work and there was nothing for him to do then but to remain on the machine.

From Somerville McLaughlin steered his machine over the bumpy course to Peapack. Through this staid old village McLaughlin and his machine whizzed through at a 60-mile-an-hour clip to the consternation of the natives.

From Peapack McLaughlin turned around and returned to Somerville, and then he retraced back to Peapack. Realizing his predicament McLaughlin decided to continue on and stick to the machine until the gasolene supply was exhausted. He bolted through Bernardsville, thence to Morristown, through Madison, Chatham and over the hills to Newark.

After whizzing through Newark thoroughfares for half an hour McLaughlin steered off toward Springfield and took the Union county road toward home. When Scotch Plains was reached the machine slackened its speed but McLaughlin didn't have the grit to jump off. On South avenue, however, the fuel gave out, the machine gave a wobble and McLaughlin fell off in the road.

McLaughlin left Dunellen at 10 o'clock in the morning and it was 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon when he fell from his machine. He was found lying on the roadside, alongside of his machine, by John Bloodgood, a farmer of Willow Grove. McLaughlin sustained numerous bruises by the fall but he was not seriously hurt. Dr. F. W. Westcott, of Fanwood, attended McLaughlin.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

F. E. Smith will speak at the Plainfield Rescue Mission meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms at 8 o'clock tonight. The Misses Burnet will sing.

The Young People's Society of the First Baptist church, has decided to hold weekly meetings on Sunday evenings at 7 o'clock. The first meeting will be held Sunday evening in the junior department room of the church. All young people of the church and congregation are invited.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., will confer the third rank on two candidates tonight and will act on one proposition. A large attendance of members is expected.

Mrs. George Glover, of 226 East Ninth street, is entertaining Miss Sallie Morgan, of Covington, Ky., and Mrs. E. A. Wentworth, of South Carolina.

MRS. ABBOTT'S LECTURE

An Illustrated Talk Given Before the Monday Afternoon Club.

TWENTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY.

"The Period of Marie Antoinette" the Theme of Boston Woman —A Social Hour Follows.

A unique entertainment marked the twenty-second anniversary of the Monday Afternoon Club given yesterday afternoon at the Hartridge School auditorium. With an effective stage setting of evergreen and bay trees, "La Grande Pandore," a creation of John Colby Abbott, of Boston, illustrated "The Period of Marie Antoinette" in a causerie that was a pleasing combination of the instructive lecture and an exhibit of the foibles and furbelows of the past.

On account of the serious illness of Mr. Abbott, who was engaged to give the lecture, his wife, Mrs. Abbott, acted as his substitute, proving herself an interesting speaker with much charm of manner. She told of the famous fashion doll in the Court of Louis XIV, called "La Grande Pandore," the costumes being set by the king's edict, and copies of each new vogue sent to Rome, Vienna and London. With the cardboard imitation of this famous doll and exquisitely painted costumes, Mrs. Abbott's talk was not a mere running account of different styles of dress at varying periods, but showed in a most interesting manner, the inter-relation between clothes and society and how a political reborend might lead from one extreme to another in the fashions of the day. Many of the extravagant and prepostorous head dresses grew out of some social intrigue or national crisis. One ararngement, honored a dead king and welcomed his successor, another commemorated a naval victory, and another with intent to please Americans was called "The Chapeau de Bunker Hill."

The tragic history of Marie Antoinette was told in the changing costumes, giving a pageant of Versailles and Trianon, until the last gala day that preceded the Revolution and her sad fate.

The beautiful little poem so well recited and so effectively concluding the pathetic story of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, we have learned incidentally, was written by Mrs. Abbott.

At the conclusion of the entertainment refreshments were served and a socail hour enjoyed. The large number of club members and their guests were received by Mrs Eugene H. Hatch, the president, Miss Susan Hubbell, a vice-president, and Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, the former president.

The auditorium was beautifully decorated with branches of dogwood and the table was a pretty sight with pink shaded candles and an exquisite basket of pink and lilac flowers.

The entertainment committee deserves much credit for their successful efforts in beautifying the hall and securing the comfort of their guests. The members of the committee were: Mrs. Frank D. Warren, Mrs. Charles H. Tompkins, Mrs. James R. Joy, Mrs. Frederick W. Yates and Mrs. Noah C. Barnhart.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The topic for the prayer meeting this evening at the Seventh-Day Baptist church will be "Our Missionary Interests in Africa at Cape Town and at Gold Coast." Regular Sabbath morning service will be held at 10:30 o'clock. There will be preaching by the pastor, Rev. Edwin Shaw. "Did not our heart burn within us while he talked with us by the way." Sabbath school follows the morning service. The lesson will be "Two Sabbath Incidents," Matt. 12:1-14. Celia Cottrell will be the leader of the junior prayer meeting which is held at 3 o'clock. The topic will be "The Weights That Hinder Us." "Christ Our King," will be the subject for the prayer meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. which meets at 4 o'clock.

The regular quarterly church meeting will be held Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. At that time the delegates will be appointed to the annual meeting of the Seventh-day Baptist Eastern Association to be held at Rockville, R. I., May 26-29. The committee appointed at the last meeting to examine into the matter of church play-grounds will make a report. There are other matters of interest to be considered. The chairman of the meeting will be Franklin A. Langworthy.

DEATH OF L. L. MANNING

A Well Known Business Man Sucoumbs to Heart Disease.

AGED SEVENTY-TWO YEARS.

For Fifty Years He Was Engaged as Marble Cutter—Funeral Services on Sunday Afternoon.

Lebbeus L. Manning, aged seventy-two years, one of the best known residents of this city and for over fifty years a successful business man here, died at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at his home, 807 West Seventh street., following an illness of less than two weeks with heart trouble. He was first taken ill with a severe cold, which compelled him to give up business. Complications of the heart developed and he rapidly grew worse despite the best of medical attention.

Mr. Manning was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Manning, and was born near Samptown. The family has been connected with the earliest history of this city, being prominent in many ways. Mr. Manning always lived here. He learned his trade as a marble cutter with Andrew Vanderbeek and worked for him for many years. Later he engaged in business for himself at West Front street and Central avenue, acquiring that property, and for more than fifty years was successful. He was a man of the highest integrity and respected by all who knew him.

He carried on an extensive business in marble cutting and during his business career erected hundreds of monuments not only in this city, but throughout the whole State. On many occasions he was engaged to make special works of art in his line from elaborate designs drawn by well-known artists. There were instances of where such monuments cost thousands of dollars and the execution was perfect.

Mr. Manning was a life-long member of the First Baptist church and a regular attendant at all the services. Until taken ill recently, he always enjoyed the best of health and had spent some time in pleasure travel. His last trip was to Bermuda with Mrs. Manning and a party of Plainfielders.

Mr. Manning was married twice, his second wife, who survives him, being Miss Heyniger, also of this city. He also leaves a daughter, Mrs. Philip Macintyre, and a son, Walter F. Manning, of this city, by his first marriage; also a brother, Daniel Manning, of this city, and a sister, Mrs. David Townsend, of Bound Brook.

The funeral will be held from the late home Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss and Rev. C. S. Kemble being in charge. The burial will be at Hillside cemetery.

JURY OUT OVER FIVE HOURS IN COW CASE

The case of the S. P. C. A. against John Winges, of Dunellen, was too knotty a problem for a twelve-man jury in Justice Rogers' court at New Market yesterday afternoon. The jury considered the case for five and one half hours and then made it known to Justice Rogers of their inability to agree. The jury began its deliberations at 4:30 o'clock and was locked up in Justice Rogers' rear office until 9:30 o'clock.

Interested in the case was Mayor W. A. Sanford, of Dunellen, and it was at his instigation that the society was notified of the alleged act of cruelty. Several weeks ago Sanford claimed that Winges peppered one of his choice cows with a load of buck shot. Justice VonMinden looked after Mayor Sandford's interests, while Judge William Newcorn was counsel for the defendant. Col. Edwards, of Newark, represented the society.

FRESH AIR HOME PLANS

Legacy of $75,000 Received Will Permit Improvements to Be Made.

FUND'S CUSTODIANS NAMED.

J. D. Loizeaux Chosen President for Year—George A. Chapman Submits an Interesting Report.

The Netherwood Fresh Air Camp Association at its annual meeting at the Y. M. C. A. last night, elected officers for the coming year, discussed plans for the summer and listened with much interest to a report of George A. Chapman, chairman of the finance committee, who told of the details of the bequest of $75,000 received toward the support of the fresh air work at Netherwood under the will of the late Frederick C. Hewitt.

The payment of the above amount was made in securities, stocks and bonds, $150,000 of the $225,000 going to The Little Missionary Day Nursery, New York, and $75,000 to the local fresh air work. In his report, Mr. Chapman presented definite facts, which served to explain from a financial point of view, all the details of the bequest.

The income from the securities amounts to about $3,000 a year, and plans are now underway for the acquisition of additional land and the establishment of a permanent home for Miss Curry's work either in the present location, or elsewhere. For the present season it has been decided simply to renovate and refurnish the house and make such repairs as are necessary.

These officers were chosen last night: President, J. D. Loizeaux; first vice-president, James F. Parker; second vice-president, George A. Chapman; treasurer, David M. Runyon; secretary, B. F. Hadley; finance committee, J. D. Loizeaux, James F. Parker, George A. Chapman; chairman devotional committee, Mrs. Herbert Henry; chairman entertainment committee, Herbert Henry. The election of the chairman of the house committee was deferred until the next meeting.

The report of the treasurer showed a balance on hand from last season of $422.61; receipts for the year from all sources, $1,843.68, making $2,266.29; expenditures, $2,246.21, leaving a balance at present of $20.08.

There is an excellent opportunity at the camp for young people who have spare time to devote a little of it to teaching the girls there how to sew, embroider and do other kinds of fancy work, and any one who can lend their aid in this way is requested to communicate with Mrs. Herbert Henry. The camp will re-open for the season on July 1, when Miss Curry and her many charges will come to Plainfield.

It was with sincere regret that Miss Curry and Louis Rolston were unable to be present at last night's meeting. Both were detained at The Little Missionary Day Nursery, New York, where the cooking school was holding its graduation exercises. Appreciation was expressed for all assistance in the past with the hope that it will be continued.

This report was presented by Geo. A. Chapman, as chairman of the finance committee:

"So much of importance to the Association has occurred since the last annual meeting, that you have requested me to supplement the treasurer's statement with a special report, which I beg herewith to submit.

"The Little Missionary's Day Nursery has received $225,000 in payment of the legacy bequeathed to it under the will of the late Frederick C. Hewitt. The payment was made in securities (stocks and bonds) aggregating in value the above named amount at their market price at the time the transfer was made. Under the provisions of the bequest, $150,000 of this sum was to be applied toward the support of the Nursery work in New York, and $75,000 toward the support of the Fresh Air Work at Netherwood. J. D. Loizeaux, J. F. Parker and George A. Chapman were invited to become members of the Board of Trustees of the Little Missionary's Day Nursery, but being residents of Plainfield, they deemed it unwise to assume any responsinbility for the New York end of the work. In lieu of this, therefore, these gentlemen have been constituted a committee to represent and care for the interests of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home Association.

"The securities reecived in payment of the bequest under the will of Mr. Hewitt for the benefit of the Netherwood work have been deposited by the officers of The Little

HOME AFTER 4 YRS. IN UNCLE SAM'S NAVY

Hugo Maul, Jr., of Watchung, returned home last week after an absence of four years during which time he was a sailor in Uncle Sam's navy, serving on the Battleship Connecticut. Three other Plainfield boys are on the boat, Eddie Kenner, Jack Warren and Willie Ross.

Maul participated in the famous cruise around the world under Admiral Bob Evans and visited every country in the world except Germany. During his last six months of service Maul was engaged in target practise with the fleet in the West Indies.

Of all the countries he visited Mr. Maul declares Australia is the best stamping ground in the world. Mr. Maul spent considerable time at Sidney, Melbourne and Albany.

While in the navy Maul took a prominent part in sports on the Connecticut, being a member of the football eleven and tug of war team. He also engaged in several ball games in the Philippines.

During his sojourn in Australia Maul became interested in kangaroo racing which, he declares, is one of the most thrilling sports he ever witnessed. Kangaroo racing is just as popular in Australia as baseball is in the United States, said Mr. Maul.

HE SAYS MRS. WYCKOFF WANTED TO CARVE HIM

On complaint of Theodore Oesmann, a storekeeper, at 305 Grove street, Mrs. Mary Wyckoff, of 220 Duer street, appeared before Recorder Dolliver in the borough police court this morning. Oesmann alleged that Mrs. Wyckoff threatened to cut his nose off with a carving knife when he called at her home on Wednesday afternoon to collect an unpaid grocer bill.

According to the testimony of both it developed that Mrs. Wyckoff owed Oesmann about seven dollars for groceries, and that the latter called at her home in an effort to get the money. Mrs. Wyckoff alleged that Oesmann entered her kitchen and declared that he was going to remain there all night if necessary to get the money. She explained to the court that Osemann's action made her nervous and while in such a condition, she told the court that she threw some potato peelings and water into the grocery storekeeper's face, but she denied that she tried to carve Oesmann's nose.

Recorder Dolliver after listening to the stories advised Mrs. Wyckoff to pay the bill and she promised to do so. The case was dismissed.

LAST PERFORMANCE OF HOPE'S MINSTRELS

Hope chapel burnt cork artists will wind up their 1910 season at the chapel tonight. As in past years the performances have been marked by large attendances and tonight's crowd is expected to a record breaker. A brisk demand for tickets for the final show has been going on and nearly all of the seats are reported to be sold.

A delegation of Elks will attend tonight's performance and according to Director William N. Runyon there will be several more verses added to Thomas M. Muir's topical song which has scored a big hit. Some brand new jokes are also expected to be uncorked.

John Loftus Hurt.

John Loftus, of Spruce street, sustained painful injuries last night while riding his bicycle on Essex street. Loftus' front wheel bumped up against a sewer manhole cover and hurled its rider several feet in the air. Loftus fell to the ground on his back and was unconscious for fully an hour. Dr. A. F. Van Horn is in charge of the case.

Violent When Drunk.

Some excitement was caused in front of the City Market shortly after noon today when Patrolman Toby Nolan was called to arrest an intoxicated man who it was alleged had attempted to do violence to two of the patrons of the market. The man was removed to headquarters and is under the care of a physician.

BORO' CIVIC CLUB DINES

Representative Citizens Speak at North Plainfield Assn. Banquet.

MR. M'CUTCHEN TOASTMASTER.

One Hundred and Sixty Hear Talks Given by H. C. Krebs, Robert Clark, Jr., Newton B. Smalley and Others.

More than 150 representative citizens attended the initial banquet of the North Plainfield Association at Debele's auditorium last night. It was one of the most democratic gatherings of its kind in the history of the borough, men in all walks of life being present.

The interior of the auditorium presented a gala appearance with profuse decorations of flags and bunting and flowers. There were no hitches to mar the enjoyment of the guests and everything went along with clocklike precision. Jollity was lent to the occasion by the singing and musical features. David J. Carney, chairman of the banquet committee, introduced an unexpected feature by providing the guests with a minature newspaper, "The Boro Man." On the first page was a photograph of the late Peter Wooden, who was one of the pioneer residents of the borough.

Samuel St. John McCutchen was an efficient toastmaster and speeches were made by Superintendent of Schools H. C. Krebs, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, former Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., George T. Hughes, of Watchung, and Mayor Newton B. Smalley.

In introducing Mr. Krebs, Mr. McCutchen intimated that citizens in the borough as a rule do not interest themselves in the Board of Education and its work as much as they should. Mr. Krebs gave an interesting talk which contained an array of facts and figures relative to the borough's school system.

In the course of his remarks Superintendent Krebs said that a new high school building is needed. He declared that such a structure should be erected for the exclusive use of high school pupils and he maintained that a building to accommodate 150 to 200 pupils should be erected in the Washington Park section.

Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, spoke on civic pride. He lauded the advantages of the borough and also pleaded with his hearers to always strive to better the moral conditions of the municipality. Good morals, he declared, is needed just as much as improvements.

George T. Hughes, of the New York Evening Mail, and a resident of Watchung, referred to the relations of Washington Valley and North Plainfield. He predicted a bright future for the Watchung section. "Whatever improvements come to the borough is bound to benefit Watchung and the outlying country," said Mr. Hughes. The speaker also declared himself in favor of the proposed sewerage system and told of the advantages to real estate valuation which are sure to accrue from the improvement. Mr. Hughes interpersed his remarks with flashes of humor which found favor with the audience.

Former Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., dealt in political reminisences. He referred to the old political battles in the borough and said that he was gratified that everything is harmonious at last.

Mr. Clark dwelt at length on the benefits to be derived by the city and borough by mutual co-operation in civic matters. He made a fine impression as he urged harmony and reciprocity between city and borough.

Mayor Smalley was the last speaker, and he dwelt on the borough government. "The reason I have been mayor so long," said Mr. Smalley, "is because North Plainfield is easily governed." He boosted the North Plainfield Association and declared that the borough would be greatly benefited by the new organization. "The Association," said the Mayor, "will take the place of the old primary meetings."

The dinner, an excellent one, was served by DeMolli. The last course was served at 10:30 o'clock and at that hour the speechmaking started and continued until after midnight. Horace J. Martin, chairman of the music committee, distributed song sheets, and all of the guests participated in a song fest, augmented by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan's orchestra of ten pieces.

The success of the banquet is largely due to the indefatigable labors of David J. Carney, chairman of the committee of arrangements. Mr. Carney was assisted on the committee by Councilman L. B. Woolston.

IS ALEX. S. GRANT DEAD?

Wife He Deserted Six Years Ago Hears That He is No More.

RECEIVES STRANGE LETTER.

"George E. Love" Writes from New York, that Grant Died, but Does Not Explain When, Where or How.

Mrs. Alexander S. Grant, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Hand, of 433 Orchard place, has received a letter from a man who signs himself George E. Love, that her husband is dead. The report came to her on Wednesday in a special delivery letter postmarked New York, but it failed to state where Mr. Grant died or give any further particulars. The writer further alleged that Mr. Grant had told him that he had a wife and child in Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant were married six years ago next month, and two months later Mr. Grant left his wife, going to Camden, where his relatives lived at that time. She says that she received a letter from him soon afterward in which he said that he was going west and instructing her not to write to him until she heard from him. She has received no word from him since that time but from time to time she has received postal cards from a person signing themselves "George E. Love" giving her to understand that Mr. Grant is dead. The postals have caused her much anxiety. One recently came from Philadelphia.

Mr. Grant came to Plainfield with the Pederick & Ayer Machine Company, about six years, ago, when that concern located here. Soon afterward he met Miss Ella Hand, whom he afterward married in June of that year and then left her two months later. Mrs. Grant has a daughter, Helen, who is about five years old. The former is employed at Young's laundry on East Third street. Sometime ago she instituted proceedings for a divorce, which are now pending, but if her husband is dead, which she believe he is, further efforts on her part in obtaining a divorce would be unnecessary. The basis of her suit for divorce was desertion. She says that since he went away he has not contributed one penny toward her support and has made not the slightest effort to provide for her and her child.

Mourning stationery was used for the letter received by Mrs. Grant on Wednesday. She is unable to explain why this person who signs himself as "George E. Love" should conceal his identity or fail to inform her as to where her husband died, giving date, etc. She says that she knows no one by the name of "George E. Love." Mrs. Grant is about twenty-eight years of age and her husband was about the same age. Friends of Mrs. Grant believe that Grant himself wrote the letter.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS TO HAVE A CLUBHOUSE

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, is planning to own its home in the near future and negotiations are reported to be going on between the lodge and the owners of the Lindsay property on West Front street adjoining the First Baptist church. The property is considered ideal for a clubhouse and if the deal materializes whereby the lodge will secure the house, it will be remodelled and extensive improvements made.

The Knights expect to boost their home fund at the open air carnival, which will be conducted in June. Several thousand dollars is already in hand for the project. The lodge since its organization has been burned out twice and is now occupying temporary headquarters since the blaze in the old Van Deventer building.

Will Appear Before Common Council

Representatives of the Union County Board of Freeholders will appear at the May meeting of the Common Council, Monday night, to present the claims of the board for the establishment of a tuberculosis camp in the county. On Tuesday night a public hearing will be held at Westfield for the same purpose. The freeholders are desirous of obtaining the endorsement of the various municipalities before taking final action.

MOTORMAN IS ASSAULTED

Fred Skillman Injured in Attack by Rowdies Near Scotch Plains.

CAR WINDOWS ARE SMASHED.

Roundup of Hoodlums Now Going On—Trio of Malefactors Known —Eye Witnesses to Testify.

Toyn Giletto, an Italian youth, who was a passenger on the main line trolley car in charge of conductor Frank Glassford and Motorman Fred Skillman at 11:15 last night, told Chief Kiely, shortly before noon today the story of a fracas which occurred on the car last night in which the motorman was wounded and fifty passengers frightened to the point of desperation. Tony was rather reluctant at first to tell the story just as it happened, but after a little persuasion, he admitted being on the car and seeing the assault committed upon Skillman and Glassford.

Trouble has been the portion of the employees of the P. S. C. for the past few weeks and the source and reason have been puzzling the officials of the road ever since they began. Pursuant to his usual policy of preventing trouble Chief Kiely has had the patrolmen board the cars at different parts of the city during the late hours of the night in an effort to discover the offenders and to have them punished.

Unfortunately last night there was no officer on the car and just after it had left the city limits, it is alleged, James Kinderling passed through the car, and annoyed Alfred McDonald, of Garwood, by striking him on the head. McDonald was sleeping and the sudden rap on the head, which, by the way is a favorite form of amusement among the hoodlums, annoyed him to the extent of expostulating with Kinderling, who it is said was under the influence of liquor. Gelletto, described what followed: "McDonald became angry, he said, and told Kinderling to go away and leave him (McDonald) alone. This did not seem to satisfy Kinderling and he made as if to strike the sleepy man. Then Charles Walpole, a youth who has some sort of an idea that he owns the trolley cars, butted in and in a few minutes the car was in an uproar."

These are not the exact words used by Giletto, but they convey the situation as it appeared to the passengers and the trolley crew. Giletto named John Albert and John Reick as being witnesses of the fracas, but claimed that Walpole and Kinderling were the only ones engaged in trying to "do" the motorman. Another man implicated by Giletto is Alfred Garvin, of Cranford, whom Giletto alleges was on the car.

Motorman Skillman has a badly swollen cheek bone and his car was damaged to the extent of fifty dollars. He exhibited a stone which demolished two windows in the vestibule of his car, and declared that some of the missiles thrown at him were left on the vestibule floor. Those implicated in the assault, for which no cause is known, will be rounded up to day and have a hearing before Judge Runyon in the Morning. Other witnesses will be summoned.

Superintendent George Luhr has been co-operating with Chief Kiely in an attempt to curb the disorderly conduct on the late cars and believes that the rounding up of the gang which caused last night's disturbance will have some beneficial effect.

Sprained His Ankle.

Tax Collector William Townsend met with a painful accident last night and is going around on crutches today in consequence. Mr. Townsend, accompanied by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sturtevant, had been on a short automobile ride yesterday afternoon and just as Mr. Townsend stepped from his auto in front of his home a protruding piece of turf turned his ankle causing much pain, but without breaking any bones. Mr. Townsend fell with a groan under the machine and Mr. Sturtevant picked up the sufferer, placing him upon his back and carried him into the house. It will take a week or more to repair the damage to Mr. Townsend's ankle, but the business of the office will go on just the same.

SOMERVILLE.

John Zulauf has been appointed by the most worshipful grand master, Alton B. Sherman, as deputy grand master for the Tenth Masonic district, this being Mr. Zulauf's fifth year. There are seven lodges in the district, as follows: Westfield, two each at Plainfield and New Brunswick, Bound Brook and Somerville.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Thompson returned to their home on West Cliff street Wednesday, after spending the winter on Mr. Thompson's cotton plantation in Florida.

Mrs. Jane Satterthwaite, of Altamont place, left yesterday morning for western New York State, where she expects to spend three weeks with friends.

The Grand Commandery, Knights of Malta, of New Jersey, will hold their eighteenth annual convention at Foresters' Hall on Thursday, May 5.

The Epworth League of the Methodist church held a Mother Goose evening on Tuesday in the chapel of the church.

Miss Elva S. Rosenberger, of Philadelphia, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Marsh on East Main street.

C. W. Bowman and family have moved from Somerville to their summer home, near South Branch.

Rev. J. O. Winner, of Verona, spent Tuesday with friends in Somerville.

RARITAN.

The funeral was held yesterday morning of Anna Cimino, an Italian, aged thirty-three, who was instantly killed near the Thompson street crossing of the Central Railroad, Monday evening about 6 o'clock. The woman was accompanied by her two small children and had been picking dandelions along the railroad and had her apron filled with vegetables. She waited until the eastbound train had passed and then attempted to cross the tracks directly in front of the westbound train. One of the children attempted to hold her mother back, but it was too late. The woman was hurled thirty feet and death was instantaneous. The husband is serving a two-year sentence in Pennslyvania for assaultig a fellow-countryman.

John Strake, of Raritan, who was indicted by the recent grand jury of Somerset county, for an assault on his wife, has been placed under probation for one year by Judge Case and also fined $50.

Mrs. Howard D. Demaray has returned to New York after spending several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac D. Dalley, on Wall street.

The Gray Day.

The sky of gray that hangs aloft
Is but an empty canvas where
Ere long the sun with colors soft
Again shall trace his pictures fair.

The lonely sullen hours we know,
That seem so void of hope and cheer,
Are backgrounds over which shall glow
The pleasures that we hold most dear.

—Exchange.

Assuming Too Much.

His Satanic Majesty—What's all that yelling up there on earth?

His Impish Aid—Why, its Senator Davis, of Arkansaw.

His Satanic Majesty—What's he doing?

His Impish Aid—He's sending people down to our resort.

His Satanic Majesty—Confound him, what does he mean by that! When I want a new runner for sheol I'll let him know.—Exchange.

Making Underwear.

When making up flannel garments it is a good plan to wash the flannel before cutting the garment. Even the best makes of flannel have an unpleasant way of shrinking and it is very annoying to find that the garment has become too tight after it has been washed two or three times. If not washed, it is wise to make flannel garments loose to allow for shrinking.

A Doctor's Wooing.

When Dr. Johnson asked the Widow Porter to be his wife he told her candidly that he had no money and that his uncle had been hanged. The widow replied that she cared nothing for his parentage; that she had no money herself, and that, though she had no relation hanged, she had fifty who deserved hanging. So they made a match of it.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Bishop Scarborough confirmed a class of ten at St. Augustine's P. E. church, Ninth and Sycamore streets, Camden, last night.

George Sill, of Bridgeton, a workman on the new receiver at the Glassboro gas works, fell from a scaffold yesterday and severely cut his head.

Atlantic City will show a resident population of something over 50,000 according to estimates of Census Inspector Mathis, whose men have nearly completed their work.

Coming in contact with a circular saw while at work at Marlton, late yesterday afternoon, J. Warren Wonderland, twenty-one years old, of Moorestown, had both legs badly injured. He was taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden.

The Millville Board of Health has ordered City Solicitor Miller to bring action in the Court of Chancery against a produce dealer who has repeatedly disregarded providing for the cleaning of streets and yards.

Wanted in Camden on a charge of bigamy, Samuel Kline, twenty-nine years old, a cloth cutter, was arrested in New York by County Detective Carroll yesterday, and is being held for extradition. He was located in a "hop joint."

Charles Grant and William Souder, Philadelphia lads who are roughing it along the river near Paulsboro, went out in a yawl late Tuesday afternoon. The boat was bumped by a big wave and capsized. The boys were picked up by the tug Brandywine after difficulty.

Sadie Rosenberg, aged five years, was run over by a big truck in front of her home at 18 Washington street, Paterson, last evening. The wheels passed over the child's right leg, fracturing it.

Harry C. Kirchoff, a Bridgeton druggist, and his clerk, Elmo Loper, were held for the grand jury yesterday afternoon, after many witnesses had testified before Mayor Hampton that they purchased whisky and applejack from them on "prescriptions," frequently using the same prescription several times.

A complete surprise was given the members of the First Baptist church and residents of Laurel Springs when it became known yesterday that Rev. B. F. Bray, who resigned as pastor, and Miss Jennie Cromley, of this place, were married at the home of the bride's parents last Monday.

In his annual report to Mayor Ellis, of Camden, yesterday, Chief of Police Gravenor shows that during the year 3,030 arrests were made, a decrease of 245 from the previous twelve months. Of these, 1,021 were non-residents and 700 foreign-born. With the installation of the Bertillon system, the report says, Camden has in its police headquarters every appliance for securing the full records of criminals.

His face a mass of wounds, Joseph Reigert, five years old, of Audubon, is confined to his home in a critical condition as a result of the accidental discharge of a shotgun in the hands of Charles Bream, twelve years old. The boys reside near Orston Station and the accident occurred while Bream was shooting at birds, while Reigert looked on. Twenty-one shots were extracted from the face of the boy and more remain. Both his eyes were injured and it is feared that he will never regain his sight.

At a special election called by the Winslow Township Board of Education Tuesday night, the proposition to appropriate $4,000 for a new school building, at Sicklerville, was rejected by a vote of 240 to 350. A great deal of enthusiasm was injected into the fight by the discovery that one politician hoped to acquire control of the old school-house property, and an unusually heavy vote resulted.

SAYS HE INTRUDED TO CLEAR UP MYSTERY.

Summit, April 29.—Admitting that he forced an entrance into the home of Frank Kelly, who resides at Huntley in one side of a house in Morris avenue in which John Augustine and his family live, Frank Augustine, thirteen years old, told the police yesterday morning that he was doing a little detective work in trying to locate some paris green, some of which had been used a few weeks ago in poisoning his father's chickens and goat.

According to the boy's story, he found the paris green, but the lad will now have to face a charge, preferred by Kelly, of breaking and entering. Between the Kelly and Augustine families there is said to have existed enmity for a long period. It was while the Kelly family were away Wednesday that young Augustine is alleged to have broken into their apartments. He was later taken into custody by Policeman Sheridan, who is the agent for the house in which the families reside. Police Justice Hicks ordered the boy held this morning for a hearing later.

Y.M.C.A. NINE TO PLAY NEWARK MARATHONS

Ball fans will have an opportunity of sizing up the Y. M. C. A. aggregation tomorrow on Crescent Oval when the locals will clash with the Marathon A. C. of Newark. Manager Listman's athletes gave a good account of themselves at Montclair last Saturday although beaten by a score of 9 to 4. The Marathons are rated as a fast bunch of players and a warm struggle should ensue. The game will start promptly at 3:30 o'clock

While the Y. M. C. A.s are performing on Crescent Oval the Plainfields will be opening the season at Dunellen. The latter club is considerably stronger than last season and the locals may have their hands full.

Dunellen may give Smiling Jimmy Montross a trial. Manager Churchill is after a twirler.

Charles T. Lathers, a former University of Michigan baseball player, has been sold to Montreal by the Detroit Americans. Lathers will join the Royals at once and play short stop in place of Nattress.

Twirler Eddie Kieber, a big right-handed pitcher secured from the Giants, joined the Newarks yesterday. The big fellow warmed up with the other twirlers and later made his appearance on the coaching line. He is to be given a chance to work against Joe Kelley's Toronto clan which will come to Newark today for a four days' stay.

Here's a trio of hitters who are all justly entitled to a niche in the baseball hall of fame: Nap Lajoie has earned a batting average of .347 in fourteen years; Hans Wagner ties up the Woonsocket hitsmith with a .347 average in thirteen seasons, and Wee Willie Keeler finished his seventeen years of service in the big leagues with a grand batting mark of .337.

Offa Nal, the former Oriole and Gray third baseman, who was tincanned by Louisville, has gone back to the bushes, having hooked on with the Freeport club in the Wisconsin-Illinois League.

"Dots" Miller, the Kearny lad, who is holding down second base for the Pirates, is batting at a .400 clip in the games played to date. He secured a pair of singles yesterday against Chicago out of four trips to the plate. Jack Flynn sacrificed him along both times, but the other Pittsburg batters were unable to connect with McIntyre.

Arthur Devlin is leading the National League with a batting average of .500. Sherwood Magee, of the Phillies, has a mark of .227 and Wagner has a rating of but .210.

"Wahoo Sam" Crawford, of the Tigers, leads the American League hitters, having walloped the sphere at a .464 clip; Nap Lajoie, of Cleveland, is clouting the ball on the nose for a .447; Ty Cobb, the Tiger, is coming fast at a .384 clip; Harry Lord has his eye on the pellet with a .324 rating, while Tris Speaker, another Red Sox bingler, is going up at a .314 clip.

The Delehanty boys are scattered all over the map this season. Jim is a big leaguer in Detroit; Joe has shifted from St. Louis to Toronto; Frank went from Louisville to Indianapolis; Willie has just been sold to Waterbury by Wilkesbarre, and Tom, who has passed up the game, is running a wet goods parlor in Cleveland.

GOLF.

The Park Golf Club is planning for the best season in its history and no doubt it will be the favorite resort for golfers during the summer and fall months. The course has never been in better condition. In addition an extra tennis court is to be a feature, permitting more tennis play.

The Plainfield Country Club is still a favorite place for holding luncheons and dinners not only on Saturday, but during the week. Several such affairs were held this week. The formal opening of the club will be held on May 7.

The important foreign golfing events have been scheduled for the coming season:

April 19—Troon Foursome—Harry Varden and J. H. Taylor vs. James Braid and "Alec" Herd, thirty-six holes.

May 2 to 7—Women's championship at Westward Ho.

May 30 to June 4—Amateur championship at Hoyake.

May 30 to 31—French open championship at La Boulie.

June 13 to 17—Scottish women's championship at Nairn.

June 20 to 22—British open championship at St. Andrews.

July 6 to 8—Professional tournament at Prestwick.

July 20—Southern section of News of the World tournament at Stoke Poges.

October 4 to 8—News of the World Cup at Sunningdale.

Although interscholastic golf has apparently been forgotten and neglected in the metropolitan district for several years interest will be kept alive through the efforts of the Philadelphia Interscholastic Golf Association. This body has decided to run off a championship tournament over the links of the Huntingdon Valley Country Club on May 9, 10 and 11, and recognizing that no junior tournaments of a general nature are being held in the United States at present, the Philadelphia body has decided to make the coming one an all-scholastic instead of a local fixture.

Already several schools outside of the Quaker City district have entered. As the golf association of Philadelphia is giving the schoolboys its support, the success of the competition seems assured.

Miss Marie Jones, of Newark, has returned home after a visit with friends here.

CONGRESS MAY INQUIRE INTO MONUMENT FUNDS.

Washington, April 29.—In an effort to find out what became of $100,000 which, it is alleged, was subscribed thirty years ago to the National Lincoln Monument Association, for the purpose of erecting in the national capital a suitable memorial to the first martyred President, some of the original subscribers will appeal to Congress to make an investigation. At a meeting Wednesday night a committee was appointed to form plans for furthering the investigation. Of the amount which was supposed to have been contributed by people in various parts of the country for the monument, only about $7,000 has been accounted for.

Of the trustees at the time of the association's incorporation by Congress, Senator Cullom, of Illinois, is the only one who up to date has been located.

R. H. Forsyth, Deputy Assistant Treasurer of the United States, who is chairman of the committee appointed last night, has found forty-three of the old subscription books containing names of more than 1,000 people in all parts of the United States. The amounts subscribed ranged from $1 up to $10.

The committee's secretary was authorized to communicate witn James H. Schumacher, Jacksonville, Fla., a son-in-law of the late General F. E. Spinner, to whom Spinner, who was treasurer of the association, is said to have left the books, in the hope that he will be able to throw some light on how much money was collected and what became of it.

The committee further will ask Congress to find out what became of the twelve cannon which were to have been used about the monument.

TESTS REQUIRED OF APPLICANTS TO TEACH.

Elizabeth, April 29.—Questions upon the following subjects will be the basis of the work required by the Board of Examiners of Union County when it meets at the courthouse here May 13 and 14 to test applicants for teachers' certificates: May 13, third grade, morning, arithmetic, geography, penmanship; afternoon, orthography, grammar, reading, May 14, third grade, morning, theory and pactise, school law, United States history, civics; afternoon, elementary composition, temperance, physiology. Second grade, morning, theory and practise, school law, history of education, elementary algebra; afternoon, composition, book-keeping, physiology. First grade, morning, algebra, school law, history of education, plain geometry, afternoon, physics, general history.

A special course will be held May 14, in which candidates will be quizzed on the theory and practise of teaching, school law in New Jersey, kindergarten, drawing, manual training, physical training, music, ancient and modern languages and inventional geometry.

Mrs. H. O. Fowler, of Fairview avenue, has returned home after spending a week with Brooklyn friends.

Mrs. W. E. Dunn, of Norwood avenue, has returned from Mt. Vernon, N. Y., where she has been visiting friends.

Stanley Hunbert, of Chatham street, is kept at home with a dislocated shoulder, the result of an accident a few days ago .

Mrs. James Keegan, of New York, who has been visiting her sister, Miss Theresa Schwartz, of West Front street, has returned home.

Missionary's Day Nursery in a box in the safe deposit vaults of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, access to which can be had only by the presence of any two members of the above mentioned committee.

The income derived from the above named securities will be about $3,000 per annum. Mr. Morgan's property has proved to be entirely too small for the proper accommodation of the large number of women and children that Miss Curry cares for during a season at Netherwood. Early in the winter, therefore, negotiations were commenced with the object of acquiring additional land adjoining this property. These negotiations are still pending, for it was discovered that, owing to the absence of the owner in foreign lands, it would be impossible to acquire title to the property this season. Next year, it is hoped, a permanent home for Miss Curry's work will be secured, either in the present location, or elsewhere. For the pesent season, it has been decided simply to renovate and refurnish the house, and to make such repairs to the outbuildings and grounds as are absolutely necessary. The cost of these repairs and furnishings, however, will absorb a large amount of our income this season, and we shall need all the financial aid our kind friends are willing to extend to us."

Proctor's Fine Show.

There is a fine bill of vaudeville at Proctor's theatre this week, and a capacity audience enjoyed the show last night. In one clever sketch "Mr. Smith" comes home under the weather and his wife plans a practical joke, making him think he is going to die. A doctor is summoned and he keeps up the joke, much to the enjoyment of the audience. Istar appears in four Hindu dances, incense, scarf, snake and the dance of death, which are identical with those given by Ruth St. Denis. Earl & Curtis in "Innocents Abroad," pass out a good line of talk, while Harry Burgoyne, a clever English singer, is far above the average. His interpretations of the English are true to nature.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

An announcement that has met with enthusiasm, is that Jos. M. Gaites' famous musical comedy "Three Twins" is to be presented at the Plainfield theatre on Saturday, April 30, matinee and night with a company of seventy play folk. No musical comedy has ever become as popular as "Three Twins." It has become a craze in New York and has been called the "most successful musical comedy America has ever known."

Laurens H. Van Buren, who takes the part of Augustus Colpoys in Trelawny of the Wells, to be given on May 20 and 21, for the benefit of the hospital, has laid down four rules for making an audience laugh:

1. Be in good health.
2. Be happy.
3. Be anxious to please.
4. Be original.

"I would rather make the world laugh than be president," said Mr. Van Buren. "Healthy, innocent laughter will do the world more good than all the doctors and much of the preaching. A laughing world is alway a sound and honest one."

Abandons Old Headquarters.

Elizabeth, April 29.—After having met in one hall since January 15, 1866, Lincoln Division, Sons of Temperance, of this city, Wednesday evening vacated its hall and took other quarters. The hall is in the former Lyceum theatre building, Broad street, and has been the home of Free Masons, Knights of Pythias, National Provident Union, Grand Army of the Republic, the Union League, old Elizabeth Press Club and numerous other organizations. During the Lincoln Division's occupancy of the room there had been thousands of persons initiated into the several organizations which had met there within the past forty-four years. The hall was built for Washington Lodge of Free Masons, and for years was occupied by them.

Quash Faulty Indictments.

Jersey City, April 29.—Indictments found by the Hudson County Grand Jury last Tuesday against Mrs. Johanna De Lorenzo and Christian Neupert of maintaining a disorderly house in 670 Boulevard, West Hoboken, were quashed by Judge Blair Wednesday on the motion of Prosecutor Garven because of an error by Grand Jury Clerk Quill in the dates. These dates made the indictments conflict with those on which the defendants were sentenced to three years in State prison and $1,000 fine each. The new case probably will be resubmitted to the grand jury.

B. J. Shreve, of Grove street, is able to be out again after a severe attack of the grip.

A. F. Marsh, of Westervelt avenue, will visit friends at Stroudsburg, Pa., next week.

Bayonne's War on Mosquitoes.

Bayonne, April 29.—The work of exterminating the millions of young mosquitoes in the meadows in Bayonne was started Wednesday under the direction of William Delaney, of the Hudson County Board of Health, and will take four or five days. The Standard Oil Company is aiding in the fight. When it is finished, Delaney has assured the residents, the city will be practically free of the winged biters. Skeptical folk, however, are putting up their porch, door and window screens.

Victory for Y. M. C. A. Juniors.

Held Business-Social Session.

Twenty-three members of Class No. 2, of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, taught by Philip A. Vroom, met at the home of Mrs. Jesse Miller, of Almont place, last night, and held an interesting business-social session. These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Jesse Miller; vice-president, Mrs. Frank Sowden; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Norman Sears. Plans for the coming year were discussed and duing the social session refreshments were served.

Fell and Broke Her Hip.

High Bridge, April 29.—While walking from her home here to Clinton Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. James McGinley, Sr., accidentally fell in the highway near Dorland's mill, and sustained a broken hip. Formey Mayor and Mrs. Walter Brinton, who found Mrs. McGinley in a helpless condition, had her taken to her home.

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

YOUTH ATTACKS GIRL AND COMMITS SUICIDE

Barricading himself in a two-story clubhouse on the bank of the Hackensack River near the little town of Carlstadt, Clarence Wood, a young cripple and member of a well-known family of Rutherford, held a Sheriff's posse at bay for five hours yesterday, while bullets riddled the frame building. Then ,atfer dangerously wounding a Chief of Police, he turned his revolver on himself and sent a bullet into his brain just as a hundred or more armed men, having mustered courage enough to charge the building, were about to break down the doors.

Before the fighting began young Wood had attacked Miss Anna Kipp, a popular member of the Rutherford social set, whom he had lured to the boathouse early in the morning under the pretense that she was to be one of a party of half a dozen mutual friends who were to go on a launch party down the Hackensack. After attacking her with a bludgeon and trying to strangle her, Wood's nerve seemed to fail, for the girl escaped his grasp and staggered several hundred yards along the river bank to a hotel, where she gave the alarm.

It was to avenge the attack on the girl and capture Wood dead or alive that the Sheriff's posse was formed. Wood is supposed to have become suddenly demented after his brutal attack on Miss Kipp, for during the hours in which he held the crowd of armed men at bay, firing now and then to let them know that he was still prepared for the attack, the young man practically wrecked the interior of the clubhouse, smashed the bottom of several canoes with a hatchet, nearly demolished the club piano, slashed most of the pictures with a knife, and wrecked most of the club furniture.

ADDRESSES TO BE MADE AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

A service of unusual interest will be held in the Congregational church on Sunday evening when the Men's Club of the church will introduce novel features well calculated to inspire the men of the church as well as others to work for the Master. The Sunday evening service will be in charge of the club and Dr. Ellis B. Hedges will give an address on "Opportunities in the Medical Profession;" H. C. White will speak from the viewpoint of the lawyer and Professor H. C. Krebs, superintendent of the Somerset Street School, will tell of the opportunities of the teacher.

Another pleasing feature of the service will be the singing by a male quartet. An invitation is extended to all men to attend this service, but that does not mean that it will be exclusively for them; the women will be welcome and are urged to be present.

Pastor Goodrich will pilot the Junior Endeavorers of the church on a bicycle ride into the country tomorrow morning, weather permitting.

Palmistry.

Palmistry, in its modern acceptation, is divided into two branches, chirognomy and chiromancy. Chirognomy defines the outward shape of the hand, and of its members, the thumb and fingers. The name is derived from the Greek and means the laws of the hands. Chiromancy is also derived from the Greek and signifies divination by the hand—that is, by the lines, mounts and other marks on the palm of the hand.

Sexes Divided in Church.

The separation of the sexes seems to have been formerly by no means an uncommon practice in the Church of England. In fact, Edward VI.'s prayer book specially mentions that at the communion service "the men shall tarry on one side and the women on the other." The papers of a church in Westmoreland include elaborate directions for the division of the sexes at its services.

Diminutive Horseshoes.

What are thought to be the smallest horseshoes ever made were fashioned by a blacksmith at Chester, Pa., the other day. They were made for a tiny Siberian animal, known as Adonis, which stand 30 inches high and weighs 100 pounds, and is owned by E. Bosch. The shoes were each about the size of a silver dollar.

Dishonesty Properly Punished.

SCHOOLS' MUSIC CONTEST

Elizabeth's Junior Chorus Carries Off the Laurels in First Event.

GRAMMAR SOLO WINNERS.

High School Pupils Competition a Lively One—Program is Continued this Afternoon and Ends Tonight.

Euthusiasm attended the contests at the High School auditorium yesterday afternoon and Elizabeth children carried off the honors in the majority of the contests. Beginning with the unison singing by the younger children Elizabeth made a remarkable showing and the good fortune followed through to the end of the afternoon's work.

Clifton Hopf, of Elizabeth, proved himself the best of the children singers in the contest for solo singing, "The Swallows," by Cowen, being the medium. Hopf was closely pressed by Harold Griffiths, of Westfield, who with a mark of 75 won much applause for his splendid vocal work. Master Hopf's work earned for him a mark of 78 out of a possible 80. Isabelle Kohlhepp was the third in this contest.

In the struggle between the High School pupils Miss Florence Parks, of Roselle, won first prize, closely pressed by Miss Elizabeth Beatty, of Elizabeth, and Miss Hazel Hughes, of New Brunswick. Miss Hughes won second prize by the small margin of one and a third points.

The highest attainable point in any of the contests was 80, and it is a telling point in favor of the supervisors of music in the public schools that the contestants were so closely tied for points.

The contest is being continued this afternoon and the orchestral work of the pupils will occur tonight beginning at 7:45.

The judges of the concerted singing were: Chairman, Charles Whitney Coombs, the well-known New York music critic; Miss Louise Westwood, of Newark, and Professor Leonard B. McWhood, of Columbia University, New York city.

Birthday Party.

Miss Edna Mague celebarted her second birthday yesterday afternoon at her home, 722 West Front street. There were about fourteen of her little friends present from Plainfield and Elizabeth. The afternoon was spent in playing games for which the prizes were won by Miss Helen Thorpe, Miss Anna Harris and Master Russell Gray. Refreshments were served, when they departed wishing the little hostess many happy returns of the day.

Preparatory services will be held tonight at the Netherwood Reformed church. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will be in charge and there will be a meeting of elders after the service to receive new members.

Mrs. Charles E. Herring, of De Lacy avenue, is spending several days at Springfield, Mass. Dr. and Mrs. Herring expect to take possession of their apartment in The Bristol next week.

A TOUR AROUND ETNA.

The tour which the King and Queen made around Etna is one of the most beautiful and interesting, as well as the least known in Sicily. The light omnibus or steam tram goes straight uphill from Giarre, through olive woods, groves of lemon trees—loaded at this season with the pale, waxy fruit, set round with ivory blossoms—and orange trees with masses of red gold oranges, says the Pall Mall Gazette.

The air is heavy with the scent of white cloves, and the railway banks are ablaze with mesembryanthemum, great rose pink flowers the size of saucers. Along the railway runs the old road—that road which Hamilcar followed four hundred years before the Christian era, and where Charles V. and his armies marched in 1334 A. D. Old, old towns remain which saw their passing. The yellow brown mediaeval towers of Castigilione stand out against the deep blue ravine of the Alcantara Valley. Palermo recalls the Saracen ravages everywhere from time to time; a hideous torrent of petrified lava reminds one of the other terror with which these fair scenes are so familiar.

The highest town upon the mountain slopes is Randazzo, and here a night's lodging is possible with the help of a well-filled luncheon basket. Randazzo, though so close to the crater, has always escaped desrtuction. It was an important place in the Middle Ages, and the tall spikes on its ducal palace still tell where many a noble Sicilian head has moulded away. The green copper domes of its churches, interspersed with tall cypresses, would drive a painter wild with delight. The women and girls wear shawls drawn over their heads of a coarse cream woolen stuff, which look very picturesque in the back streets.

The country, as the railway winds up above Randazzo, is one sheet of lava. The petrified flood extends on all sides and it is difficult to believe that that swishing torrent is really hard and still. Woodspurge has grown up among it, and the flowers have taken rich colors yellow and orange and crimson from the iron in the soil, as are in startling contrast to the black masses, behind which stretch away the purple slopes till they reach the snowy cone, and we behold Etna enthroned in all her glory.

As the train reaches the highest point and begins to go rapidly down, it passes Bronte, the station for Maniace, the castle and estate which Ferdinand IV. presented to Lord Nelson, and which is still the property of his descendants.

At one station a group of peasants are assembled to bid farewell to a young emigrant, such handclaspings and kisses on both cheeks, the poor boy stands sobbing on the platform at the back of the train and looks long to get the last glimpse of his mountains. If he makes money he will come back to build a tiny house and end his days under the shadow of Etna. Every mile of the country has historical associations. Below Maletto, the Greek general, Maniaces, helped by Harald Hardrada, defeated the Saracens Roger de Hauteville's Norman castle still stands at Aderno, and near it in ancient days was the Temple of Hardranos, guarded by a thousand dogs.

The railway rolls down to the rich warm air and semi-tropical vegetation. Lemon orchards and geranium hedges smile round bright Catania, but even among the white villas and fragrant gardens the traveller is aware of that presence, that serpent's course, which has followed them from those faroff heights to the very edge of the land and is only lost to sight beneath the peacock blue waters of the Sicilian Sea.

A Different Instrument.

"You are a typewriter, I believe?" said the professor.

"Yes, sir."

"Very good. Now, my dear young lady, in playing the piano, you must not pay too much attention to your speed."

HINTS ON SAVING.

Here are a few hints on how not to save:

1. Don't go without your lunch, even once, it will injure your health.

2. Don't walk home after a day's shopping, you can save money later, but never a new constitution after your one and only one has been undermined.

3. Don't sew in the twilight. Artificial light is cheaper than the bill of an oculist.

4. Don't wear thin clothing on cool days, flannel is cheaper than medicine.

5. Don't use cheap soap. It will necessitate an expenditure in cold cream, etc. to remedy the harm upon the skin.

6. Don't try to do the work of an upholsterer or carpet layer. You may, if you do, never feel again like trying a piece of hard work.

7. Don't overwork, nobody will thank you sufficiently for it and nerves and temper may be permanently ruined.

Only Preaching, Perhaps.

A clergyman, the other day, told a story in his sermon which, in the opinion of some of his auditors, required considerable faith to swallow. This opinion was fully shared by the clergyman's little daughter, who, at the dinner table, looked earnestly at her father and asked him if the story was quite true.

"Why, certainly, my child," answered the minister in amazement; "but why do you ask me?"

"Oh," she responded, very quickly; "I don't know—I thought that maybe you were only preaching."

No Excitement.

"Washington never told a lie."

"And he never called anybody a liar that I know of. Them was dull times."

Can't Be Prevented.

An utter fatalist is he
Who this opinion files;
Whatever is to be will be,
Especially in styles.

FAT FOLKS FAVOR

Home Mixture That Takes Off the Fat Rapidly—Causes No Wrinkles—No Stomach Ills and Requires Neither Dieting Nor Exercise.

Too much fat is both uncomfortable and dangerous, but usually fleshy people prefer to put up with its inconvenience rather than punish themselves with the tiresome exercising usually prescribed, or endanger their health by taking the so-called "cures" and patent fat "reducers."

This self-sacrifice of comfort and health to overabundant fat is entirely unnecessary, however, as Mrs. Luella Bigger tells us there is a home receipt that is far superior in every way to anything money will buy for reducing superfluous flesh. It is said this simple mixture will take the fat off of man or woman at the rate of at least a couple of pounds a week without even causing wrinkles. Moreover it does not disturb the stomach, but is a good thing for the system, clearing away pimples, and, best of all, it does not interfere with the diet. You can use it and at the same time eat whatever you like. This receipt is as follows: ½ ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ ounces of Peppermint Water. Get these ingredients at any drug store, mix them together at home and take one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Mrs. Bigger, as is well known, is a famous beauty expert, and whatever she recommends is sure to be found eminently satisfactory.

Unfamiliar Language.

"Oh, you, kiddo!" exclaimed the little Boston boy.

"Is that some Hungarian you have picked up, Waldo?" inquired Mrs. Backbay. "I have noticed you playing with a little foreign boy of late."

Just the Contrary.

"Didn't I tell you to make the most of yourself, young lady?"

"You did, professor, you did."

"And here I find you squeezed into one of these tube gowns."

But It Has.

"I see that our neighbors wear clothes," remarked Eve, after coming out of the garden.

"So I notice," responded Adam. "It's just a fad; it can't last."

BAMBERGER'S
"THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE"
MARKET, HALSEY & BANK STS.

New Jersey's Greatest Mail Order Organization.

We are justly proud of our mail order system. We feel that it is one of the strongest links in the chain of this great store's success. We want you to use it—test it thoroughly and allow us to demonstrate its many splendid advantages. The Bamberger mail order system is not the result of a day, but the culmination of years of painstaking effort. In fact, this branch of our business is so perfectly organized that you may shop as quickly by mail as in person. There are no delays—no errors—satisfaction is snugly packed with each parcel we send out. If you are not a patron (which is highly improbable) send in a trial order and you'll quickly realize the truth of the foregoing statements.

IN THE DINING CAR

First Woman—"How shall we manage this meal? Shall we all order together and divide? I think that will be perfectly lovely, don't you, Miss Durbin?"

Miss Durbin—"For the rest, perhaps. You see, I ordered when I first came in. I was here five minutes before you came."

First Woman—"Oh, yes. Well, now, girls, what'll we get? Coffee?"

Tall Woman — "The coffee on these trains is perfectly terrible. It as much as your life is worth to drink it. How one misses one's home table when one is traveling!"

Young Girl—"Isn't it the loveliest thing we all got on the same train? It just shows how small the world is, after all. Do you suppose that porter will watch our things for us?"

First Woman—"I don't know, I'm sure. I heard him telling a man he couldn't abide women who spread themselves all over the car."

Waiter—"Ready to order yet, madam?"

Short Woman—"Gracious, no! How these waiters do hurry one! What do you think of some clam chowder?"

First Woman—"I'm tired of clams. How about rolls? Rolls, waiter."

Tall Woman—"Be sure they're hot. One always gets cold things on these cars. And coffee, of course."

Short Woman—"Not at all. I prefer tea."

First Woman—"One tea and the rest coffee. Oh, dear, what else?"

Dark Woman—"What did you order, Miss Durbin?"

Miss Durbin—"Chops, fried potatoes, rolls, tea and waffles."

First Woman—"Very well. Bring the same for us, waiter."

Waiter—"One check, madam?"

First Woman — "How aobut it, girls?"

Young Girl—"Oh, certainly. We can divide afterward."

Tall Woman—"How flat the scenery is! It's scarcely worth while to look out of the window. Traveling is such a bore."

Short Woman—"It would not be if the attendance were better. Where can you find the equal of that porter, for instance? He told me I had been in that dressing room an hour, when it hadn't been a second longer than 15 minutes."

Young Girl—"Some of the passengers are worse. There's a woman in there who made an awful fuss because she said I had her book. How could I know it was really her book? She couldn't prove it. I found it lying in a seat and it happened to be a book I was just crazy to read. I finished it, too, before I gave it back to her."

Dark Woman—"I had trouble with that same woman. She actually had the porter tell me to move. She said I had the upper berth and had to ride backward because she and her little girl had a lower. She was disagreeably persistent."

First Woman—"Here comes the waiter. Just put the things here. Gracious, he hasn't brought half the order! I don't care what she told you, waiter. We want them at this end of the table. We can't all of us have everything in front of us. Now, get the rest of the order as quick as you can. Don't stand there like that. Don't say any more about it, do you hear? Did you ever!"

Short Woman—"Only one cup of tea, so that's mine. Please pass the rolls. My, how stingy! Only four rolls for all of us! Now, should you not think a rich road like this would do better than that by its patrons?"

Miss Durbin—"Excuse me, but—"

Tall Woman—"I'd like some fried potatoes, please."

First Woman—"We'd better divide the chops. Who wants the Saratoga chips?"

Dark Woman—"I suppose I'll have to take them, as there's nothing else left."

Young Girl—"I took the last roll. Does that mean a handsome husband?"

Short Woman—"What's in that covered dish? Waffles! Thank goodness, there's enough of those. Is that real sirup, do you suppose? You never can tell when you're being cheated."

Miss Durbin—"So it seems. Excuse me, but isn't that my order that the waiter brought?"

Dark Woman—"I wonder if it was? Here, take some of these chips. They're awfully dry."

Short Woman—"Here's the tea. I thought after I'd fixed it with cream and sugar that I'd rather have a lemon."

Miss Durbin—"I take tea plain."

Tall Woman—"Never mind. Here comes the waiter with our order. I'm sorry there aren't any more of your chops left."

Miss Durbin—"I might have some of yours, don't you think?"

First Woman—"We'd be glad to let you have some, but, you see, there are only enough for us. They are so stingy on these roads, you know. Would you like a roll?"

Miss Durbin—"No, thank you." (Departs.)

Tall Woman—"She's gone! Wasn't she rude! That's what we get for taking up with a stranger. We ought to have kept to our original party. You can't be friendly with everybody and not regret it. I believe in being exclusive myself."

Women's Coats and Capes

Coat makers from all over have been besieging us with offers of special lots of coats after learning of the enormous coat business we are doing this season, and we have had pick of the best lots.

Tomorrow we will sell one purchase of $4.79 Coats, which may or may not prove the best lot we have yet offered, but which will surely be better than any coat offering any other store has made you this season, for the prices are just about half what the garments should sell for.

There are Coats for Women and Misses of Pongee, Taffeta, blue, black, old rose, tan and gray Serges, Covert Cloths, Broadcloths, Shepherd Plaids, and Mixtures; some are lined thruout; some are half lined; others have only the yoke lined; the lengths are 32, 36, 54 and 56 inches. They are trimmed with moire, taffeta, pongee, braids and embroideries; the styles seem almost endless and there is surely something here to tickle your fancy, and the prices will stand in the way of no one.

Group 1—Embraces coats worth up to $9.50. Take anyone you like at $5

Group 2—Embraces coats worth up to $14.50; choice of these for $7

Group 3—Embraces coats worth up to $19.50; beautiful styles that are to be sold at $10

Group 4—Embraces coats worth up to $20.00; any of which you may have for only $12

Group 5—Embraces coats worth up to $25.00. These we are going to sell Saturday at only $15

Second Floor.

89c Shadow Stripe Shantung 58c

This pure silk pongee will be the big feature for Saturday's selling, and we promise you that no store in Newark will present anything like as good a bargain.

All the solid colors with shadow stripe, much like crepe in effect—crisp and uncreasable, in all the staple colors such as Copenhagen, Alice, navy blue, old rose, mulberry, tan, natural, and black—superb for Summer dresses, beautiful silks in every way that we are selling over the counter regularly at 89c a yard (and that is a fair price); to be sold on Saturday at only ..... .58

HAYNCO $2 HATS

Whether you have been accustomed to paying more or less for your hats we advise you to try the Haynco $2 Hat this Spring.

If you have been paying more we suggest that you try the Haynco and see if you cannot get satisfactory service for much less money than you have been paying for hats, effecting a saving that will help materially in buying headwear and other furnishings.

If you have been paying less than $2 for your hats the chances are you have not had satisfactory service, and your hats have not been as cheap as you thought.

You need not pay more than $2 to get a good hat—of this we can assure you, for we guarantee the Haynco Hat in every way. It is a splendid black that will stand well thru the season, and the blocks meet every demand for both stout and slim men, old and young faces.

Come in tomorrow if you are in the market for a hat, and see the Haynco at $2.

MEN'S UNION SUITS

Stetson Hats for those who want to buy the very best made—lightest in weight, self-conforming to the head, so that no matter what your phrenological development you will suffer no discomfort, and will never know what hat headache is.

Stetson Hats may be had in soft and stiff styles, in black and fashionable shades, at prices running from $3.50 to $5.00.

Superior and Mentor Brands, the highest grade makes of union suits of cotton and lisle, white and fancy colors, in various styles; at extraordinary low prices.

Union Suits worth $1.50 at $1.19.

Union Suits worth $2.00 at $1.39.

Union Suits worth $2.50 and $3.00 at $1.50.

Douglas Shoes at $2.59

Douglas Shoes are perhaps the best known in the world. They are advertised far and wide as the best shoes made at $3.50, and they are probably all that they are advertised to be, and many thousands of men wear them regularly and gladly pay the standard price fixed by the manufacturers—$3.50.

To get Douglas Shoes at $2.59 is therefore something of a treat—one that a good many of our men friends have come to appreciate fully.

We sell the Douglas Factory rejects—shoes that have slight faults that the careful, critical inspectors in the Douglas Factories cannot pass as strictly perfect. These we get on contract and we buy so cheaply that we are able to save you close to $1 a pair; yet they look just as good as strictly perfect shoes and wear as long.

Why not save 96c.

Boys' Hats

Boys' Hats in the popular telescope shapes in all the wanted shades in vogue this season; here at $1.50 and $1.25.

Continuation Sale Men's All-Wool Suits

$16, $18 and $20 Spring Suits at 12.50

We started this Big Suit Sale last week with 1225 garments. Part of them were the canceled orders and the surplus stock of a leading manufacturer of high grade clothing, which we purchased at a substantial reduction in price, the balance being our own make.

The demand for these suits has been unusual, but the choice of models and patterns is still satisfying, including the popular light and dark gray mixtures and olives. These garments were made to retail at $16, $18 and $20. They are lined with alpaca, and you no doubt realize that an opportunity to buy all-wool suits at $12.50 is unusual, especially in the face of the advanced prices of raw wool. ARE GUARANTEED ALL WOOL.

We expect Saturday to be a record-breaker, so far as suit-selling is concerned, so an early call will facilitate choosing.

STEPS TO STOP SALE OF BEER FROM WAGON.

Summit, April 29.—Following the action taken by the Plainfield authorities, the board of excise commissioners of this city is preparing to take steps which will result in preventing the sale of bottled beer or any intoxicating liquors from wagons here, unless the vender shall have been granted a wholesale license by the board of excise. The wholesale license fee here is $350. City Solicitor Corra N. Williams has advised that the board of excise has ample authority to prevent peddling of beer or other intoxicating liquors within the city, unless license to conduct such a business shall be granted by the board.

Section 5 of the excise ordinances provide as follows:

"Hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person to sell or offer for sale within the limits of the city of Summit, any malt, spirituous, vinous, distilled or fermented liquors, in any quantity in or from any wagon, carriage or sleigh or any amoulatory conveyance whatever, without first having obtained a license from said board of excise commissioners, in the manner hereinbefore provided, under a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars for each and every offense, to be recovered in the manner hereinafter provided or imprisonment not exceeding four days in the common jail of the county."

Scores of bottled beer wagons visit this city daily and a large trade is done, especially with the foreign element. Many of the wagons arrive here before daylight and unload bottled beer in Italian boarding houses in different sections of the city. Delivery wagons from the large department stores in New York also bring quantities of bottled liquors and wines to this city daily. It is the intention of the board of excise commissioners to prohibit the delivery here of the wet goods by the New York concerns, unless they shall have been granted a wholesale license.

The proprietors of three hotels here, who pay a license of $750 a year, have long complained of the manner in which beer peddlers and the large New York department stores have been permitted to operate here. It is claimed that speakeasies, which have been conducted here, have been supplied with beer from the wagons coming into the city.

High Hopes.

"I see that two lady explorers claim the record for mountain climbing."

"Well, maybe now we can get a fuss worth watching."

P. H. S. NOTES.

The P. H. S. baseball team will play the New Brunswick High School at Crescent Oval tomorrow morning at 10:30. The New Brunswick team is very fast and a good game is expected.

The baseball team will play Upsala College at Plainfield on Monday. Last year the visitors defeated P. H. S. with a close score and something exciting is expected today.

Terry, who is pitching for P. H. S. has got the highest pitching average so far this year. Van Zandt, the captain, is a close second. E. Woodhull, who has pitched but one game make a remarkable showing for his first year. He looks good for P. H. S. in the future.

Auto No. 14,071 Did It.

Yesterday afternoon at about 3 o'clock a large white automobile, numbered 14,071, ran into a truck belonging to A. E. Hoagland on Park avenue, without damaging the truck, but smashing the lamps on the auto. The name of the owner of the machine was not obtained.

Mr. and Mrs. William Summers, of East Third street, have returned from a visit to Nyack, N. Y.

DR. WOODROW WILSON'S VIEWS GIVEN EDITORS

President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton University, was a speaker at the banquet in the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, last night of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. His address was on "The Power of the Editorial." He said in part:

"We have witnessed in our day an extraordinary mutiplication of journals of all sorts and an extraordinary increase in the amount of printed matter of every kind. Printing has become so cheap that it has become almost a commonplace medium of speech. There was a time when everything we saw in print seemed very serious and deliberate. It had an extraordinary adventitious dignity and we attached to it a corresponding weight and significance. Journals were comparatively few in number. The utterances of their editors and contributors attracted a great deal of attention, and there was more time than there is now to give them a deliberate and serious reading. But in our time there has been an unmistakable falling off in the influence of printed opinion. The power of the editorial is certainly not what it once was.

"The telegraph and the telephone, moreover, have drawn the world together into something like a single community. It is just as easy and natural to read the news of yesterday from Rome as the news of yesterday from the neighboring town. And with the news comes the comment, comment from every quarter, not only from our neighbors, but from editors and correspondents all over the world. And so what we read begins to have for us only the significance of what we hear. Printed opinions are coming to take their rank with casual spoken opinions, and editorial comment has little more weight than conversational comment.

"A very interesting thing has happened, therefore, involving an entirely new assessment of what we read. We are beginning to judge what we read as we judge what we hear, by the character of the person who utters it. It is becoming a matter of common knowledge who own certain journals, for example, and that the opinions of those journals are the opinions of the owners; that they may not be at all the individual opinions of the editor who penned them. In other instances the whole country knows the character and antecedents of the chief editorial writer of a particular paper. If his character is high, his opinions carry great weight. If it is not, they are merely among the negligible comments of the day.

The same thing is going on, therefore, in respect of our attitude toward what we read that is going on upon so wide a scale and at so tremendous a pace with regard to our attitude toward public affairs. We are engaged in nothing less than a grand reassessment of character and motive. The close contacts of the world are bringing men's individualities clearly into view. The court of public opinion has direct sight of the men whom it is assessing, to whom it is according its praise or its blame, its faith or its condemnation. Back of everything lies a man and a motive, and it is to that our judgment is penetrating. It goes very far beneath the surface."

HEAVENLY REST CLUB PLANS ENTERTAINMENTS

The monthly business meeting of the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, last night, was full of interest to the forty men present. Plans for the summer were discussed and decided upon and several announcements were made.

It was stated that on Thursday night, May 5, Prof. Henderson, of New York city, will give an entertainment in the parish house for both young and old, and on Thursday night, May 12, George Lynch, of New York, will give an illustrated lecture on the subject, "Oregon and the Red Apple," which is said to be of great interest.

Perhaps, an event of unusual interest, will be a lecture on "Napoleon," to be given under the auspices of the church at the Plainfield High School, on Wednesday night, May 11, by Rev. Clarence Wood, rector of St. Paul's church, Roselle. Mr. Wood has made a special study of Napoleon and is well qualified to speak of his life and achievements.

It was decided to wind up the summer season about Saturday, June 18, with a baseball game in the afternoon, a mock trial and lawn fete in the evening. Plans will be formulated to make this affair one of the best in the history of the association.

ASSESSMENTS FIXED ON P.S.C. GAS PLANT

The appeal of the P. S. C. from the assessment on its gas holder and property at East Fourth and Church streets was settled yesterday after a hearing before the State Board in the Court-house at Elizabeth when Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh made a vigorous and successful effort to have the work of the city assessors sustained.

The gas holders assessment was placed at $51,600 after Mr. Marsh had made a convincing argument before the Board to which L. D. H. Gilmour, representing the P. S. C., replied. Mr. Gilmour fought to have the assessment reduced to $40,000, arguing that such a tank could be purchased for that price at the present time, but Mr. Marsh demanded that the assessment be fixed according to the original contract which was proven by the city's counsel. It was admitted by all concerned that $2,500, instead of $5,000, was a fair "assessment on the office building and trestles. The tax on $81,000 of personalty had already been paid. The assessment of $13,000 on the land stands as before.

Mr. Marsh proposed to have the decree entered accordingly to which Mr. Gilmour finally agreed. The decree was affirmed by the Board.

JERSEY'S CROPS ALL RIGHT.

Banner Year for Peaches, Maybe—Clover Crop a Wonder.

Samuel Ketchum, Assistant Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, said yesterday that the storms which damaged crops in the South and West had spared the peach crop in New Jersey, and the indications were for a banner year. Said Mr. Ketchum:

"The buds were not harmed by the cold, and the peach crop has not been injured. There was a little late plowing because of dry weather, as the farmers did not want to turn over the earth and have it dry out."

Mr. Ketchum says he never did see such clover crops as are standing.

"I saw you—at the station," she said suddenly. "You—you were in a hurry to go." I did not say anything, and after a pause she drew a long breath. "Men are queer, aren't they?" she said, and fell to whistling again.

After awhile she sat up as if she had made a resolution. "I am going to confess something," she announced suddenly. "You said, you know, that you had ordered all this for something you—you wanted to say to me. But the fact is, I fixed it all—came here, I mean, because—I knew you would come, and I had something to tell you. It was such a miserable thing I—needed the accessories to help me out."

"I don't want to hear anything that distresses you to tell," I assured her. "I didn't come here to force your confidence, Alison. I came because I couldn't help it." She did not object to my use of her name.

"Have you found the—your papers?" she asked, looking directly at me for almost the first time.

"Not yet. We hope to."

"The—police have not interfered with you?"

"They haven't had any opportunity," I equivocated. "You needn't distress yourself about that, anyhow."

"But I do. I wonder why you still believe in me? Nobody else does."

"I wonder," I repeated, "why I do!"

"If you produce Harry Sullivan," she was saying, partly to herself, "and if you could connect him with—Mr. Bronson, and get a full account of why he was on the train, and all that, it—it would help, wouldn't it?"

I acknowledged that it would. Now that the whole truth was almost in my possession, I was stricken with the old cowardice. I did not want to know what she might tell me. The yellow line on the horizon, where the moon was coming up, was a broken bit of golden chain; my heel in the sand was again pressed on a woman's yielding fingers; I pulled myself together with a jerk.

"In order that what you tell me may help me, if it will," I said constrainedly, "it would be necessary, perhaps, that you tell it to the police. Since they have found the end of the necklace—"

"The end of the necklace!" she repeated slowly. "What about the end of the necklace?"

I stared at her. "Don't you remember"—I leaned forward—"the end of the cameo necklace, the part that was broken off, and was found in the black sealskin bag, stained with—with blood?"

"Blood," she said dully. "You mean that you found the broken end? And then—you had my good pocket-book, and you saw the necklace in it, and you—must have thought—"

"I didn't think anything," I hastened to assure her. "I tell you, Alison, I never thought of anything but that you were unhappy, and that I had no right to help you. God knows, I thought you didn't want me to help you."

She held out her hand to me and I took it between both of mine. No word of love had passed between us, but I felt that she knew and understood. It was one of the moments that come seldom in a lifetime, and then only in great crises, a moment of perfect understanding and trust.

Then she drew her hand away and sat, erect and determined, her fingers laced in her lap. As she talked the moon came up slowly and threw its bright pathway across the water. Back of us, in the trees beyond the sea wall, a sleepy bird chirruped drowsily, and a wave, larger and bolder than its brothers, sped up the sand, bringing the moon's silver to our very feet. I bent toward the girl.

"I am going to ask just one question."

"Anything you like." Her voice was almost dreary.

"Was it—because of anything you are going to tell me that you refused Richey?"

She drew her breath in sharply.

"No," she said, without looking at me. "No. That was not the reason."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Alison's Story.

She told her story evenly, with her eyes on the water, only now and then, when I, too, sat looking seaward. I thought she glanced at me furtively. And once, in the middle of it, she stopped altogether.

"You don't realize it, probably," she protested, "but you look like a—a war god. Your face is horrible."

"I will turn my back, if it will help any," I said stormily, "but if you expect me to look anything but murderous, why, you don't know what I am going through with. That's all."

The story of her meeting with the Curtis woman was brief enough. They had met in Rome first, where Alison and her mother had taken a villa for a year. Mrs. Curtis had hovered on the ragged edges of society there, pleading the poverty of the south since the war as a reason for not going out more. There was talk of a brother, but Alison had not seen him, and after a scandal which implicated Mrs. Curtis and a young attache of the Austrian embassy, Alison had been forbidden to see the woman.

"The women had never liked her, anyhow," she said. "She did unconventional things, and they are very conventional there. And they said she did not always pay her—her gambling debts. I didn't like them. I thought they didn't like her because she was poor—and popular. Then—we came home, and I almost forgot her, but last spring, when mother was not well—she had taken grandfather to the Riviera, and it always uses her up—we went to Virginia Hot Springs, and we met them there, the brother, too, this time. His name was Sullivan, Harry Pinckney Sullivan."

"I know. Go on."

"Mother had a nurse, and I was alone a great deal, and they were very kind to me. I—I saw a lot of them. The brother rather attracted me, partly—partly because he did not make love to me. He even seemed to avoid me, and I was piqued. I had been spoiled, I suppose. Most of the other men I knew had—had—"

"I knew that, too," I said bitterly, and moved away from her a trifle. I was brutal, but the whole story was a long torture. I think she knew what I was suffering, for she showed no resentment.

"It was early and there were few people around—none that I cared about. And mother and the nurse played cribbage eternally, until I felt as though the little pegs were driven into my brain. And when Mrs. Curtis arranged drives and picnics, I—I slipped away and went. I suppose you won't believe me, but I had never done that kind of thing before, and I—well, I have paid up, I think."

"What sort of looking chap was Sullivan?" I demanded. I had got up and was pacing back and forward on the said. I remember kicking savagely at a bit of water-soaked board that lay in my way.

"Very handsome—as large as you are, but fair, and even more erect."

I drew my shoulders up sharply. I am straight enough, but I was fairly sagging with jealous rage.

"When mother began to get around, somebody told her that I had been going about with Mrs. Curtis and her brother, and we had a dreadful time. I was dragged home like a bad child. Did anybody ever do that to you?"

"Nobody ever cared. I was born an orphan," I said, with a cheerless attempt at levity. "Go on."

"If Mrs. Curtis knew, she never said anything. She wrote me charming letters, and in the summer, when they went to Cresson, she asked me to visit her there. I was too proud to let her know that I could not go where I wished, and so—I sent Polly, my maid, to her aunt's in the country, pretended to go to Seal Harbor, and really—went to Cresson. You see I warned you it would be an unpleasant story."

I went over and stood in front of her. All the accumulated jealousy of the last few weeks had been fired by what she told me. If Sullivan had come across the sands just then, I think I would have strangled him with my hands, out of pure hate.

"Did You Marry Him?" I Demanded.

"Did you marry him?" I demanded. My voice sounded hoarse and strange in my ears. "That's all I want to know. Did you marry him?"

"No."

I drew a long breath.

"You—cared about him?"

She hesitated.

"No," she said finally. "I did not care about him."

I sat down on the edge of the boat and mopped my hot face. I was heartily ashamed of myself, and mingled with my abasement was a great relief. If she had not married him, and had not cared for him, nothing else was of any importance.

"I was sorry, of course, the moment the train had started, but I had wired I was coming, and I could not go back, and then when I got there, the place was charming. There were no neighbors, but we fished and rode and motored, and—it was moonlight, like this."

I put my hand over both of hers, clasped in her lap. "I know," I acknowledged repentantly, "and—people do queer things when it is moonlight. The moon has got me to-night, Alison. If I am a boor, remember that, won't you?"

OFFICIAL MINUTES OF THE BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS.

The Official Minutes of the Union County Board of Freeholders.

The regular meeting of the Board of Freeholders of Union county, New Jersey, was held on April 7, at 2:30 p. m. Roll call showed the following members present: Director Cady, Freeholders Adams, Crane, Darby, Doane, Garrison, Haviland, Jensen, Jones, Krouse, Martin, Meisel, Perry, Randolph, Smith, Swain, Thompson and Wilbur—19. Absent—Freeholder Robison—1.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur it was ordered that the minutes of March 3 be approved as per printed copies on members' desk.

Communications.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—I have been requested by council to bring to your attention the maintenance of the children of the Gyrue stadt family at the New Jersey State Board of Children's Guardians, to kindly bring the matter before the Board of Chosen Freeholders in view of relieving the borough of the expense.

Very truly yours,
R. E. R. LUBBEN,
of the Poor Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Smith received and referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Business.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Gentlemen—Will you kindly advise me what conclusion your honorable body has reached in the matter of the injuries received by Chas. Bahr at Neck Lane some time ago, and concerning which I wrote to your board some time ago?

If you think that Mr. Bahr should be compensated for his injuries kindly let us hear from you without delay. If you conclude that his claim is without merit, please advise me to that effect so that I may begin proceedings at law at once in order to establish our claim.

Very truly,
J. P. KELLY.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse received and referred to the members from the City of Elizabeth and the County Attorney.

A communication was received from the New York Telephone Company in regard to constructing underground conduits on county roads.

On motion of Freeholder Swain received and referred to the County Road Committee with power.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County, New Jersey.

Gentlemen—We beg to hand you herewith application in duplicate for the proposed cross-over or connecting track near the intersection of Main street and Springfield avenue, the subject of which was recently explained to the County Road Committee. We have endeavored to include in the resolution asked for, all the conditions which were agreed to upon our part. An early consideration will be greatly appreciated by

Yours very truly,
Morris County Traction Co.,
HENRY H. ARCHER,
General Manager.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse received and referred to the Committee on County Roads with power.

Committee Reports.

The auditor's report was as follows:

Gentlemen—Your auditor respectfully reports: I have examined the books and vouchers of the Surrogate, Sheriff, Registrar and County Clerk and find the same correct.

The net receipts are:

Surrogate	$1,404.27
Sheriff	1,153.72
Registrar	1,731.89
County Clerk	463.45

Which amount has been turned over to the County Collector.

Respectfully yours,
BENJAMIN KING,
Auditor.

By the Committee on Clark Street Bridge, Westfield.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to investigate the condition of the Clark street bridge, Westfield, would report having examined said bridge and find it to be an exceedingly old semi-circular brick arch structure which stands considerably above the grade of the surrounding property. We also find that the town of Westfield is about to improve Prospect street by macadamizing same and that it will be desirable to rebuild this bridge before such street improvement is made and we therefore recommend that a new concrete bridge with one beam and concrete slab cover be constructed at this point at a cost not to exceed twelve hundred and fifty dollars ($1,250).

JOSEPH PERRY,
E. K. ADAMS,
C. J. JENSEN,
Committee.

Freeholder Krouse moved the report be received and the recommendation adopted, and on roll call it was so ordered.

By the Committee on Normandie Place Bridge.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to investigate this need of rebuilding the present small bridge across Sixth street, at Normandie place, Cranford, N. J., would report:

That they have visited the place, and find that owing to the grading of the street, the present bridge will be out of grade considerably. The present bridge is old, and too small, and is not in good order, and not suitable for the lacality, which is now building up with new houses.

Your committee would therefore recommend that the bridge be rebuilt with concrete walls and reenforced concrete, covering, for the full width of the street, sixty feet, with concrete gutter inlets from the side streets. The cost of the work not to exceed the sum of $285.

Respectfully submitted,
E. K. ADAMS,
C. J. JENSEN,
AARON D. CRANE,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Adams report was received and recommendation adopted without dissent.

By the Committee on Prospect Street Bridge, Westfield.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to investigate the condition of the bridge on Prospect street, Westfield, and report thereon has examined said bridge and finds that it is an old stone culvert with a flag top and is rapidly falling to pieces.

We therefore recommend that a new culvert be constructed at this point of concrete at a cost not to exceed six hundred and fifty dollars ($650).

J. PERRY,
JACOB MARTIN,
T. L. HAVILAND,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Smith the report was received and recommendation adopted without dissent.

By the Committee on Jail Inspection.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Jail Inspection would respectfully report that it has inspected the jail, also the books of the warden.

Number of prisoners in jail March 31	53
Number received during month	67
Number in custody April 1	63
Number of days' board	1,899
Cost per day per prisoner	3817

Your commitee would also beg to call the attention of this board to what seems to them to be uncalled-for and irregular. Now it appears that in the iCty of Elizabeth and other various municipalities, insane persons are frequently arrested, brought before a justice or police magistrate and are by the magistrate immediately committed to the county jail pending an investigation as to their sanity. It appears to your committee that this is irregular and that insane people who are arrested and brought before a magistrate should be taken care of by the municipality where the arrest is made until the examination is made as to their sanity and if determined to be insane, commited to the asylum and not to the county jail. We think the commitment of insane people to the county jail is not only irregular but detrimental to good government in the jail and has an unwholesome influence upon the other prisoners and disturbs the discipline of the jail. We would suggest that the attention of the various committing magistrates of the City of Elizabeth and other municipalities who are accustomed to commit insane persons to the county jail be called to this matter in order that the same may be remedied.

Your committee would also state in explanation of the increase in the amount of the provision bill for the warden's house that the reason for said increase is the fact that five witnesses have been confined a total of 225 days in the jail to give evidence in county cases. These witnesses are fed from the warden's table, thus necessitating the purchase of more meats and provisions.

JOSEPH PERRY,
J. HERVEY DOANE,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Doane received and placed on file.

By the Committee on Soldiers' Monuments.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Soldiers' Monuments has the honor to report the following applications for monuments for dead soldiers, the same having been investigated and approved by the County Supervisor, with a recommendation that they be granted.

Justus D. Trussler, Sixth N. Y. Ind. Battery; Presbyterian Cemetery, Rahway, 1841-1910.

Richard H. Avery, I, Second District Coll Vols.; Presbyterian Cemetery, Rahway.

William J. Schoonoven, Sergt. Major Second Battery N. J. Vols. Infantry; Evergreen Cemetery, Elizabeth.

JOSEPH PERRY,
W. H. RANDOLPH,
Committee.

Onmotion of Freeholder Greuner the report was received and recommendation adopted without dissent.

By the Committee on Soldiers' Monuments.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Soldiers' Monuments, while in conference recently with the Quartermaster-General of the United States Army, was favorably impressed with the beauty and durability of the new Government monuments for making the graves of soldiers and sailors of the Civil and Spanish-American Wars. After inquiry, we were assured by that official that the Government would be pleased to furnish all the stones necessary to mark the mounds of fallen heroes interred in Union county. The new stone of the following handsome design and dimension, is used by the Government to mark the graves of distinguished soldiers, without regard to rank, in the National cemeteries.

The monument is of the best American white marble, thirty-nine inches long, twelve inches wide, and four inches thick. The top is slightly rounded and the portion of the stone when set will be inscribed with the name, rank (if above private), company and regiment or other organization to which the deceased belongs, cut in bold relief in rounded letters, within a large sunken shield.

Your Committee, after a critical examination of the new monument, feels that it is in every way worthy of a patriotic and generous Government, comparing favorably, as it does, with the stone recently adopted by this board at a cost of $14.75 each.

Therefore, in view of these facts, your committee recommend the substitution of the Government marker for that adopted by this board. We feel that we shall act wisely by accepting the offer of the Government, and in ordering the erection hereafter of these monuments by which course a saving of more than $10,000 will be effected for the taxpayers of this county.

The only expense to the county will be for the placing of the stones—some 800 in number—in various cemeteries, amounting perhaps to seventy-five cents each.

Respectfully submitted,

E. K. ADAMS,
J. PERRY,
W. H. RANDOLPH,
C. J. JENSEN,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur the report was received and recommendation adopted without dissent.

By the Committee on South Front Street Bridge.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to examine the present bridge at South Front street, Eliazbeth, would hereby respectfully report that they met on the ground and have made an examination of the condition about the bridge and of the bridge itself.

The traffic over this bridge is probably heavier than that over any other girder bridge in the county, and is certainly much heavier in the county. A great manufacturing territory is served by this bridge.

The bridge is thirty-nine years old, having been built in 1871. It was not built at first as heavy as similar bridges are now being built by the county, and it is quite likely that a certain amount of deterioration has weakened its strength since construction. It is quite narrow, being barely wide enough in all for two teams to pass by one another.

Very heavy loads are not taken over the bridge, as it is not sufficiently heavy to take loads of machinery or such objects as steam rollers.

Your committee is of the opinion that the bridge has about reached the limit of usefulness, and that a new bridge should be built, of a much heavier design, and with a wider driveway, and also with a footway, which the present bridge lacks entirely.

Inasmuch as this matter would involve a considerable cost to the county if carried out, your committee would request that the Board of Chosen Freeholders meet as a committee of the whole, on the ground, to make further examination of the project.

With this object in view, a meeting has been arranged between city officials, petitioners for the new bridge, and members of the Board of Freeholders, to be held at the bridge at 3 p. m., on Saturday, April 9, 1910.

Your committee make this report as one of progress, and ask to be continued in charge of the matter.

Respectfully submitted,
T. F. HAVILAND,
S. P. WILBUR,
A. D. CRANE,
P. H. MEISEL,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Haviland the report was received and recommendation adopted without dissent.

The Director then notified the members that the board will meet the committee of the whole on Saturday, April 9, at 3 p. m., at the bridge on South First street.

By the Committee on Tuberculosis.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to confer with a committee from the Tuberculosis Society of Elizabeth would respectfully report that at a joint meeting of the committees the question of building a pavilion was discussed. The physicians composing that committee pictured to us very vividly the serious condition existing in the county and demonstrated to us the urgent need of a county institution.

After due consideration, your committee thought best to call a public hearing and ascertain, if possible, the sentiment of the public on that question.

A large and representative meeting was held in the courtroom on March 18. Addresses were made by Dr. Grier, the Rev. William F. Whitaker, D. D., the Rev. John R. Atkinson, the Rev. E. B. Cobb, D. D., the Rev. Otis A. Glazebrook, D. D., Norton L. Wilson, M. D., Hon. Charles J. iFsk, Dr. V. Van de Hedges, J. W. Whelan, Dr. Holmes, of Rahway, and many others.

Numerous facts and arguments presented by the speakers showed the necessity for the county's attempting at once to cope with this public scourge in some well-considered and adequate manner, and the consensus of opinion favored the purchase of land and the erection of a pavilion for the treatment of both incipient and advanced cases. An opportunity was offered at the meeting for the expression of adverse views, but met with no response.

Your committee, therefore, recommend that the board begin proceedings looking toward the acquiring of lands and the speedy construction of the buildings necessary and proper for the carrying into effect this urgent public benefaction, when legally empowered so to do.

Respectfully submitted,
J. H. DOANE,
HENRY KROUSE,
J. PERRY,
W. H. GARRISON,
BRADFORD JONES,
Committee.

On motion the report was received and recommendation adopted without dissent.

By the Committee on Marion Avenue Bridge.

Gentlemen—Your committee hereby reports that it has visited the site of the proposed bridge, and finds that Marion avenue is a newly-graded and stone street and has been accepted by the Borough of New Providence.

A temporary bridge of timbers and old planks has been erected over the stream, but is unsafe and inadequate.

Your committee would respectfully recommend that a new bridge be built over the stream, to be twelve feet span and about thirty feet in length. The bridge to have a covering of steel beams and concrete or brick arches and to cost not more than $750.

Respectfully submitted,
BRADFORD JONES,
W. H. SWAIN,
ELSTON DARBY,
Committee.

Freeholder Derby moved the report be received and recommendation adopted, which on roll call was unanimously adopted.

By the Committee on Race Street Bridge, Rahway.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Race Street Bridge, Rahway, would respectfully report that it has examined the present bridge over the raceway, on Race street, and find that it is built of wood. The walls of the old bridge are in very bad condition and the wooden covering is well rotted, and must shortly be replaced to avoid accident.

Your committee would recommend that a new bridge, with concrete walls and reenforced concrete arches be built at the place named, and that the proper structure be entirely abandoned and removed, the new bridge to cost not more than $600.

Respectfully submitted,
W. H. RANDOLPH,
W. H. GARRISON,
Committee.

Freeholder Randolph moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, and it was ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

By the Committee on Monroe Street Bridge Replanikng.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to investigate the matter of replanking the Monroe street bridge, at Rahway, would respectfully report that it has visited the bridge site and finds that the bridge is planked with wooden planking, placed on wooden floor beams. This wooden construction lasts but a short time, and is at present in bad shape.

Your committee is of the opinion that the Shuman bridge pavement, composed of creosoted wooden strips, bolted together, and set upon floor beams should be used in the covering of this bridge.

This pavement is very largely used in bridge floor construction at present and is said to last a long while without repair.

Your committee would therefore recommend that the present wooden floor beams be replaced with steel beams and the bridge be recovered with Shuman pavement at a total cost not to exceed the sum of $2,750.

Respectfully submitted,
ADOLPH GRUENER,
JACOB MARTIN,
Committee.

Freeholder Martin moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which on roll call was so ordered without dissent.

By the Committee on Westfield Avenue Culvert, Westfield.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to investigate the condition of the Westfield avenue culvert would report having examined said culvert and find that it is a very old stone culvert built without foundation and on the point of falling in. The Town of Westfield is about to macadamize this road and lower the grade and the culvert of necessity will have to be rebuilt.

We therefore recommend that a new culvert be constructed at this point either with concrete or a corrugated iron pipe re-enforced with concrete at a cost not to exceed $350.

CHARLES A. SMITH,
BRADFORD JONES,
W. J. THOMPSON,
Committee.

Freeholder Smith moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

By Committee on Soldiers' Monuments.

Gentlemen—The Board of Freeholders, at a recent session instructed its Committee on Soldiers' Monuments to make application to the Quartermaster General of the United States Army for monuments to mark the graves of the soldiers of the American Revolution, including those who served in the wars of 1798, 1812 and 1846. Your committee would respectfully report that after a conference with the Quartermaster General of the army that official expressed a willingness to promptly supply, free of expense to the county, all markers that may be requisitioned by Union countq. The stones will be shipped by the Government to the nearest railroad station, on application by our supervisor, who has been provided with the necessary official blanks.

Respectfully submitted,

J. PERRY,
W. H. RANDOLPH,
C. J. JENSEN,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Jensen received and placed on file.

By the Committee on Soldiers' Monuments.

Gentlemen—At the November meeting the board was pleased to impose upon me the task of securing the names and military record of all soldiers and sailors of the Civil and Spanish-American Wars interred in the various cemeteries of Union county, together with a list of graves that have been marked and left unmarked by the Government or county.

Total number of graves	1,084
Marked by county	236
Marked by government	255
Stones ordered by county (not yet erected)	61
Total number unmarked	593

Having completed the work entrusted to me, as far as possible, I have the honor to submit the above as a report of researches and laborious personal investigation.

BOYNTON'S
Single Oven
Newport Range

Undoubtedly, Mrs. Housewife, you know the *dis*advantages of the ordinary kitchen range, but do you know the *ad*vantages of the famous Boynton Single Oven NEWPORT Range?

We haven't space for the whole story, but will tell you part; and first—as a cooker, the "NEWPORT" is the "best yet." Its design is classical (see cut) with smooth, perfect castings and highly finished nickel parts. This means a clean stove and less kitchen work.

Some cooks like the fire box on the right side of the oven, some on the left—"NEWPORTS" are fitted both ways. "NEWPORT" dampers are convenient—the "NEWPORT" water back is large and effective. Every good feature of other ranges is incorporated in the "NEWPORT" and some that are exclusive. Don't buy a range until you see the Boynton man in your town and learn about "NEWPORT" Ranges.

New Business.

By Freeholder Adams.

Whereas, it is reported that an action has been brought against the county for damages by reason of an alleged accident at the bridge on North avenue over the Cranford river; therefore be it

Resolved, That herto attached bill for $500 be referred to the committee on said bridge and County Attorney with power to authorize the County Collector to pay the same, if in their opinion the county will be amply protected after so doing.

Freeholder Wilbur moved to adjourn, which was carried. The Director declared the board adjourned until Thursday, May 5, at 2:30 p. m.

Signed,
BENJAMIN KING,
Clerk.

ARTIFICIAL BOUTONNIERE.

The French mode of wearing artificial flowers on the street costume has for months been knocking at our doors, and at last has been accepted with a rush.

American women have been prejudiced against the cloth or silk gardenia or dahlia, though why we cannot explain to the astonished Parisians. "Why madame, you wear no real flowers on your hats," said one emphatic Frenchman, "yet you will not bring the exquisite touch of spring down to your coat!" And when we consider what that means it gives us an appreciation of the possibilities of the boutonniere.

It will not wither, and gives just a suggestion of relieving color below the face.

Carnellas streaked with pink, white gardenias surrounded with waxy leaves, or violets that are scented in their never-fading glory are the most favored.

Of course, in the selections of these flowers it is cheaper to pay a high price, which sounds paradoxical. They last a longer time and look eminently better than the cheaper grades. The coloring is always better in the more expensive varieties, and though deception should not be encouraged in dress, there is an attractive freshness of the higher-priced flowers that is second only to the real thing.

The Ingredients.

Buds, floods,
Whitewash and suds.
Birdies that gleefully sing;
Bees, trees,
Maybe a breeze,
Such are the factors of spring.

Hats, gnats,
Searchers for flats,
Stray butterflies on the wing;
Sleet, heat,
Carpets to beat,
Such are the factors of spring.

HER KINDLY VERDICT

Naturally one would expect the Lakehurst Country club to be at Lakehurst. That was why, when the conductor of the suburban train shouted "Lakehurst!" Dilkins arose and got off. The sight of the station of stucco and the gravel walks was cheering, for somehow it seemed that with all this up-to-dateness for a start it promised well for a good dinner, and Dilkins was hungry.

When the Spaffords had invited him to dine with them Sunday at the Lakehurst club Spafford had said: "You know where it is, don't you?" Dilkins, well aware that for one to betray ignorance of the Lakehurst club was to announce one's self outside the social pale, had answered airily that of course he knew. He accepted the reminder that if he missed the 12:30 train he would be late for dinner with the air of being perfectly familiar with the train service in that direction. Spafford had added slyly that Miss Higgins, who was to make the fourth of the little party, was a mighty pretty girl.

Of course, if Dilkins had inquired of the station agent it would have been different, but spying what evidently was a large clubhouse a quarter of a mile away, he set out briskly in its direction. He was enjoying himself hugely. He could not have been doing it any better had he dined and golfed at the Lakehurst club for years.

The deferential man in buttons at the club door fitted into the picture and the man in the checkroom completed Dilkins' peace of mind. He liked things to be in keeping. The Spaffords were not in sight, but then their machine might have broken down.

Dilkins wandered back and forth uncomfortably. He noticed the clerk at the desk furtively discussing him with the man in buttons. Finally, as Dilkins passed the desk in his peregrinations, the clerk coughed.

"Er—were you expecting to meet some one?" he inquired.

"Yes," said Dilkins. "The Spaffords. I'm to dine with them."

"Spafford?" repeated the clerk sadly. "There isn't any Spafford belonging to the club!"

When Dilkins and the clerk came to understand each other Dilkins had learned that he was not in the Lakehurst club. He was in the Star Tennis and Golf club at Lakehurst—and the Lakehurst Country club was at the next station, Wilmore. Just why it was at Wilmore when it was named after Lakehurst the clerk could not tell the indignant Dilkins. He believed it had been built before the railroad station was established and somebody who thought the spot looked as though it ought to be named Wilmore was responsible for the complication.

Dilkins got his coat and hat and was respectfully bowed out, feeling like a horse thief. He walked very hurriedly to the stucco station to wait for the next train, a half-hour off. He felt very bitter. Still, maybe dinner would be late and he would not have to reveal his crude mistake. Since Miss Higgins was a very pretty girl, she was likely to be intolerant of mistakes, and he hated to be laughed at. Besides, it would show that he not only was ignorant of the Lakehurst club, but that he had been making a cheap bluff.

He was in a state of nervous tension when he finally alighted at Wilmore. He sighed with relief at the sight of a vehicle labeled "Clubhouse bus" and climbed in. This would expedite matters. If worst came to worst, he could tell the Spaffords that he had missed the 12:30 train and had to take the next one. Well, he had taken it, hadn't he?

Engaged in these reflections, Dilkins did not realize at first that the bus had really stopped.

"Hotel!" cried the driver, opening the door.

Dilkins, speechless, looked. It was indeed the small hotel of Wilmore. There was no sign of its being even the remotest imitation of a clubhouse—and Dilkins was so hungry by this time that he could have eaten tin cans with a relish.

"I want the Lakehurst clubhouse," he explained, grimly.

"Oh," said the driver, "that's a mile down the other road—just three blocks the other side of the station!"

The driver took Dilkins to the clubhouse for $2. It was then 2:30 o'clock.

Dilkins found the Spaffords and Miss Higgins. They all wore the contented, complacent and tolerant look of those who have dined well, thus making Dilkins feel younger than ever.

Just as he had finished an elaborately varnished tale of missing the train, Churketts, a mutual friend, strolled up.

"Hello, Dilkins," he said. "Didn't I see you getting off the 12:30 at Lakehurst and heading toward the Star club? I didn't know you ever went there!"

Dilkins after one slaying glance at the innocent Churketts, turned humbly to the Spaffords. "Say," he murmured, "I'm not even a good liar. Anyhow, if I didn't know where your confounded old club was, you might forget it and take me out and feed me before I die at your feet!"

"I think the whole thing is deliciously funny, Mr. Dilkins!" cried Miss Higgins, who was indeed distractingly pretty.

"Do you?" asked Dilkins, thankfully. "Well, I feel better already!"

A Charming Girl.

The greatest charm in a young girl is her simplicity, and by simplicity one does not mean stupidity. The charm of real simplicity is an entire absence of boldness, cynicism and assumed worldly wisdom, so often met with in the modern girl. Absolute candor and sincerity are the attributes of true simplicity, and they are characteristics which invariably attract men when choosing their future wives.—Home Notes.

A Bed of Bayonets.

A certain devotee in India shows his religious zeal by lying on a row of seven bayonets. As long as he keeps rigid he is not hurt, but when he happens to move one of his legs the point of a bayonet immediately pierces his skin. As the man was trained to perform this feat from childhood, no doubt his skin is somewhat thicker than that of an ordinary man.—Strand.

Queer Attribute of Salmon.

Only about 20 per cent. of salmon spawn before they return up the river from the sea, and those that do return after spawning are coarse, and, when cut up, white in the flesh; in fact, are known as bull trout, for so-called "bull trout" are not a different kind of fish, but are plainly salmon which have spawned.

In Praise of Angling.

We may say of angling, as Dr. Boteler said of strawberries, "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did." And so, if I might be judge, God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling.—Izaak Walton, "The Complete Angler."

Use of Natural Gas.

During the last three years there has been a fairly steady increase in the quantity of natural gas used in this country for domestic purposes, a decrease in the quantity used for manufacturing purposes, and an increase in the average price.

Abyssinia a Rich Country.

While in the valleys of Abyssinia are grown sugar cane, cotton, rubber and other tropical plants, the inlands have excellent pastures and corn fields, such as may be found in England.

Drink It Standing.

MINSTRELS MAKE A HIT

More Than 1,000 Attended the Burnt Cork Performance at Hope.

TOPICAL SONG A WINNER.

Verses Composed by Judge Runyon and Sung by Thomas M. Muir —Troupe Makes a Present to the Coach.

The third and last night of the Hope chapel minstrel show went off without a hitch of any kind last night and the young men played to a capacity audience. Under the direction of William N. Runyon, the troupe acquitted itself with great credit. There was frequent and hearty applause particularly following the solo work, the wholesome jokes, as well as the rest of the program.

Special mention should be made of the work of Thomas M. Muir in the singing of his topical song. It was the hit of the show, and before he concluded the many verses he was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses. William Anderson, Frederick V. Tallamy, W. J. Firstbrook, as well as the other soloists came in for a share of applause.

More than 1,025 people witnessed the performance during the three nights it was given. Last night just before the medley was sung closing the first part of the show, Ben Evans, the interlocutor, on behalf of the troupe, as well as the William N. Runyon Association, under whose auspices the affair was given, presented Judge Runyon with a handsome diamond stick pin. The Judge made a happy response, thanking the troupe and association; also the many patrons of the affair.

After the show the troupe, together with several friends, adjourned to the Hotel Iroquois, where a repast was enjoyed. Covers were laid for fifty-six. There was an informal song-fest in celebration of the great success attending the show.

A feature of the program last night was the violin and piano playing of Joseph Denny. His versatile work brought down the house, being exceedingly clever not only on the violin, but with the piano. He was recalled several times.

The committee which had charge of the show and also arranged for the supper, comprised William Anderson, chairman; Benjamin Evans, John Chamberlain and Russell Randolph. James Penny was chairman of the finance committee and Allen Snyder was in charge of the box office. The verses of the topical song as composed by Judge Runyon and sung by Thomas M. Muir follow:

IN THE SWEET BYE AND BYE.

If you listen I will sing a little song of joy to come
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
We'll have everything adjusted and no longer on the bum
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
Every man will hold his temper and remain sedate and cool,
Every kid will start to beller if they keep him out of school.
And the only law in town will be the good old golden rule.
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

Chorus.
In the Sweet Bye and Bye,
Gee I hope it comes about before
I die.
I'd be very glad to wait,
If they'll only fix a date
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

Do you think the Eastern Bottling Company's going to get its pay?
In the Sweet Bye and Bye?
For the stuff it sold the city last July on Charter Day
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
They have stung it good and proper,
and it seems extremely queer,
That the Mayor and Common Council should for pretty near a year,
Do nothing else but promise that that they'd pay the bill for beer.
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
—Chorus.

People say the city autos will improve the town a lot,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
The Street and Fire Departments will be Johnny-On-the-Spot
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
Now that Mr. Gavett has a car to help him with his cares,
Now that T. O. Doane can motor out to see the baseball players,
Don't you think they'd ought to buy another one for Aleck Ayers?
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
—Chorus.

Since the great election 's over, do you think we'll win or lose,

CAN'T USE GROUNDS FOR SUNDAY GAMES

The fight being waged against Sunday ball playing at Scotch Plains took another turn yesterday and those opposed to the Sunday sport claim that Manager Joseph Alberts will be unable to play the game scheduled with the Stirling A. C., of Brooklyn, tomorrow, on account of being unable to secure the grounds.

The property which was used last year by the club was leased of Mrs. John H. Coles, who in turn leased it of Dr. J. Ackerman Coles and the Warren Ackerman estate. It is said that the wording of the lease gives the right of the lessee to use the ground for agricultural purposes only.

Soon as this became known the opponents of Sunday ball got in touch with the agents and owners of the property, and it is said that the latter will insist to the ball club's officials that the contract be respected which prohibits ball games being played on the ground.

'COLLEGE' ATHLETIC MEET AT GRACE M.E. CHURCH

A miniature college athletic meet furnished a unique entertainment given under the auspices of the Epworth League of the Grace M. E. church last night. There were four teams in the competition, Princeton, Columbus, Cornell and Yale. The Tiger team, captained by Clarence Steiner, was victorious. David Smalley captained the Yale aggregation; Rev. Ora J. Shoop, piloted Columbia, and Russell Hardin headed the Ithicans.

Football was played on a board with ping pong balls. Other games embraced putting the shot, throwing the discus and a fan ball contest. The members of the different teams wore miniature flags indicating the colors of the various colleges represented.

Despite the stormy weather about seventy-five were in attendance. Following the "athletic contests" refreshments were enjoyed. The entertainment was supervised by J. Russell Hardin and Raymond Miller and these were assisted by the social committee of the league which consisted of the Misses Grace and Lucetta Clark, Ada Van Horne, Mary Steiner, Edith Major, Nettie Bauersachs, Benjamin Schuck and David Smalley.

WHAT DO YOU CONSIDER THE POPULATION IS NOW?

What's the population of Plainfield? What's the population of North Plainfield? The Daily Press will give $5.00 in gold to the man, woman or child living in Plainfield giving the nearest correct guess as to the city's population as announced in the forthcoming official census. To the resident of North Plainfield who comes nearest to guessing its population five dollars will be given. It is not necessary to be a subscriber to this paper to qualify; in fact there are no conditions other than that you be a resident of the municipality of which you make a guess as to the population. All guesses must be made over the signature of the contestant; no attention will be paid to anonymous communications, following the regular policy of this paper.

The census enumerators are at work. Before the result of their labor is officially announced this contest will be closed and therefore, those who wish to make a guess should do so without delay. Many guesses have been received. Send in yours now! Boys and girls here is a chance for you.

WALPOLE IS RELEASED IN ONE THOUSAND BAIL.

Charles Walpole, one of the alleged assaulters of Motorman Fred Skillman and Conductor James Glassford, at Scotch Plains on Thursday night, was put under bonds of $1,000 last night by City Judge William N. Runyon to await the action of the grand jury. Walpole's father signed the bonds.

Kinderling, the other alleged offender has not yet been apprehended by the police, but it is likely that he will be taken into custody today.

In the Police Court.

In the absence of Judge Runyon this morning, Mayor Charles J. Fisk presided in the city court. He put one unfortunate on probation.

FANWOOD FEELS FUNNY

When the Township Committee Meets to Consider Certain Things.

'PHONE FRANCHISE TO WAIT.

Suit Against John Mair by Mr. Guttridge Subject to Decision of Court.

At the meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee last night, something outside the ordinary took place including the petition of the New York Telephone for wire privileges in the township and a calling to account of the P. S. Railway for its withdrawal of a car. Then the suit instituted by James Gutttridge against John Mair for false arrest in which the amount involved is $10,000, was aired, and some complicated matters in connection therewith made plain.

The petition of the New York Telephone Company for permission to lay or string its wires was referred to Township Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and the matter will be taken up at a special meeting of the committee on May 7. The withdrawal of the 8 o'clock main line trolley car on Sundays was the subject of protest and the corporation was notified that it was violating the terms of the franchise in withdrawing the car. This matter will be pushed.

A committee headed by John Mair made a further complaint against the rendering factory of the Glazer Company and according to all accounts the story of complaint against the company was a rehash of the story so frequently mentioned in this paper. The committee listened patiently to the tales of woe presented by the citizens of Alton and advised the complaining people to put their grievances in proper form of affidavit after which the proper attention will be given the complaint.

In the matter of the suit brought by James Guttridge for $10,000, to which the attention of everybody in the township appears to have been called, and which the defendant in the suit, John Mair, claimed that the Township Committee should assume the expense of suit, will have to await the calling of the case in October next, when the perplexing question as to errors in the framing of the complaint, on which Mr. Guttridge suffered arrest, are settled.

CHANGES IN CHOIR IN LOCAL CHURCHES

Several changes will be inaugurated in local church choirs tomorrow for the coming year. At the First Baptist church, Miss Ruth Harris, soprano, and Miss Hazel Hattfield, contralto, of New York, will make their first appearance, succeeding Miss Louella C. Harris and Miss Josie Bracker, who retired a week ago. The music will be in charge of Howard Case, organist and choirmaster.

At Trinity Reformed church, Mrs. Bayard Hawthorne, contralto, will succeed Miss Winifred Carroll, who goes to the First Presbyterian church. Mrs. Hawthorne formerly sang at the Church of the Heavenly Rest and more recently at Cranford. She has a pleasing voice and it is believed will be a valuable addition to the quartet.

At the services in the First Presbyterian church tomorrow the new quartet will be heard for the first, and an especially fine program has been arranged by Clifford S. Braider, organist and choirmaster. Miss Jeanette C. Grant, formerly soprano soloist, has taken a similar position at the Hillside Presbyterian church, Orange, and Herbert R. Byard, baritone of the same choir, will be the soloist in the Presbyterian church, Cranford.

Two changes will be noted at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. B. B. Pettigrew, baritone, who resigned to go to the Brick Presbyterian church, Orange, will be succeeded by A. E. Betteridge, of New York city, and Alexander Russell will be the new organist, succeeding R. Laslett Smith. The other members of the quartet are Miss Lillian Vernon Watt, soprano; Miss Carroll, contralto, and LeRoy S. Pilcher, tenor.

Arrested for Trespassing.

Tony Mascarelli, was arraigned before Justice Snape last night on the charge of cutting sod on posted grounds belonging to George White on Willow avenue. Justice Snape dismissed the case on Mascarelli's agreement to pay the costs of court and Mr. White for the sod.

BARTLE GETS VERDICT AGAINST A CONTRACTOR

Judge Isaac P. Runyon, as counsel for William E. Bartle, of this city, against Barnhard & Son, of Trenton, in the Supreme Court at Somerville yesterday, gained a notable verdict for his client in which the jury upheld a verbal contract.

Barnhard & Son were the contractors for the stone work on the Darrow avenue school. In sub-letting the contract the Trenton firm issued specifications calling for "native stone." Among those who furnished figures on the job was Bartle. The latter's estimate was $1,800 and the Barnhard firm accepted his offer verbally and told him to start on the work.

According to the evidence in the case Bartle got the stone from his quarry after $400 had been involved for work and expenses; at this point Bartle was notified by Barnhard & Son to stop all work as they were going to use lime stone and later gave the contract to a Trenton man, for Indiana lime stone.

The Barnhards asked Bartle to give them an estimate on the latter grade of stone but Bartle refused to do so until he was paid the expense involved in furnishing stone according to the verbal contract which had been repudiated by the Barnhards.

Accordingly Judge Runyon instituted suit and the jury awarded Bartle a verdict of $450, being the full amount of damage, claims and profits involved in carrying out the verbal contract.

Barnhard & Son were represented by Linton Satterthwait, of Trenton, and John Frech, of Somerville.

ANNUAL STATEMENT OF THE PARK CLUB

Donald A. McGee, treasurer of the Park Club, has presented his report for the year ending March 31, 1910. This shows the income of the club for the past year to be $8,723.87, as against $7,619.18 for 1909, an increase of $1,104.69. The expenditures for 1910 were $7,790.43, as against $7,240.28 last year, an increase of $550.15. The surplus for the year is $933.44 as against $378.90 for last year, an increase of $554.54.

There was a reduction of $350 on the Plainfield Trust Company loan. The working assets of the club are $1,566.20, and increase of $456.11 over last year. The building and real estate is valued at $22,500, furniture, $6,000, a total of $30,066.20. The working liabilities are $1,441.49 against $1,918.82 last year.

Bonds due 1923, $9,000; club funds invested in property, $19,500; operating surplus; Surplus for the year, $933.44; previous deficit, $808.73.

Stuart A. Patterson, chairman of the finance committee, states that the year just closed shows graifying results in the matter of net income, which was $933.44, after providing for all expenses and redeeming one bond and leaves a net working surplus of $124.71. The report shows receipts from rentals of $901.50; profit on cigars, $427.46; initiations, $420; Comedy Club, $75, an increase of $920.09.

MUSICAL SERVICE.

Special Program at First M. E. Church.

The choir of the First M. E. church, asisted by Alfred Moser, of Westfield, violinist, will give a special musical service at the church tomorrow night, under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff, organist and choirmaster. This will be the program:

Prelude, "Meditation," violin and organ; processional hymn, 621; anthem, "Rejoice in the Lord," Harker; prayer, solo, "He was Despised," Handel, Miss Jessie Haynes; psalter and gloria; anthem, "Weary Pilgrims Know No Fear," Leoni, choir; duet, "Ave Maria," Mozart, the Misses Willis and Haynes; offertory, "Evening Star," Wagner, violin and organ; solo, "O Divine Redeemer," Gounod, Miss Willis; anthem, "And God Shall Wipe Away all Tears," Coombs, choir; hymn, 649; recessional.

MR. AND MRS. COCKRAN MARRIED SEVEN YEARS.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Cockran, of 183 Watchung avenue, tendered a reception to about fifty friends last night in honor of their seventh wedding anniversary. Card playing, music and dancing afforded much entertainment. Mr. and Mrs. Cockran were the recipients of numerous handsome presents and the latter was given a "postal card shower" in honor of the event.

COURTS OPEN TUESDAY

Three Jurists to Be on the Bench But the Lists are Small.

TO CHARGE THE GRAND JURY.

Speculation at to Matters to Be Called to the Attention of the Grand Inquest.

The May term of the Union county courts will open with the usual formalities on Tuesday morning. Three judges will sit at that time. Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen will occupy the bench in his court, and will share it for the formal opening of court with Judge Edward S. Atwater and Judge Benjamin F. Vail, of the Circuit Court.

A feature of each opening day is the swearing in of the Grand Jury. While there are few important cases to be considered by this body this term it is too early to estimate the amount of work which the body will be called upon to transact. There is much speculation as to the specific subject on which Justice Bergen will charge the Grand Inquest.

The organization of the Jury is the first thing done on the opening day. The jurors are escorted into the courtroom by the Sheriff, and after receiving their instructions they go to the Grand Jury room to begin the work of the term.

The marking of the list of causes in the civil courts then takes place. The courtroom is usually crowded with attorneys and their clerks, who answer at the call of the judge as to whether or not their cases are ready for trial. The list up to yesterday indicated that the term would not be a heavy one, but during the day several new issues were begun, and it begins to look as though the civil courts—the Supreme and Circuit—will be about normal as far as the number of cases to be tried is concerned.

On the opening day, or after the Grand Jury is sworn in, Judge Atwater opens the Court of Common Pleas for the term. Several applications for inn and tavern licenses and renewals of licenses will come up on the opening day.

Another feature of the opening day is the meeting of the Union County Bar Association. This is always held after the list of causes has been completed.

STAMP MACHINE FACTORY WILL BE LOCATED HERE

One of the things which is interesting Uncle Sam and a whole lot of people all over the country is a machine invented by P. H. Pollock, of Baltimore, Md., which is intended to do away with microbes and other baccilli which one might encounter in the ordinary course of events when trying to mail a letter, a stamp vending arrangement. Mr. Pollock, the inventor of the machine, has been here for about a week endeavoring to interest Plainfielders in his machine.

The object of Mr. Pollock's visit to this city is to interest investors in a machine which has the approval of the United States Government. The invention is a marvelously simple one but it answers the requirements of all the demands made upon it by the government officials.

The machine is so sensitive to the attempts of "pushers of the coin" that a counterfeit cannot get by and therein lies the value of the machine. Kenneth Mackenzie, one of the promoters of the new company, demonstrated the working of the machine to a few interested persons this morning and the probabilities are that before the week is over there will be nothing in the way of preferred stock to be bought. The company proposes to build a factory here and operations will begin before the summer is over.

Postmaster Bird, of this city, has placed the stamp of approval on the new device, so it is said, and the Washington authorities have made it apparent that they will approve the machine as soon as a plant sufficiently capable is established to produce the machines as fast as wanted.

The coin detecting device on the machine is absolutely perfect in separating spurious from genuine coins and a special little mechanism prevents duplication of delivery of stamps from the slot. It is understood that the company will locate its factory in this city and the officers are now looking for a location.

Mrs. H. C. Krebs, of the borough, has returned from Atlantic City, where she has been sojourning for two weeks.

GRAND JURY TO TAKE UP MURDER CASE ON MONDAY

Thirty odd borough residents will appear before the Somerset County Grand Jury at Somerville on Monday morning for the purpose of giving evidence as to the murder of Mrs. Frederick Covely on Thursday, April 10, by John V. Buckley alias John Grant. It is the general impression that Buckley will be speedily indicted for the crime and placed on trial during the week of May 9.

Robert Newton Crane, who has been engaged by William Mernagh, Jr., to defend Buckley has little to say on the probable line of defense he will pursue in an effort to save Buckley from the electric chair except that he will furnish the prosecution with a big surprise.

From all accounts Buckley is not worrying a bit as to the outcome of his trial. On the contrary he appears to be little interested in his surroundings or predicament. He has little to do with his fellow prisoners and spends a good deal of his time in reading books.

DUNELLEN HAS FIGHT WITH LAND COMPANY

Protests were registered by the Dunellen Board of Trade at its meeting last night over the plans of the Equator Park Development Company of that place in laying out streets on the former Sanford tract which was purchased by the company several months ago. It was claimed by the members that the plans of the company, if carried out, will spoil the beauties of Front street, Dunellen avenue, First, Second, Third and Fourth streets.

The Borough Council was petitioned to prevent the land company from carrying out its plans on the above named grounds. Another resolution was adopted petitioning the Council, should the land company insist in carrying out its plans, to run Dunellen avenue through the tract on a straight line to Gallagher's Corner by condemnation proceedings.

Indications point to a merry fight between the land company and the borough authorities in the future should the former decide to adhere to their plans. Speeches against the proposition were made by Edward Maurer, F. D. Baerman, former Mayor Harry Swackhamer, Borough Clerk A. S. Coriell and George Sumner Smith.

COURT REFUSES LIQUOR LICENSE FOR DUNELLEN

The application of Edward A. Hirsch, of Dunellen, for a wholesale liquor license at that place was denied by Judge Lyon in the Middlesex county court at New Brunswick yesterday. Hirsch presented an application signed by eighty persons who favored granting the license and also informed the court that Dunellen was in need of another place and that the town is now being supplied by beer from wagons that come from other places. Hirsch represented to the court that Mayor Sanford and other officials in the borough were in favor of the license being granted.

Judge Lyon, in refusing the application, declared that he had received two objections to the place from manufacturers, and even if he had not, he would have refused the license as he had repeatedly stated that he would not grant any new petitions. Judge Lyon also declared that he would not renew any applications where there have been violations of the law.

"THE THREE TWINS" TONIGHT AT THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Seldom has an attraction been booked to appear at the Plainfield theatre that has created such interest as Jos. M. Gaites' smart musical comedy, "Three Twins," which is announced for tonight. This play caused a positive sensation in New York last season, where it enjoyed a most phenomenal run of ten months to record breaking business. Mr. Gaites has mounted it with a lavishness that rarely is seen in travelling companies and the company presenting "Three Twins" is one of the best ever organized.

ELIZABETH BIG WINNER

Musical Instructor Wilson Shows Proof of Efficiency in Methods.

APPLAUSE REPLACES HISSING.

Changes in System of Contests Suggested by Yesterday's Performances in Local Auditorium.

The second and final tests between pupils of the various public schools were contested yesterday afternoon and evening in the High School auditorium before immense audiences, and again Elizabeth children distinguished themselves by winning with ease in all but one of the numbers. This last went to Plainfield, four-part songs, with a mark of 78, the nearest competitors being three other schools between which the judges could not make a selection. Elizabeth, New Brunswick and North Plainfield receiving the same mark, 76. This contest was not finished until nearly midnight.

The afternoon contests began with two-part songs in which Elizabeth won with ease, with a mark of 76. New Brunswick was next with 75 1-3 and Plainfield third with 74 2-3. In the three-part songs Elizabeth again showed in front with a mark of 79%. Bound Brook pressed hard by New Brunswick, squeezed home a winner with 78. New Brunswick's figure being 76 2-3 with an added honorabe mention. This caused some cheering and a few hisses to which a prompt stop was put by superintendent Maxson.

Miss Anna Jamba, of Elizabeth, showed the way in the sight singing tests which followed. Miss Jamba won easily with 78. Isabelle Kohlhepp and Ethel Samuels, of New Brunswick, were next in order.

Interest centered in the orchestral work of the pupils which was third on the evening's program. Here again Elizabeth came to the front with the unanimous verdict of the judges, while Bound Brook was given second place. The only other competitor was the Westfield School orchestra. Elizabeth also won the boys' chorus two-part song contest, having a shade the best of Westfield.

From the opinions gathered by those in attendance it is believed that the making of the contests an annual affair will materially aid the children of the schools to cultivate the taste for music, but some other ararngements will be necessary in order to avoid the delays and late hours made necessary by the present system. It was long after midnight last night when the last of the children got away from the school and they were a tired lot of youngsters. From the viewpoint of the supervisors of music the contests were a success. Supervisor Thomas Wilson, of Elizabeth, was the recipient of many congratulations for the wonderful work done by the pupils of the schools over which he worked so hard for this contest. Miss Ethel Bray, of Westfield, shared in the honors. Some of the Westfield singers and players showed remarkable talent. Plainfield will do better another time, and appeared to be content with her share of applause.

TRINITY COMMANDERY, K. T., TO CONDUCT EXCURSION.

Under the auspices of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., the semi-centennial jubilee excursion train will leave here for Trenton, Tuesday morning, May 10, at 9:30 o'clock. Trinity Commandery extends a cordial invitation to its friends to unite with it on this special train to witness a magnificent Knights Templar pageant and parade and join in the festivities to be held at Trenton that day.

Tickets may be secured at Leifke & Laing's offices; J. Hervey Doane's store or at Schreiner's drug store. An advertisement in another part of The Daily Press will give further particulars.

Elks' Lodge Bonds Due.

Plainfield Lodge, B. P. O. Elks, at its meeting on Wednesday night, resolved that the 5-year bonds issued in 1905 when the lodge took possession of their rooms on East Second street, are due and payable on June 1 to Harry B. MacDonald, treasurer, at the Plainfield Savings Bank. The bonds amount to $8,000 and have been bearing 5 per cent. interest.

CONVICTED OF HOLDING UP AND ROBBING 49 MEN.

Hackensack, April 30.—A jury, late yesterday afternoon, convicted Cologio Lampuso and Santo Genero, of New York, of holding up and robbing forty-nine Italians and one negro on the night of November 1, 1909, in a railroad shanty at Glen Rock. The jury deliberated two hours.

Only three of the victims, Joachino Barcelna, Finelli Parisi and Arngelo Palermo, were put on the stand by Prosecutor Wendel, J. Wright. All of the witnesses told how they had been taken from their boxcar by two men while two others robbed them. The other two implicated in the crime have not been apprehended.

It is estimated that the accused and their pals corraled about $1,560 in money and $300 worth of jewelry.

John S. Mackay, counsel for the defendants, produced fifteen witnesses in his endeavor to establish an alibi. In connection with Genero the witnesses testified that it was his sister's birthday and a party was given in her home, the defendant being one of those present. Lampuso's witnesses stated that they had purchased goods from him in his grocery store at 118 Christie street, after 11 o'clock on the night in question. The witnesses in behalf of both defendants said that they could readily recall the time because it was "All Saints' Day," which was being generally celebrated by their countrymen throughout the neighborhood.

DRUGGIST INDICTED, CHEATS THE COURTS.

Bridgeton, April 30.—When a policeman appeared in the drug store of Harry Kirchhoff to summon him to court on a grand jury indictment, the druggist took his life.

The grand jury at Thursday's sessions found a true bill against Kirchhoff and his clerk, Elmer Loper, on the charge of selling liquor illegally.

Policeman Gaun was given the summonses to serve on the druggist and his clerk. When he arrived at Kirschhoff's place of business and told his errand the druggist said: "That means I've been indicted, don't it? Well, good-by, everybody."

He went upstairs, the policeman thought, to say farewell to his family, but while there took some deadly stuff, which operated almost instantly, leaving him a corpse.

Wants Tax Law Amended.

Roselle, April 30.—The Board of Trade of the Roselles Thursday night decided to call a conference of representatives of boards of trade and civic organizations from towns and boroughs to discuss the advisability of urging the Legislature to make a change in the law which provides for one tax assessor to make assessments in boroughs. This action was taken after Mayor Charles W. MacQuoid, representing, as chairman, the Committee of Taxes and Valuation, recommended that an effort be made to have the assessments determined by a local board of taxation. The Mayor contended that the one-man system of assessing property was unsatisfactory. He asked that the committee be given the power to call the conference with the representatives of other boards for the purpose of discussing the recommendations. His request was granted.

Humoring Him.

"Oh! I forgot to tell you to bring down my scissors, too," said the spoiled wife. "They're on the table in the bedroom. Won't you get them for me?"

"See here," complained the indulgent husband, "I'm tired of waiting on you in this way—"

"Are you, dear? Well, just be patient and I'll let you wait on me in some other way."—The Catholic Standard and Times.

Letting Him Down.

"How do you usually lead up to a spring hat?"

"I generally begin by talking to my husband about a trip to Europe."

Smoker Scenery.

"I suppose you saw some interesting scenery on your trip across the continent."

"A little. Once I held four kings."

HIGH ROLLING IN THE TWO-MAN TOURNAMENT

A good-sized sprinkling of scores over the double century mark featured the rolling in Campbell's two-man tourney last night. Taylor, O'Keefe, Causbrook and Conover starred in the fancy work. Conover was high man in the series with Clarkson with a score of 242. The scores:

Taylor	187	214	162
O'Keefe	167	142	214
	354	356	376
Nash	182	163	180
Causbrook	171	210	179
	353	373	359
Taylor	193	143	167
O'Keefe	166	189	145
	359	322	312
Clarkson	154	112	158
Conover	146	143	242
	300	255	400
Nash	223	193	170
Causbrook	188	215	186
	411	408	356
Conover	201	200	213
Clarkson	166	157	150
	367	357	363

BILLY MURRAY GETS $8,500 FROM QUAKERS.

At last the Murray case is settled, and the last point in the deal by which the present owners secured the Phillies has been straightened out. When the club was sold it had as one of its drawbacks a two years' ironclad contract with Billy Murray, who was not wanted as manager. The case went before the board of directors of the league and was dragged along until a few days ago, when President Lynch, Mr. Murray and Horace Fogel met in the office of the Philadelphia club and settled the case to the satisfaction of all concerned. After the meeting Mr. Murray issued the following statement:

"I simply want to say that the new owners of the Philadelphia club have settled with me on terms entirely satisfactory to me. President Lynch, of the National League, and I met President Fogel and Judge Elliot at the club's office, and in less than half an hour arrived at an amicable agreement. The new owners have dealt fairly with me, and that is all I have to say, except to add that I wish the Phillies all the good luck in the world this season."

The terms of the agreement were not made public, but it is said Murray settled at the figure named at the last meeting between himself and Fogel—something like $8,500.

WILL JOHN KLING STRENGTHEN CUBS?

There is some doubt in certain quarters as to whether the return of Johnny Kling to the Chicago Nationals' fold will add enough strength to give that team a chance to beat out Pittsburg for the banner this year.

It is argued that the Cubs were not weak behind the bat last season, that Archer did everything in the way of receiving that Kling could possibly have done, and that the additional batting that Kling would bring will not be sufficient to make a material difference in the team's standing.

It is the opinion of the members of the Cubs, however—that is, of the veterans on the team—that the presence of Kling will make a great difference in the team because of his knowledge of the game, and the fact that the players know his style and have a lot of confidence in him. One ball player often makes a wonderful difference in a team, and it may be that Kling is just the man to help the Cubs to another flag.

But to most persons who last year watched closely the Chicago team work, it wasn't so much the want of a catcher that hurt the club as it was the inefficiency of the pitching department at the start of the year.

GOLF.

Sixty-eight newspaper men competed at Van Cortlandt Park Thursday in the first tournament of the New York Newspaper Golf Club. A high wind prevented good scoring. The best actual performance was made by Herbert Jones, of the Commercial, who went around in 84. The first net prize was won by S. W. Frankel, 120, 45, 75. "Dick" Burge, with the remarkable tally of 115, won the novice trophy for men who had not played prior to April 1.

In addition to the first three prizes there was one for the thirteenth and one for the twenty-third to finish. Five were tied for the former, Mrs. G. J. Benentt, C. K. Hambridge, Roy S. Durstine, A. C. Le Gendre and C. E. Van Loan. For the "No. 23" prize "Dicky" Martin, and "Georgie" Cooper were tied, with net scores of 92. "Pop" Haines was awarded a leather medal for making the most strokes on the nineteenth hole.

Park Commissioner Higgins drove off the first ball at 10 o'clock and "Joe" McMahon was the lucky caddy to retrieve it. He received a five-dollar gold piece.

Frederick Rude, of Centerville, has been visiting friends in this city.

Miss Eva Terry, of this city, has been visiting Miss Ella Bagg, of Somerville.

Joseph M. Huff, of Centerville, who has been visiting relatives here, has returned.

Ernest Higgins, of Liberty street, who has been visiting relatives at Centerville, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Deknatel, of Belvidere avenue, will leave soon for an extended tour of Europe.

Winfield Seals, of Westfield, who underwent an operation at the hospital for eye trouble, is improving.

How old is Adams? The New Brunswick Times prints the following: "Adams, left fielder of the New Brunswicks, claims to be the man who brought Dave Driscoll out, or in other words shoved him under the baseball calcium. The first game was played by Driscoll for three dollars and he earned it."

Driscoll has been cavorting on diamonds in this territory for at least a quarter of a century. Now, how long has Adams been in the business?

Expecting to see a clash between the authorities and the members of the Scotch Plains ball club in the latter's attempt to play Sunday ball tomorrow a big exodus of sports from this city to the 'Plains is expected.

PLAINFIELD BOYS MAKING GOOD IN LEAGUE ARENA

Jimmy Emery is dazzling Reading fans with his brilliant playing at shortstop. The fielding of the Plainfield boy is of the gilt-edge brand and hardly a game goes by that Emery hasn't a bingle or so to his credit in the base-hit column.

Word from Binghamton states that Cliff Randolph's pitching wing is operating in fine shape and that Manager Jack Warner of the Bingos is predicting a bright future for the Grant avenue athlete. Randolph is slated to be one of the regular twirlers this season.

Jack Martin has had no opportunity to distinguish himself much at Worcester yet. Jesse Burkett is trying out several infielders and a nip and tuck battle is on for a job.

"Bud" Sharpe, who held down first base for Newark last season and was drafted by the Pittsburg club last fall, and Sam Frock, a former Providence twirler, were traded by the Pirates to the Boston Nationals yesterday for Pitcher Kirb White. Manager Fred Lake, of the Doves, is sweet on Sharpe, and has been after him ever since the Pirates landed the former Newarker. Sharpe will be given a chance to get Beck's job at the initial sack.

Manager Selbach, of the Harrisburg, Pa., club, has purchased the release of John "Buck" Freeman from Albany and will use the former big leaguer at first base. Selbach and Freeman played together for a number of years on the Boston Americans.

All the clubs in the Eastern League let out a peg or two Thursday and kept the scorers busy. Altogether, a total of sixty-seven runs were scored, eighty-seven hits registered and a grand total of twenty-nine errors rung up. Two home runs, five three-baggers and eleven doubles were the result of the day's slugging. Twenty twirlers were used by the eight clubs during the day. Newark, Montreal, Jersey City and Providence each had three pitchers working, while Buffalo, Rochester, Toronto and Baltimore worked two. It was an unusual day all around after the many close games the clubs have been playing up to date.

"Silent Tune" Hewitt has bobbed up with the announcement that his arm is good as when he twirled for Hope chapel in the old city league. "Tune" is not trying to organize a nine to represent the Rushmore Dynamo Company.

Jordan Back on the Job.

Tim Jordan, the elongated first sacker of the Brooklyn National League club, is putting up his old game this season. Jordan was taken ill early in the spring, and his ailment became so serious that it was feared that he would be out of harness for a long time, if not indeed the entire season. He recovered quickly, however, and joined the club as soon as possible. Jordan is a clever hitter and a brilliant fielder, and is one of the most popular members of the Dodger team. His home run drives during the past two seasons have made him one of the most feared clubbers in President Lynch's organization.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

How many of those who go to see the sights of New York care to see the greatest sight of all? The spectacle of Broadway from Trinity church to Madison Square is a moving panorama of the city and the continent, the peoples of the earth and their ant-like hurry-scurry after the rolling dollar. The other morning a tramp up town as the grand march of business men swept down to their dens revealed the old familiar scenes by the way. A still smouldering fire, a horse sprawling before a gaping crowd, who did not see until reminded that its failure to rise was because its body was downhill and its feet up. Then the spectacle of the younger sallow-faced Rockefeller, driving his cart with an ancient footman behind, half-hid in a silk hat dating from the Ark.

Thus far not an American or English name has caught the eye among the thousand signboards, and you may pace for miles without finding more than a sprinkling among the foreign names, mostly German and Jewish. Union Square is getting to be like a cockpit walled by sky scrapers. Fourth avenue is growing them fast at almost every corner. Grace church, the artistic landmark that keeps in sight from the gate of Trinity, has budded an outdoor pulpit for passing sinners willing to turn aside from the Broadway that leadeth from destruction to instruction, and gives them a grass carpet to stand on. Here we see the big Metropolitan tower, ugliest and cheapest in the world, with its welcome clock and musical Westminster chime bells, apparently standing sentry at the corners away up. A demure young lady in deep mourning unwarily treads on the subway grating near 23rd street; an express speeds under and blows the poor creature into the semblance of a slim black queen of the ballet. Here passes one of the kings of finance, gifted with large views and condensed expression, whose scanty allotment of inches, if expressed in dollar millions, would give him near the stature of the tower. Over there come three men abreast on the quick march, so much of a muchness that it is a puzzle to tell whether two detectives hold one thelf or vice versa. This snapshot is only a dot on the face of the ever-changing panorama of humanity, enjoyable every hour of every day by the sightseer weary of the littleness of stage life.

* * * *

But we weary after two hours of Broadway in spite of its myriad things to see and think about, and then we turn for restful charm to the paradise of Plainfield. A guileless city, if such there be, except that the craze for being up to date in every fashion has smitten it with the latest thing in the murder line. Merely an echo of the first Eden and its fall. The culprit no native, of course. Some whisper of another craze, the mania for flooding criminals with distorted sympathy, while spotless sufferers are passed with tip-tilted noses by Levites on the look-out for paying investments.

A green city, with dainty foliaged trees waving their feathery plumes in bright relief against the deep blue sky, forming avenues and bowers of delight as refuges from the spears of sunshine that grow slimmer every day. To sit at one's window, which not long ago used to show a desert of snow diversified with dabs of glittering ice and splotches of melted mud, and see now a fairy landscape, groves of green lace strewn over willowy boughs, and playing hide and seek beneath their shade children of some charmed forest who have escaped in the guise of lively little trees all decked in white and violet and variegated hues. What mortal, wearied by the rattle and roar of big city streets, the clatter of many tongues in Babel confusion, the hideous blasts and stench of merciless motors, could wish for or find a lovelier dwelling place than this? Its groundwork is prose, almost as perfect as need be, and from the ground upward sheer poetry and the artwork of nature in her happiest mood. In such a paradise can any Satan enter, unless disguised as a fruit tree? Alas, it harbors the taxgatherer and gives occasional shelter to the census taker.

* * * *

A few more gems of wisdom from the mouths of babes and sucklings.

When Mrs. B. has called upon Mrs. A. and the hostess has received the visitor with the most gushing enthusiasm, it is embarrassing for Tommy A. to sidle up to Mrs. B. and ask, "Do you live in a nice room, Mrs. B.?" Because Mrs. B. replies, "What a curious question! Why do you ask it?" To which Tommy answers, "Why, as you were coming up the garden, mamma said that your room was better than your company."

Unconscious also must have been the child who said, "Quotation is the answer to a division sum." The child who defied "antidote" as "a silly ant" probably analyzed the former as an ant in its dotage. The following definition of a lie was probably the fruit of experience:

"An abomination in the eyes of the Lord, but a very present help in the time of trouble."

There is a true story about that wonderful dream of Jacob's and the angels going up the ladder to heaven. "Please, sir," asked one of the boys in the class, "why did the angels want to go up the ladder when they had wings?" This noplused the teacher, who took a strategic movement to rear by saying, "Ah, yes! Why? Perhaps one of the boys can answer that." And one did. "Please, sir," said he, "because they was a-molting."

"Who made the world?" snapped out a rather testy inspector, years ago, to a class of very small boys. No answer. Several times he repeated the question, getting louder and more incensed each time. At last a poor little fellow, kneading his eyes vigorously with his knuckles, blubbered out, "Please, sir, it waddn' me."

Dry Cleaning Talk

Gentlemen's clothes cleaned by a Cleanery with the ability nad equipments to produce first-class work, will stay clean longer, as when done by an ordinary suit presser who only brushes the surface dust off and removes the most prominent spots from the surface.

With our process the garments are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, the linings are cleaned and spots that are removed will stay removed and do not appear again the first time the garments are exposed to the dust and grim of the street.

In the beginning it may cost a little more, but will pay at the end, as the clothes don't have to be at the cleaners every two weeks.

Phone us and our wagon will call.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS TO MEET AT RED BANK

The annual State convention of the Knights of Columbus will begin at St. James Club, Rahway, Tuesday, May 0. The session will be called to order at 8 o'clock in the evening by State Deputy John J. Hickey, of Bayonne. Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock solemn high mass will be sung in St. James' church. The celebrant will be the Rev. Father James A. Reynolds. The sermon will be preached by the State chaplain, the Rev. Father Bernard M. Bogan, of this city. Immediately after the mass the sesion will reconvene.

At night the delegates will attend the convention ball to be given in their honor by Red Bank Council.

Grand Knight William J. Hewell, of Red Bak Council, has appointed the following committee to look after the welfare of the visiting delegates: The Rev. Father F. Lang, secretary; F. L. Taylor, Daniel McCarthy, Daniel Fauss, John J. Smith and John Aul. The following committee on resolutions has been appointed by Deputy Hickey: Patrick J. Dolan, of Red Bank; Dr. Joseph T. Welch, of Long Branch; William Smith, of Jersey City; William L. Doyle, of Trenton, and William F. Delaney, of this city.

Mayor Cornelius A. McGlennon, of East Newark, is the State secretary of the order.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The committee from the Bachelors Club and Excelsior Hook and Ladder Co. met Thursday night and came to an understanding regarding a new floor for the hall. The club members were assured that a new floor will be laid before the club's May dance which is to be held about the 20th of next month.

Services tomorrow at the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours, morning preaching 10:45, monthly communion at the close of the sermon, Bible study meeting 4 p. m., and B. Y. P. U. meeting at 7:15 in the evening.

The Township Committee will hold a special praise meeting if the residents of Alton and Theodore Glazer will settle their troubles.

The weekly prayer and praise meeting of the Methodist church will be held tonight. Rev. Mr. Hollingshead will lead the meeting.

Miss Marion Godwin has taken a position as stenographer with the Rushmore Company of Plainfield.

John B. Stillger, of Brooklyn, has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Frederick K. Clark, of Front street.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Rev. J. J. Allen will deliver his fourth stereopticon lecture on Bunyon's "Pilgrim's Progress" at 7:45 tomorrow night. These lectures are largely attended and very instructive both to young and old. Special music is a feature.

On Monday evening there will be a rehearsal of the play "Diamonds and Hearts" at the home of Mrs. P. C. Johnson on Plainfield avenue. It is urgent that every one in the cast be promptly on hand at 8 o'clock.

The South Plainfield B. B. C. will go to Rahway tomorrow to play the El Cid A. C. of that place. The battery for the locals will be Slocum and Mullin. Coyle, a new man, will be seen at short.

David Bigley is recovering from his recent severe shock by electricity while trying to turn on an electric light at the home of Frank Faulks.

The regular monthly meeting of the Township Committee will be held in Hotel Nelson at New Market on next Tuesday, April 5.

(Additional suburban news on page 2.)

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bach, and family, of Somerset street, are visiting at Perkasie, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Knox, who have been traveling in Mexico for several weeks, have returned to their home on Rockview avenue.

Miss Florence A. Johns, of Duer street, was maong the guests who attended a barn dance given by Miss Westcott's dancing class at Somerville last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Tranchard, of Duer street, are preparing to go to Louisiana. They will go to a resort 60 miles north of New Orleans in the hope of benefitting the former's health. Mr. Tranchand has been ill since December 31 with an attack of rheumatism and he is just now convelescing from the pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Vail and daughter, Miss Dorothy M. Vail, are visiting the former's cousin, E. M. Vail, at Readington, Hunterdon county. The trip to the country is made in the hope of benefitting Mr. Vail's health. He has been ill for about a year but his condition has shown considerable improvement of late which permitted him to be wheeled about the streets in an invalid's chair.

MINSTRELS MAKE A HIT

In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
Will it cost us more or less to get the water that we use?
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
Now unless the P. P. A. is wrong,
the price will ne'er annoy,
We will gather round the bath tub
every day and sing for joy,
But in case our taxes jump, I'm going to lick Depew or Moy
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
—Chorus.

All the ladies in the town would like to have a children's court
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
Where the Judge could act as papa for the kids of every sort
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
That's an awful job to ask a single man to take alone,
And if nothing else will suit the hens
but highly moral tone,
They had better get a judge who has some children of his own,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
—Chorus.

When we get our public play grounds
all the kids will be polite
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
They will all be "Perfect Ladies" and will never, never fight,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
They'll play "Ring Around a Rosy," and will neither yell nor hoot,
They will "Skin the Cat" correctly
in a manner that is cute,
But they'll never know the joy of being swatted on the snoot
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
—Chorus.

All will be serene and lovely when we're ruled by Suffragettes,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
All the men will tend the babies when their wives smoke cigarettes,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
We've been taught that lovely woman is a creature who enchants,
But how different when our sisters and our cousins and our ants
Learn to drink and chew tobacco and go round all wearing pants,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
—Chorus.

Do you think that we will have some honest men in politics,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
If they're asked to run for office will they up and holler "nix."
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
What with Allds and Conger in New York they've got an awful mess,
And the merry Trenton rummies
haven't been a great success,
All the decent men would much prefer to stay at home, I guess,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
—Chorus.

When T. Roosevelt gets back home again, there'll be the deuce to pay,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
For I think when he sees Mr. Taft, he'll have a lot to say
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
He'll say "Bill, your Tariffs rotten,
Uncle Joe's a big disgrace,
Mr. Ballinger is crooked, and I'll tell you to your face,
If you don't improve, you bet your life, I'm going to take your place."
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Grace P. E. church team defeated the Netherwood A. C. yesterday afternoon by a score of 18 to 15. Walls pitched for the Grace church team.

J. C. Stringham, a member of the Religious Society of Friends, will attend the meeting at the Watchung avenue meeting house tomorrow morning.

The sale and entertainment held at the Ebenezer Baptist church Thursday and Friday nights was a success, netting $22.70. There was a large attendance both nights.

The May issue of the New Jersey Baptist Bulletin, contains an excellent picture of Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church; also an interesting short sketch of his life.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor, will preach morning and evening at the Park Avenue Baptist church tomorrow. In the morning the subject will be "Lost Power," and in the evening, "Belshazzars' Feast."

Commencing tomorrow the Sunday school of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will meet at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, instead of the afternoon. This will be followed by communion and reception of members.

"Opportunities for Christian Service in the Profession," will be the subject of a platform meetiag to be held at the Congregational church tomorrow night. The speakers will be Dr. E. W. Hedges, H. C. White and H. C. Krebs. There will be communion in the morning.

Among the ushers at the wedding in the Brick Presbyterian church, East Orange, Wednesday evening, of Ethel R. Riggs daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. James F. Riggs, and Albert Langworthy Jones, was Floyd Fiske, of Westfield.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Hammonton is looking for a dog-catcher, but no one seems to want the job, which pays about $500 a year.

Lewis Sheppard, assistant grand conductor of the Order of Railway Conductors, of the United States and Canada, has been in Bridgeton several days upon official business.

Sarah Wiltsie and Elizabeth Johnson, Gloucester girls, who disappeared last week, returned to their homes with the explanation that they had gone away on a little excursion.

Falling 10 feet at Sitley & Son's grain elevator, in Camden, Thursday, Joseph Shappley, thirty-seven years old, of 209 Mechanic street, was internally injured. He was taken to his home.

Struck in the abdomen by a whirling plank at a saw mill at Woodbine, Henry Breslam, forty-eight years old, was admitted to Cooper Hospital, Camden, suffering with internal injuries.

Mrs. Rebecca Hawn, of Millville, who has been a member of the W. C. T. U. for thirty-eight years, was presented with a huge bonnet of roses by the local union on the eightieth anniversary of her birth yesterday.

June 7 has been fixed as the date for the special election in Paulsboro to the proposed bond issue for $50,000 for the purchase of the water plant, $7,000 for improving the gas plant and $6,000 for improving Delaware street.

The side-wheel steamboat Prospect, which is to ply between Millville and Philadelphia, arrived in Millville Thursday from New York city. It was met at Bivalve by a large delegation of the local Board of Trade, who returned on board.

Recent revelations in the trials of illegal liquor selling cases have caused the Cumberland County Medical Society to call the attention of the State Medical Board to physicians who make a practise of selling prescriptions for liquor to those who use the stuff as a beverage.

An ordinance providing for pawnbrokers' license was referred back to committee in the Camden Council Thursday with the object of letting it die. It was learned that there is a State law which permits the judge of the Common Pleas Court to license such a place. Council adopted a resolution to file with the court a permanent protest against any such action.

Miss Katherine O'Donnell, seventeen years old, of 780 Line street, Camden, who has been suffering from an attack of hiccoughs for he last three weeks, is in a serious condition in the Cooper Hospital. The X-rays were used by the surgeons, who found the hiccoughs had been brought on by an ulcer in the stomach, for which a very delicate operation is necessary.

Atlantic City license holders, with whom he has been at war for three years, are alarmed by reports that Justice of the Peace John W. Hughes, director of the closing campaign in the city, whose term expires tomorrow, will go out of office with a whirl by issuing warrants for the arrest of more than a hundred saloon men. Twenty-four have already been held in bail.

Four hundred Princes of the Orient, members of the famed side degree of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, held a conclave in Grangers' Hall, Burlington, last evening, to initiate fifteen. The candidates came from Burlington, Florence, Roeblings, Mt. Holly, Beverly and Riverside, Burlington County, and from Bristol, Pa., each accompanied by big delegations from the courts in these places.

Atlantic City women who are to assist in entertaining the women who will attend the National G. A. R. encampment in September organized at the Hotel Chalfonte Thursday. Mrs. E. S. Hann was elected chairman; Mrs. James K. Carmack, vice-chairman; Mrs. Catherine Williams, treasurer, and Mrs. Emma C. May, secretary. The committee includes over 100 prominent women, who will outline a plan of entertainment for the visitors.

Mrs. Margaret Wilson, ninety-two years old, of Bridgeton, for twenty-five years a widow, yesterday intelligently and cheerfully answered all of the questions of the census enumerator. She continues to do all her work, including her weekly laundry, and in addition has a small garden, in which she takes much pride. Mrs. Wilson has three daughters living, the oldest seventy-one years old. There are several grandchildren and twelve great-grandchildren.

The ordinance prohibiting the use or sale of fireworks of any nature met with considerable opposition in the Camden Council yesterday. All concurred that dynamite and other high explosives should be barred, but a majority were of the opinion that the ordinary shooting crackers, caps and the like are not objectionable and by a close vote the ordinance was sent back for amendment. It will be again considered at a meeting to be held on May 9.

A fire in the cellar of the four-story brick tenement-house, 241 Sixth street, Jersey City, Thursday afternoon drove women tenants to the fire escapes. The house is one of five known as "Reilly's Row" and is owned by the Patrick Reilly estate. All the children were in school or playing in the street. Several women made their way through the smoke to the street, and the firemen of No. 2 Truck and No. 5 Engine Company asisted down the rear fire escape others. The flames were put out in half an hour. The loss is about $500.

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW

What a Heap of Happiness it Would Bring to Plainfield Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back.

Brings you hours of misery at leisure or at work.

If women only knew the cause—that

Bachache pains come from sick kidneys,

'Twould save much needless woe.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys,

Plainfield people endorse this:

Mrs. E. Dorflinger, 400 Clinton avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "About three years ago I was suffering severely from kidney trouble. There were dull, heavy pains in my back and in the top of my head. I also had dizzy spells and I was subject to chills. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and I began their use. They promptly drove away my trouble and I have had no symptom of a return since."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

AN ORDINANCE

To amend an Ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance providing for the licensing and regulating of peddlers, hawkers, cartmen, and the owners and drivers of vehicles used for hire; and concerning street traffic regulations," approved February 18th, 1910.

The Inhabittants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Sec. 10 of the ordinance to which this is an amendment be and is hereby amended as follows: By striking out of subdivision (a) of said section the following words, "from any point within to any point without the aforesaid limits the further sum of twenty-five cents for one, two or three passengers, in addition to the sum above provided," and inserting in place thereof the following words: "from any point within to any point without the aforesaid limits the sum of fifty cents for one passenger, and twenty-five cents for each additional passenger."

Also that said section of said ordinance be and is hereby further amended by striking out the word "twelve" where it occurs in the proviso of subsection (a), and inserting in place thereof the word "eleven."

Adopted by the Common Council, April 11, 1910; approved by the Mayor, April 12, 1910.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Seldom has an attraction been booked to appear at the Plainfield theatre that has created such interest as Jos. M. Gaites' smart musical comedy, "Three Twins," which is announced for tonight. This play caused a positive sensation in New York last season, where it enjoyed a most phenomenal run of ten months to record breaking business. Mr. Gaites has mounted it with a lavishness that rarely is seen in travelling companies and the company presenting "Three Twins" is one of the best ever organized.

"The Servant in the House," says the Chicago Tribune, "has practically conquered America in conquering four widely separated but representative American cities—Washington, New York, San Francisco and Chicago—because, divested of so much mysticism as accrues to it by reason of its religious significance and the traditional power of that influence, it becomes a thoughtful but simple domestic drama worked out sanely and convincingly with the power of love as a theme. And while it is difficult, not to say impossible, to those who have sat through the play to imagine it robbed of its most potent appeal—the suggested presence of the Savior—it is not unreasonable to believe that it would still have been a powerful drama had the Bishop of Benares represented a self-appointed, soul inspired teacher of men whose life and work bore testimony to his sincerity," with the New York cast headed by Tyrone Power. "The Servant in the House" will be seen at the Plainfield theatre Saturday, matinee and night, May 7.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Not long before Clyde Fitch died, last summer, he declared to a friend that "The City" was the finest play he had ever written. "The City," which is being produced at the Lyric theatre, where it ought to stay for many months to come, is deprived of those intimate bits of individualism which the playwright was accustomed to bestow upon his plays; but for all that its first hearing amply justified its author's confidence. The last thing that its author ever did, it is also far and away the most powerful. Mr. Fitch is said to have declared that he set out to write "The City" as an answer to people who had said that he was all very well as a student of feminine foibles, but that he couldn't write a "man's play." Now if by this he meant a play whose principal act is a masterpiece of suspense, piling climax on climax, a play in which even the shooting of a girl by a man who has married her an hour before and now finds out that she is his own half-sister, is made the climax that is three or four climaxes below the supreme climax, then Mr. Fitch's last play is surely a "man's play." Thrill followed thrill, gasp crowded hard upon the heels of gasp until, when the curtain at last fell, the resultant long-pent enthusiasm was really a tumult.

Maud Milton, who is playing the Marquise de St. Maur in Charles Frohman's revival of "Caste" at the Empire theatre, is prominent in England as a Shakespearean actress. Miss Milton played with Sir Henry Irving ten years, and was leading woman with Edwin Booth, Wilson Barrett and Madame Modjeska. She has made several tours of the United States, the first with Wilson Barrett in "The Silver King" and "Claudian;" later with Edna May in "The Catch of the Season;" again with Irving, and this season with Marie Tempest in "Penelope." Miss Milton talks enthusiastically of her workers, she enjoys vacation times best. "When one has acted as long as I have," she says, "one is justified in feeling a little tired of working. Really, you know, I ought to have been a farmer's wife, for then I could indulge my passions for gardening and raising cats and rabbits to my heart's content."

The Man in Lower Ten

Her fingers lay quiet under mine. "And so," she went on with a little sigh, "I—began to think perhaps I cared. But all the time I felt that there was something not quite right. Now and then Mrs. Curtis would say or do something that gave me a queer start, as if she had dropped a mask for a moment. And there was trouble with the servants; they were almost insolent. I couldn't understand. I don't know when it dawned on me that the old Baron Cavalcanti had been right when he said they were not my kind of people. But I wanted to get away, wanted it desperately."

"Of course, they were not your kind," I cried. "The man was married! The girl Jennie, a housemaid, was a spy in Mrs. Sullivan's employ. If he had pretended to marry you I would have killed him! Not only that, but the man he murdered, Harrington, was his wife's father. And I'll see him hang by the neck yet if it takes every energy and every penny I possess."

I could have told her so much more gently, have broken the shock for her; I have never been proud of that evening on the sand. I was alternately a boor and a ruffian—like a hurt youngster who passes the blow that has hurt him on to his playmate, that both may bawl together. And now Alison sat, white and cold, without speech.

"Married!" she said finally, in a small voice. "Why, I don't think it is possible, is it? I—I was on my way to Baltimore to marry him myself, when the wreck came."

"But you said you don't care for him!" I protested, my heavy masculine mind unable to jump the gaps in her story. And then, without the slightest warning, I realized that she was crying. She shook off my hand and fumbled for her handkerchief, and failing to find it, she accepted the one I thrust into her wet fingers.

Then, little by little, she told me from the handkerchief, a sordid story of a motor trip in the mountains without Mrs. Curtis, of a lost road and a broken car, and a rainy night when they—she and Sullivan, tramped eternally and did not get home. And of Mrs. Curtis, when they got home at dawn, suddenly grown conventional and deeply shocked. Of her own proud, half-disdainful consent to make possible the hackneyed compromising situation by marrying the rascal, and then—of his disappearance from the train. It was so terrible to her, such a Heaven-sent relief to me, in spite of my rage against Sullivan, that I laughed aloud. At which she looked at me over the handkerchief.

"I know it's funny," she said, with a catch in her breath. "When I think that I nearly married a murderer—and didn't—I cry for sheer joy." Then she buried her face and cried again.

"Please don't," I protested unsteadily. "I won't be responsible if you keep on crying like that. I may forget that I have a capital charge hanging over my head, and that I may be arrested at any moment."

That brought her out of the handkerchief at once. "I meant to be so helpful," she said, "and I've thought of nothing but myself! There were some things I meant to tell you. If Jennie was—what you say, then I understand why she came to me just before I left. She had been packing my things and she must have seen what condition I was in, for she came over to me when I was getting my wraps on, to leave, and said, 'Don't do it, Miss West, I beg you won't do it; you'll be sorry ever after.' And just then Mrs. Curtis came in and Jennie slipped out."

"That was all?"

"No. As we went through the station the telegraph operator gave Har—Mr. Sullivan, a message. He read it on the platform, and it excited him terribly. He took his sister aside and they talked together. He was white with either fear or anger—I don't know which. Then, when we boarded the train, a woman in black, with beautiful hair, who was standing on the car platform, touched him on the arm and then drew back. He looked at her and glanced away again, but she reeled as if he had struck her."

"Then what?" The situation was growing clearer.

"Mrs. Curtis and I had the drawing-room. I had a dreadful night, just sleeping a little now and then. I saw his cigarette case in your hand. I had given it to him. You wore his clothes. The murder was discovered and you were accused of it! What could I do? And then, afterward, when I saw him asleep at the farmhouse, I—I was panic-stricken. I locked him in and ran. I didn't know why he did it, but—he had killed a man."

Some one was calling Alison through a megaphone, from the veranda. It sounded like Sam. "All-ee," he called. "All-ee! I'm going to have some anchovies on toast! All-ee!" Neither of us heard.

"I wonder," I reflected, "if you would be willing to repeat a part of that story—just from the telegram on—to a couple of detectives, say on Monday. If you would tell that, and—how the end of your necklace got into the sealskin bag—"

"My necklace!" she repeated. "But it isn't mine. I picked it up in the car."

"All-ee!" Sam again. "I see you down there. I'm making a julep!"

Alison turned and called through her hands. "Coming in a moment, Sam," she said, and rose. "It must be very late: Sam is home. We would better go back to the house."

"Don't," I begged her. "Anchovies and juleps and Sam will go on forever, and I have you such a little time. I suppose I am only one of a dozen or so, but—you are the only girl in the world. You know I love you, don't you dear?"

Sam was whistling, an irritating bird call, over and over. She pursed her red lips and answered him in kind. It was more than I could endure.

"Sam or no Sam," I said firmly, "I am going to kiss you!"

But Sam's voice came strident through the megaphone. "Be good, you two," he bellowed, "I've got the binoculars!" And so, under fire, we walked sedately back to the house. My pulses were throbbing—the little swish of her dress beside me on the grass was pain and ecstasy. I had but to put out my hand to touch her, and I dared not.

Sam, armed with a megaphone and field glasses, bent over the rail and watched us with gleeful malignity.

"Home early, aren't you?" Alison called, when we reached the steps.

"Led a club when my partner had doubled no-trumps, and she fainted. Damn the heart convention!" he said cheerfully. "The others are not here yet."

Three hours later I went up to bed. I had not seen Alison alone again. The noise was at its height below, and I glanced down into the garden, still bright in the moonlight. Leaning against a tree, and staring interestedly into the billiard room, was Johnson.

CHAPTER XXIX.

In the Dining Room.

That was Saturday night, two weeks after the wreck. The previous five days had been full of swift-following events—the woman in the house next door, the picture in the theater of a man about to leap from the doomed train, the dinner at the Dallaes, and Richey's discovery that Alison was the girl in the case. In quick succession had come our visit to the Carter place, the finding of the rest of the telegram, my seeing Alison there, and the strange interview with Mrs. Conway. The Cresson trip stood out in my memory for its serio-comic horrors and its one real thrill. Then—the discovery by the police of the sealskin bag and the bit of chain; Hotchkiss producing triumphantly Stuart for Sullivan and his subsequent discomfiture; McKnight at the station with Alison, and later the confession that he was out of the running.

And yet, when I thought it all over, the entire week and its events were two sides of a triangle that was narrowing rapidly to an apex, a point. And the said apex was at that moment in the drive below my window, resting his long legs by sitting on a carriage block, and smoking a pipe that made the night hideous. The sense of the ridiculous is very close to the sense of tragedy. I opened my screen and whistled, and Johnson looked up and grinned. We said nothing. I held up a handful of cigars, he extended his hat, and when I finally went to sleep, it was to a soothing breeze that wafted in salt air and a faint aroma of good tobacco. I was thoroughly tired, but I slept restlessly, dreaming of two detectives with Pittsburg warrants being held up by Hotchkiss at the point of a splint, while Alison fastened their hands with a chain that was broken and much too short. I was roused about dawn by a light rap at the door, and, opening it, I found Forbes, in a pair of trousers and a pajama coat. He was as pleasant as most fleshy people are when they have to get up at night, and he said the telephone had been ringing for an hour, and he didn't know why somebody else in the blankety-blank house couldn't have heard it. He wouldn't get to sleep until noon.

As he was palpably asleep on his feet, I left him grumbling and went to the telephone. It proved to be Richey, who had found me by the simple expedient of tracing Alison, and he was jubilant.

"You'll have to come back," he said. "Got a railroad schedule there?"

"I don't sleep with one in my pocket," I retroted, "but if you'll hold the line I'll call out the window to Johnson. He's probably got one."

"Johnson!" I could hear the laugh with which McKnight comprehended the situation. He was still chuckling when I came back.

"Train to Richmond at 6:30 a. m.," I said. "What time is it now?"

"Four. Listen, Lollie. We've got him. Do you hear? Through the woman at Baltimore. Then—the other woman, the lady of the restaurant"—he was obviously avoiding names—"she is playing our cards for us—No—I don't know why, and I don't care. But you be at the Incubator to-night at eight o'clock. If you can't shake Johnson, bring him, bless him."

To this day I believe the Sam Forbeses have not recovered from the surprise of my unexpected arrival, my one appearance at dinner in Granger's clothes, and the note on my dresser which informed them the next morning that I had folded my tents like the Arabs and silently stolen away. For at half after five Johnson and I, the former as uninquisitive as ever, were on our way through the dust to the station, three miles away, and by four that afternoon we were in Washington. The journey had been uneventful. Johnson relaxed under the influence of my tobacco, and spoke at some length on the latest improvements in gallows, dilating on the absurdity of cutting out the former free passes to see the affair in operation. I remember, too, that he mentioned the curious anomaly that permits a man about to be hanged to eat a hearty meal. I did not enjoy my dinner that night.

Before we got into Washington I had made an arrangement with Johnson to surrender myself at two the following afternoon. Also, I had wired to Alison, asking her if she would carry out the contract she had made. The detective saw me home, and left me there.

Mrs. Klopton received me with dignified reserve. The very tone in which she asked me when I would dine told me that something was wrong.

"Now—what is it, Mrs. Klopton?" I demanded finally, when she had informed me, in a patient and long-suffering tone, that she felt worn out and thought she needed a rest.

"When I lived with Mr. Justice Springer," she began acidly, her mending basket in her hands, "it was an orderly, well-conducted household. You can ask any of the neighbors. Meals were cooked and, what's more, they were eaten; there was none of this 'here one day and gone the next' business."

"Nonsense," I observed. "You're tired, that's all, Mrs. Klopton. And I wish you would go out; I want to bathe."

"That's not all," she said with dignity, from the doorway. "Women coming and going here, women whose shoes I am not fit—I mean, women who are not fit to touch my shoes—coming here as insolent as you please, and asking for you."

"Good heavens!" I exclaimed. "What did you tell them—her, whichever it was?"

"Told her you were sick in a hospital and wouldn't be out for a year!" she said triumphantly. "And when she said she thought she'd come in and wait for you, I slammed the door on her."

"What time was she here?"

"Late last night. And she had a light-haired man across the street. If she thought I didn't see him she don't know me." Then she closed the door and left me to my bath and my reflections.

At five minutes before eight I was at the Incubator, where I found Hotchkiss and McKnight. They were bending over a table, on which lay McKnight's total armament—a pair of pistols, an elephant gun and an old cavalry saber.

"Draw up a chair and help yourself to pie," he said, pointing to the arsenal. "This is for the benefit of our friend Hotchkiss here, who says he is small and fond of life."

Hotchkiss, who had been trying to get the wrong end of a cartridge into the barrel of one of the revolvers, straightened himself and mopped his face.

"We have desperate people to handle," he said pompously, "and we may need desperate means."

"Hotchkiss is like the small boy whose one ambition was to have people grow ashen and tremble at the mention of his name," McKnight jibed. But they were serious enough, both of them, under it all, and when they had told me what they planned, I was serious, too.

"You're compounding a felony," I remonstrated, when they had explained. "I'm not eager to be locked away, but, by Jove, to offer her the stolen notes in exchange for Sullivan!"

"We haven't got either of them, you know," McKnight remonstrated, "and we won't have, if we don't start. Come along, Fido," to Hotchkiss.

The plan was simplicity itself. According to Hotchkiss, Sullivan was to meet Bronson at Mrs. Conway's apartment at 8:30 that night with the notes. He was to be paid there and the papers destroyed. But just before that interesting finale," McKnight ended, "we will walk in, take the notes, grab Sullivan, and give the police a jolt that will put them out of the count."

I suppose not one of us, slewing around corners in the machine that night, had the faintest doubt that we were on the right track, or that Fate, scurvy enough before, was playing into our hands at last. Little Hotchkiss was in a state of fever; he alternately twitched and examined the revolver, and a fear that the two moments might be synchronous kept me uneasy. He produced and dilated on the scrap of pillow slip from the wreck, and showed me the stiletto, with its point in cotton batting for safekeeping. And in the intervals he implored Richey not to make such fine calculations at the corners.

We were all grave enough and very quiet, however, when we reached the large building where Mrs. Conway had her apartment. McKnight left the power on, in case we might want to make a quick get-away, and Hotchkiss gave a final look at the revolver. I had no weapon. Somehow it all seemed melodramatic to the verge of farce. In the doorway Hotchkiss was a half dozen feet ahead; Richey fell back beside me. He dropped his affectation of gayety, and I thought he looked tired. "Same old Sam, I suppose?" he asked.

"Same, only more of him."

"I suppose Alison was there? How is she?" he inquired irrelevantly.

"Very well. I did not see her this morning." Hotchkiss was waiting near the elevator. McKnight put his hand on my arm. "Now, look here, old man," he said, "I've got two arms and a revolver, and you've got one arm and a splint. If Hotchkiss is right, and there is a row, you crawl under a table."

"The deuce I will!" I declared scornfully.

We crowded out of the elevator at the fourth floor, and found ourselves in a rather theatrical hallway of draperies and armor. It was very quiet; we stood uncertainly after the car had gone, and looked at the two or three doors in sight. They were heavy, covered with metal, and sound proof. From somewhere above came the metallic accuracy of a piano-piano, and through the open window we could hear—or feel—the throb of the Cannonball's engine.

"Well, Sherlock," McKnight said, "what's the next move in the game? It is our jump, or theirs. You brought us here."

None of us knew just what to do next. No sound of conversation penetrated the heavy doors. We waited uneasily for some minutes, and Hotchkiss looked at his watch. Then he put it to his ear.

"Good gracious!" he exclaimed, his head cocked on one side, "I believe it has stopped. I'm afraid we are late."

We were late. My watch and Hotchkiss' agreed at nine o'clock, and, with the discovery that our man might have come and gone, our zest in the adventure began to flag. McKnight motioned us away from the door and rang the bell. There was no response, no sound within. He rang it twice, the last time long and vigorously, without result. Then he turned and looked at us.

For at Half After Five Johnson and I Were on Our Way Through the Dust to the Station, Three Miles Away.

"I don't half like this," he said. "That woman is in; you heard me ask the elevator boy. For two cents I'd—"

I had seen it when he did. The door was ajar about an inch, and a narrow wedge of rose-colored light showed beyond. Then, with both men at my heels, I stepped into the private corridor of the apartment and looked around. It was a square reception hall, with hats, and a couple of chairs. A lantern of rose-colored glass and a desk light over a writing-table across made the room bright and cheerful. It was empty.

None of us were comfortable. The place was full of feminine trifles that made us feel the weakness of our position. Some such instinct made McKnight suggest division.

"We look like an invading army," he said. "If she's here alone, we will startle her into a spasm. One of us could take a look around and—"

"What was that? Didn't you hear something?"

The sound, whatever it had been, was not repeated. We went awkwardly out into the hall, very uncomfortable, all of us, and flipped a coin. The choice fell on me, which was right enough, for the affair was mine, primarily.

"Wait just inside the door," I directed, "and if Sullivan comes, or anybody that answers his description, grab him without ceremony and ask him questions afterwards."

The apartment, save in the hallway, was unlighted. By one of those freaks of arrangement possible only in the modern flat, I found the kitchen first, and was struck a smart and unexpected blow by a swinging door. I carried a handful of matches, and by the time I had passed through a butler's pantry and a refrigerator room I was completely lost in the darkness. Until then the situation had been merely uncomfortable; suddenly it became grisly. From somewhere near came a long-sustained groan, followed almost instantly by the crash of something—glass or china—on the floor.

I struck a fresh match, and found myself in a narrow rear hallway. Behind me was the door by which I must have come; with a keen desire to get back to the place I had started from, I opened the door and attempted to cross the room. I thought I had kept my sense of direction, but I crashed without warning into what, from the resulting jangle, was the dining table, probably laid for dinner. I cursed my stupidity in getting into such a situation, and I cursed my nerves for making my hand shake when I tried to strike a match. The groan had not been repeated.

We guarantee every wire in Roman to be solid bronze. In two grades, regular and extra heavy.
For a galvanized screen wire "Pearl" is very good. It has a double selvage edge with bronze wire to keep tacks from rusting it. Regular and extra heavy grades.
Standard Black Screen Wire in stock.
But we recommend "Roman" Screen Wire to you.

THE North Plainfield Association gave its initial banquet on Thursday night in Debele Hall. The caterers were De-Molli & Co.

We submit the comments of the local press:

"The dinner, an excellent one, was served by DeMolli. The last course was served at 10.30 o'clock and at that hour the speechmaking started and continued until after midnight."—The Daily Press of April 29.

"At the conclusion the most seasoned banqueter, be he boroughite or not, was unstinted in praise for the pleasant evening, the excellent cuisine, and the feeling of fellowship that was promoted."—Courier-News of April 29

DOG ORDINANCE SHOULD BE ENFORCED THEY SAY.

Dogs and the nuisances they are to many residents of the city have become the subject of a lively discussion among the owners of handsome homes and it is the opinion of the majority of those whose gardens have been scratched up that something more ought to be done to prevent the depredations committed by the wandering canines.

Among the most beautiful gardens which decorate the residences on Belvidere, Woodland and South, Stelle and Central avenues, West Seventh, Eighth and Ninth streets, Franklin place and in fact wherever flowers are cultivated for their landscape beauty, dogs are continually uprooting the flowers and plants besides undoing the work of the gardeners whose pride in their work in this city is proverbial.

The present dog ordinances are sufficiently correctional and preventive and many of the property owners would welcome some drastic measures looking toward their enforcement.

A Surprise Party.

Miss Mary Long, of 13 Harmony street, was tendered a surprise in honor of her twenty-second birthday on Thursday night. The affair was enlivened by dancing and music. Vocal and instrumental selections were furnished by Miss Wilson and Jerry Signor. The latter presented Miss Long a huge bouquet of carnations in honor of the event.

NETHERWOOD REFORMED.

Rev. J. Y. Broek to Preach There Tomorrow.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will preach at the Netherwood Reformed church tomorrow and have charge of the communion service, and in the evening the pastor-elect, Rev. Royal A. Stout, will preach, his topic being, "Life in Christ."

Miss Grace P. Karr, organist, has arranged an attractive program of music for both services, and three changes have been made in the quartet. The singers will be Miss Elizabeth Bartlau, soprano; Miss Jennie DeMott, contralto; Luther Banks, tenor, and Sidney H. Karr, baritone. The program for the morning will be as follows:

Prelude, Cum Sancto from Mozart's Mass No. 13; hymns, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," Dykes; "Bread of Life," Sherwin; "Just as I Am," Bradbury; "Watchman Tell Us of the Night," Mason; offertory, "Jesu, Jesu Miserein," Nevin, Miss Bartlau; postlude, Intermezzo Sinfonico, Mascagni. This will be the evening program:

Prelude, Little Prelude in F, Bach; hymns, "My God," Dykes; "Thy Love to Me," Gates; "Though Faint," Robinson; offertory, "Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand," Dykes, quartet; postlude, "Adagio E. flat," Rinck.

Y. W. C. A. Vesper Service.

Rev. John Brownlee Voorhees, secretary of the Board of domestic missions of the Reformed church in America, will be the speaker at the vesper service of the Young Women's Christian Association on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mr. Voorhees is an able speaker. Mrs. F. M. Ward will be the soloist. This promises to be one of the most interesting meetings the association has held. The asociation cordially invites all young women to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence J. Murphy, of East Second street, are parents of a nine-pound boy born to them this morning. Mrs. Murphy and the boy are doing well.

CARD PARTY HOST TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

John V. Kiederling, formerly of Plainfield entertained a party of friends at a card party at his "summer home" on Plainfield avenue, South Plainfield, last night, and the celebraion extended until the early hours of the morning. The affair wound up in a fight, with the result that Kiederling sustained a fractured nose and his face was generally cut.

It was about 5:30 o'clock this morning that Dr. T. S. Davis was summoned to the Kiederling home. He gave temporary treatment and had the man removed to the hospital, where he is now resting comfortably.

As no complaints have been made no arrests are likely to follow. The names of the other men at the party are not known and on account of Kiederling's condition, he has been unable ot give much information about the celebration.

COLLEGE CLUB ENTERTAIN WITH THREE PLAYS TONIGHT

The annual entertainment of the College Club which takes place in Hartridge auditorium tonight, will include a playlet of the time of the Civil War in which Nelson Ramsay, Mrs. Henry White, Miss Sherer, Mrs. Richard Boardman and Everett Smith will take part. This play is entitled "Before the Dawn." Another play, "A Woman's Influence," will have in the cast Samuel Horne, Miss Isabel Ashwell, Mrs. Boardman Tyler, Miss Ruth Barete and Mrs. H. C. Corbusier.

The third play of the evening, entitled "How the Vote Was Won," has a cast of ten in which James Murray, Mrs. Lindsay Best, Miss Ethel Walbridge and Mrs. DeWitt Hubbel will star. The admission to the plays is by invitation.

SETTLEMENT CHILDREN ENJOY THE COUNTRY.

Thirty-two children from the Willughby Settlement in New York, accompanied by their teacher, Miss Elizabeth A. Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Martin, of North Plainfield, came to this city yesterday morning and spent part of the afternoon among the wild flowers and lawns near the golf grounds. Miss Martin was accompanied by her assistant and three other women interested in the children.

The few hours spent with nature were the pleasantest in the memory of the children and they said before leaving that the time was the happiest of their young lives. Most of the time was spent roaming through the woods and gathering the spring flowers. The party returned to the city on the 3:09 train.

KING'S DAUGHTERS ESTABLISH "TAG DAY" HEADQUARTERS.

Dr. Albert Pittis has donated the use of his store at 135 East Front street, next to Hanson's paint store, for "Tag Day" purposes on May 7, and that will be the headquarters of the City Union of The King's Daughters, under whose auspices "Tag Day" will be held.

The work at The Day Nursery is increasing to a considerable extent. Three small children, under five years of age, whose mother is ill at the hospital, have been received at The Nursery and are being cared for day and night, requiring additional help. In view of this the King's Daughters make an appeal for more money to carry on this work.

IONA COUNCIL'S BALL A GREAT SUCCESS.

The annual ball given by Iona Council No. 14, Degree of Pocahontas in Saengerbund Hall last night was a big success socially and financially. There was a large attendance and an enjoyable time had by the guests. Among those present were delegations from I. O. R. lodges from neighboring towns. The committee in charge consisted of Jeremiah Griffen, Mrs. Charles Holstein, Miss Ella Sebring, Mrs. Charles Dodwell, Mrs. John Ludgate, Mrs. Edward Bowman, George Ivins, Charles Meyer, Jr., and Frank Schropfer.

Mrs. Booth to Speak Here.

The many friends of Mrs. Ballington Booth will have an opportunity of listening to this gifted woman at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday evening, May 8, when she is to tell the story of the work to which she is devoting her life. Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor, will preside at this service, and an evening of exceptional interest is anticipated. The public is cordially invited.

Young Friends' Conference.

The Brooklyn Young Friends' Association will hold its annual Plainfield meeting Sunday afternoon, May 8, at 3 o'clock at the Watchung avenue meeting-house. There will be a paper by Henry M. Haviland, of Brooklyn on "Religious Expression," followed by a discussion. A box supper will be served. All interested are invited to attend.

Miss Pansy Boyd, of this city, played the nuptial music at the wedding on Wednesday afternoon in New Brunswick of Miss Anna Edgar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edgar, to Elmer L. Rapp, of Jersey City.
